Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

YOKOHAMA.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 14th November, and we have advices by the Occidental and Oriental Company's steamer Gaelic, via San Francisco, one day later, viz., to the 15th November. The French mail from London, September 8, arrived out on the 26th October, and the following P. and O. mail of September 15 was received on the 30th October, the French mail of September 22 on the 10th November, and the P. and O. mail of September 29 on the 14th November. The Japan Herald supplies the following items of news:—

The principal, we might say the sole, topic of interest during the interval has been an insurrection in the Western provinces against the Government. The first news of this outbreak reached here on the day of the departure of the last steamer, and consisted of the information that the garrison of Kumamoto, together with nearly all the officials of the ken, had been surprised during the night of the 24th October, and cut to pieces. From this spot the insurrection soon spread to the neighbouring ken, and a variety of more or less important risings took place, the most serious of which was one in the province of Choshiu, headed by a samurai named Mayebara, a man of great influence in the clan. Although these various bodies of rebels were at first enabled to secure some advantages over the Government troops' yet as soon as the necessary reinforcements arrived for these latter, they speedily crushed all organised opposition, and the outbreak may now be considered at an end, as a telegram, received here on the 10th November, announced the capture of Mayebara. The object of the insurgents was simply to get rid of the present members of the Government, and they all expressed their unabated loyalty to the Mikado. Although, in the absence of any participation in the movement by the powerful Satsuma clan, the insurrection was never really dangerous, it was at one time watched with much anxiety, and must have cost the Government a very large sum for its suppression, besides the loss of hundreds of lives.

Although we are obliged to blame the misguided authors of these deeds for their sanguinary violence, it is scarcely fair to judge of their acts as we would judge of those of Europeans. These men, the ancient gentry of the country, have been oppressed on all sides, as even the apologists of the present Government are obliged to own. There have been numbers of oppressive laws passed; bit by bit their privileges have been taken away, and latterly they have been forcibly deprived of a very large portion of their incomes by a measure which could not have been passed in any other country in the world. When to these facts it is added that there are no means of making their desires or wishes known to the Government, that there are no representative institutions, that even all complaints in the papers, whether true or false, are remorselessly visited by punishment, it is scarcely to be wondered at that the sufferers should rise against the small band of bureaucrats who rule them with an iron hand. Meanwhile, although devoting its principal attention to the suppression of the insurrection, the Government has not relaxed its hold on the press. Prosecutions have been more numerous than usual, and another paper, the Chiugai Hioron, has been suppressed.

The Japanese gunboat Umyo-Kan, on her way to the Kumamoto insurrection, with troops, has been lost on the Kiushiu coast. The steamer Meiji Maru has visited the scene of the wreck, which was found to be lying on the beach broadside on to the sea, which had washed her up about fifty feet, and nearly buried her in the sand. She is a total wreck, it being considered useless to attempt to get her off, her bottom being much injured. The ill-fated vessel went on shore in a gale whilst under close reefed topsails and reefed foresail. All her boats were swamped, or stove in on being lowered, and fifteen seamen and eight officers found a watery grave. The crew are employed in getting out the guns, boilers, engines, gear, &c., which, as the vessel lies firmly embedded in the sand, in an upright position, is not likely to prove a difficult job.

The Import market has been much depressed, and transactions have been small. The Silk market has also been restricted, in consequence of the receipt of continual telegrams from Europe, reporting the outbreak of war as imminent. But few purchases of silk worms' egg cards have taken place, the large majority of the graineurs refusing to pay the prices demanded by the Japanese. A fair business has been done in Tea, and prices have fallen slightly.

A most serious fire has occurred atKanygawa. It started in a general store; but many persons who were on the spot affirm that it began simultaneously in no less than three different places. Be this as it may, the fire commenced about half a mile from the Kanagawa Railway station, in the direction of Tokio, and burnt down the houses on a space of about five hundred yards on both sides of the Tokaido. The number of houses burnt can hardly be less than from 350 to 500. A strong gale of wind was blowing at the time.

Among the passengers arrived from Shanghai is the Austro-Hungarian Minister, his Excellency Chevalier de Schaeffer. We understand that he will make a prolonged stay in Japan, and that the house in Tsukidji, formerly occupied by the Peruvian Minister, has been taken for the Austrian Legation.

The time of the community has lately been principally given up to amusements, the half-yearly meetings of the Race Club, the Athletic Association, and of the Tir Suisse having taken place this month. The football season has also commenced.

The Imperial Marines, a body on which much money had been expended, and who were amongst the best drilled troops of the Government, have been abolished.

Two of the steamers purchased by the Mitsu Bishi Company from the P. & O. S. N. Company are about to be sent to England to be fitted with cempound engines.

The following items of intelligence are from the Japan Mail.

The rebellion may be regarded as effectually put down. Mayebara and most of the ringleaders have been taken, and the Nichi Nichi Shimbun of this morning reports that the Commissary of the Akidzuki insurgents was captured at Kokura. On examination he divulged the facts that the outbreak was planned by Mayebara in the spring of this year, and the samurai of Akidzuki, Kurume, Saga and Kumamoto, together with some of those from Tokio and the province of Etchigo, were invited to join in a movement against the Government to take place on the 26th and 27th of October. But the Kumamoto men acted with too much precipitation, and thus dis-organised the plans of the other rebels.

A launch took place on the 28th Oct. from Messrs. Whitfield and Dowson's yard of a small steamer, named La Mouette, which has been built by that firm for the Messageries Maritimes. The vessel will have ample accommodation for passengers proceeding on board the Company's steamers, and for valuable cargo, such as silk, &c. The length of the vessel between perpendiculars is ft.96.10; beam inside planking ft.14.2, and depth of hold ft.6.1. She carries a single engine, the cylinder of which is 10½ in. diameter, with 8 in. stroke, and is expected to steam 7½ knots.

Mr. Yebihara, editor of the newspaper called Chiugai Hioron, has been summoned to the Tokio-fu, and there informed that his paper has been suppressed by order received from the Home Department. Mr. Katsukawa, editor of the Chiugai Hioron, has been sentenced to three months' imprisonment for a transgression of the Press regulations.

The officials of the War Department are at present so busy, that attendance at the office is not interrupted by Sundays or holidays.

LATER ADVICES BY PACIFIC MAIL.

At the moment of going to press we have received advices to November 25 by the Pacific mail steamer City of Peking, via San Francisco. The French mail from London, Oct. 6, arrived out on the 25th Nov. The Japan Herald contains the following summary of news :—

The insurrection is believed to be entirely stamped out, although disquieting rumours as to isolated cases of small outbreaks appear now and again in the native papers. Nothing authentic is, however, known as to the amount of truth contained in these reports. One fact which would serve to show that nothing further is apprehended is found in the circumstance that the Empress left for Kioto overland on the 20th Nov. Oki, the Minister of Justice, departed for the seat of the late outbreak on the 14th Nov., with a view of organising special courts to try the captured rebels. It is a singular circumstance, that out of between three and four hundred Daimios that formerly dominated Japan there is not a solitary one that holds a leading position in the Government of the country to-day. Such an utter decadence and blotting out, in a few years, of a once powerful aristocracy is unparalleled in history. Sunk in sloth, luxury, and unbounded sensuality, they have fallen never to rise again. Power, poltical influence, social consideration, and wealth, have all waned, until the ex-Daimios have become but the shadows of their former selves, and are fast sinking out of sight; their very names are becoming obliterated; they will soon become a mere tradition of the past, embalmed only in the half-romantic, half-historical literature of the feudal period.

One rumour, which if true, would throw some light on the quiescence of the Satsuma clan during the late outbreak, has found its way into the native press, and has not been contradicted. It is to the effect that the members of that powerful clan are to be exempt from the effects of the late decree by which the principal portion of the shizokus' revenues was confiscated. It is scarcely to be believed that even in a despotic country like this such an outrage on equity, and at the same time such a confession of weakness, would be made.

The native journals contain reports that changes are to be made in the Press Laws, but the extent of these changes, and whether they are to render those laws more or less stringent does not appear to be known. It would seem somewhat difficult to increase their severity, and they are still wielded with an iron hand, the appearance of editors before the Courts being of almost daily occurrence.

Our Import Market has been quiet, and a decline is shown in the rates for most staples. The receipt of several disquieting telegrams from Europe has had a continued depressing effect on Silk, and but little business has been transacted. Settlements in Teas are but small, about 2,000 piculs, and prices have somewhat fallen. The present mail will carry a considerable quantity of Silk-worms' Eggs, which are being shipped on native account.

A special infirmary for the treatment of diseases of the eye has been established in Tokio. In years past a great number of cases of blindness resulted from the prevalence of virulent small-pox; thanks, however, to vaccination, which the authorities, with praiseworthy efforts, enforce, every year exhibits a diminution of these cases. There are, however, at all times plenty of instances of ophthalmia and other diseases incident to the eye calling for the exercise of medical skill, and the new institution cannot fail to be largely useful. The Infirmary was formally opened on the 20th Nov. by Dr. Simmons, surgeon in charge, assisted by Drs. Matsuyama and Kunungana, well-known Tokio practitioners. It is a brick two-story building on the lower left hand corner of the Ginza, about half-way up from the station. It contains a dispensary, light and convenient consulting-rooms, and accommodation for about a dozen patients. It is the first and only institution of the kind in this country. A dinner was given at the opening to about forty persons. Among the guests were H. E. R. Kuki, Acting Minister of Education, Keitsuki Otori of the Okurasho, Dr. Hepburn, Dr. MacCartie, and a number of the leading (Japanese) doctors in Tokio.

The German newspaper published here, the Ostasiatische Zeitung, has come to a sudden stoppage; its editor departed by the last American mail without beat of drum. A new weekly journal, the Tokio Times, edited by a well-known American journalist, is announced to make its first appearance at the beginning of 1877. We can only speculate as to the character, objects, and purposes to be served by this new literary venture, since they are not at present divulged.

The steamer Niigata Maru has been towed to Yokoska, for the purpose of removing her machinery, boilers, &c., preparatory to fitting her up as a sailing vessel, it being intended by the Mitsu Bishi Company to send her and the Takasago Maru to Europe with cargoes of rice, having discharged which they will be fitted with compound engines adapted to the consumption of a small amount of fuel, and then will return to Japan. The Takasago Maru, we understand, will be rigged as a four-masted ship, and the Niigata Maru as a barque.

The steamship Meji Maru has finished loading about nine miles of submarine telegraphic cable, which is intended to be laid between No-o-Saki, on the northern shore of the island of Sikok, and Shibukawa, in the province of Bizen, Niphon, on the opposite shore of the Inland Sea, immediately to the westward of Cone Island (a place well known to navigators), the distance across being about six miles.

The first meeting of the newly formed Yokohama Racing Association was held here on the 16th, 17th, and 18th November. The most strenuous exertions were made by those identified by these races to render them a success.

Mr. Okuedo, editor of the Choya Shimbun, was sentenced on 18th Nov. to three months' imprisonment, and fined twenty yen, for transgressing the Press regulations.

It is stated that the Ouyeno Exhibition, announced for next year, will be opened on the 1st August.

(FROM A CORRESPONDENT.)

YOKOHAMA, NOV. 15.

By the French mail which left this port on the 7th instant I wrote to you, giving a short account of the insurrections. I now take advantage of the departure of the Gaelic for San Francisco to send you a few additional lines, and probably my two letters will arrive almost simultaneously. It is possible, indeed, that the later written may be the first to arrive, going as it does by the more rapid route, and having the advantage of the quick transit likely to be made across the Pacific by the splendid steamer Gaelic.

The rebellion is completely suppressed. The insurgent forces of Mayebara Issei have been routed and dispersed. Mayebara himself is taken prisoner, and thus the most important section of the rising has been quelled. Many of Mayebara's immediate followers were arrested with him, or soon after. Others have committed suicide, and the remainder are either in hiding, or have returned to their homes. Among the suicides is the notable case of four young men, who ascended to the top of the Mount Odate, and there sacrificed their own lives. A Judiciary Commission, presided over by Oki Takato, President of the Judicial Department, has been appointed to proceed to Kumamoto, there to hold a special sessions for the trial of the captured insurgents. Though there is every probability that the lives of Mayebara and the more noteworthy of his followers will be forfeited, yet it is thought that the Government, satisfied of its own strength, as evidenced in the prompt suppression of a dangerous and widespread revolt, will deal as leniently as it can with minor offenders. Mr. Oki Takato is no Jeffreys, and Japan will, at least this time, see no "bloody assize." Order is reported to have been restored in all the other unquiet provinces. Still, feudalism is dying hard in this Empire of the Sun.

The present state of the Silk market in Yokohama proves that the fears I expressed in July as to the probable result of the inflation and excitement then prevalent, and afterwards largely increased, had but too good foundation. Now all is dull; the sales are difficult, and prices are at least thirty per cent. lower than the highest point they reached. I know of foreign firms trying to sell on the spot at current prices silk which they bought weeks ago. What must be the result of such operations? It is not that "no mortal is wise at all times"; but that "some people never are wise." Meanwhile, some firms realised handsome premiums on their early speculations. Eighty thousand dollars is a sum probably within the figures of the gains of one house alone; and I hope it will not be diminished by later operations.

Mr. Hiram S. Wilkinson, lately first Interpreter and Vice Consul in H.B.M.'s Consulate, but now Acting Law Secretary, has initiated his promotion in a very peculiar way. In the case of Beats v. the P. and O. Company, the plaintiff sued for damage done to goods consigned to him and carried by the Company. As I find it impossible to state the case better or more concisely than it is put in the Japan Mail, I will take the liberty of borrowing its statement:—

The issues of fact were—1st. Was the damage sustained by the goods between the time when they were received and the time when they were delivered by the defendants? 2nd. Was the damage caused by fresh water? 3rd. The value of the goods. The issue of law was:—Presuming the goods to have been thus damaged while in charge of the defendants, were they responsible for it, seeing that they claim exemption from all such responsibility in virtue of a clause in their bills of lading thus exempting them? Now, after the evidence upon the issues of fact had been taken, the plaintiff's counsel was about to argue the issue of law, when Mr. Wilkinson interposed, suggesting that these three issues of fact should be left to the jury, and their verdict upon these taken, subject to such proceedings as the defendants might institute to determine the legal points. There could be no objection to this course, which was adopted, and, after the summing-up, the jury found all three issues in the plaintiff's favour. But Mr. Wilkinson then, by a series of interrogatories, extracted from them the opinion that the damage was owing to the negligence of the Company, and having done this, gave a judgment reversing their decision in favour of the plaintiff, grounding it upon the law he had prevented the plaintiff's counsel from arguing. In other words, he first of all bars the question of law, and then applies the law to reverse the decision of the jury. We submit that this can be neither law, reason, common sense, nor justice, if only because it decides a case without hearing it.

Mr. Wilkinson gave the plaintiff permission—he could no less—to move within ten days to have the judgment set aside. But this is at best permission to appeal from Cæsar to Cæsar. Mr. Wilkinson is to be asked to reverse his own judgment, an anomaly which would have been prevented had he accepted the verdict of the jury, and left the company to its proper remedy, that of appeal. Here we have no Divisional Court, and indeed no such Court is possible. As the Mail points out, this was an additional reason for receiving the verdict; "Or, at the least, the plaintiff should have been allowed the benefit of the verdict, and the defendants might have been allowed permission to institute proceedings to reverse it. This would, at all events, have left the issue of law undetermined, and Mr. Wilkinson wholly unbiassed by any previous ruling upon it.

In a cause heard before him on the 14th inst., Mr. Wilkinson had occasion, and I think good reason, to reprehend the action of Mr. F. V. Dickins, one of the counsel engaged, as unprofessional. The case requires a little explanation. A firm of brewers had employed a public accountant to keep their books and collect their accounts for a certain commission. Disputes arose, the business was taken out of the accountant's hands, and at last cross-actions were brought in the Provincial Court, and came on for hearing before Mr. Wilkinson. The first day's hearing was during last week; and at the close of the day's proceedings the unfinished case was adjourned till the 14th. Meanwhile the brewers had had enough of it, and one of them communicated to Mr. Dickins, the accountant's counsel, his desire to come to an arrangement. This communication was made direct, and not through the brewers' counsel. Mr. Dickins, in the course of negociations, wrote a "strictly private" letter to one of the firm of brewers. A hitch occurred in the proposed "arrangement," and the cause came into Court again after all; when during an altercation between the counsel, the "strictly private" letter, greatly, no doubt, to Mr. Dickins's disgust and astonishment, was produced by the opposing counsel and read in Court. The fact of his having written this letter was held by the Court to have been "unprofessional" on the part of Mr. Dickins; and so, indeed, it appears. But when that gentleman, who is not blessed with the sweetest of tempers, and who might have been allowed to be a little "flabbergasted," I can find no better term, by the exposé, attempted to speak, Mr. Wilkinson, instead of listening to what he had to say—instead of allowing him to give an explanation of conduct which was certainly exceptional, but which might have admitted of some excuse—flew into a violent rage, raved, thumped his desk, and threatened, ordering Mr. Dickins to be seated half-a-dozen times, Mr. Dickins as many times flatly refusing. The learned counsel at last took off his wig and gown, and laid them on the table, protesting against not being allowed to speak. When asked by the Court, "Who are you talking to?" a question which savours more of one angry fish-lady's address to a rival than an interrogatory from a British judge to counsel, Mr. Dickins answered, "I say nothing to your Honour, I am not now an advocate but a private individual, and I address the public through the reporters." The scene as described to me by an eye-witness was most amusing, but most unseemly. In condemning what he thought unprofessional conduct on the part of a barrister practising in his Court, Mr. Wilkinson was undoubtedly right. In refusing to hear one word—what Mr. Dickins had to say might have been explanation, excuse, apology, who can tell?—he was decidedly wrong. Then he allowed Mr. Dickins to beard him again and again; and here, in my opinion, he was more in the wrong than ever. Having once stood on his dignity, and ordered the counsel to sit down or leave the Court, he should have resorted to the extreme power conferred on him to make himself obeyed. For the credit of British Courts in this extreme part of the world it is to be hoped that such conduct on the part of a British judge will be discountenanced by his superiors.

NAGASAKI.

The following are the dimensions and other interesting particulars of the new dock now being constructed at this port:—

Extreme length of dock	460 feet.
Depth	30 „	4 inches.
Interior	403 „
Breadth of lock.....	89 „
Shallowest part at lock sill.....	28 „	at high water.
Width of flooring.....	34 „

40,000 cubic metres have been excavated, and 20,000 superior large granite stones will be used in the construction. When flooded the dock will contain 26,000 tons of water, which will be pumped out in eight hours by four centrifugal pumps worked by two engines now being constructed at the Akenoura works. The dock was commenced in March, 1874, and is expected to be finished in October, 1877. The last thing will be the deepening of the entrance, for which arrangements are already complete.

PEKING.

The Celestial Empire comments upon an Imperial decree published by the Peking Gazette of October 15. The Censor Hu Yu-kun has memorialised the Throne upon the trouble and anxiety caused by the operations of pseudo-religious secret societies, one evil effect of which is that the reputation of foreign missionaries suffers unjustly. The necromancy and jugglery which have been disturbing people's minds so seriously during the past few months—the tail-cutting, paper-men, and so forth—are attributed, and rightly, to seditious persons whose object is to stir up strife; but rumours have got abroad that no small proportion of the trouble is to be traced to both Catholic and Protestant converts. It is well-known, as we have already intimated, that many persons connected with the Hwuys have passed themselves off as Christians in order to besmirch true converts with their own bad repute; and it is satisfactory to find that the matter has been taken up by the Censorate. The Imperial decree, in reply, orders all Governors and Viceroys to issue proclamations calling on the people to pursue their several avocations in a quiet and orderly manner, and to pay no heed to delusive tales; haling the members of pseudo religious sects, whenever or wherever found, before the authorities, who will punish them with the utmost rigour of the law. "The ways of evil-doers such as these are wily and deep-laid, and they frequently profess connection with a [foreign] religious establishment by way of pretext for their evil doings. The authorities will nevertheless punish them as the law requires, and not suffer themselves to be imposed upon by their devices." The successive dynasties of China have suffered too much from the machinations of secret societies in times past to permit the present Government to relax its watchfulness. The excitement, however, appears to be dying out. Had war been declared, the entire country would probably have burst into rebellion from Manchuria to the Bay of Yulin; and it seems quite on the cards that in the event of any foreign hostilities, the smouldering disaffection may even yet ignite. But we do not believe there is any chance of rebellion while the foreign relations of the country are peaceable.

The North China Herald refers to a memorial by the Governor-General of the two Kwang, in the Gazette of Oct. 18, as being interesting, both as connected with the question of coolie emigration and also as constituting the first public reference to the Treaty and Convention concluded with Peru in 1874, and ratified a year ago at Tientsin. The "summary execution" of the crimps heretofore employed in recruiting victims for the barracoons of Macao was provided for by special enactment passed in 1866; but the severity of this mode of procedure appears to have been relaxed some years later, when the kidnapping traffic had died away in consequence of the measures taken to enforce its abolition at Macao. The late Governor-General Ying Han, during his brief tenure of office at Canton, applied for permission to reintroduce the summary system of procedure in the case of "kidnappers," on learning that the Treaty with Peru had been concluded; but his successor, the present Governor-General, now gives it as his opinion that the ordinary process of law is quite sufficient for the purpose of dealing with any cases of the kind that may crop up; adding, somewhat significantly, that notwithstanding the conclusion of the Peruvian treaty, no emigration operations have been as yet undertaken in Kwantung.

It is said that the German Minister has instructed the German Consuls at all the Sreaty ports not to consent to any limitation of lekin in regard to foreign settlements; and so to avoid recognising any right to levy it in the interior.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 17th November; the P. and O. mail from London Sept. 29 was received on the 11th November. The North China Herald contains the following summary of news:—

The terms arranged by Mr. Mayers with the Viceroy of Nanking have been accepted by the Directors of the Woosung Railway, so we presume the line will very shortly be reopened. It is to be regretted that the ownership is not retained in English hands, but purchase seems to have been made an indispensable condition both by Li Hung-chang and the local authorities. What the latter would have liked, in fact, was to purchase the Railway out and out, and remove it from its present site, if not altogether from the face of Chinese soil; and they would have been willing to pay very liberally for the unconditional surrender. But such a conclusion would have been as far as possible from the object of the promoters. Their desire was not to lay down certain stock in order to sell at a profit, but to construct a specimen railway which should convince the Chinese of the value of steam-carriage. The extreme hostility of the officials to innovation made it almost hopeless that this object would be attained with their open assent; but it seemed possible that if a line could be made and trains run upon it for a while before their eyes, they might be persuaded to withdraw their opposition and accept the accomplished fact. In a measure, this result has been attained by the recent agreement. The working of the line is assured for a year, and the shareholders will be fully reimbursed for their outlay. We repeat, that it would have been more satisfactory if the ownership could have been retained, as there would then have been less doubt as to the future fortunes of the enterprise; but the circumstances were hardly such as to justify the British Minister in dictating terms; and purchase was the only basis on which the Chinese would listen to a compromise. The argument has been advanced that the shareholders had a right to do what they chose on their own land; and that argument would be tenable if the owners of the racecourse chose to lay down a railway within their enclosure. But it is not tenable in the case of a line which crosses public roads and canals. The right of the Government comes in directly a public highway is in question, and hence the difficulty of the Company's position. What Sir Thomas Wade could do, was to express a cogent wish for the continuance of the undertaking, and so persuade the Central Government to express themselves in its favour. He had, perhaps, a not altogether unwilling listener in Li Hung-chang, who seems to be the one man in China—the one man, at any rate, in a position of influence—who appreciates the value of foreign inventions, and is willing to see them employed. But his willingness is conditional on their being in Chinese hands; and he seems to have adhered firmly to this principle in respect of the Woosung Railway. With this condition, he memorialised the Central Government to depute two officials to accompany Mr. Mayers to Nanking, and assist him in coming to an understanding with Shen Pao-chen. The matter was regarded as one so much within the local jurisdiction of the Viceroy that this procedure seems to have been preferred to the direct arrangement of terms at Peking.

Mr. Mayers's task, then, was to secure for the railway a lease of life; and a year was the longest term to which the Viceroy could be brought to assent. Regarding the purchase money he was comparatively easy. He would, as we have said before, have been willing to pay a large sum to buy up and abolish the line. And under the actual circumstances, though he declined to recognise the right of the Company to make a profit out of what he regarded as an illegal undertaking, he was not indisposed to pay a price which would include a fair return on the money of the shareholders from the time of its subscription. It was eventually agreed to leave the exact determination of the sum to four arbitrators, of whom two are to be chosen by the Taoutai of Shanghai, and two by H.B.M.'s Consul. Payment is to be made in four quarterly instalments, the last at the expiry of the twelve months during which the line is to be worked by its present managers; and after which it passes into the uncontrolled possession of the Chinese. This, then, is the present condition of affairs. A railway has actually been constructed on Chinese soil, and the recognition of the Government obtained to its temporary working. What will be its future fortunes must be a matter of conjecture. The disposition of the present Viceroy seems unfavourable to the enterprise; he is conservative, and he is irritated at what he considers a slight upon his administration, in the construction of the line without his consent. But it may be hoped that his hostility will subside with time, and that the influences which are working in favour of foreign inventions will secure the permanence of the undertaking, after it has passed into Chinese possession.

The North-China Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society held the first meeting of the season at their Rooms on the 10th Nov., when a paper by Mr. T. W. Kingsmill, on "The Probable Correlation of Recent Geological Changes in Central and Eastern Asia, with the Tribal Migrations of Antiquity" was read. There was a meagre attendance, a quorum of members not being present. Mr. Medhurst, H.B.M.'s Consul, the president of the society, occupied the chair. Mr. Kingsmill treated his subject in an exhaustive manner, the paper abounding in useful information, and evincing proof of great study and research in its compilation. When Mr. Kingsmill concluded he was awarded a hearty vote of thanks; and the President and Dr. Macgowan, each in a few well-chosen remarks, regretted that there were not more geologists present to appreciate the able paper which had been read. At the suggestion of Dr. Macgowan, the secretary was requested, on the motion of the Chairman, to write to Dr. S. Wells Williams, who is about to leave China after a residence here of over forty years, on behalf of the Society, expressive of the high appreciation in which his talents and long services were held, and wishing him happiness and prosperity in his native land. The Chairman expressed regret at there not being a quorum present, which delayed the election of a number of gentlemen who wished to become members of the society, and expressed a hope that a similar difficulty would not be experienced at the next meeting.

The Temperance Society's entertainment on the 11th November was numerously attended, several of the most prominent residents in the Settlements being among the audience. There was also an improvement in the quality of the entertainment, and, if the standard now attained is kept up, the popularity of the Temperance Hall will be much enhanced, and the fortnightly gatherings looked forward to with interest and pleasure. The great feature of the entertainment was an address by Dr. S. Wells Williams, who, after a residence of forty years in China, is about to retire to his native land. Dr. Williams congratulated the society on the advancement made since the inauguration of the temperance movement in the Shantung-road Chapel, warned his hearers against the "seductive cocktail," and attributed the good health he had enjoyed during his long residence in China to his having abstained from all ardent spirits.

The new paddle steamer Kiang Kwan, the first of a line now being built for the C.M.S.N. Company, to trade on the Yangtsze, was taken on a trial trip on Nov. 11. By invitation of the assistant manager of the Company, a party of about fifty ladies and gentlemen, beside a large number of Chinese officials of various grades, joined in the excursion. An excellent champagne breakfast was provided, after which toasts were proposed, healths drunk, and speeches made, both by Chinese and foreigners. Everything connected with the steamer went off successfully, and the trip was much enjoyed.

The customary auction of race ponies, griffins and hacks has taken place at the Shanghai Horse Bazaar, Mr. H. Meller being the auctioneer. Fifty-nine lots were submitted, but there was only a limited attendance of buyers; prices consequently ruled low generally, and for many of the lots the reserve prices were not touched, while some others were bought in. The highest figure reached in a bonâ fide sale was Tls. 280, for which sum Tirailleur, the winner of the Maiden Stakes at the recent meeting, changed hands; while Crusader, winner of the Tirailleur Cup on the off-day, was sold at the reserve price of Tls. 100.

A meeting of shareholders in the China and Japan Marine Insurance Company was held on the 10th Nov. The accounts showed that 90 per cent. of the paid-up capital had been already returned to the shareholders; and the remaining 10 per cent. is available for immediate payment. It was explained that another 5 per cent. might probably be paid in December. The present liquidators retire; and Mr. Dunn was appointed to continue the liquidation, under the supervision of a committee, consisting of Messrs. Skelly and Groom.

We understand that the Tsung-li Yamen have addressed a circular to the Foreign Legations, in pursuance of Clause VI. of the trade section of the Chefoo Agreement, regarding the exemption of imports from lekin within the foreign settlements; and that the Ministers have replied, reserving all rights heretofore understood or claimed, pending decision of the question.

A meeting of members of the Skating Club has been held. Dr. Henderson, Messrs. Wheelock, Cory, Gundry, and Wyatt were elected a committee for the ensuing season. Mr. Boomer being unable to continue to act as hon. sec. and treasurer, Mr. Wyatt consented to take the office. It is understood that the club will be carried on on the same footing as last year, and the committee will have an early meeting to arrange about the erection of a matshed.

We regret to hear of the wreck of H.B.M.'s gunboat Lapwing on one of the Miaotao Islands, in the Gulf of Pechili, on the night of the 11th Nov. The Mosquito, which was lying at Chefoo at the time, went out on the 13th Nov. to her assistance. No lives are lost, and there seems just a chance that the vessel may be got off. We have no details of the accident.

The Hoppo of Canton has arrived here by the steamer Amoy, en route for Peking, whither he retires for one hundred days in consequence of the death of his mother. We understand that he was very friendly with the officers of the steamer, and that his courtesy in one instance took the form of a gift of a gold watch and chain.

The first prize of $16,000 in the November drawing of the Manila lottery has come to Shanghai, ticket No. 9,500 winning it. Mr. W. H. Carr, Japanese postal agent, and Mr. Graham, an engineer on board the Plymouth Rock, are the holders of the winning ticket, on joint account.

The Manila quartermaster who murdered his shipmate by stabbing him, in Bamboo Town, Hongkew, some months ago, and who has since been confined in the British gaol, awaiting shipment to Manila, was, on the 13th November, put on board the Spanish vessel Lily, for transport to his destination.

It is reported that Messrs. Chun Patnan and Sit Ming Cook, of the China Merchants' Steamship Company, have received intimation from the Tsung-li Yamen that they have been appointed Consul-General and Vice Consul-General for China at the port of San Francisco. Other appointments of a similar nature are said to be pending.

A six-oared gig race took place on the 10th Nov. on the river, between crews chosen from H.B.M. Charybdis, and the U. S. corvette Alert. They started from the Naval Yard, and finished at the Police Hulk, the Alert crew winning by a minute. The race was for $50 aside.

It is reported that the Taoutai of Shanghai will leave at the beginning of the Chinese new year, resigning on account of urgent private affairs.

The Volunteer Rifle Meeting has been held during the week, and has proved successful; there were a large number of competitors, and the shooting was good.

The American corvette Ashuelot arrived on the 13th Nov., and anchored off the Custom-house jetty.

Sir T. F. Wade and Mr. Hillier arrived on the 15th November by the steamer Shantung.

Messrs. Bissett and Co. report as follows upon the Share Market:—

The business reported during the week has been small, with little change in rates. We quote Yangtsze shares Tls. 10 lower. H. and S. Bank: One transaction is reported at former rates, 20 per cent. premium and exchange 74. The market is quiet. S.S.N. Co.: After the issue of our last report, there was a sale at Tls. 65, but rates have since recovered to Tls. 66. There have been sales at Tls. 69 and 70 for 31st January. Shanghai Dock Co.: A sale is reported at Tls. 210. Shanghai Gas Co.: Shares have changed hands at Tls. 140. Yangtsze Insurance Association: A sale was reported at Tls. 620. There are buyers at this rate. Hong Kong Fire Insurance Co.: Shares were inquired for at $565. China Fire Insurance Co.: A number of shares changed hands at $165 and exchange 74, and there are buyers at this rate.

The Celestial Empire supplies the subjoined items of intelligence:—

Our private letters from Tientsin are painful to read. The province of Chihli to the southward and westward is now beginning to feel the horrors of famine, and although really great efforts have been made by the Government to avert a general distress as much as possible, very many populous districts have had no relief, and are now fast coming to the end of their scanty stocks of food. No help can now be given to the thousands of miserable creatures already in extremity. The missionaries in Tientsin, of all creeds, say the accounts they have from Shantung are heartrending. Two missionary gentlemen give a cruelly harrowing account of a visit they have lately paid to a Christian family in Shantung well known to them. They found both man and wife horribly changed, black and incapable from privation. The unfortunate couple said they were about to take poison, as neither work nor food could be obtained; and, awful to relate—the day before they had buried their two children alive, as the poor little creatures were starving! In large and formerly fairly prosperous districts the drought of this year was never broken by rain, and the second crop failed like the first crop. No cereals or fruit or vegetables could be grown. The suffering people have eaten all the leaves off the trees, have lived on tree-bark and roots, and now that the winter has begun the poor famine-stricken wretches are dying fast from starvation and cold. No help can come, and those who die first are to be envied. We are told that the appearance of the unfortunate creatures is sad to see. The men and women have become shrivelled and black. The children are pot-bellied, silent, sullen, and with scarcely strength to crawl about. The mortality will be dreadful, and some districts will be depopulated. It was thought that in Chihli the second crop would give three-quarters of an average yield. In many places the crop was good, but in others there was no yield at all. We are assured that the second crop, taking the whole province into consideration, will be perhaps one-third, certainly less than half, an average.

The enormous rise in silk since June has had another and less happy result than that of giving handsome fortunes to foreign and Chinese merchants. The Chinese weavers and silk manufacturers are said to be suffering severely, for their trade has been almost entirely killed. It is not so much that the price of the manufactured stuff has risen so high as to check consumption and place it out of the power of all save the wealthiest to purchase silk and satin jackets, there has been absolutely no raw material to work with, and the weavers have lost their occupation. It has been impossible to obtain raw silk; every bale of it almost, including all the coarse Chinouns, which are principally used in native looms, having been placed on the Shanghai market for export. The consequence is that manufacturers at Nanking, Soochow, and elsewhere have simply been compelled to close their establishments; many of them have failed, and great distress exists among the weavers who have been thus suddenly thrown out of work.

The gunboats Alpha and Beta left for Tientsin on the 10th Nov., it being desirable that they arrive at their destination as early as possible.

NINGPO.

The North China Daily News reports that some correspondence has been exchanged between the American and the Chinese officials at Ningpo, with reference to a curious incident which took place during the stay of the U. S. gunboat Alert at that port. The commander of the Alert, whilst pulling in his gig, past a Chinese steam gunboat lying in the river, was motioned to by an armed sentry at the gangway, who, not content with thus repelling an imaginary intention to visit the ship, actually raised his rifle and took aim at the American officer. What explanation may have been given of this extraordinary conduct we have not learnt; but it is quite characteristic of the churlish indifference to the ordinary prescriptions of international courtesy which is affected by Chinese officials. The high authorities at Peking, the News is informed, have within the last few months declined to claim for the vessels composing the Chinese steam navy any such position as that assigned to the vessels of war of all other nations, and this being the case, such eccentricities as that of the sentry at Ningpo may perhaps not appear remarkable. At the same time, the occurrence is one that ought not to be passed over.

FOOCHOW.

The subjoined items of intelligence are from the Foochow Herald:—

In connection with the destruction of the Methodist Mission Chapel at Yen-ping-foo, last year, we understand that the United States Consul at this port has obtained a very satisfactory settlement of the affair. The authorities here have (after almost a year of constant pressure) caused the chapel to be rebuilt by the people of that city, and have collected from the rioters, and paid over to the Consul, for account of the Mission, $200, for books and other property destroyed; they have likewise issued (by request of the Consul) a very satisfactory proclamation, clearly setting forth the right of foreigners, whether merchants or missionaries, to travel, acquire property, and reside in the interior. An open letter has been handed to the Consul, to be sent by one of the native preachers to the Prefect at Yen-ping, ordering that official to deliver the reconstructed chapel to the said preacher, and to protect him in the possession of it. In addition to this, they have promised to legalise a perpetual lease of the land on which the chapel stands, which has been bought by the Mission. We have no doubt that they will carry out this promise—as they have already done in the case of property bought at Shao Wu foo by the American Board Mission.

We are glad to report that the newly-constructed pilot-boat Marie, the mishap to which was reported in our last issue, has been saved. It appears she was stranded on the wreck of the Childers, through the gross carelessness of the Chinese lowdah in charge, the weather at the time having been everything that could be desired, the wind being fair, and the accident happening in broad daylight. The position of the Childers is so well known that it is almost impossible to understand how an experienced lowdah could make any mistake with regard to it, especially under the above circumstances.

A daring burglary has been committed in the Foreign Settlement, on the premises occupied by Mr. Lin Kok-cheng, a Chinese clerk in the Imperial Maritime Customs. The thieves appear to have effected an entrance through one of the partition walls of the house, and to have stolen therefrom clothing to the value of about $200.

We understand that Ting Futai's application for permission to retire from his present office as Governor of this Province has been refused; his Excellency has received only one month's sick leave, and a present of four taels weight of ginseng from the Emperor. We therefore trust that Ting will continue, with renewed energy, to reform the provincial administration.

A few days since a sharp skirmish took place between a party of lekin men and some smugglers, near the Fives Court, in which several shots were fired. Had there been any passers by in the immediate vicinity the consequences might have been fatal.

HONG KONG.

Dates extend to the 23rd Nov.; the French mail from London Oct. 6 arrived out on the 16th Nov., and the following P. and O. mail of Oct. 13 was received on the 19th Nov. The Overland China Mail supplies the following items of intelligence :—

A very numerously attended public meeting has been held in regard to the C. O. Whitmore case. Resolutions were passed expressing indignation at the cruelties committed on board the vessel, deploring that the treaty relations between the United States and England prevented the offenders from being brought to justice, and urging the Governor to make representations in respect to the case to the home authorities. His Excellency has since expressed his concurrence with the views of the meeting, and stated that he had already communicated with the home Government on the matter. Peabody having given up command of the vessel, she sailed for Manila on Nov. 20.

It is stated that the prospectus for the formation of another Marine Insurance Company by the Chinese is about to be issued.

The Secretary of the Hong Kong and Whampoa Dock Company, Mr. David Gillies, has been committed for trial on a charge of causing the death of a Chinaman. The man died from a ruptured spleen, and the Chinese witnesses state that he was kicked on the abdomen by Mr. Gillies; but this is denied by the latter. The man's spleen was four times its proper size.

Amongst the passengers who have arrived and departed by the Arratoon Apcar, our readers must have observed the name of the Armenian Prelate, Archbishop Gregoris. The Right Reverend gentleman has come on as far as this place as a traveller, to know and see something more of the Chinese and Chinese cities than he has done in Penang and Singapore. The few Armenian residents at this port possessing no special place of worship, the prelate has been unable to hold any service, but the other afternoon he read prayers (of course in the Armenian language) over the grave of S. A. Seth, at the Protestant Cemetery, as the tombstone was being put up. The Right Reverend Father, in his full robe, and with a hat of a peak shape, presented a sight never seen hitherto in this part of the world. Though an archbishop under whose see are the Armenian churches in India and Persia, he is only forty-two years old, and has made a most favourable impression on his few resident countrymen, to whom he made a pleasant address on Sunday last, at the residence of Mr. C. P. Chater.

We learn that the prospectus for the formation of another Marine Insurance Company by the Chinese will be shortly issued. The one started under the auspices of the China Merchants Steamship Company prospers so well that it is thought a sufficiently lucrative business can be obtained for an additional company.

We regret to learn of the death of Inspector Dodds. The deceased had been in a very low state of health for some time, but it was not expected that he would have succumbed so suddenly. He was one of the Scotch contingent, and rose from the ranks. This seems an unfortunate year with the police, as this is the third inspector who had died since January.

The birthday of H. R. H. the Prince of Wales was not distinguished by any great show of bunting or booming of great guns in this distant part of his future realm. Had it not been for the standard which was hoisted on board H.M.S. Victor Emanuel, and an extra ensign or two on the gunboats in port, one would almost have been led to believe that the Naval Authorities had forgotten the day. The vessels of the Detached Squadron had only the usual national flag at the peak.

CANTON.

A serious fire has taken place at Fatshan, destroying over one hundred shops. It commenced about nine o'clock on the night of the 14th November, and was not put out till day dawn on the 18th. Neither the origin of the fire nor the amount of damage had been ascertained when the mail left.

The Canton authorities are determined to put down the Waising lottery in that city with a high hand. It is a well-known fact that in spite of the closing of the lottery establishments in Canton a deal of gambling is still carried on by means of the native post-offices. The stakes are enclosed in envelopes and sent over to Macao, and the tickets are brought back in the same way. The Viceroy has determined to put a stop to this practice, and it is said that he intends to adopt the extraordinary measure of examining the native post-offices and opening the letters in order to discover the gamblers.

The Hoppo of Canton, being in mourning for his mother, does not, says the Shanghai Courier, receive any visitors, save those who call upon official business. To such, however, he is at home. He is, of course unshaved, and is clad in coarse white hempen garments from head to foot. He sits upon a very low stool or dais, if not upon the ground itself, and greets such callers as are admitted with a very low obeisance. In conversation with a friend of ours this morning he described the Imperial audience accorded to him in Peking some months ago, before he started for Canton. The Empress Dowager remarked upon the fact that he was about to fill a post where he would probably come a good deal in contact with foreigners, and warned him to be careful. "Whatever you do," said her Imperial Majesty, "let your policy be always conciliatory, and do not embroil yourself with Western officials." The Hoppo appears a man of some tact and discrimination.

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

MANILA.

The Straits Times contains an account of the cruise of the German corvette Hertha to Borneo and the Philippines, in March and April last. Her people appeared to be pleased with their visit to Labuan; and they afterwards paid a visit to the German trading post at Sandakan Bay, where enterprising traders had established their head-quarters on an artificial island containing about a dozen houses and huts, and guarded by loaded cannon against any possible treachery of the natives. They stated that British intervention prevented a blockade of the Bornean coasts by the Spaniards. The corvette was, however, warned off from communicating with the natives of Sooloo, which was under blockade by a Spanish squadron. An invitation to spend a couple of days in the company of the Spanish officers there was declined because the Hertha was short of coal. The Hertha's people landed on several islets on her voyage to Zooloo, but the islanders took them for Spaniards, and fled from their miserable huts, leaving all their property behind. Although none of their belongings were touched these poor people could not be made more trustful.

The firm of Russell and Sturgis has decided to proceed with a liquidation of its affairs, but the creditors failed to agree to the terms of a settlement proposed to them at a meeting held at Manila on the 27th Oct. An advertisement afterwards appeared in which those creditors who approved of the settlement proposed were invited to send in their names either to the office of the firm or to the offices of the three Manila daily papers.

On the 11th Oct. a fire broke out in the town of Bulan, in the province of Albay, which reduced twelve houses to ashes. In the province of Cagayan, on the 7th Oct., a house was also destroyed by fire, on which occasion a woman perished in the flames.

On the 13th Oct. a flash of lightning struck a house in the island of Negros, killing instantaneously three persons and consuming the house.

BATAVIA.

The Straits Times translates from the Batavia newspapers the subjoined items of news :—

Regarding the war in Atchin official advices state that General Diemont assumed the civil and military command there on the 6th November. On the following day he despatched a company of infantry from Kotta Rajah and another company from Edi to Simpang Olim to aid Tuku Muda Ang Rasa, the Rajah of Passi, an ally of the N.I. Government, who, assisted by a Dutch naval force, had begun operations against Simpang Olim. Before the arrival of the troops the Rajah and his forces had taken Lasson and six forts. The Simpang Olimers offered resistance, and wounded several of the Rajah's people. At Atchin the state of health amongst the troops was unfavourable, owing to bad weather. The commanding officer announces the arrival of 141 Chinese coolies from Penang, and their being set to work road making. The state of health amongst the coolies was very satisfactory, and they were satisfied with their rations and quarters. The following private telegram has been received at Penang :—"Dutch taken Simpan Olim." Simpan Olim, according to native accounts, was one of the greatest strongholds of the Atchinese, indeed, held by them to be unassailable, and its capture will no doubt go a long way to hasten the termination of hostilities.

The Java Bode of the 18th Nov. states that Dr. Alken, a Government medical officer, has for some months been making experiments with Gurjon oil on lepers in the Leper hospital at Pelatungan in Netherlands India, and has obtained favourable results therefrom.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

—o—

SINGAPORE.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 30th November ; the French mail from London 20th Oct. was received on the 20th Nov., and the following P. and O. mail of 27th Oct. arrived out on the 27th November. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times:—

The principal political event which has occurred has been a meeting of the chiefs of the nine States who from time to time have given us so much trouble. The meeting was held at Government House, and the chiefs on their arrival were received by a guard of honour. Sir William Jervois addressed them on the desirability of peace, and assured them that the only anxiety of the British Government in regard to their States was the honest one of advancing the liberty and assisting in the well-being of their people. A long consultation ensued, in which it was decided that in future all differences among themselves should be arbitrated upon by reference to the Maharajah of Johore, and a paper, was signed to that effect, embodying also other promises. The resolution arrived at was communicated on the next day after the meeting of the Legislative Council. The nature of the arrangement has been the subject of much comment; its terms are looked upon as being unsatisfactory ; and the feeling is general that the Maharajah of Johore has been placed thereby in a false position.

A collision occurred on Nov. 16 between H.M.'s gunboat Magpie and the Italian barque Baccicia. The Baccicia was considerably damaged, though the hulls of the vessels never touched each other, and was towed into this port by the Magpie. The matter was referred to arbitration—the arbitrators for the Magpie being Captain Ellis, the Master Attendant, and Lieut. Boldero, of H.M.S. Juno ; those for the Baccicia, Mr. Baxter, Lloyd's Surveyor, and Captain Gaggino, of an Italian vessel. It was alleged on behalf of the Magpie that the accident was unavoidable, and the gunboat would have cleared the Baccicia if the quarter-boat of the latter vessel had not effectively screened her starboard bow light, and that the close proximity of the vessel was only discerned owing to a flash of lightning. The arbitrators were unable to agree ; and the matter was referred to Captain Kellock as umpire. It may be inferred from the decision that the Magpie could not have been much to blame for the collision, as each side pays its own damages, and if there were faults, they were on both sides.

Sultan Abdullah and the chiefs who are here charged with complicity in the murder of Mr. Birch will, it is understood, be shortly placed upon their trial, though before what tribunal is only a matter of surmise. It is understood, however, that the trial of two, Maharajah Lela and Datu Sagor, will be first proceeded with, and Laroot, it is believed, is the place in which it is to be held. The names of Mr. Davidson and Mr. Maxwell have been mentioned as those appointed to take part in the trial, but whether in a strictly judicial capacity, or as watching the case in the interests of the Government, is not known publicly. No doubt, considerable difficulties beset the situation, more especially in the instance of Sultan Abdullah, and it is to be hoped the Government will satisfy itself that the Court before which the accused will be put upon their trial will have unquestionable jurisdiction. In the meantime, some of the chiefs are lodged in the Civil Jail, while Abdullah and others enjoy a kind of parole, though under supervision.

The meetings of the Legislative Council which have been held have been devoid of interest, and except that some Bills have been advanced a stage no other matters of public interest have been dealt with. A conversation took place in regard to the publication of the new edition of the ordinances of the colony, of which we are in sore need, but the Attorney-General considered that its publication should be postponed.

The Singapore Rifle Association have held their twenty-second competition at the race-course rifle range, each competitor having five shots at 200 and five at 400 yards. There were only fifteen competitors. The following were awarded prizes in the order named :—

	200 yds.	400 yds.	Total pts.
Private G. S. Reutens, S.V.C.	16	17	33
Sergt.-Major J. Pendrip, 80th Regiment	17	15	32
Sergt.-Major C. Phillips, S.V.C. ...	17	14	31
M. Instructor N. Jones, 80th Regiment	15	15	30
Private J. J. Jambu, S.V.C.	14	15	29
Corporal R. Jambu, S.V.C.	15	14	29

The volunteers used the Snider, and the military the Martini-Henry rifle.

On numerous occasions welcome scraps of intelligence have reached us that the Atchin war is likely to be ended ; but so far as news from the public organs of the Dutch is concerned the war may be carried on till Doomsday, so far as any likelihood of a termination seems apparent. Two English officers have left for the scene of hostilities, and a benefit to humanity would be conferred if any friendly intervention could be brought to bear upon the combatants. In the meantime the squalor of the native troops employed by the Dutch is being brought continually before our eyes on board the transport ships which call in our harbour.

The Regent of Siam, with a large retinue, and accompanied by the British Vice Consul at Bangkok, is expected to arrive here in a few days on his way to the Delhi Durbar. Preparations are being made for his reception, which we hope will please his Highness and party.

The weather lately has been cool and refreshing, and we have had constant rains and heavy thunder storms.

Market Reports.

IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—The Import market had remained very depressed, especially as regards Yarns, business in which was quite at a standstill. Low qualities of Shirtings were very difficult of sale, and even for the better makes the demand had been of a trivial character. Indigo Shirtings and Cotton Satteens were firm, but Velvets and Turkey Reds were neglected. In Woollens best Italian Cloth was easily saleable, and Blankets of certain weights were more asked for. The inquiry for Mousselines had subsided, and was maintained only for special colours. Business in metals since last Circular had been unimportant, but quotations had been fully maintained for the few transactions reported.

CHEFOO.—Messrs. Wilson, Cornabé, and Co.'s Circular says :—Our last was dated 10th ult., and we now beg to continue our market advices. Cotton Goods : Plain fabrics have been saleable at quotations, but for fancy goods there has been no inquiry. Metals : Stocks both of iron and lead are very light, and sales can readiiy be made, but the prices offered are barely the equivalent of Shanghai values.

HANKOW.—The market had continued to be very dull during the fortnight, the abundant Cotton crop, together with the badness of trade in the country, rendering natives very indifferent to foreign goods.

CHINKIANG.—Messrs. Spencer and Wolff write on the 15th Nov. :—During the period that has elapsed since our last report the market for Piece Goods has assumed a far more favourable aspect, dealers showing increased desire to operate in certain makes of cloth, as shown below. The business passing continues small, but is satisfactory, inasmuch as rates have advanced in sympathy with the improved tone of advices from Shanghai. Grey Shirtings : Sales have been again confined to the better class of 8¼lbs. goods at the following rates :—Red Pheasants, Tls. 1.70 to 1.74 per piece ; Pillar, Tls. 1.71½ per piece ; Stewart Thomson's A.I., Tls. 1.72 to 1.73 per piece, and various other chops of similar cloth at Tls. 1.68 to 1.75 per piece. T-Cloths : Some small lots of good 7lb. Mexicans have found buyers at Tls. 1.33 to 1.37 per piece, but for other qualities the demand is still very sluggish. English Drills : But few sales are reported ; we quote 14lbs. Tls. 1.95 to 2,02 per piece, and 15lbs. Tls. 1.98 to 2.06 per piece.

SHANGHAI.—Owing to advancing costs telegraphed from producing markets some improvement had occurred in piece goods during the week, especially in the medium and better classes of 8-4 lbs. Grey Shirtings, which had been in some demand from Tls. 1.70 to 1.90 per piece, beyond which it was, however, impossible to sell even "crack" makes ; 6 lbs. and 7 lbs. were still rather neglected, but in heavy cloth a little had been doing at Tls. 1.95 to 2.18 per piece, 9-12 lbs. to Tls. 2.30 to 2.35 per piece for 10 lbs. goods. T-Cloths at the low prices ruling had attracted the attention of buyers, and some considerable sales from one or two hands are reported of good 7 lbs. Mexican qualities at Tls. 1.17½ per piece ; at the close there were few sellers, unless at a considerable advance; 6 lbs. and 7 lbs. common had also improved in value, and were quoted 2 to 4 candareens higher. In White Shirtings there had been small sales at some advance. Drills: About 18,000 pieces changed hands at Tls. 1.92½ to 1.95 per piece 14 lbs. and 15 lbs. English, for which Tls. 2 advance was asked at the close. Fancy Cottons: Demand quiet, prices unchanged. Woollens: In better demand for Szechuen, and with considerably enhanced costs in production, reported by telegraph, holders were firmer, and prices at public auction also improved. There has been no improvement in Metals. Speculators had refrained from operating, and quotations were influenced solely by the purchases of consumers, which had been scarcely sufficient to cause any important alteration in values.

HONG KONG.—The market had been dull throughout the fortnight, and a declining tendency prevailed at the close. Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular says:—Cotton Yarn: Nos. 16 to 24 are in good request, and in some cases rather better offers have been obtained, as holders are firm and stocks small. Nos. 28 to 32 meet with an occasional inquiry, but Nos. 38 to 42 are altogether neglected. Piece Goods: There has been a slight increase in the settlements of staple goods and standard chops of 8.4 lb. Grey Shirtings are still wanted at former valuations. White Shirtings are neglected. There is nothing new to report about Drills, as prices are unchanged, and no sales have been made in the past week. Woollens: Scarlet Camlets are wanted at better values, and Lastings maintain their position, owing to the scarcity of supplies. Ready parcels of Long Ells will meet with quick sale at higher prices. Blankets are very firmly held, and Spanish Stripes are in improved demand. Metals: Stocks of Lead are very small, and higher prices are now being demanded. Soft Tin Plates command $6, and hard $5.80 per box. Tin is rather higher, owing to advices from the Straits. Quicksilver has been considerably speculated in at fluctuating rates; the highest point touched was $90 per picul, but at the close the market is weak at $80 to 80.50. Coals: The only arrivals have been 1,900 tons of Australian, and the sales have been 827 tons of Cardiff at 40s. per ton to arrive, and 2,900 tons of Australian at $9 per ton, ex ship. Cardiff and soft Australian are in demand, and the market is very firm at the close, as advices have been received from Shanghai of a marked improvement there.

CANTON.—The demand had been quiet. Quotations were:—Lead W.B. $8.35 to 8.96, L.B. $8.75 to 8.80; Quicksilver, $90 to 91.

SINGAPORE.—The market for Manchester Goods had not shown much activity, although importers had been inclined to force sales by lowering rates, in order to secure the advantage of remitting at the present high rates of sterling exchange. There had been a fair demand for a few of the principal staples, and a moderate business had been done. The principal items reported are 11,000 pieces Grey Shirtings, 20,000 pieces T-Cloths, 24,000 pieces White Shirtings, 75 cases White Cambrics, 20 cases White Figured Shirtings, 160 bales Grey Yarn, 100 bales T. R. Yarn, 35 bales Coloured Yarns.

PENANG.—The market generally had continued quiet. Transactions had been on a limited scale, and prices had shown a downward tendency, consequent upon the advance in exchange.

EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—Business had been greatly restricted during the period since the date of last report, settlements amounting to 2,700 piculs, comprising all classes. Arrivals had been on a fair scale, and stocks increasing; in consequence, prices were rather easier, and native holders were more willing to meet offers.

SHANGHAI.—Black: A fair total of business had been done during the week, settlements aggregating 8,000 chests. Nearly all the business was done in the early part of the week by one house; since then there had been a few trifling transactions, but the market closed weak for all teas at over Tls. 14. Up to this price, or for teas that lay down in London at about 9d., there was still some demand. In Hankow there had not been a single settlement during the fortnight, the few arrivals having all been forwarded to this market, and the supply being about exhausted. Green: Teas had again been active, market settlements for the week reaching 22,500 half chests, at an advance on fine teas of about one tael on prices current at the beginning of the month. These kinds were getting very scarce, and teamen were very strong for the few chops still on offer.

FOOCHOW.—Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular says:—The tone of the Tea market has been quieter during the fortnight, settlements of Congou being 24,781 chests only. A large proportion is of low to common grades, for which kinds slightly easier rates have been accepted, though quotations can hardly be changed as yet. Siftings and broken leafs have declined about half-a-tael, but good common and flavoury sorts being in comparatively limited supply remain very firm. Further arrivals are 13,853 chests, against 14,910 chests for corresponding interval last year. Souchongs are without change; settlements 1,664 chests at Tls. 14.05 to 24.05, with one small lot at Tls. 31.3 on board; stock is 2,101 chests. Ooloongs have been taken at full rates, showing irregularity and some rise on former values; settlements 2,212 half-chests at Tls. 17.3 to 30.8 on board. Further receipts amount to 3,490 half-chests, and stock is 1,912 half-chests. Scented Teas have found buyers for 3,568 boxes at Tls. 10.3 to 10.8 on board for Siftings, Tls. 16.8 to 41.8 on board for Scented Orange Pekoes, and Tls. 16.8 on board for low quality Scented Caper. Prices have ruled extremely high for quality. Total production is 86,300 boxes to date, as against 119,500 boxes at same time last year; stock 557 boxes. Purchases of Flowery Pekoes amount to 547 chests at Tls. 28.8 to 52.8 on board.

AMOY AND FORMOSA.—A string of Amoy Ooloongs had been bought, averaging barely good cargo, at $23, short price, showing rather worse value than previous purchases. Formosa Ooloong: Advices from Tamsui report the total export to date as 7,373,550 lbs., against 4,880,177 lbs. at the same time last year. Settlements at this port 926 half-chests at $30 o. b. for good, $36 for fine, and $42·45 for finest, being about previous rates. Most of these Teas are said to be for shipment to the London market. Stock 62,681 half-chests. The British ship Thyatira, loading for New York at £1 17s. 6d. per ton. Expected: S.S. Glenfalloch, to fill up at £3 10s. per ton. For London: The s.s. Fleurs Castle, circulated to call towards the end of November; rate £3 per ton.

CANTON.—Messrs. Deacon and Co.'s Report says:—We have to report a larger business in Tea during the past fortnight; the general tone of our market is however unchanged, and prices for all classes have been fully maintained. Congous: A few small parcels of fine fourth crop tea have been taken at Tls. 32 to 33. From Macao a fair amount of shipments have gone forward, consisting chiefly of contract teas. Scented Teas: There has been more activity in our market, and a fair business has resulted in Capers; we cannot quote any decline in prices, though natives have shown more readiness to part with their teas, as shortly they will be unable to obtain any flower for scenting purposes. Common kinds have been bought at Tls. 17¼ to 18½, fair to medium at Tls. 19 to 22, fine and finest at Tls. 26 to 33. Considerable arrivals of leaf have come to hand, and the stock has consequently been augmented; there is little doubt, however, that a fair proportion of the leaf which is now here will be held over till next season. A moderate business has been done in Pekoes at very full rates; "long leaf" kinds of medium grade may be quoted at Tls. 25 to 26, and fine at Tls. 29 to 33. A few parcels of "new makes" have found buyers at Tls. 16 to 18. Canton Greens: No settlements are reported. The following is a summary of the fortnight's business:—Congou, 390 boxes at Tls. 32 to 33 per picul; Scented Caper, 16,400 boxes at Tls. 17¼ to 33; Scented Orange Pekoe, 6,690 boxes at Tls. 16 to 33.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—Continued unfavourable advices from the European markets, added to the great difficulty in negotiating against shipments, had tended to reduce business. At the close more disposition was apparent to operate at the current quotations, which showed an important reduction on those of last mail. Settlements from 1st July to date, 15,900 bales; do. 1875-6, 7,200; do. 1874-5, 5,700; do. 1873-4, 6,600; do. 1872-3, 7,450; 1871-2, 7,300; 1871-2, 1,060. Stock, 3,000 bales, against 1,300 bales last year. Silk-worm Eggs: Total arrivals since the beginning of the season had been 1,100,000 cards, and total shipments to date 165,000 cards. Of the latter it was computed that the goods delivered to foreign houses, under contracts entered into at the commencement of the season, and the consignments of native dealers, represent about 100,000 cards; the balance consisting of the purchases made in the open market during the fortnight, at an average price of $2.30 to $2.50.

SHANGHAI.—The North China Herald report says:—Prices have further declined to Tls. 500 for common Tsatlees, of which class it is difficult to even get a muster, the supply being so limited and held to a great extent by one or two native speculators; the asking price for Blue Elephant is Tls. 640, and it is impossible to say what would be accepted for best chops; coarse silks are still pressed at Tls. 440 for middling Kahings and Tls. 400 to 410 for good 9 × 12 moss Taysaams; re-reels are Tls. 120 per picul lower than they were a month since, and Tls. 560 has been accepted for common, holders generally appearing fairly firm for the better classes. Arrivals, principally yellow silks, have increased the unsold stock to close upon 23,000 bales, and with the reported fall at home it is unlikely we shall see business resumed here to any extent for some time yet. It is a question, though, whether a demand for native consumption will not help to clear off a considerable portion of the present "rubbish" in stock, should prices decline very much lower.

CANTON.—Messrs. Deacon's Circular says:—There has been only a very moderate demand throughout the fortnight, and dealings have been in a more limited compass than for some time hitherto. For the French mail settlements were 350 bales Tsatlee, and 200 bales have since changed hands. Prices have been somewhat irregular, but a decline of $25 per picul on previous quotations has been established. No. 4 Tsatlee of good quality is, nominally, worth $515 per picul, and should disquieting reports continue to be received from the other side, it is reasonable to expect a further decline. About 100 bales of sixth yield have arrived from the country; the quality is not approved, and the preponderance of yellow thread is said to be considerably in excess of the usual average quantity. Long-reels: Parsees have taken 20 piculs and 20 bales of common Tsatlee sorts for export to India. For Re-reels there has been a fair demand, and fine descriptions have been most in favour. Settlements under contract are 450 boxes. Stock is computed at 1,200 to 1,500 bales Tsatlee, 50 bales Cumchuck and Lucklow, and 100 to 200 bales of inferior kinds.

THE CHINESE MISSION TO ENGLAND.

(NORTH CHINA HERALD.)

The Chinese Embassy, which is on the point of departure for England, is composed of two joint-envoys, in accordance with the peculiar and cumbrous system which has been adopted by the Yamen of Foreign Affairs for the representation of the Chinese Government abroad. This system owes its origin, primarily speaking, to the Japanese invasion of Formosa, in 1874, which quickened in a remarkable degree the sense entertained by the Chinese official body of the necessity of cultivating international relations from a new standpoint. The decision to make a beginning with the despatch of envoys to foreign countries, which was made known in the memorials to the Throne—translations of which were published in July, 1875—was the first instalment in the measures of "progress" initiated in consequence of the Formosan panic; but the individuals who were singled out as the destined envoys of the future were, with but one or two exceptions, men of the most inferior standing. Almost simultaneously with the appearance of these memorials, however, the partial solution of the difficulty arising out of the murder of Mr. Margary, arrived at in September, 1875, compelled the Chinese Government to take a further step in advance. One element in the conditions imposed by the British Minister was the despatch of a mission of apology to Her Majesty the Queen; but it appears to have been intimated at the same time that the envoy to be charged with this mission must be a person of adequate rank and position; and the Chinese Government consequently selected for the duty an official of a totally different type from that to which the previous recommendations had been confined. Kwoh Sung-tao, the functionary who, on the 28th August, 1875, was appointed Envoy Extraordinary to Great Britain, is a man verging on the sixtieth year of his age, who gained distinction in early life by his scholarship, and filled in succession several literary offices in Peking. He is a native of Yunan, and a fellow-provincial, therefore, of the venerated statesman Tseng Kwoh-fan, with whom he was connected by ties of marriage and early friendship. In 1859 he was sent on a special mission from the Court to accompany Prince Sang-kolinsin, during the latter's tenure of command at Tientsin; and it is said that he remonstrated, though in vain, against the impolicy of the treacherous attack which was planned against the British gunboats at Taku in June of that year. After holding various provincial offices he was sent in 1865 to Canton, as Judicial Commissioner—the post next but one below that of Governor of province; and, whilst acting Financial Commissioner, he was placed for some months in charge of the acting Governorship of Kwang-tung. His conduct or his representations having given dissatisfaction, he was removed from office, and for nearly ten years he remained in retirement in his native place. Early in 1875 he arrived at Peking, in company with Tseng Kwoh-ts'nan, the brother of the late Tseng Kwo-fan, and shortly afterwards was appointed to the post of Judicial Commissioner at Foochow. From this he was summoned, a few months afterwards, to become the first regularly commissioned foreign envoy of the Chinese Government.

There was at the same time associated with him a much younger individual, in the person of the "expectant Taoutai" Hsu Ch'ien-shen, a protégé and employé of the Governor-General Li Hung-chang, at Tientsin. Although barely more than thirty years of age, and without having served in any substantive office, Hsu Chien-shen was made the colleague, with equal dignity, although lesser official rank, of the first-named envoy, to whom in character and disposition he was radically unlike. As a much younger man, accustomed to the society of Europeans, and with some experience of foreign travel, his views were probably far less conservative than those of Kwoh; and it is not surprising that, after a year of nominal colleagueship, other employment should have been found for Hsu, who has been named first envoy to Japan, and a more congenial associate provided for the elder official. The vacancy caused by the withdrawal of Hsu has been filled by a Cantonese named Liu Si-hung, a totally unknown individual, hitherto employed in one of the inferior posts under the Board of Punishments at Peking. His only recommendation for the office conferred upon him appears to be the friendship subsisting between himself and the chief of the mission. His appearance and manners are described as unprepossessing and he is in this respect in decided contrast with Kwoh Sung-tao, who is a person of dignified bearing and pleasing features. One marked peculiarity of the chief envoy is the almost unintelligible provincial dialect he speaks. His language bears, it is said, but a remote resemblance to even the southern type of mandarin, being, in pronunciation at least, a pure provincial patois. Even among Chinese officials his conversation is said to be guessed at rather than understood—a circumstance more frequent in the case of natives of the province of Hunan than would be easily believed by persons unfamiliar with the dialectic variations of the Chinese language.

It is understood that the post of interpreter to the mission will be filled by the two most advanced students of the School of Languages at Peking, named respectively Feng-I and Teh-Ming. As young men these students visited Europe in 1868-69, in the train of the Burlingame Mission. They have a respectable knowledge of English.

The chief envoy, who became a widower many years ago, has no actual wife at present, and the "Lady Kwoh" who has been spoken of is, therefore, an imaginary person. He is attended, however, by two "secondary wives" or concubines, both elderly ladies, from whom he finds it so difficult to separate himself that he will be accompanied by both on the journey. Their position will, probably, be appreciated with due respect, and they will doubtless be little, if at all, seen during the stay of the Mission in England. We may add that H.E. Kwoh has the reputation among his countrymen of a man of extreme probity, and of very unbending views, and, as is not unusual among Chinese officials of this character, he considers penuriousness of habit one of the first of duties. The expenses of the Mission have, it is stated, been calculated for this reason on a very modest scale; and the Chinese Embassy will probably startle the corps diplomatique at the Court of St. James's by the example of frugality it will set. In this respect it will form a startling contrast to the meteor-like course of Mr. Burlingame on his roving mission, when something like Taels 200,000, abstracted from the fund which was legally devoted to the improvement of the harbours and coast navigation of China, was expended in the successful endeavour to mystify the public men and the press of Europe with regard to the character and intentions of the Chinese Government. The present mission, even though proceeding too far at first in the opposite direction, will doubtless soon discover that diplomatic etiquette and social proprieties in Europe necessitate a larger outlay than is for the moment contemplated.

JUDICIAL STATISTICS FOR 1875.

The Judicial Statistics annually published furnish by far the best index of the state of crime in the country. Comprising as they do not only a great deal of the information supplied by the special reports on convict and local prisons and on reformatory and industrial schools, but also returns of all criminal proceedings and statements respecting the establishment and work of the police and constabulary forces throughout England and Wales, they supply fuller data than any of the former for forming a correct judgment on this important subject. Valuable as these statistics unquestionably are, they probably do not receive the attention they deserve in consequence of the dislike which the generality of people have to obtaining information through the medium of a vast array of figures. It may be well, therefore, to gather out of the records for 1875, just published, a few of the principal items which they contain, and from which our readers can draw their own deductions as to the efficacy of the means employed for the prevention and repression of crime. Foremost amongst those means stand the police and constabulary forces, the strength of which was increased last year 3·1 per cent., and amounted to 29,460 men, or one for every 812 of the population estimated for the middle of 1875. A comparison of the strength of these bodies last year with that at which they stood ten years ago shows that in the intervening period their numbers have been augmented by 6,210 men, or at the rate of 26·6 per cent. The principal addition in 1875 was to the number of sergeants and constables, but the additional constables appointed for special purposes were also added to slightly, so as to amount to 453 men, of whom 102 are employed in the city of London and in the boroughs, the remainder belonging to the counties. It may be here observed that beyond the 29,460 men above mentioned, of whom nearly 700 are stationed in Government departments, Liverpool has dock and river police of its own, and some other seaport places, as well as Tunbridge Wells and Hove, appoint their constables under local Acts. Out of the whole force in England and Wales the metropolitan and city of London engross more than 11,000 men, and the remaining 18,451 are distributed throughout the boroughs and counties, the number of constables in the counties and metropolitan police being nearly equal. In the metropolitan area, when the men employed in Her Majesty's dockyards, &c., are deducted, the proportion of constables to population is one for every 398; in the city of London there is a policeman for every 94 of the inhabitants as enumerated in the census of 1871; in the boroughs the ratio is one constable to every 738 of their population, and that of places having constables under local Acts; and in the counties the constabulary are as one to every 1,244 of their population, exclusive of the boroughs. In each of these forces the last ten years have produced a large increase, and a consequent addition to their cost, so that in 1875 the whole expense of maintaining the police and constabulary of England and the Principality came to £2,742,526, or not far short of a million in excess of their cost in 1864-5. It must be remembered in connection with this large increase of expenditure that these forces have necessarily grown with the growth of the population, and that the prices of all commodities, as well as the rate of wages in the country, have risen greatly, so that the men could not be clothed and accoutred, nor, indeed, obtained, on the same terms as were found adequate ten years back. Hence the average total cost per man was last year £93 10s., inclusive of pay and equipment, whilst in the five years from 1863 to 1867 each man cost altogether £77 3s. 6d. on an average. The proportion of the total charges for the whole of both forces in this part of the kingdom, exclusive of the City of London police, contributed from the public revenue, was 40·6 per cent., or £1,081,216. The efficiency of the police may fairly be judged both by the number of offences committed and by that of persons apprehended.

THE ARCTIC EXPEDITION.

On the 21st inst. Mr. Clements R. Markham delivered a lecture on the results of the Arctic Expedition to the members of the London Institute, Finsbury-circus. When he last addressed them he explained, he said, the character of the results which the Expedition was likely to obtain, and he pointed out how the great work could not be completed by one or more ships sent out at the same time to the same locality, but that they would have to be followed up by others in other directions until the goal was accomplished. The recent expedition had, he considered, been eminently successful. The Alert and the Discovery wintered further north, and passed through a longer period of darkness and of intense cold, than any ships that had been sent out before them. They had also organised a system of sledging which was unique, whilst the sufferings endured by the men exceeded everything recorded in Arctic annals. It was never thought that the explorers of 1876 would be exposed to all the horrors of a dreadful disease, but such they had to encounter; for scurvy struck them down one by one until the lives of all hung upon a mere chance. Notwithstanding all that, they nobly persevered in the performance of their duty, had returned with a rich harvest of results in the various walks of science, and had made discoveries such as had thrown a flood of light on the Polar Sea. Mr. Markham dealt with his subject from a scientific point of view, describing the formation of icebergs, the setting in of streams and currents, and the general appearance of the Palæocrystic or ancient sea of ice, which is supposed to surround the Pole. That land was not to be found in the higher latitudes was evidenced by the absence of birds, the only living thing seen by the northern division of sledgers being a little snow-bunting that had strayed from the nearest shore. Animal marine life almost ceased in the ice-covered Polar Sea. No seals were observed, and consequently no bears. Important meteorological and hydrographic observations were taken, and would be published as soon as they could be properly worked out. Results showing great geographical and geological research had also been obtained. Excellent tertiary coal had been discovered, and impressions of leaves brought back, proving that a luxuriant forest, numbering no fewer than fifty or sixty different species of arborescent trees, once grew near Disco, and on what is now a sea of ice. He considered the discovery of coal in 82 degs. north alone worth the whole cost of the Expedition twice over. Every species of flora discovered in the new region had been brought home. The expedition had achieved a great result also in educating a body of young men whose services as Arctic navigators hereafter could not be over-estimated, for to them alone was due the honour of planting the British flag on the most northerly point of the globe ever reached by man. Captain Markham was present, and was loudly cheered at the close of the lecture.

Three petty officers belonging to the Alert and the Discovery, named George Emmerson, John Radmore, and James Doidge, who had had their services in connection with the Expedition brought under the notice of the Admiralty by Capt. Nares, have received warrants from their Lordships. Others will be promoted as soon as they are able to pass the necessary examination.

THE JEWS IN THE EAST.—With the view of presenting a memorial prepared by the International Jewish Conference, which sat at Paris from the 11th to the 15th of December, a deputation from the Anglo-Jewish Association waited on Lord Derby on the 27th ult. The deputation was introduced by Baron Henry de Worms, who, as well as Mr. Serjeant Simon, M.P., and Mr. Julian Goldsmid, M.P., addressed his lordship on the subject of securing protection to the Jews in Roumania in any readjustment that may be made in regard to the Turkish provinces, this matter not necessarily being included in the deliberations of the plenary Conference. Mr. Serjeant Simon assured his lordship that the Jews were without the power of protection, and that almost every atrocity committed by the Bashi-Bazouks upon the unhappy Christians had been committed by the Roumanian Christians upon the Jews of that country. Lord Derby replied that the Government were not unaware of this persecution, and that he would be glad to communicate with the Anglo-Jewish Association and to forward its object by all means in his power.

THE GOLD COAST COLONY.—The Gazette notifies the appointments of Sir David Patrick Chalmers, Knt., to be Chief Justice; of Mr. James Marshall to be a Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court; and of Mr. Thomas Witter Jackson to be a Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of the Gold Coast Colony.

THE SCOTTISH PEERAGE.—The Earl of Mar and Kellie and Lord Balfour of Burleigh have been elected representative peers of Scotland to fill the vacancies created by the death of the Marquis of Tweeddale and of the Earl of Leven and Melville.

THE P. and O. Company's steamship Poonah, Captain W. C. Angove, from Calcutta, viâ the Suez Canal, arrived at Southampton Thursday (three days late), bringing the heavy portion of the last inward P. and O. mail.

THE will of the late Mr. De Long, American Minister to Japan, has been filed in the New York Probate Court. The estate is valued at $20,000.

SECRET SOCIETIES IN CHINA AND THE STRAITS.

THE subject of Secret Societies having been recently discussed in Singapore, and a suggestion made some years back for their registration having been revived, it may be desirable to pass in review briefly what is known with regard to such organisations in China generally, and with respect to them as they have become developed in the Straits Settlements. Secret Societies in China have been known to exist from the earliest days of our intercourse with that country, and have been noticed by almost all writers upon it. That such organisations exercise a very powerful influence there can be no doubt. They have, for the most part, been at the bottom of the factions which have been formed, and the rebellions which have broken out; and are always much dreaded by the Chinese officials, who have long recognised themselves to be powerless against them. The assassination of Viceroy MAH, at Nankin, some years ago, was known to have been brought about by the machinations of a powerful secret organisation in the South of China, and the authorities were openly threatened that if they punished the perpetrators of that deed there would at once be a body of 80,000 men in arms against the Government, and there seems little question that this threat had a very powerful effect upon the officials, and that the working of the Secret Society in question greatly impeded any efforts which they may have made to bring the malefactors to justice.

The power, therefore, of these associations in China itself cannot be doubted; but it is to be carefully remembered that with a weak and defective Government such societies may have a very different degree of influence to what may be exercised by similar organisations in a colony under British rule, and where at all events threats of outbreak are certain to be much less regarded than they are ordinarily by Chinese Mandarins. But even bearing this modifying element in mind, the Secret Societies in the Straits Settlements are still such as to call for serious attention, and we are not surprised that the subject has again been discussed in the Legislative Council. It is a curious fact that we owe to the labours of a Government Commission appointed to inquire into the working of the Secret Societies in Penang in the year 1868, the most reliable information which we possess concerning these organisations generally. It is impossible to deny that the powers of intimidation and coercion which that investigation showed they possessed, were of a very formidable character, and, indeed, were such as, if fully carried out, would lead to a complete subversion of all law and order. The main features of these Societies have already become familiar to those who are acquainted with affairs in China and the East. The oath administered amidst revolting surroundings, and fortified by drinking from a cup containing water in which blood from the fingers of each of the brethren had been mingled; the formidable code of by-laws for mutual help among which the manner in which assistance is to be rendered to murderers takes a specially prominent place; the persecuting activity with which new arrivals in Penang were forced to join the ranks of one of these Societies, and the regret which many felt at the thraldom into which they were thus plunged, have since the time when that report appeared become well known to all whose attention has been turned to matters connected with the Far East. Since that time a variety of suggestions have been made for doing away with, or at least modifying, the disorganising effects which the Huais ("Hoeys," as usually written in the Straits papers) exert upon the native population: and, as noticed in a recent number of this Paper, registering the Societies has more than once been proposed as a desirable means of bringing them under control. We think, however, that such an attempt would be a mistake, for the following very strong reasons:—First, it would be an impossibility to register such Societies effectually; secondly, even if it were possible to register them it would be very bad policy to add to their importance by officially recognising their existence. Every probability lies in the direction of the Government completely failing in the work of registration. Whatever particulars the worthy heads of these Societies might kindly condescend to supply to the Government would assuredly be Will o' the Wisp lights which would serve only to make their present darkness the more treacherous; while the bare fact that the societies were recognised in any possible way by the Government would, among natives who are abjectly afraid of anything in the form of Government authority, become a powerful instrument of further intimidation; and thus the result attained would be precisely the opposite of what was intended. Before the Singapore Government think of seriously entering upon the task of registering Secret Societies, we would recommend them carefully to inquire into the amount of success which has attended the very much simpler business of registering cooks, coolies, servants, hawkers, &c., among Chinese and natives generally, and we strongly suspect, if a truthful report be made, that the results of the inquiry will be such as will show the utter hopelessness of any good being attained by undertaking so delicate a task as the registration of societies avowedly secret. What, then, it will be asked, is the Government to do? The answer we think is simple; they should do nothing directly, but knowing that such organisations exist, they should use every means in their power, through improvements in the police, and especially the Detective branch, to counteract the mischief which the Huais are able to produce. It is not to be overlooked that it may be, and, indeed, we think very probably is, part of the rôle of those connected with the secret organisations in the Straits to make them appear to the Government in the most formidable light possible, and in fact to cause a kind of scare as the very means of inducing the authorities to give in to them to some extent—thus establishing their power up to this point, being shrewdly aware that they have little to fear from increased vigilance on the part of the Government or the Police, so long as they themselves have the opportunity of directing, or rather of mis-directing, that vigilance, just as a conjuror tells his audience to look very carefully at what he is doing when he is about to deceive them—knowing very well that the harder they look the less they will see. We would certainly suggest that if the Straits authorities desire to suppress or to restrain the Secret Societies they had better obtain the information to enable them to do so, from some more reliable source than from the Secret Societies themselves.

THE YUNNAN OUTRAGE PROCLAMATION.

WE notice with pleasure that, contrary to what, judging from previous experience, there was too good reason to fear, the Chinese authorities appear to be thoroughly in earnest as to issuing the Proclamation agreed upon by the Chefoo Convention with reference to the Yunnan outrage. According to the North China Herald, the Proclamation which has been drawn up embodies LI-HUNG-CHANG'S Memorial and the Decree issued by the Tsungli Yamen, asserting the privilege of foreigners to travel in the interior and their right to protection. As this will be posted in every prefecture and sub-prefecture, it may be reasonably expected to go far towards improving the status of foreigners generally in the country. There is no doubt that many of the difficulties which arise in the interior are due to ignorance on the part of the Chinese officials and people as to the actual rights which have been conceded to foreigners. The Peking authorities have hitherto hardly had the courage to let the large majority of the official and literary classes—and as a necessary consequence the masses of the people—know what has really been conceded in the Treaty of Tientsin, and to the present day it is not known at all in the interior that important rights have been granted to us. The Peking officials had no doubt some reason to be afraid of letting it be generally known to how great an extent they had, after the conclusion of the last war, come down from the arrogant position which they had up to that time held. The Peking Government had then to deal with the Taiping Rebellion, and for many years after that outbreak was suppressed their position was weak and doubtful. At present, however, they have, thanks to a great extent to our assistance, acquired much greater power; and the time has undoubtedly come when they should be expected to proclaim generally the rights which have been conceded to foreign nations. Nothing in the long run can be more impolitic than for them to abstain from so doing, as the risk of difficulties arising between China and some foreign nation must always be great, so long as the bulk of the residents are allowed to remain under the belief that Europeans are still treated by the Peking Government as "outside barbarians." The present step is unquestionably one in the right direction, and we trust that care will be taken by the Consular officials in China to ascertain for themselves that the proclamation which has been drawn up is duly posted.

THE interesting Petition of Right case, RUSTOMJEE v. the QUEEN, of which we gave particulars some time back, has been heard in the Court of Appeal. It arose, as our readers may recollect, with reference to the Chinese indemnity of 1842, in regard to which the plaintiff claimed compensation. He alleged that the justice of his claim had been admitted at the time by Sir HENRY POTTINGER, and that he was one of the persons in view of whose losses the indemnity in question was paid. But the Court of Appeal has sustained the original judgment entirely, and held that he had no legal claim against the Crown. The Crown, according to Lord COLERIDGE'S judgment, has absolute discretion as to the terms on which a Treaty of Peace is to be made, and cannot be held bound by any expectations held out beforehand by its subordinate agents. In making a Treaty, in other words, the Crown cannot be in the position of a trustee or agent for subjects. A duty was no doubt incumbent on the Crown to administer the money properly; but this was a duty to act as Sovereign, according to the advice of Ministers, and if there was a failure to perform the duty, it was one which Parliament alone could correct.

OUR news from Peking by the last mail contains a statement to the effect that a Korean who had followed the ambassador from that country and had caused the death of a Chinaman was to be handed over to the Korean authorities for trial. It is justly observed that this fact shows that the principle of exterritoriality is recognised among the Chinese apart from their treaties with foreign nations. That a similar principle is frequently acted upon in China has long been known, and has always weighed considerably against the arguments which have been put forward in favour of our discontinuing to claim exterritorial privileges. The right, for example, of members of Chinese Guilds to have their disputes settled by the headmen of those corporations is fully recognised by all Chinese Mandarins; and this privilege is a personal right, very similar in its character to exterritoriality. In a country where such exemptions from the general judicial authority of the State continue to exist, it is impossible to look upon exterritoriality as either exceptional or oppressive.

THE latest mail advices from the United States report that on the 15th ult. the Japanese Minister at Washington presented to President GRANT a letter addressed to him by the Mikado, of which the following is a translation:—

"To his Excellency the President of the United States, General Ulysses S. Grant.—Great and Good Friend,—Now that the great Exposition in honour of the one hundredth year of your Excellency's National Government has been eminently successful, I write to congratulate you and the people over whom you preside. From my subjects in the United States I have heard nothing but words of kindness in regard to the manner in which they have been treated, and I believe the recent intercourse between our countries will have a tendency to strengthen the friendship already existing. I would here express the sincere hope that the incoming century will not only witness the continued progress and prosperity of your nation in all branches of industry, but also prove an era of peace. This will be handed you in person by my Minister residing near your Government, who has been directed to emphasise my very friendly congratulations.—MUTSUHITO. —Tokio, the 1st day of the 10th month of the 9th year of Meiji."

THE OPIUM TRADE.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—The letter of your correspondent, "An Old China Resident," contains several disputable statements; but the Opium controversy is old and interminable, and I believe neither you nor your readers would wish the whole subject discussed in your columns. I write merely to ask "An Old China Resident's" authority for his assertion that, "It has been shown conclusively that Opium smoking has been going on in China for over 130 years—and that in fact at that date it was a familiar habit in the country—that is, long before foreign Opium was brought to China." This is a very important statement, if true; but in one respect its inaccuracy appears at a glance. Going back 130 years takes us to 1746; that is long after, not long before foreign Opium was brought to China. Phipps, in his "China and Eastern Trade," refers to the old traffic between India and China by the Portuguese; his book is not easily accessible, but I can refer to our old friend "Robinson Crusoe," through whom you may learn that Defoe knew of the trade in Opium with China before 1719. Then as to Opium smoking being "a familiar habit" in the country in 1746, that could hardly have been, when, as Phipps tells us, the export of the drug to China was about 200 chests per annum until 1767. The whole of that may have been used in medicine, but if it all went to the pipe there could not have been many smokers supplied by it. But was there, in fact, a single smoker of opium in China in 1746? I thought I knew pretty well all that has been discovered about the origin of Opium smoking, and certainly it contained no shred of positive evidence that the habit had commenced at that date. Mr. Cooper, a passing traveller, picked up the notion that in the Far West of China the practice existed probably two centuries ago. But this seems to be mere unsupported conjecture. At Hankow the Chinese supposed the practice a century old, and that it came from Szechuen, but in Szechuen they said it was a Canton invention, dating from 1830. All the evidence that I possess points to the conclusion that whenever Opium smoking commenced it was extremely rare until just upon the close of last century, and, indeed, the statistics of the trade are sufficient to prove this beyond doubt.

If "An Old Resident" has new evidence to adduce it will be extremely interesting. If not, I must say he has misinterpreted the old, so as to lead people to regard Opium smoking in China as something substantially anterior to and independent of the Opium introduced from India, while in fact our Indian trade nourished the growing vice, and is mainly responsible for that inability of the Chinese to cope with the evil which your correspondent alleges. His object, of course, is to relieve us from moral responsibility, which, however, is simply impossible.—I am, &c.,

BLUE-BOOK.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—I am glad of the opportunity your correspondent "An Old China Resident," has given me of putting, in what I consider their proper light, a few phases of this vexed question. My note to you, to which his is a reply, was a brief explanation of a point which was misunderstood by reason of its being one of a series (and most of which you have either kindly noticed or inserted in full in your valuable journal), and therefore not necessarily containing a full statement of the question—of the grounds of my belief or of the premises upon which my conclusions were based. While admitting that the Chinese Government may really wish to see the evil done away with, you doubt the power of the Central Government to compel the adoption of their views by the provincial officials. Your correspondent, however, goes much further, and not merely denies them the power to put down Opium smoking, but doubts the sincerity of the Government in their oft-repeated assurances, made in every direction, and in every form, whispered to our diplomatists and missionaries, spoken out in despatches, and thundered out to her people in proclamations. After this I should like to know what sort of testimony or evidence can be adduced, or will be of any avail to satisfy such objections. Your correspondent calls for acts, not words. History provides us with both. I should not like to brand the nation, or even the mandarins, as liars, cheats, and robbers, and deny them common honesty, principles of humanity, justice, patriotism, &c., and assert that they simply use the fact of the illegality of Opium smoking to further their own personal and selfish ends. The gin-and-whisky argument referred to, invariably brought in to do service, proceeds on the assumption that the two cases are exactly similar, than which nothing made of our ardent spirits when the Government and people come to look upon drink as the Chinese look upon opium. Although the question is growing fast among ourselves, and considerable modification of our licensing laws is likely to take place at no distant date, I am free to confess that at present it would be utterly impossible to abolish our drinking customs. If necessary, I shall be happy to point out the grave differences between the two articles in the two countries, in regard to their history, present condition and effects, legislative action and Governmental and popular opinion, and before which any supposed resemblance between them must vanish. The three main points in your correspondent's letter are—the origin of the vice, and the asserted inability and unwillingness of the Government to deal with the question, even if left free to act.

Whatever view expediency or necessity may compel us to adopt regarding these points, it seems to me that our case is very little, if at all, altered. History cannot be changed, falsified, or blotted out. Our smuggling trade, previous to its legalisation, our first war, with its opium indemnity, for what was acknowledged a contraband article; our second war, connected as it also was with smuggling, the fearful and systematic stimulus, to say the least of it, which we gave to the trade, the legalisation at the open ports, our Bengal monopoly of the growth and manufacture of the injurious drug, &c., cannot be justified or palliated. These are facts in our intercourse with China that are fixed and absolute, and cannot be manipulated to suit the exigencies of our Christianity, humanity and justness. It would appear that we have all along been reaping, together with golden opium harvests, the logical rewards of such conduct in the hostility of the governing classes, the malediction of that great people, unwillingness, except at the presence of force or the fear of it, to grant new and increased facilities for trade and intercourse, and so on.

There is one sentence in your correspondent's letter, actually bristling with misstatements pronounced to be facts. I have italicised the words upon which I wish the reader to concentrate his attention. "It has been shown conclusively that opium smoking has been going on in China for over 130 years, and that in fact at that date it was a familiar habit in the country, that is long before foreign opium was brought to China. The Chinese authorities have never taken effectual steps to put down the practice." The above is a sample of what passes current in the columns of our China newspapers; it has been reiterated over and over again, until people who do not know better, have come to believe it. I know well upon what evidence these statements are founded, and I rejoice at this opportunity of refuting them. Every italicised word, without exception, contains an untruth. I need not say I shall be happy to have my statements contradicted and the evidence led, and your correspondent will be only too glad, I suppose, to accede to this request, seeing that his facts are so conclusive. Not to trespass to much upon your space in one issue, I shall confine the present letter to a brief review of the willingness and ability of the Chinese Government to put a stop to the internal trade and growth of the poppy, and the general addiction to the habit. And my statements, for various reasons, must be of the most general character. I think this point is conclusively proved from a consideration of the whole history of their opposition to the trade from 1796 onwards, when the first edict was issued against it, and the name of the drug was changed from "foreign medicine" to "foreign dirt;" their determined action in 1839, which resulted in war with such disastrous consequences to the Empire; the punishment meted out to their subjects guilty of the habit from that time down to the present day, ranging from decapitation of the smokers, down through confiscation of their property, to imprisonment; their oft-repeated proclamations and edicts, many of which have not been a dead letter, but have for the time being at least, and in certain districts and provinces, effectually stopped the trade the habit, or the native growth; the strongly expressed desire of the Government that this country should reciprocate their feelings on this question and agree mutually to inderdict the trade, &c. Without dilating on this point, in evidence of which whole chapters might be written, I think we are compelled to admit at once and ungrudgingly that this heathen Government has been, and still is sincerely desirous of getting quit of the evil. Any other supposition lands us in absurdities. Not a single dissentient voice has ever been raised against the Government for their anti-Opium policy. You will travel through China in vain to collect evidence in favour of the drug. Thousands upon thousands have passed through my hands, and I have never heard one good word said of it by any one, not even by the victims themselves; but I have heard ad nauseam, until I was ashamed of my nationality, of serious charges against our conduct in regard to the trade and the evils which we have brought upon them. Some of the points referred to in my last article in re the Chefoo Convention, and which you did me the honour to insert entire in your pages, and out of which this correspondence may be said to have arisen, indicate that the Government, and especially the Viceroy of Chihli, are taking pretty decisive steps to check and uproot the evil. When your correspondent refers to the mandarins winking at the Opium dens and taking bribes, he must know that the charge is especially true, not of the higher officials, but of the large unpaid class of underlings and hangers-on at the public yamens, of which I have been told there are 800 in the Viceroy's office at Tientsin. These men for the most part are Opium smokers, and it is they who are causing so much mischief and laying the Government and officials open to the charge of your correspondent, which is, I admit, to a large extent true. It is, however, a question how far our very Opium wars and trade have not brought about this very evil, by impoverishing the Imperial Exchequer, disorganising their finance, and so causing, or at least stimulating, corruption, bribery, and the native growth of the poppy. I understand things were not in this condition last century, in the prosperous and energetic reign of Kienlung.

In regard to their power to suppress the evil, even if left free to act, there is a great deal of misunderstanding. It suits our case to take the side of inability, and undoubtedly the general impression is that they are unable to cope with the evil. I admit they lack the courage to renew the old policy. Were another similar effort made, I am satisfied that, as far as our Government is at least concerned, it could not but be attended with success. Our trade is not now so dependent upon this one article—public opinion at home and in China, both among the merchants and in the Press, is much changed—we have a more intimate knowledge of the Chinese—a greater appreciation of the duties and rights of a Christian and strong Government towards a heathen, weak, and independent one, and towards whom we are bound to act in accordance with the letter and spirit of our treaty of perpetual friendship, and there is a growing idea of a common brotherhood existing among us, &c. Our general belief in their inability is probably derived from their own frequent admissions of their inability to control provincial authorities. Our old policy, before that of co-operation came into existence, was based upon this assumption. But it is to be observed that it is always in their own interest, and only in relation to foreigners, or where they think they can shrink responsibility, that they make these admissions. Looking at the nature of their Government, absolute central despotic power appears a necessity. For my part, at any rate, I cannot conceive of the reverse. And in practice we find it so. Within the last two years or so, we have had abundant proof of the power of the Government at Peking—acknowledged to be weaker, probably, than almost at any past time—and felt at the utmost extremities of the vast Empire. A passing notice has been taken of these by the Press in China, but as these instances have been opposed to our preconceived ideas, they have been looked upon rather as the exceptions than as the rule.

When it suits their purpose the power of the Government is absolute and unlimited, and the most distant satraps must obey the summons from the Dragon Throne and the vermillion pencil of the "Son of Heaven," the Imperial Ruler of "all under heaven." But of what avail would such decided action at present serve but to enrich our Indian exchequer. So long as they are not left free to act we have no right to judge of their inability. To admit their inability to stop the trade, the habit, or even the native growth, would be, in other words, to admit the inferiority of our military power to the Chinese. We are bound by the demands of Indian finance, and Treaty stipulations (extracted by force, or the fear of it) come now to our aid in upholding the system. It is the resistless power of our arms alone that has riveted the evil upon them and to this day prevents them, in my opinion, from throwing it off. If, after the abolition of our monopoly, and the withdrawal of our Opium clause from the Treaty, the Chinese Government takes no action, then our further responsibility is removed, and we shall then be in a position to judge of their ability, or otherwise to put down the evil.—Apologising for trespassing to such an extent on your valuable space, I am, &c.,

J. DUDGEON.

OUR RELATIONS WITH CHINA.

(DAILY TELEGRAPH.)

Never in the long and chequered history of our diplomatic and commercial relations with China—now covering a period of eighty years—have events appeared more auspicious than at the present moment. Our past experience of that country has been mingled in character. Until recently but little pains were taken by the English people to comprehend its social and political institutions; and, on the other hand, the traditional contempt indulged by the "Celestials" for foreigners, as belonging to a grade of existence altogether inferior to themselves, had hitherto rendered hopeless any reasonable appreciation of us on their part. The consequence is that our official representatives have been continuously treated by them with alternate treachery and insult. Their persistent ignorance of our temper and strength has inspired them with the vain belief that by occasional massacres of Englishmen, and attacks upon British property in China, they would eventually succeed in worrying us into withdrawing from the Empire. With a view probably to facilitate this object, an Imperial Edict was issued in 1840 interdicting all trade and intercourse with England for ever. Since that period we have been engaged in a succession of skirmishes with them, in every instance with results advantageous to Great Britain. Out of these brief encounters came several important treaties, including those of Nankin, Tien-tsin, Peking, and recently the highly important Chefoo Convention. At each step in the negotiations of our Government with China from the first we have successfully aimed at enforcing our claims upon their respect and teaching them the futility of attempting to contend with us. Their overweening conceit and national exclusiveness have offered a serious impediment to their being apt pupils even in the school of adversity in which we have exercised them. But though their progress towards reasonable ideas has been slow, it has been sure—a fact which is signally verified in their termination of the Yunnan difficulty, and the concession of our demands consequent thereon, without a war. This is notably a hopeful augury. Indeed, we are entirely justified in the assertion that British interests never had a more solid footing in China than at present; and there is good reason to believe that collisions between that country and England in the future will be few and far between. Nor is it Utopian to anticipate that instead of British trade being confined to a few treaty ports or extended, as in the past, at the point of the sword, its development will be spontaneously sanctioned and gradually encouraged by the Peking authorities throughout the length and breadth of the Empire. The prelude leading to this consummation already appears in the safety of British subjects travelling under passport, which was guaranteed in the Convention signed by Sir Thomas Wade and Li-Hung-Chang; and by the last French China mail we have intelligence that an elaborate proclamation respecting the rights of foreigners in the Empire had been issued by all the Chinese Provincial Governments in conformity with one of the requirements of the Chefoo Treaty.

That proclamation, according to the terms of the Chinese Commissioner, is required to be posted in every prefecture, sub-prefecture, and district throughout the Empire, so that every household may be acquainted with the relations which the Chinese henceforth sustain with foreigners. We are pleased to learn that the document referred to leaves nothing to be desired as a clear declaration of the political rights to be enjoyed by foreign subjects passing through the country, and we cannot but trust that the effect of the promulgation upon the hundreds of millions under whose notice it will be brought may be to break down their foolish prejudice against people of other nationalities, engendered by their jealous seclusion from the rest of mankind, and fostered mainly by the bigotry of the literati class among them. The official antecedents of the Chinese authorities compel us, of course, to receive with wholesome suspicion their promises of good faith. Some go so far as to say that the proclamation in question will never be posted. Nor can we be surprised at the incredulity of such persons when we remember that the Chinese violated their pledge to publish in the Peking Gazette the Treaty of Tientsin, concluded by Lord Elgin, and the fulfilment of that stipulation has never been enforced. We cannot forget, moreover, that they not only refrained from issuing any official account of the formal audience on that occasion, but, in marking their haughty contempt for our nation, they forwarded a satirical report, which was promulgated in regions far distant from the Treaty ports, in the hope that they might thus cast ridicule upon us without the risk of detection. The British Minister himself—who understands Chinese peculiarities as well as any one—seems to have regarded the mere insertion of the arrangement respecting the proclamation in question as insufficient, and with admirable forethought had the following words added to the clause authorising the proclamation:—"For two years to come officers will be sent by the British Minister to different places in the provinces to see that it is posted." With that precaution it is impossible that the minds of the Mandarins and the people in the various districts can remain any longer benighted with reference to the political status of foreigners, or that the Central Government will be able to impose on us. Another favourable omen that the country will now be steadily opened up to European civilisation lies in the immense influence which Li-Hung-Chang cannot fail to wield for a considerable period in the councils of the nation in all matters affecting foreign relations. That dignitary is the Governor of two important provinces, one of which contains the capital. He is a man of high scholarly attainments and great administrative ability. His present official position has been reached wholly by merit, his first introduction to Government circles having been due to the illustrious place he won in passing, his examinations for the highest University degrees. Though learned, he is thoroughly a man of the world, and totally free from the narrow-mindedness which, as a rule, characterises the high-class scholars in China.

He cultivates an intelligent interest in many of the arts and sciences of the "barbarians," and is shrewd enough to perceive the benefit which would accrue to his country from the adoption of Western ideas. At his instigation the State has entered into an agreement to purchase the pioneer railway between Shanghai and Woosung. Only a few years since a body of English capitalists undertook to provide a railroad at their own cost, and present it to the late Emperor; but the offer met with an unqualified rejection. At length, however, the thin end of the wedge has been inserted, and now "Celestial" prejudice is so far overcome that the Government itself consents to become proprietor of he first and only line in China. Some are so sceptical as to suppose that the object of buying the railway is to secure its destruction; but for this opinion there is no real foundation. On the contrary, we believe that the advantages of the new method of land locomotion will become more palpable every day, and, following in the wake of steamers, Armstrong guns, and Snider rifles, all of which are now in use among the Chinese, ere many years elapse railways will no doubt intersect the Empire at all points. An interesting sign indicating the improved attitude of the Peking authorities towards Great Britain transpired on the departure of Sir Thomas Wade for England in November. It is stated that the Imperial Government wished to send a large mounted escort of soldiers with him as a guard of honour. This intelligence reads like romance when contrasted with the reception Lord Amherst met with early in the present century. The British Envoy was obliged to return home without being able to gain access to the Court, because he refused to make the prostration of the Kotou, lest by doing so he should compromise the majesty of England. There is yet another important novelty in the relations between the two countries. China is to be represented by an Ambassador in London. The Treaty of 1858 included among its conditions the residence of a Chinese Minister in England, but in this particular it was not kept. We are now informed, however, on good authority, that his Excellency Kuoh-Sung-t'ao was to follow our Ambassador, after a short interval, en route for this country, and he is now presumably on his way. He is to be accompanied by his wife and a retinue of thirty-two persons, including four amanuenses of talent and experience. The new Plenipotentiary is said to be an old official at the Court, and is distinguished by culture and politeness. Rumour also informs us that an ex-Secretary in the Board of Punishments has been appointed as joint Ambassador with Kuoh, and that, in consequence of his selection for the post, he has been raised to the third degree of nobility. The Chinese are a reading people, and the accounts which the Embassy will send back of what they see and hear in this country are sure to be studied with attentive curiosity throughout the Empire. By this means we cannot doubt that correct knowledge of England and the English will continue to spread until the last vestige of dislike to us has been subdued.

(PALL MALL GAZETTE.)

The official text of this Convention has at last reached us. We are still in ignorance whether it will be ratified by Her Majesty's Government, or share the fate of the Convention of 1869. But if the dissatisfaction of the mercantile communities in China and the Foreign Ministers accredited at Peking with the arrangements made is to be held, as in the former case, to afford sufficient ground for the non-ratification, it is not by any means certain that it will escape this danger. It is not difficult, however, to form a fair estimate of its intrinsic merits apart from the dissatisfaction of those on the spot, or the decision which may ultimately be taken by the British Government. It is somewhat curiously worded and arranged for a document of this nature. It is divided into three sections. This is so far advantageous that it facilitates the examination of its principal provisions under distinct heads: "The Settlement of the Yunnan Case," "Official Intercourse," and "Trade." There is also a separate article forming one of the most important concessions obtained from the Chinese. As regards the first section—the settlement of the Yunnan case—it would be unfair to quarrel with Sir Thomas Wade because he has not succeeded in obtaining the only satisfaction which would have fully met the justice of the case—the punishment of those who were really responsible for the murder at Manwine and the subsequent attack on Colonel Browne's party. That we have entirely failed in this is manifest. Although Mr. Grosvenor's report is still pigeon-holed at the Foreign-office, it requires no divination to be certain that he failed in bringing the true criminals or any of the responsible authors of the outrage to justice. Failing in this, we are glad to know that Sir Thomas Wade rejected the proposed execution of mere instruments and subordinates of low degree. No one could be better aware than our Minister at Peking of the corrupt procedure of Chinese Courts in such cases, and he very properly declined to accept victims instead of justice. There remained only, among possible sources of satisfaction, the concession of that right of commercial intercourse across the border of Yunnan to prevent which the murders had been committed, and a fine as compensation to the relatives of the killed, and in reimbursement of the cost of enforcing redress. But there should have been no question of a money compensation. A heavy fine levied on the town or district in which acts of violence and treachery against foreigners are perpetrated might bear a very different complexion, and be a guarantee for future safety. But a sum of money exacted from the Chinese Government, to be paid to the relatives of the deceased, and not as a measure needful to future security, can only bear one construction to the Chinese. To them it is blood-money—a price paid for lives taken; that is to say, an easy means of compounding for bloodshed or massacre, at any time. As regards "the settlement of the Yunnan case," therefore, the punishment of the real offenders has been relinquished as unattainable; and in lieu, our Minister has accepted a money indemnity, the despatch of a Chinese Embassy with a mission of apology, following the precedent to the French after the massacre at Tientsin, and the establishment of a frontier trade between Burmah and Yunnan. The last is the real satisfaction obtained. In connection with this should be considered another concession placed in a separate article. This article sanctions a right of transit through Thibet from China to India, across the northern and western provinces, or the reverse route from India, through Thibet and Mongolia to China. Thus the great barrier hitherto maintained by Chinese obstructiveness, preventing all access into the territories of her tributaries, has been removed in principle at least. This object was at an early period in these negotiations insisted upon in the Pall Mall Gazette as the best satisfaction for an act of war in a time of peace. Of course, Nepaul and Bhotan being precisely in the same situation as regards our Indian and Chinese frontiers, as Thibet and Burmah, it will follow that the same rule must be recognised; and thus the obstacles hitherto so persistently interposed to bar any access through these contiguous States to Central Asia must disappear, unless our Indian Government should be more lax in profiting by a legitimate opening that is at all probable. These are solid advantages, and had Sir Thomas Wade's negotiations led to no further results, his time would have been well spent. But under the section of trade there are other concessions of nearly equal importance, which could only have been obtained with great difficulty. The opening of five additional ports, but more especially of Ichang, in the province of Hupei, in the very heart of China, and as far up the Yangtsze as steamers can navigate, with a right of residence for an authorised British officer—consul in effect if not in name—at Chung-king, to watch the condition of British trade in Sze-Chuen, the richest province in China, is an immense stride, quite as great as Lord Elgin's in opening the Yangtsze to foreign trade as far as Hankow at the end of the second war in 1858. The other three ports to be opened are less important, though that of Pei-hai, in Kwangtung, may become of considerable value as opening a new route to the interior of the southern province of which Canton has hitherto been the only mart for foreigners. Landing-places at several intervening points on the Yangtsze are another concession which will tend to facilitate the traffic of the great river. These are the saliant and most certain of the advantages obtained under the head of trade. As for the several clauses referring to transit dues, the quæstio vexata of so many years' standing, we do not perceive that there is any material advance towards a satisfactory solution, but only a reference to some future arrangements that "will secure the Chinese Government against abuse of the privilege." The foreign import trade is the one great grievance which has foiled all the efforts of negotiators from 1843 to the present time to remedy. Sir Thomas Wade, therefore, can scarcely be blamed for a failure which he shares with all his predecessors. Without a radical reform, involving changes as sweeping as those now proposed for Turkey, nothing can be effective. We have enumerated all the really valuable and important concessions obtained from the Chinese in these negotiations, and it is only now necessary to glance at what has been paid from them in return. Beyond what we have noticed as the price of our footing on the Yunnan border in the miscarriage of justice, there is little to object to as regards the interests of trade, unless it be the recognition of the Lekin tax, and the right of the Chinese to levy it at the consular ports. This has always hitherto been opposed as contrary to treaty. The arrangement to this effect entered into by Sir Thomas Wade in respect to opium will, no doubt, materially increase the Chinese revenue, and at the same time must seriously interfere with the facilities hitherto enjoyed for the evasion of duty after it passed into the hands of the Chinese purchaser. That it will pro tanto check the sale, by increasing the price to the consumer, cannot be doubted, and we are not surprised, therefore, that the British merchants do not approve of it. They strenuously resisted a trifling increase of thirty taels per chest (some 2½ per cent.), contemplated in a former convention, as fatal to their interests, and the influence of this arrangement to bond the opium and protect the Chinese Customs from evasion and smuggling is likely to be felt much more severely than a tax of three times the amount above specified, with unlimited facilities for smuggling. Considering, however, the great and solid advantages which have been obtained in other directions by the Chefoo Convention, it would be bad policy on the part of either merchants or Government to throw away these because the other clause is not altogether to their liking or advantage. The chief objection we see is the possibility that, other Powers not being bound by Sir Thomas Wade's arrangements, foreigners may refuse to bond their opium, and create a favoured position for themselves as dealers in opium to the prejudice of the British importer. We pass over the section which treats of the official intercourse and diplomatic relations of the two countries. The value of these clauses is very doubtful, and depends entirely upon the way in which the Chinese may choose to give effect to the terms.

GERMANY.

HAMBURG, DEC. 26.

We are now in the midst of winter, and, indeed, a good strong winter it is which has established itself here, the thermometer marking 12, 15, 18 degrees of frost, while the landscape is covered a foot high with snow. The river is completely blocked up with ice, and the riverside trade is therefore at a standstill. Fortunately, when the frost first set in, during the night from the 19th to the 20th inst., we had a very heavy snowfall, and the next morning a very welcome snow-cover was visible, disagreeable for the city, but of the greatest value for the fields and the protection of the young crops, which no doubt would have perished had this hard frost set in without snow. That the past Christmas, under such circumstances, has been a very poor one, especially for the labouring classes, need scarcely be mentioned; but it is to be hoped that the prevailing wind, which at present is from the Russian quarter, will not long continue, and that milder weather will soon arrive. In Russia the frost is terrible; at Moscow the thermometer has been down as far as 39 deg. below zero (Celsius), at St. Petersburg to 37, and this severe cold has already lasted several weeks.

The English shipping trade has suffered another check. The steamship Iceland, trading between Liverpool, and Hamburg, has stranded on the coast of Holland, near the Texel, and it is feared will prove a total loss. Another loss has to be registered amongst the Hamburg steamers; the John Sauber, quite a new boat, belonging to Hamburg, has been totally wrecked on the coast of England, near Shields. Of both vessels the crews were all saved.

In Denmark and Jutland fearful easterly gales have again prevailed, accompanied by tremendous snow, which has stopped the traffic over the roads and railways. For nearly a whole week the communication between Hamburg and Copenhagen has been interrupted. Even telegraphing was impracticable for several days, and all news from the North was completely stopped. To-day letters and newspapers have again come in.

The Imperial Parliament was closed on Friday last by the Emperor in person, but only about 150 members were present, the others having already left Berlin to join their families for the Christmas holidays. The Emperor in his speech delivered on this occasion pointed to the great satisfaction felt by him as well as by the whole population of the Empire at the passing of the new Judicature Laws, voted by the Reichstag at the close of its session. The Emperor alse referred to the efforts made by him and his Government towards a peaceful solution of the Eastern Question, and expressed a renewed hope that a war might be avoided. How far this hope is justified the first month of the approaching New Year will certainly show.

A very sad disaster occurred a few days since in the north-east of the Empire, the dykes of the river Nogas having broken, causing a great inundation. The safety of the town of Elbing is very much threatened, and the railway to that town has narrowly escaped destruction. A great deal of property has been destroyed by the flood, and the inhabitants of the submerged land will have probably to suffer another inundation in the spring, as the broken dykes cannot be repaired now, in consequence of the prevailing frost. Committees have been constituted all over the Empire to raise a fund for the suffering people.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

The approaching holidays have not failed to make their influence felt during the past week, and business has been of a restricted character, although for some articles a rather lively demand has been manifested. Money remains very abundant, the rate of discount being 3 per cent. to 4½ per cent.

COTTON.—The quieter tendency apparent at the close of last week continued during the first past of this week, but afterwards a better demand set in on rather encouraging reports from Liverpool and America.

SPICES.—A rather better demand has prevailed, and Mace and Nutmegs have been firm; quotations for the former m.5 to 5½; for the latter m.5 to m.6 per kilo. Cloves have maintained their value; Zanzibar quality are quoted m.142 to 144 per 50 kilo. Pepper is more inquired for; Singapore quality m.41 to 41½; Penang m.37 to 37½ per 50 kilo.

RICE has remained very firm, but transactions, as usual towards the end of the year, have been on a limited scale. Quotations are:—Japan, m.10½ to 13½; Java, m.12 to 14; ditto Table, m.16 to 24; Bengal, m.10 to 14; Siam, Madras, Ballam, &c., m.8½ to 11; Rangoon, m.9½ to 10½; Bassein, m.9½ to 10; Arracan, m.9 to 9½; Maulmain, m.9½ to 10½; Saigon, m.8½ to 9 per 50 kilo.

TEA is quiet in tone, without any transactions of importance. The following are the quotations:—Bohe, m.0.70 to 0.85, Congou, ord. to good ord., m.0.90 to 1.05; do. middling to fine, m.1.25 to 4; Souchong, ordinary to good middling, m.1.10 to 1.70; do. fine, m.2.60 to 4; Caper, m.1.50 to 2; Pouchong, m.0.90 to 3; Pecco, ordinary to good middling, m.1.80 to 2.40; ditto fine, m.3.80 to 5; ditto Orange, m.1.25 to 3.40; Haysanschin, m.0.90 to 1.80; Tonkay, m.0.90 to 1.80; Young Haysan, m.1.10 to 2.70; Haysan, m.1.70 to 3.60; Imperial, country, m.1.50 to 3.60; ditto, Canton-made, m.0.90 to 1.70; Gunpowder, country, m.1.70 to 3.60; ditto Canton-made, m.0.85 to 2 per ½-kilo.

SHIPPING.

It is a standing rule that heavy frosts here are accompanied with strong easterly winds, which drive the waters out of the river and prevent the tide from flowing in. Such is now the case, and the icebreaker, drawing over fourteen feet of water, has been compelled to go down the river, as there is not sufficient water on the several bars between here and Brunshausen. No steamers coming or going (on account of the low tides), the frost had fair play, and on the third night, the temperature being as low as 18°, the ice formed a bridge over the river sufficiently strong to be passable. The icebreaker in the meantime is very active in the lower part of the river, where many steamers are entangled, some of them being placed in imminent danger. The steamship Neapel, from the Mediterranean with fruit, &c., lost her screw in the ice, but was assisted out by the icebreaker, and will be brought to Glueckstadt. The Hamburg American Company has several of its steamships below, and as two are on their way to New York, and two homeward bound, no interruption of this line by frost has to be feared. Sailing vessels arriving have to take refuge at Cuxhaven, whereas steamers will have to go into Glueckstadt, and send their cargoes here by railway. As soon as the wind shifts to the W. and N.W., we shall have better tides here, and the ice can be destroyed by the icebreaker rendering the harbour once more accessible to steamers. The Tai Lee Capt. Stoesel, has sailed for Nicolajefsk, and the J. H. Wappaeus Diedrichsen, for Australia.

HOLLAND.

AMSTERDAM, DEC. 27.

The existence of the Cabinet is secured for another year. The Budgets were carried by the Second Chamber, although the Ministers were subjected to a very hot fire. They were attacked in the first place by those members who might be expected to be their warmest supporters, but the Liberals also criticised sharply. The bête noire was the policy of the Minister of the Financial Department. Several members demonstrated that the financial state of our country is most unsatisfactory. The Minister defended himself and his Budget, but the debate has thrown very little light on the real state of matters. It only proved that much can be done by l'art de grouper les chiffres. Of more interest, however, was the statement that Mr. Van der Heim, who has been Minister for two years, had done nothing to improve our anomalous system of taxation. He promised much, but has done nothing, and, what is worse, probably nothing will be done as long as he remains in office. The Budget of War raised a good deal of justifiable protest, the sum and substance of which is that enormous sums had been taken from our Treasury, whilst our means of defence remain unimproved. The debate upon the Colonial Budget was of a very trifling interest. The old question was again brought forward, viz., why Mr. Mees continues to belong to this Cabinet. Two sittings were taken up with a debate upon this one point.

The topic of the day is the fact that before the Chamber adjourned the Minister of the Home Department laid before the members a Bill to reorganise the law relating to lower class education. It is not yet printed, and the statements which are in circulation with regard to its provisions are very vague. I hope to be able to forward some authentic details in my next letter.

News is very scanty. Politics and business are alike at a standstill, and people think only of skating, the frost being very severe.

AMSTERDAM, DEC. 28.

The Utrechtsch Dagblad prints a protest by General Van Swieten against the articles recently published by the ex-Minister of the Colonial Department, Mr. Van Goltstein, entitled "Atjeh since 1874," by which the skill of the General was impugned. The writer says:—"Our war with Atjeh must be divided into two periods. During the first (without speaking of the first expedition) the war was continued according to my principles and plans, approved and determined by Governor-General Loudon, and Mr. Frausen Van de Putte, and the Ministry, to which the King agreed. This expedition met with such success that General Pel was able to declare, when Mr. Loudon left Java, that—'Our position in Atjeh is quite safe. We possess the centrum ("heart") of Atjeh. We can now afford to wait for what may happen.' The second period when the war was continued upon the principles of Mr. Van Goltstein and Mr. Van Lansberge was one of defeat, as was shown by the book written by Mr. de Rochemont."

Horace would have said, regarding this protest, Proücet ampullas et sesquipedalia verba." The same paper publishes another protest by Mr. J. J. de Rochemont against the accusations made by Mr. Van Goltstein against him and his book about Atjeh.

A thaw has set in, and the temperature has become very mild.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

Notwithstanding the very advanced season the trade in Colonial Produce has remained very satisfactory, which must be ascribed to the mild temperature. Very important transactions have taken place in several articles, whilst prices have advanced. During the last few days, however, we have had a very sharp frost, so that the shipping trade is completely checked. This, of course, will cause a reaction.

COFFEE.—The market has remained in a very satisfactory condition, and trade has been brisk. Only a few lots out of the last Trading Company's auction have been offered, holders declining to operate without a further advance. Good ordinary Java is quoted 54c. to 54½.

TEA is very quiet, though prices are well maintained. In January will be brought under the hammer two cargoes of China; the brokers' valuations will be published in a few days.

SUGAR is very firm, with only limited transactions, in consequence of the small stock. Nothing can be bought lower than f.9 under October value. Since my last report about 5,000 krang. have changed hands at f.6¾ to f.8 under October value. Floating cargoes will arrive shortly.

JAVA TOBACCO.—In the last fortnight about 7,000 bs. Java were sold either by public tender or in auctions. The stock includes 9,322 bs. Java, 430 bs. Sumatra, and 300 bs. East India.

SPICES firm, but very quiet. A good demand, however, has prevailed for Moole Nutmegs. Mace and Cloves dull. Since my last report 1,300 bs. Black Pepper have been sold.

RICE very firm, but rather dull, as is usual at this season. The sales have been 2,465 bags Boedhi Radja table, ex Madura, at f.11. Per John H. Kemball have arrived about 25,090 bags Japan.

COTTONS.—A better tone prevails in the market, and several lots have found buyers at higher prices.

RATTANS.—Only 75 pieces were sold.

CUTCH.—About 40,000 kilograms have changed hands at secret prices.

INDIGO has met with a steady demand. About 200 chests have been taken from the market at former prices. The stock includes 1,056 chests.

TIN is dull; holders are inclining to operate at lower prices, but, nevertheless, it is very difficult to find operators. Banca is quoted at f.45; Billiton at f.44½, which is nearly f.1 lower than last week.

HIDES.—Several lots have been sold, but at what prices is not known.

Legal.

COURT OF APPEAL.—THE CHINESE INDEMNITY FUND.

RUSTOMJEE V. THE QUEEN.—PETITION OF RIGHT.

This was a petition of right by a native merchant, a British subject, who had suffered, as he alleged, losses in the war with China, to recover his share of a sum of money paid by the Emperor of China in 1842 as an indemnity for such losses. The petition set forth the facts, in substance, thus:—He had carried on business as a merchant at Hong Kong, where the Chinese Government had licensed certain Chinese merchants to trade with British merchants within its dominions, and foreign merchants were permitted to trade with such licensed merchants only. These licensed merchants formed a corporate body, called a "Co-hong," and one of its incidents was that all its members were jointly liable for the debt of any of its members to any foreign merchant, and on his failure to pay the liability was enforced by the issuing of an edict directing the Co-hong to investigate the claim of the creditor, and to settle it if found correct. When the investigation had been made, and the amount had been settled, an entry of it was made in the books of the Co-hong, and then payment was enforced. The petitioner had business transactions with a Chinese merchant, a member of the Co-hong, who in September, 1838, was indebted to him in the sum of $34,000, and on his bankruptcy the debt became due from the Co-hong, and the usual edict was issued to inquire into the claim. During the inquiry, however, and before the claim could be entered in the book, troubles broke out between the two Governments, and war was soon afterwards declared, and the British merchants at Canton, including the petitioner, were arrested and imprisoned, and afterwards expelled from China. He sent the particulars of his claim to Captain Elliott, the Superintendent of Trade of British merchants in China, at Canton, who promised that the claim should be registered in the books of the Superintendent of Trade, and that the British Government would compel the Chinese Government to pay the debt when terms were arranged between the two Governments. At the close of the war certain articles of a Treaty were negotiated, and one of the articles was the payment by the Emperor to the Queen of a sum sufficient to cover the debts due from the Co-hong to British merchants. During the negotiations, in 1841, Sir Henry Pottinger, who had succeeded Captain Elliott, arrived at Macao, and promised the petitioner and others that their claims should be insisted on against the Chinese Government, and that the amount should be paid to them when received from the Chinese Government. On the 26th of August, 1842, a Treaty of Peace was signed, whereby the Emperor agreed to pay to the Queen the sum of $3,000,000 as and for the amount of debts due to British subjects by "Hong" merchants. That sum, he alleged, was computed on the basis of the accounts of claims sent in to Captain Elliott, of which the petitioner's claim was one, and the money was paid to the Plenipotentiary for the purpose of paying those claims, as he had agreed, and contracted with the British merchants, of whom the petitioner was one, to do. The petitioner, therefore, prayed that the Queen would be pleased to direct payment of the sum due to him, with interest. To this the Attorney-General of the day (Sir R. Baggallay), on the part of the Crown, demurred—that is, admitting the facts stated to be true, denied that they were sufficient to constitute a claim against the Crown. The Court of Queen's Bench, constituted of the Lord Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Blackburn, and Mr. Justice Lush, gave judgment in favour of the Crown, and the petitioner appealed from that judgment. The case was argued early in the present sittings, before Lord Coleridge, Justices of Appeal Mellish, Brett, and Amphlett, by Mr. Benjamin, for the petitioner, and the Attorney-General for the Crown. The Court had taken time to consider their judgment, and their judgment was now delivered.

Lord Coleridge delivered a written judgment in favour of the Crown. He said: This is a claim which, if it ever had any foundation, was not brought forward until after the lapse of thirty-six years, and it is of a kind never brought forward before. Something like it was attempted in the case of the Baron de Bode, which, however, received no countenance from the Courts, and was determined on a ground not applicable to the present. For the purpose of this judgment it may be assumed that the Chinese merchants did owe a considerable sum to the petitioner. While the correctness of it was under investigation, however, and before, according to the course of practice, any conclusive result was arrived at or the amount ascertained, the war broke out, and the petitioner was expelled. He alleges that Mr. Elliott, Superintendent of Trade, and Sir H. Pottinger, who succeeded him, and, as Plenipotentiary, negotiated the peace, recognised the justice of his claims, and that they promised him that the Chinese Government should be compelled to pay the money, and that it should be paid to him; that afterwards, in the Treaty, one of the articles stipulated that a sum of $3,000,000 should be paid by the Emperor; and that this sum was computed upon the basis of the claims made, and for the purpose of paying the merchants, and, among others, the petitioner, the sums they claimed. To that claim the Attorney-General demurred, on the part of the Crown, and on that demurrer the Court of Queen's Bench gave judgment for the Crown. We think that judgment was right, upon two grounds. First, the Treaty itself was referred to, and the article in question stipulated that the Emperor should pay to the British Government $3,000,000, on account of debts due to British subjects by "Hong" Merchants, insolvent, who owed large sums to them. The money, therefore, was paid, not for the British subjects, but "on account" of debts due to them, no specific sums being ever agreed upon, either between the two Governments or between the merchants and the British Government. It is not, therefore, correct to say that the money was paid for the purpose of paying this claim. It was never received for any such purpose, and, therefore, on the true construction of the Treaty itself, without reference to higher and wider considerations, the case of the claimant must fail. But, secondly, on those higher and wider considerations as to which we ought not to abstain from giving an opinion, the claim of the petitioner also fails. I assent to the reasoning of the Judges in the Court below. The making of peace and war are the highest acts of the prerogative of the Crown, and the terms on which a peace is to be made are in the absolute discretion of the sovereign. If, therefore, Mr. Elliott or Sir Henry Pottinger did promise that these claims should be paid, he promised that to which he had no authority to pledge the Crown. The Queen might or might not have made the peace upon these terms; she might or might not have insisted upon any money being paid; she acted throughout in her sovereign character and out of her own inherent authority, and as in making the Treaty, so in performing it she is beyond the scope of municipal law, and her acts are not to be examined in her own Courts. It was a Treaty between the Emperor and the Queen, and though they might complain of an infraction of it, their subjects cannot. We do not say that in no circumstances can the Crown be a trusree or agent; but it seems to us that, in all that relates to the making or performing of a Treaty with another Sovereign, the Crown cannot be in the position of a trustee or agent for subjects. We do not doubt that on the payment of the money a duty was imposed upon the Sovereign to administer it properly; but it was a duty to act as Sovereign according to the advice of her Ministers, and not the duty of an agent to the principal, or of a trustee to a cestui que trust. If there was a failure to perform the duty, it was one which Parliament only could correct, and not one with which the Courts of Law could deal. It is not any part of our duty to inquire whether there has been such a failure of performance. In this country twenty-five years would surely not have elapsed without attention being called to the unjust withholding of money by the Crown from a British subject. But it is to Parliament only that the subject in such a case can resort, and for these reasons we consider the judgment of the Court below was right, and must be affirmed, with costs.

Naval and Military.

It is officially announced that Rear-Admiral Lambert, with the Detached Squadron from the China station, will leave Singapore on the 27th ult., vid Straits of Sunda, for the Cape of Good Hope and England.

The Navy has lost a distinguished officer by the death of Captain George Fiott Day, C.B., V.C., which occurred a few days ago, after a protracted illness, at Weston-super-Mare, aged 55. He entered the Navy in 1833, and passed the usual examination in 1838. Before he obtained his commission as lieutenant he saw active service aboard Her Majesty's ship Benbow, Captain Houston Stewart, in the Mediterranean, and commanded the barge of his ship in the attack on the town of Torlosa, on the coast of Syria, and was present in the Benbow at the bombardment of St. Jean d'Acre in 1840. He was appointed lieutenant Dec. 13, 1845, and, after various services, was, in Nov., 1851, appointed lieutenant-commander of Her Majesty's steamer Locust, with which he served in 1864 in the Baltic fleet, under Rear-Admiral Sir Charles Napier. In the following year he proceeded to join the fleet in the Mediterranean, where he was appointed lieutenant-commander of the Recruit, in which ship he gained the highest distinction for his gallantry. He rendered important service at the disembarkation of troops at the capture of Kertch, and also in the Azov expedition and destruction of Government stores at Taganrog in 1855. He distinguished himself by his gallantry performed on September 17 and 21 in the Sea of Azov, for which he was decorated with the Victoria Cross, and was among the first recipients of that honoured decoration. In consideration of his meritorious service, he was promoted to the rank of commander. In May, 1856, he was appointed commander of Her Majesty's ship Firefly, in which he was employed on the West Coast of Africa. He was promoted to Captain in August, 1861, but, in consequence of impaired health, was compelled to decline active employment, and in February, 1867, was placed on the Captains' Retired List. In further recognition of his valuable professional services, he was nominated a companion of the Order of the Bath in May, 1875.

Full details of the proceedings of the Court of Inquiry respecting the loss of the troopship St. Lawrence have now been received. The Court found that the loss of the ship is attributable to a strong north-easterly current, but that Captain Hyde ought not to have relied on the report brought in at three o'clock in the morning that land was visible fifteen miles distant, as he should have known that such estimate was untrustworthy, and that even if true as indicated he was in the wrong position. He ought to have then come on deck and cast the lead, which would have disclosed the peril. In consideration of the previous high character and exemplary conduct, however, of Captain Hyde, the sentence was mitigated to suspension of his certificate for six months. It was decided that the chief officer, Mr. Shelton, was guilty of a grave error of judgment and want of promptitude in not taking any means to verify the distance of land sighted, to alter the ship's course, or to take any precautions. Had he done so, the Court held the rocks would undoubtedly have been sighted or avoided. His certificate was suspended for twelve months. Messrs. Bevan and Newton, second and third officers, were severely censured for laxity.

Lieut.-General George Campbell, C.B., colonel of the 85th Light Infantry, died on the 23rd ult. He earned considerable distinction during the Indian Mutiny of 1857. Under the gallant Nicholson he commanded the 52nd Light Infantry at the defeat and rout of the Sealkote Mutineers on the banks of the Ravee in July of that year, an event which so greatly contributed to save the Punjab between the Jhelum and the Sutlej; and in a few days after marched upon Delhi, where at the assault he commanded the third column, consisting of his own and two native regiments, with which he rushed in through the Cashmere Gate as soon as it was blown up. After his retirement from the 52nd General Campbell was employed successively as brigadier at Aldershot and in command of the Cork district. This event leaves vacant the colonelcy of the 85th, and along with recent deaths among general officers of the old Indian Army will occasion a considerable batch of promotions throughout the Service.

The sinking, for the first time in the history of England, of torpedoes and submarine mines which has just commenced around the forts of the Thames and English coasts has induced a feeling of hesitation on the part of captains, crews, and owners of British and foreign vessels approaching and leaving our shores. The science of submarine warfare is as yet in an experimental condition, and though the merchant captains and others are assured that the electric instruments for firing from the shore are in safe and trustworthy hands, they naturally wish that the torpedoes were not there. The experience hitherto gained in submarine experiments is that a much greater quantity of explosive power is necessary to form any real barrier to vessels entering the Thames and English harbours than was ever anticipated, and that even when a river like the Thames is effectually defended by torpedoes it is not expected that a hostile fleet could be prevented forcing its way up unless the torpedoes are accompanied by the firing of powerful artillery from the forts.

The Lords of the Admiralty have issued the following circular to facilitate the payment of ships' companies when serving abroad:—"My Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty have, with the view of facilitating the despatch of public business, been pleased to direct that in future the approval of commanders-in-chief to the demand for cash made on the shore establishments by the paymasters of Her Majesty's ships is to be dispensed with, the approval of the captains being considered sufficient. My lords have also been pleased, with the concurrence of the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, to direct that, on foreign stations where the money for naval service is obtained from the Commissariat Department, the demands are to be sent to, and the cash obtained from, that department direct, without the intervention of the yard accountant officers. Where the money is procured by bills drawn by the yard accountant, the demands from ships are to be sent to the yard direct, as at home."

English artillerists are directing their attention to the latest invention of Herr Krupp—viz., an armoured gun which does away with the recoil of heavy siege, coast, and naval guns. When fired, the new armour gun remains fixed in its original position, so that when once pointed relaying after every shot is entirely dispensed with and a rapidity of fire—60 rounds in 15 minutes—is attained. The gun is armoured by a metal sphere being screwed round the muzzle, the thickness of the armour corresponding to the calibre of the weapon. In firing from forts the size of the embrasures is reduced to that of the bore of the gun, and the smoke, which has hitherto made a prolonged stay in the casemates insupportable, is blown away by having to remain outside. With the great stability of the gun fewer gunners and less space are required. Extensive trials are about to be made against these armoured guns, with the object of determining what chances there are of an enemy disabling a weapon thus protected.

A corvette of a novel type designed by Herr Koch, of the German Admiralty, is about to be launched at the Imperial dock of Ellerbeck. The vessel measures 300 feet in length, 60 feet in width, and 27 feet in depth. She is to have only six inches of armour, and to be armed with six of the heaviest guns. Her engines will be of 6,000-horse power. The corvette will also have a ram. Two special features of the new ship will be the entire absence of rigging and the protection of the main deck by armour corresponding to that on the ship's sides.

Major H. A. M'Callum, barrack-master at the Gosport Division of Royal Marines, has been placed on the retired list of his rank under the provisions of Her Majesty's Order in Council dated Feb. 22, 1870. Major M'Callum entered the Royal Marines in 1837, served in Syria in 1840, was present at the capture of Beyrout and fall of St. Jean d'Acre, and served throughout the Russian War in 1854-55. He has received the Crimean medal and clasps and the Turkish Order of the Medjidie.

The appointment of Aide-de-Camp to the Queen, vacant by the retirement, announced some time since, of Colonel Bourchier, V.C., will be filled by Lieut.-Col. H. A. Weltman, now on the staff at Colchester, who, after just thirty-seven years' service, including the campaign in the Sutlej as Adjutant of the 80th Regiment, now attains the rank of Colonel Another of these appointments as well as the command of the troops at Shorncliffe may be expected soon to fall in by the promotion of Colone the Hon. F. Thesiger, who is now the Senior Colonel.

The Lord Warden, 18, armour-plated ship, has been commissioned at Portsmouth by Captain Norman B. Bedingfeld, the officers and crew having previously been turned over from the Favorite. She has been repaired at a cost of £50,000. Captain Bedingfeld served as a midshipman in China in 1842.

Major-General H. G. Rainey, C.B., has been awarded the Distinguished Service Pension vacated by Lieut.-General Munro, C.B., on being appointed colonel of the 93rd Regiment.

The Malabar, Indian troopship, Capt. Edward Kelly, arrived at Spithead on the 23rd ult., and came into harbour next morning. She left Bombay on the 21st of November, and arrived at Suez on the 5th inst., entering the Canal the same day.

The German corvette Gazelle has been placed in commission at Kiel, and is to proceed shortly to the Mediterranean. Her further course will, it is stated, depend upon circumstances. Should these permit she will be sent to the West Indies.

Monetary and Commercial.

In the Produce Markets owing to the intervention of the Christmas holidays, transactions have been of very limited extent. In Tea and Silk business has been wholly suspended. The market for Coffee, Rice, and Sugar is very strong. An active demand has been manifested for Gambier, China Galls, and Pepper, in all of which considerable business has been done at advancing prices. Other articles are without alteration.

In the Manchester Market the Christmas holidays virtually commenced on the 22nd ult., and the transactions since do not merit mention, the attendance of both buyers and sellers being very small, and on neither side has there been any decided disposition to resume active business, a holiday feeling still prevailing. The quotations of last week are unaltered.

Bar Silver has been sold at 56½d. per oz., a slight recovery from the rate of last week. The market is firm at this quotation. A few small parcels of Mexican Dollars by the American steamers have been sold at 57½d. per oz., for shipment to China, and the Straits.

The amount of bullion per P. and O. steamer Deccan, from Southampton on the 28th Dec., was:—In gold, to Galle, £433; in silver, to Penang, £26,150; to Singapore, £1,100; to Hong Kong, £31,245; to Shanghai, £5,389; total in silver, £63,875.

The telegraph lines to the Far East are working satisfactorily. The Great Northern Company's line between Nagasaki and Shanghai has been interrupted for a few hours, but communication is now restored.

The Scotsman gives a review of the work done in the shipbuilding yards on the Clyde during the past year. The total amount of tonnage launched—204,770 tons—is under that of last year by 23,430, and is 62,000 tons below the aggregate for 1874, and 56,700 tons below that for 1873; but, considering the general dulness of trade, the result is not considered altogether unsatisfactory. The number of vessels launched was 266 against 276 in 1875, 225 in 1874, and 194 in 1873. Perhaps the most marked feature of the trade during the year has been the continued decrease in the number and size of the steam-vessels turned out, their place being taken by iron sailing-ships, which, for the first time for many years, exceed in tonnage as well as numbers the screw-steamers launched. The change that has taken place in this respect since the great decline in the iron and coal trades is brought out in a comparison of the figures of 1873 with those of the present year. While in the former 125 screw-steamers of 218,000 tons in the aggregate were built, only 83 vessels of this class, of 73,000 tons in all, were turned out. On the other hand, the 12 iron sailing-ships of 1873, aggregating 19,000 tons, had increased in 1876 to 97 vessels of 96,000 tons. Among the vessels launched this year were four war vessels for the British Government. There is at present a fair amount of work in hand at the various yards.

Tenders for India Council drafts to the usual amount of 35 lacs of rupees (£350,000) were received at the Bank of England on the 28th ult., and the whole were disposed of—£270,000 being taken for Calcutta, £60,000 for Bombay, and £20,000 for Madras. Tenders on all Presidencies at 1s. 9⅛d. per rupee receive about 50 per cent. of applications, whereas last week tenders at the same price got only 12 per cent. or less. Consequently there has been a further slight reduction in the price of allotment.

Application has been made to the Stock Exchange Committee to allow the Ceylon Government Four-and-a-Half per Cent. Loan, for £400,000, to be officially quoted.

The Bank of Constantinople announces that the ad interim dividend of 6 per cent. per annum for the year ending the 31st inst. will be payable on and after the 1st prox.

The directors of the Colonial Bank have decided to declare, at the general meeting to be held on the 4th prox., a dividend of 6 per cent. for the half-year ending on the 30th of June last.

The directors of the Peel River Land and Mineral Company (Limited) have decided to recommend to the proprietors at the annual general meeting, on 12th proximo, a dividend of 2 per cent., free of income-tax, making, with the interim dividend, a total distribution for the year ending 30th June last of 4½ per cent.

The directors of the National Steamship Company (Limited) have declared a dividend of 5s. per share on the original and 4s. per share on the preference shares.

CASUALTIES.

LIVERPOOL.—Dec. 28, early yesterday morning a fire was discovered on board the Ulysses (str.), for China, lying in the Birkenhead Dock, which was fortunately extinguished in half an hour. The cause of the fire has not been ascertained. It originated in the engineer's room, and might have been far more serious in its results had it not been discovered soon after the outbreak of the flames, as the steamer had just shipped a valuable cargo of Manchester goods. The actual damage is considerable. The steamer is owned by Mr. Alfred Holt and others.

BATAVIA.—Dec. 27, the Christine, 'German barque, from Java for the Channel (sugar), has put into Bezoekie leaking badly, and will discharge for repairs; was compelled to run ashore to prevent sinking.

ILO ILO.—(By telegraph dated Singapore, Dec. 27); the barque Monarch, for New York, has put back to repair damage received in severe gales, with loss of stanchions and bulwarks.

The Coldstream, for London, has put back to repair damage received in severe gales ; she grounded here, but was got off after discharging part of cargo; is discharging her cargo for survey; reports having seen the James Aiken, hence for New York, with loss of all sails.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NANTES.—Dec. 23, the Isabelle, from Bordeaux, for Singapore, which put into St. Nazaire on the 10th inst., is discharging cargo, in order to allow surveyors to examine the vessel's hull.

MALTA.—Sailed Dec. 23, Orchis (str.) for Marseilles, from Singapore.

NEW YORK.—Dec. 22, the Quang Se (str.), from Hiogo, &c., which grounded in this harbour, has been assisted off.

from Ilo Ilo, both for New York; 28, Lord Macduff, from Whampoa, for London; passed, 20, Bima, from Macassar, for Rotterdam; Dec. 2, G. J. Jones, from Sourabaya, for Cork.

ALGOA BAY.—Sailed, Nov. 18, Ceylon, for Guam.

GALLE.—Dec.—Arrived and proceeded Stad Amsterdam (str.), from Batavia, for Nieuwe Diep.

HIOGO.—Nov. 6: The wreck and cargo of the Theseus, Toogood, from Manila for New York, stranded on Kikaigo Shima, have been sold by auction for $15. The prospects of recovering anything appear to be extremely small.

GENERAL SHIPPING NEWS.

THE O. AND O. STEAMSHIP COMPANY.—The San Francisco Herald and Market Report says:—We have been assured that petitions are being passed round for signatures asking Congress to appropriate a subsidy for the Occidental and Oriental Steamship Company, whose steamships are exclusively British. The grounds upon which this petition is based are that American citizens have some ownership in the concern, and that the steamers are regularly engaged in the American trade between San Francisco and ports in Japan and China. If these two facts constituted sufficient reason for making such application the Cunard, White Star, and the numerous other lines of British steamships running between the United States and Europe, would be equally entitled to ask the pecuniary aid of the American people in their struggle to exclude American steamship commerce from the Atlantic. It has not been made apparent at any time that the proper policy of a Government is to strangle the interests of its own citizens for the sake of fostering those of other nations, nor is it easily demonstrable that the money of our people should be devoted to the destruction of their commercial prosperity.

THE TAMESA.—The Tamesa, of London, Green, which sailed from Hiogo for Yokohama on the 17th of July, and previously reported as not having been heard of since, was a wooden barque of nearly 750 tons gross, built at Sunderland in 1869, classed A 1 at Lloyd's for 16 years, and owned by Messrs. Jolly and Co., of London. Her crew consisted of the following:—Captain John Green, 40, Cornwall; John Tucker, 43, Devonport, first mate; W. H. Eales, 20, Ramsgate, second mate; F. Jarrett, 42, London, carpenter; John Passfield, 34, Poplar, boatswain; Peter Louis, 28, Brazil, cook and steward; William Smith, 53, Cornwall, A.B.; F. J. Davis, 35, Hants, A.B.; C. H. Earle, 24, Falmouth, A.B.; F. Talbot, 25, London, A.B.; Edmund Church, 40, Swansea, A.B.; Andreas Engstrom, 23, Sweden, A.B.; C. F. Ericksen, 27, Sweden, A.B.; Samuel Barrett, 18, Jamaica, A.B.; Thomas Manning, 18, London O.S.; John Longmore, 16, Poplar, boy; T. Dyke, 18, Dartford, boy; and T. Dibb, 16, Hull, and one apprentice.

ELLEN BROWSE.—The following notice has been issued to consignees of cargo of the barque Ellen Browse, from Hiogo at London:—"The above-named vessel having been seized by the mortgagees, consignees are hereby notified of same. Releases of cargo can only be granted by the undersigned, to whom all freight is to be paid, David Brown and Co., 147, Leadenhall-street, agents for R. O. Yeates, Manager, Alliance Bank, Mortgagee."

THE anxiety which was felt as to the safety of the Atlantic steamer City of Berlin was removed on the 23rd ult. by a telegram being received in Liverpool announcing her safe arrival at New York, after a long passage of about seventeen days. The City of Bristol, belonging to the same company, and which was damaged by the late storm, put back into the Mersey on the 23rd ult.

IT is notified that the Board of Trade has awarded a portfolio of chromolithographs of English scenery to a Chinese official at Tamsui, in acknowledgment of his assistance to the crews of two British vessels wrecked in Chinese waters, in feeding, lodging, and providing conveyances for them.

THE Rotterdam Lloyd screw steamship Hampton, Captain W. R. M'Moutry, sailed from Southampton on the 22nd ult. with the Dutch mails, a large number of passengers, and a full cargo for Padang, Batavia, Samarang, and Sourabaya.

GENERAL FREIGHT REPORT.

The tonnage loading on the berth for India, China, and the Cape of Good Hope amounts to 56,353 tons, and for Australia and New Zealand to 39,015 tons. Freighting business has been very much interfered with by the Christmas holidays, and there is little alteration to record in rates. The Financial Council of India receive tenders to-day from London, Liverpool, or Glasgow to Kurrachee, for 1,400 tons bridgework, and from London, Liverpool, or Newport to Kurrachee, 9,400 tons rails and 990 tons railway fastenings.

CORAL PATCH OFF THE ENTRANCE TO KEELUNG HARBOUR.

The following information has been received from Vice-Admiral A. P. Ryder, Commander-in-Chief, China Station :—

H.M.S. Audacious, when leaving Keelung Harbour, Formosa, in May last, struck on a coral patch unmarked in the charts. The position of this patch has since been determined by H.M.S. Lapwing, and is as follows :—

100 Foot Rock (Keelung Island), S. 74° E.

Macedonian Point, S. 3° E.

Brooker Point, S. 27° W.

This patch is about 150 to 200 yards in extent, with least water 3½ fathoms (reduced to low ordinary springs), soundings varying from 5 to 9 fathoms on the patch.

The bearings given show the exact position of the 3½ fathoms patch.

By order of the Inspector-General of Customs,

DAVID M. HENDERSON,
Engineer-in-Chief.

TANJONG PAGAR DOCK COMPANY

VICTORIA DOCK, SINGAPORE.

This Company's Granite DRY DOCK, 450 feet in length, 65 feet width of entrance, and 20 feet depth of water on the sill, was OPENED on the 17th October, 1868. In the high tides of the North-East Monsoon there is a foot to eighteen inches more water.

In connection with the Dock is a complete range of workshops, fitted with steam machinery, driving all description of engineers' tools required in the construction and repair of vessels and machinery, and a foundry for iron and brass castings.

The Company's extensive Wharves and Godowns for receiving and storing cargo immediately adjoin the Dock.

Having an efficient European staff in each department, the Company is in a position to guarantee the best workmanship, executed with every possible despatch, as well as low rates of charges.

These advantages, and the great facilities which the proximity of the Dock to the town offers for the transport of materials, &c., enable this Company to adopt a very low scale of charges for ships' work of all classes.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

YOKOHAMA.

(FROM A CORRESPONDENT.)

YOKOHAMA, NOV. 25.

I send this letter by the Pacific Mail Company's steamer City of Peking, and I estimate that you will receive it about the 3rd of January next, if not a day or two earlier; so you see that by adopting this route I gain considerably on either French or English mail. Plunging at once in medias res, I have to tell you that business in this port, and, indeed, throughout Japan, is duller than dull. For weeks past merchants have had ample reason to blaspheme the telegraph. Day after day the most contradictory intelligence has been received by wire, and the silk market has been as variable as any weathercock. That abominable, interminable Eastern question has caused as much commotion here as would have done a war between Great Britain and China; infinitely more than would have done the overthrow of the Mikado's throne, and the subversion of the Government by the recently suppressed insurrection. Indeed, my predictions of some five months since have been proved to be only too correct. The inflated bubble has been pricked, and has collapsed. Since the date of my last, prices have generally fallen from $20 to $40, and at the moment I write—well, that is hardly a criterion, the moment being midnight—but during the day nothing has been done. The fact is that people are afraid to operate, and no wonder, in spite of the increased willingness of the Japanese to part with their silk at prices 30 per cent. and more below the highest point reached during the height of the excitement. If it were not so serious a matter it would be amusing to see silk inspectors on the receipt of one telegram rushing off to the holders to buy, their faces beaming with joy, and perhaps an hour or two after their return to their office rushing back again, with black care on the hood of their jinrikishas, to countermand their previous orders. The sooner your European political wire-pullers either drop the curtain on the Eastern pantomime, or by one good honest tug set all their marionettes at bonâ fide loggerheads, the better for the peace of the foreign silk firms in Japan.

You would hardly expect that when the effect, silk, is turned wrong side up, metaphorically speaking, the remote cause, silk-worm-eggs, should not also be in a degree affected. The silk-worm-egg-card traffic is this season entirely bouleversé. The fact is that the Japanese have been too well taught. In the matter I am now writing of, they have proved themselves much wiser than their teachers. You know that a few years ago a small army of graineurs used to arrive here each season and make a pretty good thing out of the cartons which they used to take home to France and Italy. And now, what a change! This year a few stragglers, a miserable remnant of the grand army, came to Japan, and they, or most of them are going back without spoils. Before the season opened, Mr. Shibusawa, formerly Vice-Minister of the Finance Department, and now director or manager, I forget which, of the First National Bank, formed an organisation into which he pressed all the principal silk-worm-egg-card dealers of the capital and Yokohama, for the protection of native industry against foreign encroachment. In other words, he bound his confederates not to sell to foreigners at prices below a tariff which he fixed; and which went as high as upwards of 5f. per carton. When the graineurs first came this year, they laughed at the combination. They said, tout vient à temps à qui sait attendre; and they have waited till now. They bought at the confederacy prices a few cards of such sorts as they must have at any price, and said they would soon reduce the demands of the holders for the bulk of their intended purchases by holding aloof. The result, as you will see directly, wofully disappointed them. While they were waiting, and just to keep their hands in, they bought some cards from people outside of the confederacy. But Mr. Shibusawa has just played a trump card which entirely upsets the little game of the disconsolate graineurs. By the City of Peking, it is said, though I will not vouch for the truth of the rumour, that he and his associates are sending to Italy, on their own account, a consignment of half-a-million cartons. So far only three hundred thousand cartons have been sent forward by Europeans; and as the total quantity estimated to be required by France and Italy this season is about twelve hundred thousand I leave you to imagine what chance, if this report be true—and though I cannot as yet find out how many cards exactly the Japanese are sending, yet I know it has a solid substratum at least of truth—I say I leave you to guess what chance the graineurs have. I have no idea of how they are going to act; whether they are going to make haste and buy the remaining four or five hundred thousand cards required by the markets, or whether they are going to allow Mr. Shibasawa, by another shipment of half-a-million, to relieve them of their embarrassment, and to pocket the profits which should have been theirs. One of them with whom I was condoling a few hours ago said to me, "Never mind, I will buy my credit of curios, and will mount a boutique of bronzes in La Chestera Squara." (Since I wrote the above I have learned that two Japanese, with 120,000 cards, are going, via San Francisco, to Italy, and that their lot is only a portion of what is going on native account.

Another failure in business; Messrs. Nachtigal and Co., ships' compradores and butchers, here and at Kobe, have liabilities estimated at $30,00 , and they cannot meet their engagements. At first it was intended to close the concern; but the creditors seem to have decided that the complete collapse of the business would throw too much trade into some other one firm's hands; so I learn that the firm is to be allowed to continue trading under a committee of inspection. The China and Japan Trading Company, the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank, Messrs. Lane, Crawford, and Co., and Mr. R. Clarke, a baker, are probably the principal creditors. Messrs. Nachtigal and Co. were, and I suppose are still, contractors for the Mitsu Bishi S.S. Co., and if I am correctly informed, must have lost considerably by the contract. It is the old story—too much competition; a hundred dollars' worth of meat and bread for eighty dollars.

The insurrection in the provinces appears to be entirely snuffed out. The Empress has gone to Kiyoto, the old capital, in kaga, or sedan-chair, via the Tokiado. The Emperor is going there, by sea as far as Kobe, thence by rail, in January. The object of his journey, as described in the Government notifications, is to worship at the tomb of Jimmu Tenno, and to celebrate the festival of Komei Tenno.

Mr. E. H. House, correspondent of the New York Tribune and other American papers, is about to start, commencing with the new year, a weekly paper, to be called the Tokio Journal.

The Ostasiatische Zeitung, after a brief and inglorious career, has for a second time given up the ghost. It was a Lazarus of literature. The editor, Mr. Egmont Sutor, who was also proprietor, flitted in the Gaelic to San Francisco.

Colonel Murata, the same who, two years since, made himself such a wonderful reputation as a rifle marksman in Europe, is about to undertake, on behalf of the War Department, some improvements in the Prussian needle-guns and chassepot rifles now in use in the Japanese service.

PEKING.

The Peking Gazette of 28th October contains a reference to the late persecutions of Christians in Szechuen. An Imperial decree quotes a memorial from the Tsung-li Yamen, reporting that disturbances have arisen from this cause in six districts, none of which have been reported on or settled. This is reprehended as a grave instance of dilatoriness and neglect; and the Tartar-General and the Viceroy are ordered to inquire into the matter without delay. The Gazettes of the 29th and 30th October are nearly filled with memorials relating to outrages perpetrated by certain officials in Szechuen, which rival the Bulgarian atrocities in cruelty. The Gazette of the 29th October has two memorials—one from an individual censor, dwelling upon the wrong done in the case and calling urgently for justice; and another by the President of the Board of Punishments, stating the position of the complainant. A memorial by the Court of Censors in the Gazette of the 30th October brings the matter to a climax, and shows the importance it is assuming in the eyes of the Government.

It has been commonly believed that the Literary Examinations were among the few things honestly conducted in China, and that corruption and falsification could very rarely intrude. It would seem, however, from a memorial by Ting Jih-chang, in the Gazette of the 26th October, that forgery is not uncommon; in the sense, that is, that men pass off as their own essays written for them by others.

The French Minister at Peking, M. Brenier de Montmorand, has invited the Chinese Government to participate in the Paris Exhibition of 1878. The Tsung-li Yamen has accordingly ordered Mr. Hart, the Inspector-General of Maritime Customs, to make the necessary collections and contributions, as in the case of the Vienna Exhibition of 1873 and the Philadelphia Exhibition of last year.

During the absence of Sir Thomas Wade, Mr. Hugh Fraser, First Secretary of the British Legation at Peking, will act as Charge d'Affaires.

TIENTSIN.

A correspondent of the Shanghai Courier writes from this port as follows:—

Herr Von Bismark, the Consul for Germany, will leave in a few days for Amoy. I am sorry to say his change of port has been made necessary by ill-health. Herr Von Bismark is highly estimated by the foreign community and Chinese high officials. In the spring another able, experienced, and much-esteemed official will leave this port for Europe, viz., Monsieur Waeber, Consul for Russia. He, like Herr Von Bismark, is a man of fine ability and culture. Mr. Beveridge, for some years agent for Messrs. Jardine, Matheson, and Co., likewise is about leaving for Europe. The port is also soon to lose Mr. A. MacPherson, the Commissioner of Imperial Customs.

Sir Thomas Wade made his farewell visit to the Viceroy and Grand Secretary Li on the 8th Nov., and the call was returned next day. Li had a fine escort of disciplined soldiers. It will be right that the English merchants pay due recognition to Sir Thomas's great services to England. England never had a more faithful and zealous servant. By-and-by his labours will be manifest, and I believe that his work will be proved wise, prescient, honourable, and patriotic.

The post of Governor-General of Fokien and Chekiang has been conferred upon Ho-King. He is a man of firmness and resolution, possessing a very independent character. He is one of the few mandarins in the Empire who have held high positions without enriching themselves at the expense of the people. Although a native of Kwang-tung, and therefore a fellow-provincial of Ting, the Governor of Fokien, he is understood not to be on very friendly relations with Ting, which is to be regretted, as they are both good men.

The attention of the authorities is apparently directed to the coal-fields in the Kai ping district, about eighty miles north-east of this port, and about forty miles from Lo-tu, on the Peh-tang Ho. The Peh-tang river is deeper, and a more accessible river as high as Loo-tu than the Peiho, and it seems probable that if the mines in that neighbourhood are worked the North China coal trade will not directly benefit this port.

A large number of Mongolian sheep have been purchased here by the agents of the Japanese Government, and are being sent to Japan. They are intended to "cross" with the superior breeds of England and Germany.

CHEFOO.

A correspondent of the North China Daily News supplies the subjoined account of the grounding of H.M.S. Lapwing:—

Her Majesty's gun-vessel Lapwing, Commander Sir W. Wiseman, Bart., left Chefoo on the 10th November, for Tientsin, to relieve the Frolic, but during the night, at half-past ten, during a gale of wind which rose suddenly, she got out of her course and ran ashore on the beach of the east side of Chang-shan-tau island, about two miles and-a-half north of the point marked Island head on the chart of the Miau-tau group. The violence of the gale hove her right upon the beach. News of the disaster reached Chefoo on the 13th November, and H.M.S. Mosquito, Lieut. Paul, R.N., immediately started to assist the Lapwing. Mr. G. Jamieson, Acting-Consul, went with the Mosquito, taking with him a Wei-yuen from the Taoutai of Chefoo, to assist in hiring native workmen to get the Lapwing out of danger. By the last accounts it appears that none of the crew have been lost or hurt. Everything had been cleared out of the vessel except her machinery, and all had been stored in houses. Coolies were working to clear everything. The Mosquito endeavoured to tow the Lapwing off, but did not succeed the first day. She was going to have another try when the last news left. The hull of the Lapwing was not damaged, and as the Frolic was on her way to the rescue, and the spring tides are flowing, it is to be hoped that she may get off. Should a north-east gale set in, however, the vessel will be broken up.

A subsequent letter, dated Nov. 20, says :—H.M.S. Mosquito arrived this morning from the Miatao Islands with despatches, and reports that the Lapwing still remain on the beach, broadside on, and admitting water at high tide. The machinery had all been removed, and the boilers were the only thing remaining on board. The officers and crew are on shore in Chinese houses. H.M.S. Frolic was near the wreck, but had not been able to tow her off. Great complaints are made of the negligence of the Chinese authorities, as they have rendered no assistance, though requested officially to do so by Mr. George Jamieson, H.B.M.'s Acting Consul at Chefoo, who went to the scene of the disaster, and who has returned in the Mosquito. Several robberies by natives had occurred, and the thieves had been punished in presence of the Ti-pao. One of them has been brought here, and is to be delivered to the Taoutai to be dealt with. H.B.M.S. Charybdis is expected here daily to remove the guns, ammunition, gear, machinery, stores, and boilers, and to take them to Hong Kong, with the officers and crew, 105 in all, of the wrecked Lapwing.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 24th November; the French mail from London Oct. 26 was received on the 22nd November. The North China Herald contains the following summary of news :—

The Envoy Extraordinary to Great Britain, Kwoh Sung-tao, with his family and suite, comprising about eighteen persons, arrived at Shanghai on the 19th Nov. by the China Merchants' steamer Fungshun, en route to London. His Excellency remained on board all night, and came up to Shanghai between twelve and one o'clock next day in a steam-launch, accompanied by the manager and another official of the C. M. Company. The party landed at E-wo jetty, where chairs were provided, and his Excellency at once proceeded to the lodging prepared for him at the Canton Guild Club-house, in the Ningpo-road, opposite Thorne's-buildings. From an early hour in the morning this street was nearly filled with an assemblage of retainers of various officials, from the Taoutai downwards, apparently awaiting the arrival of the Ambassador. Later in the day the customary visits were paid. Among the visitors were the Taoutai, the Chehsien, the Mixed Court magistrate, and several others,—red umbrellas were, in fact, glancing through the Settlement during nearly the whole afternoon. His Excellency's stay in Shanghai will, it is thought, extend over some days, so that he cannot accompany Sir Thomas Wade home, as it was at one time believed probable he would. His associate, Liu Si-hung, and the two interpreters to the Embassy, Feng-I and Teh-Ming, are expected to arrive by the next China Merchants' steamer from Tientsin, and soon after their arrival the journey to England will be resumed.

We understand that the following are the changes that have taken place, or are impending, in H.B.M. Consulate service in China. Mr. Medhurst, Her Majesty's Consul at this port, being about to retire on a pension, contemplates taking his departure for home at the end of the present year, and will be replaced by Mr. Davenport as acting Consul, pending the arrival of Mr. Morgan, now Consul at Tiensin, who will eventually assume charge of H.B.M.'s Consulate here. Mr. Alabaster, having been appointed Consul at Ningpo, is succeeded in the Consulship for Taiwan by Mr. King, hitherto Vice-Consul at Kiukiang. For the present, however, Mr. King will remain at Kiukiang, and Mr. Alabaster continue to officiate as Consul at Amoy, as the changes which were anticipated before the end of the year have been postponed in consequence of the non-arrival of Mr. Sinclair from Europe. Mr. Pedder consequently remains at Foochow, pending Mr. Sinclair's return.

We mentioned last week that Messrs. Chun Pat-nan and Sit Ming Cook had been nominated respectively as Consul-General and Vice-Consul for China at San Francisco. The Chun Ngoi San Po has received intelligence that the Chinese Government has made the following further appointments :—Chan-lan-pan to be Chinese Minister at Washington ; Yung Wing, who was formerly a student in Yale College, to be Assistant Minister ; Wong Shing to be Chief Translator and Secretary ; and Chan Shui Nam (compradore to Messrs. Arnhold, Karberg, and Co.) to be Consul at Peru. The salaries of these officials are to be :—Minister 12,000 taels per annum ; Assistant Minister, 8,000 taels ; Chief Secretary, 3,600 taels ; Consuls, 4,000 taels. They will all shortly leave to assume the duties of their appointments.

The text of the agreement made between Mr. Mayers and the Viceroy of Nanking regarding the Woosung Railway has been made public. We understand that regulations have been agreed upon between H.B.M. Consul and the Taoutai, with reference to the future working of the railway, the agreement with regard to which has received the sanction of Sir Thomas Wade ; and that thus the last preliminary required before the running of trains is recommenced has been fulfilled. The line will be re-opened for traffic on December 1.

We recently mentioned that the Taoutai was likely to resign his post about Chinese New Year. The rumour is that he applied for leave, which the Governor-General granted, but at the same time intimated that he would not allow him to return, as he is not satisfied with his actions. Practically, therefore, it is understood his departure will be a resignation.

The report of the Dutch engineers who surveyed the Woosung Bar in the autumn of last year has been at length printed, and is offered for sale. The report is a most elaborate one, covering sixty-one pages of foolscap size, and will be read with interest by all who are interested in the trade of the port.

Copies of the proclamation relating the settlement of the Yunnan affair, of which we have already printed a translation, were posted on Monday at Shanghai, in accordance with the terms of the Chefoo Convention. In the English Settlement copies were posted outside the Custom-house and Mixed Court, and attracted a large number of readers throughout the day.

The annual meeting of the Paper Hunt Club has been held, and there was a pretty good attendance of members. The Master, E. G. Low, Esq., occupied the chair, and stated that the last season was very successful. Eighteen prizes were given, and the number of riding members was eighty-four. The accounts showed a small balance in hand, and there had been no necessity to make any call upon the honorary members. He hoped the ensuing season would prove as successful. The accounts were handed round for inspection, after which a ballot was taken for the election of six stewards, the choice falling on five of the gentlemen who filled the office last year, viz., Messrs. E. H. Gore-Booth, S. Walker, A. R. Burkill, E. G. Low, and A. McLeod ; Mr. Daniel being elected in the place of Mr. W. Howie, who has gone home. It was stated that the stewards would, as, as usual, elect the honorary secretary, and also fix the day for the first meet of the season. The rules were next read over, but no alterations were made. A new one was, however, added, as follows :—No prize can be claimed by any rider coming in more than ten minutes after the first qualified rider.

A meeting of creditors in the bankruptcy of L. H. Stoddard has been held. The object of the meeting was the declaration of a second and final dividend. The bankrupt, who was permitted to appear in person, had also filed an application for discharge. The total liabilities were $94,067.50, but the majority of creditors, representing $86,756.91, having signed an agreement consenting to his discharge being granted, the Court made an order accordingly. The official assignee was also released from all further liability in connection with the estate, which has yielded about 11 per cent. on the liabilities.

H.B.M. Charbydis has left for the North, and the Curlew, from Chinkiang, has arrived to take her place. Between the departure and the arrival of the two vessels, about twenty-four hours, there was no English war-vessel in port—a most exceptional circumstance.

Mr. W. W. Lovett has been found dead in his room, with a bullet through the temples ; and there is no room for doubt that his death was caused by his own act. Mr. Lovett was a well-known and popular member of the community, and the painful news was heard with most sincere sorrow.

There is still an entire absence of demand for silk, not a single bona fide offer even being reported, and what little business has taken place is almost solely on native account. With the stoppage of business for more than six weeks our figures of export are looking rather less alarming. The total in excess is 8,500 bales as compared with last year, and only 2,700 as compared with 1874, but considering the exceptionally small stock of unsold silk of all kinds on October 1 in London, coupled with fair average monthly deliveries and a Continental inquiry chiefly for fine-sized silks, it is only reasonable to expect another reaction in the better classes of Chinas if it can be decided that the Eastern question is to be settled peacefully. The unsold stock is estimated at 24,000 bales.

Messrs. Bissett and Co. report as follows upon the Share Market :—

Business has been rather brisker during the week, chiefly in Bank, and S. S. N. shares. We note advances in the value of Bank, Yangtsze, North-China Insurance, and China Traders' Insurance shares; and a slight fall in Hong Kong Fire shares. H. and S. Bank: A number of shares were placed on the 17th at 20 per cent. premium, and ex. 74. The rate continued the same, with small sales, until yesterday, when a fair number changed hands at 20 per cent., ex. 75, and 22 per cent., ex. 74 for cash, and 24 per cent. for 31st December. S. S. N. Co.: The market has been quiet for this stock, except on the 21st, when a number of shares were done at Tls. 66. Shanghai Dock Co.: Sales are reported at Tls. 210. Shanghai Gas Co.: A sale was made at Tls. 140. Yangtsze Insurance Association: A sale was made on the 18th at Tls. 620, and a lot changed hands on the 22nd at Tls. 622½. North China Insurance Co.: A share changed hands at Tls. 875; more might be placed at this rate. Hong Kong Fire Insurance Co.: Sales are reported at $565, ex. 74, and $560, ex. 74½. China Traders' Insurance Co.: A sale is reported at $1,580 ex. 75.

The Celestial Empire supplies the subjoined items of intelligence:—

We are now in posession of the full text of the Woosung Railway Convention. The conditions upon which the agreement in question has been arrived at are, we think, upon the whole, exceedingly fair. The matter was one in which it was almost impossible for the representatives of the foreign company to take high ground. Our reasons for this opinion we have already given, and need not now recapitulate. Suffice it to say that, in the interest of both foreigners and Chinese alike, the promoters of the undertaking ran considerable risk, and we think that they are all the more deserving of the public gratitude for their courage in putting [the] affair through at all hazards, and making a railway in China an accomplished fact. But now the inevitable battle has been fought, and the issue is by no means altogether unfavourable. They are to work the railway themselves for a year, at the expiration of which time it will become the property of the Chinese Government on terms based upon the results of the working in the interim; an equitable arrangement, and one which may lead to the continuance of the works under Chinese auspices. If the line pays, it is just possible that the authorities may see fit to carry it on; but if not, we fear that there is little doubt of the fate which will befal it. The Chinese themselves are firmly impressed with the belief that the rails will be torn up and the road destroyed. There are, however, only two articles in the agreement which we regret. The first is that which (No. 6) limits the traffic to the conveyance of passengers. Would it not have been possible to stipulate for the conveyance of goods, by way of experiment? The line is not much more than a toy line, as far as plant and machinery are concerned, but surely a commencement might be made in the carriage of merchandise. In the second place, we are sorry to see the enforced compensation for the man who killed himself. It looks as if the company had been convicted of carelessness, and this was the damages it had to pay. The facts are otherwise.

We are able to report a rather better feeling for Imports, at all events for such descriptions of plain cotton fabrics as are suited to the present wants of dealers. There has been a very trifling business done in Black Teas but in Greens the business has been very large, and settlements amount to 24,500 half-chests. The main features of the market during the week have been an active demand and an advance in price. There has been almost a clearing out of all the fine Teenkais, which have now reached Tls. 35 for full chops, or about the equivalent cost of the extreme price paid for the first settlement of the season. Moyunes have also been in good demand, and for all desirable chops extreme prices have to be paid. The few chops of first crop Pingsueys that remained on offer have all been taken, and the entire stock of these kinds is now reduced to about four thousand half-chests. The arrivals to date are about 360,000 half-chests, and further supplies are variously estimated at from 25,000 to 40,000 half-chests; and the total crop will probably be within 400,000 half-chests against 440,000 last year.

Our Peking correspondent gives us a curious piece of information respecting the light in which the Chinese Embassy to England is regarded by the literati of the Empire. These gentry in Honan appear to have testified their dissatisfaction by actually destroying the ancestral home of Kuoh Sungtao, the Ambassador-designate,—an outrage as unprovoked as it is abominable; and we think the comment of our correspondent upon the difficulty caused to the Government by the existence of such a feeling as this against foreigners is remarkably just, especially when we remember the influence wielded by this class over the common people. As the Government becomes more progressive, the opposition of the literati will probably become still fiercer, until they develop into as great a source of trouble as the samurai in Japan, to whom, as regards their conservatism and their bigotry they may, without any very great stretch of metaphor, not inaptly be compared.

On the 13th Nov. Mr. Deputy Acting Commissioner Moorhead took over charge of the Custom-house at Newchwang, vice Mr. Commissioner Man, who left in the s.s. Shanse on the 14th, en route for England. Captain Man leaves behind him many friends, and the Chinese and foreigners alike regret his departure, but it is hoped he will return to Newchwang when his two years' leave has expired. As a Commissioner of Customs he has been most obliging, and will be very much missed.

His Excellency J. H. Ferguson, Minister for the Netherlands in China, has returned from Europe in the French mail, from leave of absence, and has left for Peking by the Haining, accompanied by his secretary, Mr. J. Rhein.

DEPARTURE OF SIR THOMAS WADE.

On November 23 a large number of influential residents assembled at H.B.M.'s Consulate, Shanghai, to present a valedictory address to Sir Thomas Wade, K.C.B., on the occasion of his departure to England. Mr. Bell, in presenting the address, said:—"Sir Thomas, it is a great pleasure as well as a great honour to me to have been appointed to read to you an address from the Foreign community of Shanghai." He then read as follows:—

We feel that we should be neglecting a duty and foregoing a privilege, if we allowed you to leave China without offering you some public expression of our personal regard and official respect. You have been identified with foreign relations with China for thirty-four years, and your name will be always associated with the great changes which have taken place during that critical period. There are those amongst us whose memory carries them back to the time when, after you had served Her Majesty both as a soldier and a civilian in the South, you were transferred to fill a Consular office in Shanghai. On arriving here you found again a double occupation; and old residents remember your zeal as a Volunteer Officer, and your labours in laying the foundations of the existing Chinese Customs Service. After other employments in the South, you were again amongst us, attached to the Embassy of the late Lord Elgin; and the Treaty of Tientsin itself furnishes ample proof of the assistance you rendered his lordship throughout the course of his mission, and in the inauguration of the new system of intercourse with the Chinese Government.

Since that event, foreign relations with China have assumed a different aspect, but they have been more difficult to preserve in a satisfactory condition, as the recollection of the pressure applied to establish them in the first instance grew less vivid, and as the intercourse of the once isolated empire with foreign States has become more extended and complicated. As Chinese Secretary, and in the elevated position of British Minister, we have long admired the indefatigable spirit with which you have devoted your energies to the furtherance of the legitimate interests of your countrymen, whilst at the same time endeavouring to promote the advancement of the Chinese themselves in that path of progress which is the surest means of securing the advantage of all alike. We can readily guess how many complications must have arisen at various times, and how arduous must have been the work of the diplomatist in dealing with a Government proverbially averse to change, and suspicious of all suggestions that showed how improvement was inseparable from innovation. The position which in spite of all obstacles you had secured was shown plainly by the confidence reposed in your counsels during the recent difference between China and Japan; and the wisdom which helped to prevent a disastrous war between those two countries entitles you to public gratitude. But the last year has shown especially the advantage of the presence of a Minister so influential and so judicious at the Court of Peking. An interruption of peaceful relations with the Imperial Government, which was so much dreaded by all thoughtful men, has been averted by your endeavours directed no less towards securing what the dignity of your country imperatively claimed than towards obtaining redress for urgent grievances.

We have lately been rejoiced by the intelligence that the differences which had subsisted between the British Government and that of China, arising out of the unhappy occurrence in Yunnan, had been terminated by the Convention signed between yourself and the Plenipotentiary appointed to meet you at Chefoo; and we have been gratified by the evidence which this agreement supplies, of the care you have bestowed upon every point appertaining to foreign intercourse with China. Without presuming to trench upon the political side of the questions involved, we beg to offer our tribute of thanks for the advantages secured to Foreign commerce by the opening of additional ports and by the settlement of numerous subjects of disagreement between the authorities of China and other countries. It is not our province to dwell upon the scholarship, at once accurate and profound, which has been so useful to every student of the Chinese language; but though scholars alone may be able to appreciate the merits of your literary labours, all can comprehend and profit by the example you have presented to us. It remains for us to wish you a prosperous voyage, a happy reunion with your family, and that rest which has been so well-earned by exertions in behalf of the welfare of China and the dignity of England.

Sir Thomas Wade, in acknowledging the address, said: I have prepared an answer to the address which you have been so good as to read to me. Before proceeding to read it, however, I beg to thank the gentlemen present, representing as they do the community, for their kind reception. He then read as follows:—

I cannot sufficiently express my obligations to you for the kindly feeling that has suggested the address you have done me the honour to present me with. In the terms in which that feeling has found utterance, I have only to complain of an excess on the side of friendly appreciation. Of one or two phrases, indeed, had circumstances admitted, I should have been disposed to pray that the text might be revised. I refer more particularly to the passage in which you credit me with the settlement of subjects of disagreement between the authorities of China and other countries. The latter words, however, it has been explained to me, but repeat an allusion earlier made in the address to the adjustment of the misunderstanding between China and Japan, in the winter of 1874. You will, I trust, pardon this passing criticism, which is due only to my apprehension that more may be attributed to me than I have any right to claim. Your address, I can unaffectedly declare, has taken me entirely by surprise, and, apart from all other cause of satisfaction, I must admit that there is one which renders the presentation of it eminently gratifying to me. During a considerable portion of the long service which you pass in review, it has been my lot, either as the principal or subordinate agent of our Government, to have had more or less in my hands the care of interests of no small importance. Neither has my treatment of the questions before me, nor have the principles by which I was believed to be guided, in all cases found favour with my countrymen in China. In many instances they have been emphatically denounced; no doubt conscientiously denounced; and I have no reason to suppose that the compliment paid me to-day is proof of the surrender of opinions very frequently declared to be at variance with mine. I accept it rather as evidence of a disposition which is characteristically English; the disposition to respect the stedfast effort of any man to do right, even when the course pursued by him may fail to command approval. To infallibility in the course pursued by myself, in times long passed or in times more recent, I lay no claim whatever. To rectitude of purpose I feel that I may lay claim, and in the belief that it is mainly your recognition of this quality that has induced you to offer me the tribute of respect that I am here to acknowledge, I thank you most sincerely for your testimony.

I will not occupy your time by replying seriatim to the many compliments you have paid me on the discharge of my duty in the various capacities in which it has been my fortune to serve. On one point only, the advantages you consider secured to commerce, I shall trouble you with a few words. As was natural, on the appearance of the Chefoo Agreement, the proposal to modify the exercise of an important right excited remark; and comments upon this proposal having been addressed, directly or indirectly, to myself, I had had it in contemplation to leave with your Consul a paper exposing my own interpretation of the Treaty Clauses on which our rights are founded; the privileges we are entitled to claim under them, and the obligations they impose upon us. The Consul will be authorised to publish this paper. In the recommendations submitted to Her Majesty's Government in relation to this matter, I have been influenced, I admit, by other considerations than the simple mitigation of the serious grievance that has so long weighed upon our import trade, or, the immediate and direct expansion of that trade; confident as I have been, nevertheless, that under the newly proposed conditions it would not fail to be greatly expanded. Throughout the long discussion now at last terminated, and of which the questions of diplomatic and commercial intercourse but incidentally formed part, I have been constantly seeking an answer to the question, How best to prevent the recurrence of outrages such as that to which the late discussion owed its first commencement? For it is from events such as the Yunnan outrage that we have to apprehend misunderstandings prejudicial to our interests in China, whether moral or material. I do not say that my question has been answered. The cause of the evil lies deep, and it will take time to remove it. But I do hope that another step has been made towards its removal. If, as I have been wont to contend, calamities of the kind are to be attributed to the exclusivism that has unhappily distinguished the foreign policy of China it is of course in the diminution of this exclusivist feeling that we are to look for the security we desire against misunderstandings; and such an improvement of feeling we have no right to expect, save through the increase of knowledge that can only follow upon increased familiarity with the foreigner under conditions of which China herself has no right to complain. A multiplication of points of contact by which the revenue of China will be benefited, while her intercourse with the outer world is enlarged, has appeared to me, in part at all events, to satisfy the requirement to which I attach so much value; and I am not ashamed to admit that, in pressing the terms conceded upon the Chinese Government, I have been actuated by a desire to the full as great for the welfare and independence of this people as for the redress of our own wrongs, major or minor. I feel convinced that the barriers between them and outer nations once away, there will be nothing to hinder the Chinese from becoming in intelligence and strength the equals of the greatest Powers upon earth; and although I should regret that self-interest held any place in connection with this belief, I shall not deny my pleasure in the conviction, equally strong, that our interests here will not be better served than by the development of China to her own advantage.

If my reply to your kind address appears to you long, I can only beg you to accept the excuse that I have not had time to make it shorter. I must repeat that I cannot sufficiently thank you for your kindness, in which I feel the greater pleasure that it has afforded me the opportunity of saying farewell to so many who are either my friends and acquaintance, or who represent the friends and acquaintance with whom, at an earlier period of my connection with China, I have passed many happy hours, I may say happy years. When I look back to the time when the ground around us, now covered by an imposing settlement, was a rushy bank, and when I recall all that has passed, socially and politically, in this locality or in other parts of China where Englishmen have congregated, if I flinch from the word patriarchal, I cannot divest myself of a sort of parochial interest in the well-being of our several communities. I need hardly assure you that each and all have my best wishes for their success in every enterprise in which an Englishman may honestly hope to prosper, and that in your settlement, in particular, I trust that no element of prosperity may be wanting. I bid you all very heartily farewell.

FOOCHOW.

The subjoined items of intelligence are from the Foochow Herald:—

In regard to the late attack on the Catholic Mission near Shao-wu-fu, we are sorry to learn that no adequate compensation has yet been made by the Chinese authorities to the sufferers. This is to be regretted, especially in view of the recent satisfactory settlement of the American claims at Yen ping-fu.

A coolie in the employ of a foreign gentleman was detected the other morning coolly cutting down with a saw the fruit trees in his employer's garden, in order most likely to benefit pecuniarily by the proceeds of his illicit labour. He was caught in the act, and handed over to the local magistrate, who most properly and promptly applied the "graceful bamboo" to the amateur woodcutter's lower extremities to the extent of about one hundred blows, after which he sent him back to his employer, with a message as to whether any more punishment was needed. The gentleman having satisfied himself that the bamboo had been laid on in an efficient manner, declared that justice had been satisfied. The culprit is likely for the future to abstain from his unlawful tree-cutting propensities.

Formosan campaigning does not seem to find much favour with the native troops. At least, we gather from the following little anecdote, the authenticity of which is guaranteed, that military ardour is just now at a very low ebb in this province. The story goes that a few weeks ago Ting Futai ordered a battalion of native drilled troops, about 500 strong, to proceed to Tai Wan-fu. An arsenal gunboat was put in readiness as a transport, and the men received orders to be on board on a particular day; but ere that dreaded day arrived the unquenchable, invincible, and blood-thirsty spirit of the Celestial warriors was extinguished. In short, fully one-half of Ting's hired assassins took it into their heads to march (far from the Formosan aborigines) across country, possibly in search of "Paper-Men" or other imaginary enemies!

Messrs. Westall, Galton and Co.'s Tea Letter, dated 25th November, says:—

During the past week an active business has been passing on this market. Large settlements have been made for London and the Colonies, the buying still being confined to a very limited number of operators. Congou: 15,265 chests are reported as settled, but it is rumoured that in addition to this large purchases of common Saryunes, and up-country Teas have been made. Prices for all grades have gradually hardened, and with the rise in exchange the laying down cost, is now materially enhanced. Souchong: Prices remain the same. Oolong: Only one small parcel has changed hands. Flowery Pekoe: No transactions to report. Scented Teas: The remaining stock has been taken at about late rates. The Export to Great Britain and the Continent of Europe amounts to 46,514,950 lbs. (including 1,126,350 lbs per s.s. Sarpedon, lost), against 55,612,525 lbs. To the Colonies 14,895,123 lbs., against 14,112,753 lbs. To America 436,962 lbs., against 974,665 lbs. at same period last year.

HONG KONG.

The present mail brings dates from the above port to the 30th November. The papers, however, contain little local news of interest. The case of Mr. Gillies, who has been charged with the manslaughter of a Chinaman, whom he struck, and who it appeared afterwards had a greatly enlarged spleen, was to come on at a special session of the Supreme Court on the 30th November.

The Daily Press states that the reported affray with the salt junks by the Chinese revenue cruiser Peng-chou-hai appears to have been a fact, but the occurrence happened in the Cap-sing-moon Pass. The Peng-chou-hai seeing the junks working up the Pass close in shore, went to ascertain the reason, when suddenly all the junks opened fire upon the Peng-chou-hai. The junk people seeing resistance useless, ran their junks ashore, landed with their guns, and having fitted up some rude batteries on shore, poured an incessant fire on to the Peng-chou-hai. Three shots struck her; one went through the awning, another fell short down the skylight, and did damage to the boilers, and another struck one of her guns just as it was being primed, nearly killing the gunner. Matters at one time looked serious, and it proved no easy task to dislodge the junk people. There is a rumour current that the Peng-chou hai took forcible possession of six salt junks very near to Green Island. The junks, it is said, left Yow-mah-tee for the West Coast, and as the officers and crew of the Peng-chou-hai attempted to board them the junk people offered a vigorous resistance, and did considerable damage to the Peng-chou-hai's sides. The junks were, however, finally overpowered, when their crews took to boats, while some jumped into the sea. The deserted junks were taken possession of by the Peng-chou-hai. The junk people dispersed—some being severely wounded—to their different homes at Yow-mah-tee and West Point. The fact of these wounded people being there got to the knowledge of the police, and it appears that the circumstances are now being investigated by the authorities, as it is alleged the affair took place in British waters.

The steamship Leonor, which has arrived in Hong Kong, when in the Formosa Channel ran down the American three-masted schooner Francis Lewey and sank her. It is rumoured that three Europeans were drowned. The captain, however, came down in the steamship Leonor. There will be a Court of Inquiry into the circumstances of the collision some time during the week, when the particulars will be made public.

On the 29th November quite an exciting race took place between a crew of six of H.M.S Fly and six of the U.S.S. Kearsarge. The course was a mile and a half, starting from the Kearsarge, east, and was very well pulled by both sides. The Fly's boat kept ahead all the way from Kellet's Island, and a they passed the crews of the Flying Squadron gave them loud cheers. The boat of the Fly came in thirty strokes ahead of that of the Kearsarge.

COCHIN CHINA.

SAIGON.

Some discussion has taken place with reference to the reduction of the expenses of the Municipal Government of Saigon, which it seems amount altogether to f.30.100. The Independant, after reviewing the facts connected with this matter, maintains that it is impossible to effect any reductions, and holds that if when all are at their post some employés have a little leisure, that is no reason for making reductions. Some account must also be taken of illnesses and forced absences, and the public must not run the risk of seeing its service paralysed simply by one of those maladies which are too frequent in Cochin China.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

—o—

SINGAPORE.

The present French mail brings advices from this port to the 6th December; the French mail from London Nov. 3 was received on the 3rd December. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times:—

A meeting of the Legislative Council was held on the 1st Dec. The Colonial Secretary brought in a Bill to repeal Ordinance No. V. of 1876, the object being to bring the Indian Immigrants' Protection Ordinance, No. 1 of 1876, in to operation at Penang forthwith. The purport of the Ordinance, which it was sought to repeal, was to postpone the coming into operation of Ordinance No. 1, because it was found that there was no means of appointing a Protector, the law not being clear as to whether the Protector was to be appointed by this or the Madras Government, and the Government of India having stepped in and claimed to make the appointment themselves. However, this difficulty had now been got over by the appointment of Capt. Hatchell by this Government receiving the concurrence both of the Government of India and the Government of Madras. But while Ordinance No. V. gave the Governor in Council power to bring the law into operation in all three Settlements at once, it gave no power to bring it into operation in one Settlement only. Now, since the passing of the Ordinance, the sanction of the Home Government had been obtained to make it applicable to Penang and Province Wellesley only, they having recognised that it had really no reference to Singapore and Malacca, and would be only an encumbrance; hence a special Ordinance was necessary to bring it into operation in Penang. The standing orders were suspended, and the Bill was read a second and third time, and passed. Mr. Adamson gave notice of his intention to ask the Government what course is being adopted by Government towards those Chiefs of Perak said to be implicated in the murder of the late Resident, or in matters arising out of the late disturbances. Mr. Read gave notice of his intention to ask the Government what grounds they entertain for thinking that the proposals made by a minority of the Chiefs of the Negri Sembilan, and accepted by the Government, will satisfy the country.

The steamer Bangkok, with his Highness Somdetch Chao Phya Sri Surowongse, Regent of Siam, Phya Appet as first Siamese Secretary, Phra Amaraweesie Suradeth (Nai Toh) as second Siamese Secretary, Capt. J. Bush, Master Attendant and Harbour Master of the Siamese Government, and six Siamese noblemen, arrived here on the 3rd inst. on their way to the Delhi Durbar. On the steamer, which was accompanied by a Siamese man-of-war (the Coronation), being signalled, Captain Ellis at once proceeded to Johnston's Pier, and sent intimation of the arrival to Mr. Douglas, the Colonial Secretary, and Captain Patton, A.D.C. to his Excellency, who attended shortly afterwards, and left on board the Master Attendant's steam yacht for the steamer, to welcome his Highness, when it was arranged that the Royal party should land next morning at Johnston's pier. Accordingly the Colonial Secretary (Mr. Douglas), the Auditor-General (Mr. C. J. Irving), the commanders of the Juno and the Magpie, the various heads of departments, the unofficial members of Council, and a number of the residents were present. A guard of honour of the 80th Regiment, under the command of Lieutenant Johnson, and the band, with Queen's colours, was on the spot to receive his Highness. A salute was fired from Fort Canning, and was returned by the Siamese man-of-war in the harbour. After receiving the salutations of the party assembled his Highness and party were escorted to the house in the Beach-road, the property of the King of Siam, where they have taken up their residence.

On the 4th Dec. the Regent and his suite visited the Governor at Government House, and the same afternoon his Excellency, attended by Captain Paton, A.D.C., returned the visit, when he was received at the residence of his Highness in Beach-road by a guard of honour, composed of Siamese soldiers, the band upon the arrival and departure of his Excellency playing the National Anthem. On the 5th Dec. his Highness and party visited the Telegraph-office, Fort Canning, Tanjong Pagar Wharf, and the new harbour. A full dress State dinner was given at Government House in the evening, in honour of the distinguished visitors, to which official and non-official members of the Legislative Council and the various Consuls were invited. The Regent and party embarked on board the Bangkok for Calcutta next day. A guard of honour of the 80th Regiment, with Queen's colours and band, was stationed at Johnston's pier, and the heads of departments and the unofficial members of Council were present.

We understand Mr. Vaughan has been retained by the Government to defend Maharajah Lela, his followers, and Datu Sagor, who are charged with complicity in the murder of Mr. Birch. The trial is to be held in Larut, before a Native Court, and the proceedings are to be conducted in the Malay language. No restrictions have been placed upon counsel. Mr. Swettenham and Mr. Talbot will be present to render the Government assistance during the trial. The colonial steamer Pluto will convey Mr. Vaughan and the accused, with some witnesses both for prosecution and defence, to Larut.

It is satisfactory to be in the position to announce that for the first time for many months our telegraphic communications are now complete. The company have had, no doubt, to bear considerable losses during that period, and we must do the superintendent and chief electrician here the justice of stating that every endeavour to meet the difficulties of the situation was made by them during the anxious period.

The Government Gazette Extraordinary notifies that the Governor has been pleased to appoint Mr. Daniel Logan, Solicitor General, to act as Presiding Judge of the Supreme Court at Penang until further orders.

The Diario de Manila of the 18th Nov. expresses lively satisfaction with the decree of the Governor General of the Philippines, whereby Sooloo is declared to be a free port, and also states that the Madrid Government will assuredly not delay in approving of that measure.

Senor Cervera, the Governor of Sooloo, has left that island for Europe, on account of ill health, after appointing Colonel Bremon his successor.

Tea and the Tea Trade. By REGINALD HANSON, M.A., F.S.A. London: Whitehead, Morris, and Lowe, Fenchurch-street, E.C. —This little work is a reproduction of articles which have appeared in the author's Trade Circular from time to time, and which are now offered to the public in a more permanent form. We have already noticed the articles as they came out, and recommend the pamphlet to those who desire to acquire a practical knowledge of the tea trade and its workings. The first chapter of the book, which gives, in a succinct form, a history of the introduction of tea into Europe, is of very great interest. It seems that the first reference extant to the article is to be found in a letter written in 1615 by a Mr. Wickham, an Englishman, and agent for the East India Company at Firando, Japan, who writes to a Mr. Eaton at Miako, asking for a pot of the best chaw. No notice, however, of China tea is to be found in any of the Company's records of this date, published under the direction of the Master of the Rolls, and the above letter (quoted by Murray in 1836) is not now extant, and was probably destroyed, as the author knows from personal research at the India-office, "some tons of useless documents" were, in 1858, when the government was transferred from the Company to the Crown. Within a few years of this time tea had become generally known and popular in London, as is shown by the following advertisement which appeared in the Mercurius Politicus and the Gazette of September 23rd, 1658. "That excellent and by all physitians approved China drink, called by the Chinese Toha, by other nations Tay alias Tee, is sold at the Sultaness Head, a coffee house in Sweeting's Rents, by the Royal Exchange, London." One of the most useful features of the pamphlet under notice is a table giving the total deliveries and exports from 1711 to the present time. The description of the tea plant and the map showing the districts in which the teas are grown have already been noticed, and form also a very valuable portion of the little work under notice. We must not omit also to say a word in favour of the illustrations, which are truthful and telling.

Macmillan's Magazine for January has a powerfully written article by Goldwin Smith on the "Ascent of Man," an article entitled "Universities and Universities," by Lyon Playfair, and other matters of interest, including "Two Sonnets, by two Sisters," which are of marked excellence.

Belgravia for the present month contains a good description of a Japanese holiday, from the pen of Mr. H. F. Abell.

LONDON: MONDAY, JAN. 8, 1877.

THE "C. O. WHITMORE" CASE.

FEW would have imagined when the difficulty with our Government, which resulted in the suspension of the Ashburnham Extradition Treaty with the United States occurred, that the first effects of this unfortunate misunderstanding would be felt, not in America or in England, but in a small Colony, which, though it is of great commercial importance, absorbs, as a rule, but very little public attention in either of those countries. A startling case which has arisen in Hong Kong has, however, called prominent attention to the sad results which would become general from that cause, if it continued to exist. An application was made to D. H. BAILEY, Esq., the United States Consul in that Colony, by the crew of the American ship C. O. Whitmore, for discharge from the ship, and compensation in the form of three months' wages (as allowed in such cases by American law), on the ground of cruelty exerted against them, and in the course of this inquiry it appeared, upon undoubted evidence, that Captain PEABODY and his mate, one SNOW, had been guilty of the most revolting brutality against a seaman named ELWOOD, and had, in the deliberate opinion of the Consul, caused his death; but, unfortunately, the Ashburton Treaty being inoperative, the United States Consul, while deeply deploring the position in which he was placed, was unable to send the men home for trial, and the result of the investigation was simply that the other members of the crew were released, and that the captain had to pay the three months' wages in compensation to the men so discharged.

The matter caused so much indignation in Hong Kong that a public meeting was held, when, with an amount of temperance which does them great credit, the affair was discussed, and resolutions passed asking Sir ARTHUR KENNEDY, the Governor, to lay the matter before the Home Government, in order that all possible steps may be taken to bring the men to justice. The Governor expressed his approval of the proceedings, and, we are glad to notice, was able to state in reply that the case had already been represented to the authorities at the Colonial-office; and we trust most sincerely that some means may yet be found to prevent the perpetrators of one of the most awful deeds that has ever been recorded escaping the punishment which they justly merit. The cruelties which the unfortunate man ELWOOD suffered go beyond the range of the wildest imagination. It would be impossible to give all the revolting details in a public journal, and we prefer to state them as they were set forth in a very eloquent speech by Mr. GRANVILLE SHARPE, one of the speakers at the meeting above alluded to. "CHARLES READE," he says, "in 'Never Too Late to Mend,' represents the earnest "chaplain of a gaol voluntarily undergoing in a dark cell "solitary confinement for twenty-four hours that he might "know what it was. Would anyone like to sit astride "with his whole weight upon a knifeboard, to know what "ELWOOD suffered when astride the boat keel? The Crown "Solicitor told me he could not bear it for two minutes, "and this in a smooth sea, and the ship at anchor. "Then to be struck on that tender part, the spine, so as to "be doubled up for a fortnight. But his mind gave way "and his courage failed at last. He is dragged out upon "the deck, and, though not yet dead, is washed by no "tender hands, as if for burial. His low moan 'Oh! Oh! "Oh!' is the only remonstrance. The mind is gone, and "after this, during the few lucid moments, the wail is "uttered, 'My child, my child, my child,' and JAMES H. "ELWOOD is no more." The American Consul in Hong Kong expressed his opinion that the act amounted undoubtedly to murder; and whether this opinion is technically correct or not there is no doubt a prima facie case, and that Captain PEABODY would be certainly indicted for murder either in America or in England. It is sincerely to be hoped, therefore, that steps will be taken, if they have not been adopted already, to bring the delinquents to justice. According to last telegraphic advices from the United States, a seasonable act of courtesy on the part of the Canadian Government in rendering up an American forger has caused the United States Government to declare that they will continue to act in conformity with the Ashburton Extradition Treaty, and the difficulty which stood in the way of prosecuting the men concerned in the outrage on the C. O. Whitmore is now removed. It is to be hoped that the short time that Treaty was suspended will not have allowed the escape of the perpetrators of one of the worst atrocities which has ever come to light.

THE PROPOSED NEW COMPANY'S ORDINANCE FOR HONG KONG.

IT is certainly, as was observed by Chief Justice SMALE, something very unusual to find that an Ordinance, for the purpose of altering the law with respect to Joint-Stock Companies in Hong Kong, which was condemned in principle some months back, should have again been brought before the Council, though somewhat modified in form; and we think the Colony may be congratulated for the decided manner in which Sir JOHN SMALE expressed his views on the subject, and thus prevented the passage of a measure which there can be little doubt would have been detrimental to the best commercial interests of that place. The chief effects of the proposed Bill would have been to introduce the principle of limited liability and to make it possible to reduce the amount of shares of companies already existing. To both these measures Chief Justice SMALE raised some very strong objections when the original measure was introduced, and in commenting upon the subject at the time we fully endorsed the views which he put forward. It would, undoubtedly, be very hazardous to introduce a principle so liable to abuse as that of limited liability into a Colony such as Hong Kong. The effect of doing so would be to create a company-floating mania, and there can be little question that a vast number of doubtful and unsound enterprises would be set on foot in consequence. Against the introduction of a measure which would admit of companies already formed reducing the denomination of their shares, reasons almost equally valid exist, the most obvious of which is that such a course would have the effect of causing such companies to be composed of people of very different standing and responsibility from those of whom they at present consist. On both these grounds it is a subject of congratulation that the last effort to pass this measure was not more successful than the first, and we can only again express our surprise that a second attempt at doing so should be made so soon after the first essay had proved abortive.

THE Shanghai Community have performed a graceful act in presenting to Sir THOMAS WADE a farewell address on his departure from China; and the reply which H.E. gave is in equally good taste and feeling. The views of Sir THOMAS WADE have not always been acceptable to the foreign communities in China, and they have not hesitated to express their ideas upon this point with freedom; but they have always felt full confidence in Sir THOMAS WADE'S rectitude of purpose, and all who know his career will agree that they were fully justified in that trust. To some extent also the address which has been presented is indicative of a change in the somewhat too aggressive ideas which were in old times common among the mercantile residents in China; and upon this ground, if no other, its presentation is a subject of congratulation, and will close the mouths of the numerous persons at home who are inclined to attribute to the present generation of foreigners in China feelings and ideas which belong to the past, and which in their day, were, if not justifiable, at least excusable. Sir THOMAS WADE arrived in London on Thursday last.

BY the mail just arrived we have received a copy of the valuable reports issued by the medical gentlemen to the Chinese Customs Service. They embrace the half year ending March 31, 1876. Upon the whole, the health of the various foreign communities has been good during that period. During October and the early part of November a mild epidemic of cholera passed over Shanghai, but it proved fortunately of very short duration. At Kelung, in Formosa, there were some severe cases of diarrhœa, which were attributed mainly to the malaria from the swampy paddy fields. In most cases a trip to the seaside caused the case to terminate favourably in a day or two.

WE give elsewhere some valuable particulars concerning the condition of the Chinese in Peru, which are furnished by Mr. Consul NUGENT in his last Report to the Foreign-office. It is to be hoped that under the new treaty between China and that country arrangements may be made to do away with the abuses complained of, and to afford protection to the Chinese. There has, no doubt, in some instances, been exaggeration on the subject, but, on the other hand, it is equally clear that in many instances the unfortunate Chinese labourers are very hardly treated.

WITH reference to the question of the Home Government setting on foot a scheme to provide Student Interpreters for Chinese, for the Straits and Hong Kong, which the Governor of Singapore recently stated had been referred by him to the home authorities, we learn that several suggestions have been made to the Government with this object, but that as yet nothing definite has been decided upon.

IT is not yet known when H.E. POPE HENNESSY, the governor-designate for Hong Kong, will take his departure. We understand that he has obtained "extra leave," so that, although he has arrived from the West Indies, it may be some time before he takes his departure for his new post.

THE OPIUM TRADE.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,— Your correspondent, "Blue Book," asks me for my authority for stating that "it has been shown conclusively that Opium smoking has been going on in China for over 130 years, and that, in fact, at that date it was a familiar habit in the country, that is long before foreign Opium was brought to China."

My authority is the Blue-book containing the evidence of the Select Committee on Indian Finance in 1871, where the following evidence by Sir Rutherford Alcock will be found at page 282:—

Have you ever investigated the history of the growth of Opium in China, and do you know how far it can be traced back?—Yes; Mr. Hobson, the Commissioner of Customs at Hankow, obtained some interesting information about that, which I have no reason to doubt is perfectly correct, and it goes far to show that we are more sinned against than sinning in reference to the first introduction of Opium. It existed in Yunnan certainly before the beginning of this century. Mr. Hobson says, "The popular story in Szechuen is, that one hundred years ago Opium was introduced into Szechuen, Shensi, Yunnan, and Kweichou, from India and Thibet. At the time of the introduction it was esteemed for its medicinal properties only; but during Kienlung's reign it was discovered to be smokable, and the Szechuen people were among the earliest indulgers." But that the Chinese both cultivated the poppy in one or more provinces, and consumed it to the extent of many thousand piculs annually, long before there was any attempt to import the Indian drug, seems more than probable. We are responsible therefore, to the extent of dealing in it and promoting its production in our Indian territories for the profit of the revenue during this century; but they certainly had it before, because in the latest edition of the "General History of the Southern Province of Yunnan," which was revised and republished in the first year of Kienlung's reign (A.D. 1736), Opium is noted as a common product of Yung Changfoo. Now as Mr. Hobson, the Acting Commissioner, well remarks, if 134 years ago so much Opium was produced as to deserve notice in such a work as the one I refer to, it may be safely asserted that the production could be no novelty to the Chinese population at the beginning of the present century, when we first began to import it in small quantities.

With the evidence of Mr. Hobson (a gentleman, be it observed, in the employ of the Chinese Government) and of Sir Rutherford Alcock, whose predilections have always been in favour of doing full justice to the Chinese before me, I do not attach so much importance as your correspondent does to what is said by "our old friend Robinson Crusoe;" but I may perhaps be permitted to observe that so far as the fact of Defoe's knowing that the Portuguese traded in Opium with China before 1719 has any bearing on the question of the moral responsibility attaching to our trading in the article, it is entirely in favour of the position taken by Sir Rutherford Alcock and Mr. Commissioner Hobson, and followed by myself. If the Portuguese found it worth while to ship an expensive article like Opium to China before 1719, it is evident that the article must have been familiar to the Chinese before that date. I was content with showing that this was the fact 130 years ago; and am quite willing to accept your correspondent's correction, which shows that instead of 130 years I should have stated at least 157 years.—Your obedient servant,

AN OLD CHINA RESIDENT.

THE CHINESE IN PERU.

During the five years ending 1874 46,190 Chinese coolies embarked in China for Callao, of whom only 43,143 reached that port, the remainder having died on the voyage. By far the larger proportion went in the first four years of that period, the number who embarked for Callao in 1874 having been only 3,939. Ninety-three vessels were engaged in this trade, of which only twenty-four were Peruvian. The rest sailed under the French, Dutch, and Portuguese flags. Taking the average cost of each of these Chinamen's eight years' service in Peru at $340, it shows there was a capital of 14,500,000 soles employed in the plantations and sugar estates of Peru. Mr. Consul Nugent, in his last report to the Foreign-office, says:—"It is not very long since a telegram was received at Lima announcing the ratification of the Treaty between Peru and China relative to Chinese emigration, and stating that arrangements were being made to carry its provisions into effect. It will be some time, however, before these arrangements bring about the desired movement. The Chinese commissioner who lately visited Peru to inquire into the condition of his countrymen was so convinced of the ill-treatment to which they were subjected at the hands of some of their employers, that in a letter I have seen addressed by him to a friend in Lima he says:—'The Chinese Government undoubtedly will send a duly accredited commissioner to Peru some time next year to institute a rigid investigation into the treatment of Chinese before it permits free emigration to take place.' . . . Efforts have been made by the Peruvian Government to afford protection to these people, but, notwithstanding, their condition as a rule is far from satisfactory. In the first place, the isolation of some of the haciendas is such that the coolie is entirely at the mercy of his master. This master, or his overseer, may be a conscientious and humane person, or he may be the contrary. In the latter case, if the coolie runs away he will either starve in the surrounding wilderness, or—which may be considered quite as bad—be recaptured and punished in a way which he may not survive to tell. Many of these Chinamen are engaged in the guano deposits, and from personal knowledge I can state that their lot in those dreary spots is a most unhappy one. Besides being worked almost to death they have neither sufficient food nor passably wholesome water. Their rations consist of 2 lb. of rice and about ½ lb. of meat. This is generally served out to them between ten and eleven in the morning, by which time they have got through six hours' work. Each man is compelled to clear from four to five tons of guano a day. During the last quarter of 1875 it is reported that there were 355 Chinamen employed at Pabellon de Pica alone, of whom no less than ninety-eight were in the hospital. The general sickness is swelled legs, caused, it is supposed, by drinking condensed water not sufficiently cooled, and lack of vegetable diet. The features of this disease are not unlike those of scurvy or purpura. It is often said that the advancement of Peru depends upon the importation of Chinamen, as they alone, it is alleged, are able to withstand the climate whilst engaged in agricultural pursuits. This, I think, is an error which would be soon dispelled were the inhabitants obliged to labour for their support, instead of depending either directly or indirectly on their rich guano and nitrate deposits, and on the cheap and hitherto easily obtained Asiatic labour. Little besides guano, nitrate, and sugar is exported from Peru, and yet the country is eminently suited for the production of other articles. The soil remains uncultivated, and the vast mineral treasures which it is well known to possess lie undeveloped. Had not the importation of Chinamen at the outset received such decided support from the Government the question of colonisation in Peru would ere this have been solved. Of the numerous Italian immigrants attracted hither by the glowing description of the richness of the country very few become cultivators of the soil. Most of them concentrate in towns and become storekeepers. This is due in a great measure to the little encouragement given them by the large landowners of Peru, who, instead of stimulating immigrants to develop the latent resources of the soil by distributing the surplus among immigrants to work it on their own account, receiving a portion of the produce in payment or acknowledgment of their ownership' allow it to remain fallow, confining their attention to such area only as the number of their imported Chinamen will allow."

HAMBURG, JAN. 2.

The German proverb "Severe masters don't govern long" has never been better exemplified than by the changes of the present winter. After a rigorous frost, the thermometer falling as low as 20 deg. below zero, the wind turned suddenly round to the westward, and, as was anticipated, brought very mild weather, with rain, thus effecting a difference in the temperature of no less than 17 deg. in a single night. As the mild weather continues, the river, owing to the exertions of the many steamers trading between Hamburg and England, &c., and the labours of the icebreaker, is again open, at least for steamers. Unfortunately, the ice did not disappear without causing some mischief. The English steamship Westmoreland, trading between Hamburg and Liverpool, and carrying a very valuable cargo, was driven on a bank in the lower river by the pressure of the ice, and was for some time in a dangerous position. The casualty has, however, proved to be less serious than was at first anticipated. The steamer was towed off last night from the bank by three tugs, and to-day was towed up here. The vessel has suffered much, but the cargo is undamaged. The steamer Iceland, also trading between here and Liverpool, and which was stranded on the coast of Holland, has not yet been floated, and perhaps never may. The cargo of this vessel being a very valuable one, the Hamburg insurers have despatched one of their most active and energetic men to the spot, to look after the interests of all concerned.

The Hamburg American Steamship Company has sustained another very important loss. The steamship Goethe, a splendid vessel, only a few years old, and the largest and the fastest of the company's ships, recently despatched on a voyage to the Brazils and La Plata, has been totally lost on the small island of Lobos, at the entrance of the La Plata River. It is extraordinary how this disaster could have happened, as the fairway in the vicinity of the spot is many miles wide, and it is the opinion of many old sailors that it would have given great trouble to the captain to put his ship on shore at the place if he had been ordered to do so. The Goethe was built in 1874 by Messrs. R. Napier and Sons, on the Clyde, was of 3,400 tons burthen, and was furnished with engines of 600 indicated horse power. The steamer originally belonged to the then existing German Transatlantic Company, and being the first vessel built for their line was fitted out in a most superb style. The original price of the steamer was £112,000, and she was insured partly in Hamburg and partly at Paris to the amount of £65,000, a further risk of £25,000 being run by the company itself. It will be remembered that the Germania steamship was wrecked at Bahia only a few months ago, so this is the second great loss sustained by the company within the last six months. Adding thereto the cost of the Franconia-Strathclyde case it is evident that the balance-sheet for the present year will not be very satisfactory to the shareholders, who, perhaps, might do very well at the next general meeting to inquire a little into the management of the company, more especially as regards the appointment and promotion of officers.

Some days ago our citizens were very much excited by a rumour being spread that the City Hospital, a very large building, which generally contains many hundreds of patients, was on fire, and that 200 of the poor sick people had perished. Fortunately the actual event proved far less disastrous than the report. The washing establishment belonging to the hospital, but a separate building, containing, besides the washing implements, &c., all the fuel for the winter, was burned to the ground. Only one person was killed, a young woman, who could not be restrained from trying to save her clothes and valuables from the burning building, and thus perished. Her body was found underneath the ruins the next day.

The consumption of German coal in Hamburg has developed itself during the past year to a considerable extent. In 1875 only sixty million kilos. came to Hamburg, but in 1876 the amount of local consumption arrived here by the Köln Mindener Railway reached 104 million kilos., or nearly double the quantity received in the preceding year. All great steamer companies trading from Hamburg use German fuel, and will continue to do so in future, as long as the quality of our coal continues to be of the same excellence. The whole quantity sent in 1876 viâ Hamburg to Lubeck, Berlin, &c., amounts to 136,880,000 kilos.

The railway from Cuxhaven to Hamburg will no longer remain a project only, the board of the Cuxhaven Railroad Company having made an arrangement with the Société Générale, according to which the latter Company will begin the construction of the railway in the course of the current year. The inhabitants of the districts through which the line will pass have been asked to assist in providing the funds, as I wrote in one of my former letters, and have responded to this appeal by a subscription of m.3,175,000 for preference shares. These inhabitants will receive the greatest benefit from the construction of the railway, as they will be enabled to send their agricultural produce to our market in a very easy way. Whether the traffic will be sufficient to give a profit upon the invested capital time alone will show.

In consequence of the holidays and the approaching new year our Produce market during the past week has been in a most inanimate state, transactions being of no importance. Quotations are nominal.

SHIPPING.

In consequence of the already mentioned ice-impediments in the river, our communication with abroad during the last week has been confined to iron steamers, with the exception of a few iron sailing vessels. The arrivals from the sea have had to take refuge in the harbour at Cuxhaven, which at present is crowded with vessels. But as this afternoon river craft are to be seen sailing up, no doubt to-morrow a large fleet of Transatlantic vessels will be towed up to the city. From the Far East no arrivals have taken place; and of departures only the Hesperia, s.s. is to be mentioned, which, under command of Captain Johannsen, with a full cargo of general merchandise, has left for the usual route to Singapore, &c. On the berth are, besides a steamer of the German Steamship Company, the Peri, Luehrs, for Penang, Singapore, &c.; Johann Friedrich, Kroenke, for Singapore direct; Batavia, Corlens, for Hong Kong, and Woodhall, Low, for same destination, via Antwerp.

HOLLAND.

AMSTERDAM, JAN. 3.

The Members of the First Chamber have left the Hague, after having passed the Budget of "Ways and Means." They will meet again in a few days to deal with the other chapters of the Budget. The great controversy about the lower-class Education Bill has begun. Opinions differ greatly. The leading papers of the Liberal party are by no means satisfied, except the Handelsblad. The Dagblad, a Conservative organ, is most discontented, and the Clerical papers are, of course, anything but satisfied. The concessions which are made to win over opponents are by no means satisfactory. Mr. Heemskerk tried to please the Ultramontanes by abolishing a "more extended lower-class instruction," and the Orthodox Protestants by proposing that no lower-class instruction should be given gratis. Both parties, however, are still dissatisfied, and it will be found necessary to alter the very principle of the Bill if the Minister wishes it to be carried. As the measure now stands there is not the least chance of its being accepted, and perhaps the Bill of Mr. Moens will be preferred. In the meanwhile, Mr. Heemskerk is very busy in framing a middle-class Education Law and a Reform Bill. If Parliament is inclined to work much may be done in this Session, but I fear that the result will fall far short of the anticipations.

I hear that the "sugar-conference" is not at all likely to give a definitive result. The invitations, addressed to the Austrian, German and Italian Governments to attend the new conference, have been answered in the negative. In the last days of this month the representatives of the French, English, Belgian and Dutch Governments will meet again at Paris, in order to try to come to an agreement; but the most probable result will be that they will once more leave the French capital without having settled the question.

The King arrived on the 31st December from his seat "het Loo," in the Hague, in order to hold his New Year's Day reception. Yesterday he again left the Royal residency. The rumours that the Prince of Orange would return from Paris are most positively contradicted.

A good deal of notice is being taken by the newspapers about the dispute between the ex-Minister of the Colonial Department, Mr. Van Goltstein, and Messrs Van Swieten and De Rochemont. The general opinion is that the protests of the latter against the accusation of Mr. Van Goltstein are of no avail, and that the ex-Minister has "struck the nail on the head," as the proverb says. It is curious to see how Messrs. Swieten and De Rochemont try over and over again to whitewash themselves; but in vain. They cannot undo what they have done to involve us in that unhappy war with Atjeh.

According to a statistical note about our shipping trade during 1876, 979 vessels arrived at Amsterdam, and 812 vessels sailed.

AMSTERDAM, JAN. 4.

Within a few days a Royal decree will be published, stipulating that no officers belonging to the Home army are to be sent to Java. This measure will be taken in order to increase the promotion of subaltern officers.

The frosty weather has given way to a very mild temperature, accompanied by severe storms of wind and rain. The shipping trade has re-opened, but in consequence of the holidays business has been very limited. There is no demand for Colonial Produce, except for direct wants. Prices remain very firm, and trade looks very healthy.

Monetary and Commercial.

The following are the latest quotations of Banking and other Companies connected with the Far East:—Agra Bank, 10 to 10¼; Chartered Bank of India, 18½ to 19½; Chartered Mercantile Bank, 28 to 29; Comptoir D'Escompte, f.672½; Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank, 31 to 32; Oriental Bank, 45 to 46; P. and O. Company, 36 to 38; Messageries Maritimes, f.615; Suez Canal, f.685; Japan Loan 9 per cent., 108 to 111; ditto, 7 per cent., 101 to 103.

In the Produce Markets business has scarcely yet recovered from the quietude incidental to the Christmas and New Year holidays, but a steady tone is maintained, and in regard to some articles an improvement has occurred. There has been more inquiry for Tea; common Black-leaf Congous are ½d. lower; Scented Capers ½d. dearer. The Silk Market exhibits a steady tone, quotations showing no change from those of last month. Coffee continues to advance, new crop Plantation Ceylon being 2s. to 3s. per cwt. higher. Pepper has also advanced. Rice is firm, and moderately active. Sugar is steady, but the speculative excitement lately observable has disappeared. Tin exhibits a declining tendency. Gambier continues active.

The total quantity of tea delivered from the bonded warehouses in London during the four days of last week, ended with the 30th ult., was 1,484,452lb., of which 978,594lb. was for home consumption, 380,723lb. was removed coastwise, 94,362lb. was exported, 28,385lb. was sent coastwise for exportation, and 2,388lb. was for ships' stores. The duty received in the same period amounted to £24,465. The following were the quantities of the other principal dutiable articles withdrawn for home consumption during the same period: Coffee, 294,904lb.; cocoa, 14,387lb.; tobacco, 214,886lb.; cigars, 3,375lb.; tea, 1,136,711lb.; wine, 79,150 gallons; brandy, 20,636 gallons; and rum, 16,355 gallons.

Tenders for £350,000 in bills and telegrams on India were received on the 3rd inst. at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were:—To Calcutta, £289,000, average rate 1s. 10·08d.; and to Bombay, £61,000, average rate 1s. 10·112d. Tenders on Calcutta, at 1s. 9⅞d. for bills, and Bombay, 1s. 9 15-16d. for telegrams, will receive about 38 per cent., above in full. Compared with last week's allotment the above rates show an advance of rather more than 1½ per cent.

The directors of the London and Westminster Bank have resolved to declare a dividend of 7 per cent. for the half-year ending December 31, 1876, on the paid-up capital of £2,000,000. This will, with the previous dividend, make 14 per cent. for the year 1876, as against 12 per cent. for 1875. The rest or surplus fund will then stand at £770,465.

The Union Bank of London, at the half-yearly meeting to be held on the 10th inst., will declare a dividend at the rate of 12½ per cent. per annum, carrying forward a balance of £10,100 for appropriation at the end of the financial year on the 30th of June next. The dividend paid at the corresponding period of last year was at the rate of 15 per cent. per annum.

At the ensuing general meeting of the Alliance Bank (Limited) the directors will recommend a dividend for the past half year at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, with an addition of £5,000 to the reserve fund (of which £3,460 arises from the further realisations of the assets of the old bank). The reserve fund will then stand at £200,000. The dividend at the corresponding period of last year was at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum.

The directors of the City Bank, at the general meeting of shareholders on the 16th inst., will declare a dividend at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum, free of income-tax, and add £10,000 to reserve, which will then amount to £170,000. The dividend at this time last year was at the same rate, but £15,000 was added to reserve.

The directors of the London Joint-Stock Bank announce a dividend and bonus together amounting to £1 5s. 6d. per share, equivalent to 8½ per cent. for the half year ended December 30, making, with 7½ per cent. paid in July last, 16 per cent. for the year. The guarantee fund now stands at £549,770. At this time last year the distribution was 10 per cent., making 17½ per cent. for 1875.

The Imperial Bank (Limited) will declare a dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum. This is against 8 per cent. in the corresponding period of last year.

The directors of the Union Bank of Australia have resolved upon a dividend of £1 15s. per share, and a bonus of 5s., being, together, at the rate of 16 per cent. per annum, being the same rate as in the corresponding period of last year.

The United Discount Corporation (Limited) will declare a dividend of 4s. 2d. per share, free of income-tax (being at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum), adding £5,000 to reserve fund, and carrying forward £8,965 to next half year. This compares with 6 per cent. at the corresponding period of last year.

The directors of the National Discount Company will recommend to the shareholders, at their meeting on the 17th inst., a dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum, free of income-tax, after carrying £10,000 to the reserve fund, out of the profits of the past half-year. This dividend is at the same rate as last year.

The directors of the Ocean Marine Insurance Company recommend the payment of interest of 5s. per share.

A dividend of 5s. per share has been announced by the Universal Marine Insurance Company (Limited), making a total payment for the past year of 10 per cent. A similar announcement was made twelve months ago.

The German Union Telegraph Company of Berlin announce an interim dividend of 12 reichsmarks, which will be distributed here by the German Union Telegraph and Trust Company (Limited) at 11s. 9d. per share.

The Birmingham Joint-Stock Bank has declared a dividend at the rate of 20 per cent. per annum.

The Jorehaut Tea Company announce an interim dividend of 10 per cent., and the directors express a hope that the profits of last year's crop will prove sufficient to enable the annual dividend to be kept at 20 per cent. The total area under cultivation is 3,456 acres, of which 2,545 acres are over three years of age. The quality has been better than previous years, and one-third of the crop has been sold at an average of 2s. 1¼d. per lb. The estimated out-turn was 828,460 lbs., but up to November 30 only 792,000 lbs. had been made, but the difference may be lessened when packing and weighing out the remainder of the crop is done.

The number of failures in the financial, wholesale, and manufacturing branches of trade during 1876 was 2,056, a figure that has only been exceeded since 1865 on two occasions—in 1868 and 1869—when the totals were 2,145 and 2,315 respectively. Of last year's failures 557 were in London, 87 in Liverpool, 128 in Manchester, 90 in other parts of Lancashire, 287 in Yorkshire (excluding Middlesboro' and Hull), 182 in Birmingham and Midland iron district, 86 in Newcastle, Middlesboro', Hull, and district, 90 in Bristol, Cardiff, Newport, and Swansea, 379 in the rest of England, 133 in Scotland, and 37 in Ireland. The following branches of wholesale commerce contributed the number of failures enumerated :—Commission, yarn, &c., agents, 192; boots and shoes, 116; coals, 147; engineers, founders, iron, metal, and hardware merchants and manufacturers, 243; manufacturers and merchants of woollens, worsted, elastics, silk, hosiery, &c., 151; merchants, 216; warehousemen, importers of foreign goods, &c., 136; and wines and spirits, 128.

TEA.

Mr. D. D. Lewin's Market Résumé says :—Business has been remarkably quiet, in part attributable to the extremely wretched weather with which the country has been afflicted, also to the intervention of the Christmas holidays. Our stocks have been considerably increased by late additional arrivals, but as there is little more Tea now to come forward—season 1876-77 being virtually closed—it is not an unreasonable hope that with six months before us to work off present holdings a better feeling may soon be manifested in our market. It will not be out of place to observe here that with regard to China Teas the past has, taking it altogether, been a most unsatisfactory year to all concerned in the trade. On the other hand, Indian Teas have shown fairly good results, and appear to be increasing in public estimation. The home consumption continues to show improving figures; exports, on the contrary, falling off.

Congou.—Black Leafs: Sound to good common being in heavy stock, prices are weak, with a downward tendency; better kinds, up to 1s. 1d., rather neglected; but good medium to fine and finest, ranging from 1s. 2d. to 2s. 2d., being in short supply, are in request. Red Leafs, of all descriptions, are without noticeable change. Scented Teas: Capers show a slight recovery, and grades up to 1s. 3d. are wanted. Orange Pekoes: The same remarks will apply to the common to medium kinds, but fine and finest do not meet with a ready sale. Greens: Recent sales show no material alteration on previous values. Indian Teas: Sales comparatively light, quotations fully maintained. Quotations :—Congou: Black and Red Siftings, 6½d. to 8d. Black Leaf: Fine and finest 1s. 6d. to 2s. 2d. Red Leaf: Low to good common, 8d. to 9½d.; fair to good, 10d. to 1s. 3d.; fine and finest 1s. 4d. to 1s. 10d. Amoy: Fair to fine, 11d. to 1s. 3d. Tayshans: Common, 8d. to 8½d.; fair, 9d. to 1s. 1d.; good to fine, 1s. 2d. to 1s. 8d. Souchong: Low to good common, 10d. to 1s.; fair to medium, 1s. 1d. to 1s. 5d.; fine and finest, 1s. 10d. to 2s. 2d. nominal. Scented Capers: Common to good, 1s. 1d. to 1s. 3d.; fine, 1s. 4d. to 1s. 6d.; finest 1s. 7d. to 2s. 1d. Scented Orange Pekoe: Common to good, 1s. 1d. to 1s. 2d.; fine, 1s. 3d. to 1s. 9d.; and Foochow, 1s. 2d. to 2s. Greens: Gunpowder, 9d. to 3s. 9d. for finest; imperial, 7d. to 1s. 4d.; Hyson 6d. to 2s. 10d. for finest; and Young Hyson, 7d. to 2s.

SILK.

The Silk market is quiet, without alteration in prices. Deliveries 1st to 3rd inst. inclusive :—China, 208 bales ; Canton, 75 ; Japan, 27 ; total, 310 bales.

Messrs. Waithman and Co.'s Circular says :—The year just ended will ever be remarkable in the annals of the Silk trade as one of extraordinary vicissitudes and extreme fluctuations. The course of the market for the first five months, however, may be summed up in but few words, for it was not until it became manifest that the unpropitious weather experienced in the Silk-growing districts of the Continent, during the critical period, had inflicted serious and irremediable injury upon the European crops, that the alarm was taken and the field thrown open to speculation. During the month of January a more general tendency to operate was evinced than had been shown for some time before the close of the previous year, and a fair current business was transacted with gradually stiffening rates ; February was a quiet and inactive month, and prices became easier, but early in March a slight reduction encouraged buyers to operate again, and some large lots were sold for the requirements of consumption ; these satisfied, the market relapsed into a state of inaction, which continued during the whole of April. Up to this time the fluctuations in prices of the various descriptions were insignificant ; in China Silk, best No. 3 Tsatlee had remained at about 18s. 6d. per lb., "Red Peacock" varying from 14s. 3d. to 15s per lb. 4½ and 5 Tsatlee from 13s. 6d. to 14s. and 12s. 9d. to 13s. 3d. per lb. respectively; in Japan Silk, best Maybash varied from 16s. to 17s. 6d., and Medium from 13s. 6d. to 14s. 6d; Cantons were steady at 12s. 6d. to 15s. for superior, and 10s. 6d. to 12s. for ordinary grades; common Bengals had remained almost stationary at 7s. 6d to 9s. 6d., and superior at 10s. 6d. to 12s. 6d. per lb. In May a succession of unfavourable reports as to the progress of the "racolta" caused a demand for the finer descriptions of Bengals and Japans, and in these an advance was established. During the earlier part of June this was well maintained, and towards the end of the month was considerably increased as the movement gained in importance, and extended to other classes of Silk. By the beginning of July the best grades of Japans and Bengals had risen about 4s. per lb, and the medium classes of China about 3s. per lb. from the lowest; then came a moment of great excitement, and immense purchases were made, chiefly for Foreign account, the Home Trade assisting only to a small extent in these operations; the advance made up to this time was speedily outstripped by the rapidity with which in the course of a few days Bengals and Japans shot up 6s. to 7s. per lb. and Chinas about 5s. per lb. It was about this time that (though ultimately falsified) adverse accounts of the China crop were received, thus reinforcing those operators who were speculating on the results likely to emanate from the disasters sustained by the Italian and French crops. During the month of August great buoyancy prevailed, and there was no interruption to the upward course of the market; re-reeled Tsatlees and Hainins, together with Cantons, attracting more attention, as these descriptions had not participated to the full extent in the general advance ; at the latter end of the month some large sales (scarcely more fortunate in their results than on some previous occasions of a similar nature) were made in Japans "to arrive." It was in the month of September that the first check came, and this was speedily recovered, the month closing with a higher rate of prices than had yet been attained ; the total advance was, on China and Canton Silk 70 to 80 per cent., and on Bengal and Japan Silk 100 to 120 per cent. At length came the natural reaction and October saw a cessation of the activity that had so long prevailed, and prices receded to the extent of 1s. to 1s. 6d. per lb. on China, Canton, and Bengal Silk, and 2s. 6d. to 3s. 6d. per lb. on Japans. During the whole of November the market was exceedingly dull, and a further considerable decline took place, attributable in some measure to the unusually large arrivals of Asiatic Silk, and augmented by the threatening aspect of political complications. In the first week of December the lowest point of the reaction was touched, and sales were effected in most classes at about 1s. to 1s. 6d. per lb. under our quotations for the beginning of the month; showing a reduction, as compared with the prices ruling in September, of 3s. 6d. to 4s. 6d. per lb. on Bengals and Chinas, and 2s. 6d. to 3s. 6d. per lb. on Cantons, while Japans had fallen 6s. to 7s. per lb.; a recovery afterwards took place, with an advance of 1s. 6d. to 2s. per lb. on Chinas, and about 4s. per lb. on Japans, but Cantons did not participate in the improvement. Considerable attention has been directed to the large stock at Shanghai, but as this has remained at upwards of 20,000 bales since about the middle of October, and telegrams of 28th December report total exports to date 57,000 bales, it is fair to suppose that a very considerable portion of the stock consists of inferior and undesirable Silk. Private advices to hand confirm this view, as the stock is spoken of as consisting principally of inferior qualities. The total export from all China and Japan, up to the 21st December was—to Great Britain 37,000 bales, and to France and the Continent 50,000 bales. The total deliveries for the year are on a parity with those of 1875.

Messrs. Hogg, Walker, and Co.'s Circular contains the following statement, showing the increase and decrease in stocks, imports, and deliveries as compared with last year.

Messrs. D. O'Donoghue and Co.'s New York Circular, dated Dec. 21, 1876, says :—During the first fortnight of the month under review the condition of the Raw Silk Market remained much the same as last reported, and under the depressing advices received from foreign markets prices eased off somewhat, with but little business doing, even at the lower range ; later advices from London, Lyons, and Shanghai showing a firmness, activity, and buoyancy in those markets quite unusual at this time of the year, have had the effect of checking the downward tendency of prices here, and a slight advance upon the lowest quotations of the month has been established, with a considerable business doing during the past fortnight. Holders generally are firm, particularly for finest and best grades of Silk, which are not abundant.

COFFEE.—Although the market has been closed, so far as public sales are concerned, an active demand has prevailed for low and ordinary qualities, in which a relatively good business has been done, consisting chiefly of resales, and the upward tendency in values has been further prolonged, prices closing 2s. to 3s. higher. Stocks in London are the hightest for a great number of years, and the lateness of new crops contribute to give a strong tone to the market. At the opening of the market yesterday, after the Christmas recess, the public sales went off with animation, at a further advance, making a total of 2s. to 3s. for Plantation Ceylon, 2s. 6d. for Native, and 3s. to 5s. for other kinds. Plantation Ceylon sold, triage at 88s. to 99s., common to fine small at 107s. 6d. to 112s. 6d., low middling at 115s. 6d. to 117s., middling at 117s. 6d. to 120s. 6d., good middling to fine middling bright coloury at 121s. to 122s. 6d., good to fine bold at 123s. to 126s., pea-berry at 120s. to 124s. Native Ceylon sold, garblings at 24s., triage at 85s. 6d., good ordinary at 91s. 6d. to 92s. per cwt. Singapore and other common kinds have been in active request, partly speculative, and prices show a further advance of 1s. to 2s., unpicked Bally closing at 70s., picked ditto at 79s. to 80s.

CHINA PRESERVES.—311 cases China Ginger bought in at 6½d. per lb., Chylong 23s. to 26s. per case.

COCOANUT OIL.—There has been no improvement in the demand, nor any perceptible change in prices, fine Cochin being still obtainable at £41, Ceylon in pipes at £37 15s. per ton.

COTTON.—There has been an active demand, chiefly speculative, and a good business has been done, notwithstanding the holidays, for arrival and for future delivery, closing at an advance of ¼d. to ⅜d. per lb. On the spot prices are only slightly higher.

GAMBIER has continued steady, with a fair business at full rates. On the spot the sales include whole bales at 22s., and for arrival about 800 tons have changed hands, including distant and October to February shipment, at 21s. 9d. to 21s. 10½d., September sailing 21s. 7½d. ex ship.

RICE.—There has not been much inquiry for any description, and sales are small, but holders being firm, prices are unchanged. On the spot 1,100 bags Ballam have been sold at 10s. 6d., 2,000 bags Rangoon, of indirect import, at 9s. 6d., 7,000 bags Moulmein at 10s. 6d., and 2,000 bags Madagascar at 9s. 6 l. The floating cargo, per Pauline, 750 tons Necranzie, off coast, at 10s. 7½d., Liverpool quay terms. About 5,500 tons new crop Burmah have been sold for arrival, February to April shipment, at 9s. 9d. to 9s. 10½d. for Rangoon, closing at the former price.

SPICES.—Cassia Lignea : 154 cases broken bought in at 52s. to 54s. Cloves : 85 bags Amboyna bought in at 1s. 9d. Nutmegs : 7 cases Penang bought in, 117's at 2s. 7d., 85's at 3s. 9d. 1 case 1 box Java sold, 98's at 2s. 8d., 104's at 2s. 5d , 12 cases defective ditto bought in at 2s. 3d. Mace : Of 22 cases 1 box Java 16 cases 1 box sold at about previous rates, pickings at 11s., ordinary at 1s. 6d. to 1s. 9d., chiefly middling to fair at 1s. 11d. to 2s. 3d.

SAGO.—In public sale of 1,459 bags about 1,200 bags sold without decided change in value, fair small at 16s. 6d., good at 17s. to 17s. 3d., fair large at 19s. 6d. to 20s., fine ditto at 21s., medium bought in at 20s

SUGAR.—Since the market reopened on the 2nd inst. a quiet but steady tone has prevailed, and prices show little decided change from those ruling just before the recess. At auction 12,518 bags good brown China (Hong Kong) were bought in at 24s. 6d., and 1,032 bags refined China sold at 33s. 6d. to 34s. 6d. There has been no business in other descriptions of East India sugar.

TAPIOCA.—The large supply of 2,500 bags Singapore went off slowly, and 1,500 bags sold at barely former rates, middling to good at 2¼d. to 2½d., the remainder bought in. good to fine at 2½d. to 3d. 90 barrels Para sold at 4¼d. to 4⅜d., ordinary at 3d. to 3¾d., one lot low at 1½d. Pearl Tapioca :—696 bags met few offers, and being firmly held were bought in, chiefly medium at 19s. 6d. to 20s., small at 19s. 6d.

TIN.—This market has exhibited no animation, and prices have receded. About 290 tons of Straits have been sold at £76 to £75, closing with sellers at £75 10s. cash, at £76 to £74 10s. for arrival.

MANCHESTER GOODS.

Transactions have been of very limited extent. There has been a steady market, a moderate inquiry prevailing for both Yarns and Goods, and where transactions have been completed full rates have been paid, but business is not yet actively resumed. Messrs. John Seltzer and Co.'s Circular says :—

Trade in Manchester during 1876 has had to contend, almost continuously, against adverse influences, and even when the demand was most active prices did not advance here commensurate with the rise in the value of the raw material, so that with rare exceptions spinners and manufacturers have had to complain of unremunerative prices. For some time, also, attempts to establish an increased scale of wages were made by the workpeople; fortunately for them, wiser councils prevailed, and a lock-out was avoided. The Indian markets have again disappointed shippers; occasional symptoms of improvement, which were acted upon at one time very extensively, proved delusive. From China and Japan there have been spurts of inquiry at intervals, and a reaction in the course of exchange in November gave some hopes of better times. This was, however, but of short duration, and the latest accounts report a further relapse. From other markets the inquiry has been of a restricted and fitful nature throughout the year, and buyers have operated with great caution. As in 1875 exchange has told severely against ventures eastward, and indeed to almost all quarters of the globe. Another paralysing influence has been the long-standing difficulty regarding the dispute between Turkey and her tributary States, leading to fears of war, in which this country was likely to be involved. The home demand was generally slack, but in the later months some slight improvement was noticeable. The general tone of the market at the close of the year is strong, and confidence is felt that business henceforward will be more remunerative to manufacturers than has been the case during 1876. A change has again occurred in favour of the better makes of grey cloths. During the first six months of 1876 the inquiry ran almost entirely on the lower qualities, but latterly these have been quite neglected. Medium and best makes have been in steady inquiry, in many cases these show a material advance in value, and production is deeply engaged.

CASUALTIES.

COWES (Isle of Wight.—Dec. 29, the barque Desdemona, of Jersey, Olsen master (rice), for orders, from Akyab, has arrived here leaky in topsides; five stanchions, some bulwarks, and rail gone, boat stove, master injured, and chief mate lost overboard, which occurred on the 14th inst., lat. 24 miles S., long. 96.20 E. Master is of opinion that cargo is damaged, as the vessel had three feet of water in her at one time.

PLYMOUTH.—Dec. 29, the ship Sir Lancelot, Hepburn, arrived here from Yokohama; had heavy weather from Western Islands home; damaged boats, and had sundry other minor damages.

FALMOUTH.—Dec. 31, the Mutlah, Farquhar, arrived here from Ilo Ilo, has lost jibboom, bowsprit, bulwarks, knighthead, and cutwater, and has galley gone and decks swept.

LIVERPOOL.—Jan. 2. the C. P. D. arrived here from Rangoon, in a gale, Dec. 21, in lat. 39 N., long. 19 W., had cargo shifted, vessel strained considerably, and making water.

The Adam Sedgwick, arrived here from Singapore, reports that on the 30th ult., during gale, she shipped a heavy sea, which smashed cabin companion, filling cabin with water, and some going down amongst cargo.

WATERFORD.—Jan. 2, the Onward, from Hong Kong for London, has put into this port with loss of topsailyard and short of provisions.

HAVRE.—Dec. 28, the Red Deer, ship, Ugler, from Java (sugar), arrived here Dec. 20, leaky.

LISBON.—Dec. 26, the Dutch barque Marie, from Batavia for Rotterdam, has put in here leaky.

NEW YORK.—Dec. 30, the Evelyn, barque, Knowles, from Manila (previously reported arrived at Boston), got ashore in entering port, but afterwards got off; damage serious.

The Teviot (str.), Nisbet, from Shanghai, got ashore in entering port, but afterwards came off, and has arrived here; the Shand, Sangster, arrived here from Manila, is leaking badly.

BATAVIA.—Jan. 3, the Christine has been abandoned to the underwriters; 90 tons of cargo saved; further salvage doubtful, on account of bad weather.

MISCELLANEOUS.

St. VINCENT.—Dec. 14, the Rangoon barque, from Rangoon, which put in here Nov. 7, leaky, has been discharged and surveyed. About 100 tons of damaged rice have been thrown into the sea. The ship is severely strained all over, and cargo is being sent home in Austrian barque Grad Zagreb. Surveyors recommend vessel to proceed to a port for repairs.

GIBRALTAR.—Jan. 1, arrived and proceeded, Glengyle (str.), from Amoy for New York.

MAURITIUS.—Dec. 8, the Salsette, from Rangoon, for U.K., which arrived here Sept. 14, has been condemned, and sold for £200. A few stores, boats, &c, have also been sold.

St. HELENA.—Arrived and proceeded, Dec. 7, Osaka, from Hiogo; 8, Golden Spur, from Hong Kong, both for London; Innocenta, from Ilo Ilo, for New York; passed, 9, Chacma, from Sourabaya, for Channel.

CAPE TOWN.—Dec. 5, the claim made by the Cervantes for salvage services rendered to the Batavier, from Rotterdam for Batavia, has been settled, and £700 has been awarded, irrespective of £300 paid to the Gnu tug.

Sailed, Nov. 30, Annie, for Guam; Daniel, for Rangoon; Dec. 4, Vixen, for Guam.

ALGOA BAY.—Sailed, Nov. 28, Mignon, 29, Clara, both for Guam.

LAUNCH.

There was launched on the 1st inst., from Messrs. Barclay, Curle, and Co.'s building yard at Whiteinch, a first class iron sailing ship for Messrs. R. and J. Craig's "County" line of packets. She is named the County of Inverness, and has been built to the highest class at Lloyd's, her principal dimensions being 256 by 38¾ by 23½ feet, and her register tonnage will be about 1,615 tons. She is to be rigged as a full-rigged four-masted ship, and will be fitted with a double screw, as substitutes for lanyards, which have been so successfully introduced into several of the ships lately built by the firm, these and other improvements having been introduced for the purpose of lessening the risk of dismasting.

GENERAL SHIPPING NEWS.

A YEAR'S SHIPBUILDING IN LIVERPOOL.—The general depression of trade during the year has caused a slight diminution in the amount of shipbuilding on the shores of the Mersey. About 37,250 tons of sailing and steam shipping have been turned out from the various workyards. Messrs. Bowdler, Chaffer, and Co., of Seacombe, have launched since January seven vessels, of which four were steamers, the total tonnage being 7,338 tons. Messrs. Laird Brothers, Birkenhead, have launched or completed during the year eight vessels, with a total tonnage of 6,150, of which seven were steamers, including Her Majesty's sloop of war Griffon. The troopship Euphrates has also been refitted and repaired at Messrs. Laird's yard, and the engines of H.M.S. Shannon have been renewed. The yards at the south end of Liverpool had been tolerably busy during the year. Messrs. W. H. Potter and Co. have sent out 8,474 tons in the form of eleven vessels, of which only one was a steamer. In addition to shipbuilding, this firm has done a large amount of forgings, both for its own use and the use of other firms. Messrs. Thomas Royden and Sons have turned out seven vessels, one of which was a steamer, the total tonnage being 7,610. Messrs. R. and J. Evans have built four vessels, one of them a steamer, and the total tonnage 4,918.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT

Mr. J. T. COOPER,

In his celebrated TRAVELS IN CHINA, published in 1871, says:—

"I had with me in my travels a quantity of "Holloway's Ointment. I gave some to the people, "and nothing could exceed their gratitude: and, in "consequence—milk, fowls, butter, and horse-feed "poured in upon us, until at last a teaspoonful of "Ointment was worth a fowl and any quantity of "peas, and the demand became so great that I was "obliged to lock up the small remaining stock."

This fine OINTMENT is invaluable in the cure of BAD LEGS, BAD BREASTS, OLD SORES, wounds, ulcers, gout, rheumatism, and all skin diseases.

Summary of News from the Far East.

YOKOHAMA.

Our advices from this port by the present mail are of only three days' later dates than those received via San Francisco on the 2nd inst. and published in our issue of that date. There is no news of importance. The Occidental and Oriental Company's steamer Oceanic arrived at San Francisco on the 26th ult. with advices extending to the 11th ult. The subjoined summary of news has been telegraphed to New York:—

The largest fire in Tokio since April, 1872, occurred on Nov. 29, commencing just before midnight, and lasting about eight hours. Sixty-five streets, containing 5,000 houses, were totally destroyed. It is believed that fifty lives were lost. The loss of property is estimated at $10,000,000. The residence of the Austrian Minister was burned, and that of the United States Minister narrowly escaped. Prompt and effective measures for the relief of the sufferers, have been taken by the Government. The burned region is being rapidly rebuilt, with the introduction of great improvements.

The Imperial Family will unite at Kioto for the performance of religious ceremonies at their ancestral tombs about the middle of January. The Empress has already arrived there. The Empress Dowager and the Emperor start from Tokio on January 8 and 14 respectively.

Mayebara and eleven other leaders of the recent insurrection were beheaded on December 3. Others were variously punished by imprisonment and deprivation of rank.

A proclamation has been issued declaring free trade between Saghalien and the open ports of Japan, no duties to be exacted until further notice.

Riots have occurred among the farmers of the central provinces, owing to their dissatisfaction with the taxes imposed upon them. The riots have no political significance whatever.

In conformity with an imperial recommendation a school has been established for noble families, to the support of which the Emperor contributes $15,000 yearly.

Regulations have been issued for the importation of opium for medicinal purposes. Hitherto this drug has been entirely secluded from Japan.

Preparations for the annual industrial exposition at Kioto are now rapidly progressing.

NAGASAKI.

The Cosmopolitan Press learns from a Japanese informant that over 180 of the Shizoku of Fukuoka, Akizuki and Kummomoto committed hara kiri. All these were young men above the age of fifteen years, only a few having reached the age of thirty. In one instance that he witnessed of this extraordinary madness the suicide displayed the most unparalleled sang-froid and originality; he seated himself, and grasping his sword at both ends, raising it over his head, with one effort cut his head clean off, which rolled upon the floor.

The Rising Sun says business in Nagasaki is fearfully dull. On all sides there are complaints, and the depression in tea business is something alarming. Indeed, it is understood merchants cannot now realise, except at great sacrifice, and those best informed are the staunchest in prophesying a panic next year. In no former year has the tea trade been so unremunerative, and the prospect of any improvement is very remote.

On the 24th Nov. a fire broke out in the stables attached to the soldiers' temporary quarters at Kumamoto. Two camps were destroyed. The fire originated in the careless use of a lamp by one of the night sentries.

The Japanese are exulting over the agricultural prospects throughout the country. This year's harvest will, according to those best informed, outrival that of any former year.

On the morning of the 17th Nov. there was a short but severe shock of earthquake. It lasted about five seconds.

CHINA.

TIENTSIN.

A correspondent of the North China Herald writes from this port as follows :—

Conflicting accounts have been for some time past coming to our ears concerning the amount of suffering among the country people, or likely to be endured by them during the coming winter. The facts, as gathered by several gentlemen who have been travelling in different parts of the country, seem to be these :—There has been great unevenness in the crops in different localities, varying as the rains have fallen in greater or less abundance. The range of variation in the yield of the autumn crops has been very great—from 3-10ths to 8-10ths, according to the statements of the Chinese. This does not include the wheat crop, which was almost a total failure. The best yield has been from the small millet, the great dependence of the common people. The large millet, or kaoliang, and the Indian corn were attacked while in the milky state by worms, and seriously injured. Beans, cotton, and sweet potatoes fall considerably below the average yield. The people are resorting to all sorts of economical shifts to save their small supply of winter food. Roots and leaves of trees are cooked with the grain, which, in many cases, is not separated from the husks or chaff, and the gravest fears are expressed as to the amount of suffering the winter is likely to witness. In some sections the young men are said to be going away in search of something to do and to eat, leaving the little grown for those who cannot go. Many are seeking employment and reduced to beggary on the streets of Tientsin.

It was stated some time ago that Mr. Tong King-sing had been deputed to visit the coal mines near Tientsin. The exploring party have returned, satisfied apparently that the mines can be worked with good results. We hope the Government will be persuaded to take steps to develop them.

Floating ice was reported on the 20th Nov., in the neighbourhood of Taku, and a north-easter is looked for as a possible contingency at any moment.

HANKOW.

A correspondent of the Shanghai Courier writes from this port as follows :—

A week since the premises of the French Consulate at this port were broken into by thieves, and the servants' quarters were robbed of nearly all the clothing, &c., belonging to the house-boy and his family. It was a daring piece of work, and it seems that the perpetrators were frightened away the night before, and it was not thought they would return again.

At a meeting of the members of the Amateur Dramatic Club, held a few days since, it was decided to open the theatrical season in this place in about two weeks hence, by giving a performance. As the management of the preparation of the piece to be played is placed in very able hands, a successful entertainment is anticipated.

The advent of the newly-appointed United States Consul at Hankow may be expected shortly, as it is reported General Shepard, at present United States Consul at Swatow, is to take the place of Mr. R. M. Johnson, who left here in July last.

The military examinations at Wuchang are going on with great vigour, and the drills, reviews, &c., are watched daily by many hundreds of natives, who apparently take great pride in the martial accomplishments of their countrymen.

Li Han-chang is expected to return to Wuchang from Szechuen, to resume his post as Viceroy of the Liang-hu.

NEWCHWANG.

A correspondent writes under date 16th November:—By the s.s. Shanse, on the 14th instant, Captain Mant, Commissioner of Customs, left on his way to England. There was quite an ovation offered to him as he went on board the Shanse and afterwards steamed out of the harbour. All Newchwang seemed to have turned out on the bund for the occasion. The ladies were there in great force, and the energy with which they waved handkerchiefs did them credit. There was besides a salute of three guns, and no one knows how many tens of thousands of crackers were consumed in token of the regard which the Chinese have for our late Commissioner. Indeed, Newchwang, generally fortunate in its Commissioners, has never had a more popular resident. Every one wishes Captain Man may enjoy a happy holiday in England.

SOOCHOW.

A correspondent of the North China Daily News writes as follows, under date 21st Nov.:—

The Fu-tai has issued a proclamation, setting forth the text, and the details of the Chefoo Conference, and giving in full the history of the Margary affair. He sets forth the advantages of commerce with foreign Powers, that China is at peace with them, and that foreigners must be treated with respect and kindness. It is many times the usual length, and is posted in all prominent places. All say it is everything that could be desired.

For ten days there have been frequent fires—the people all say daily. Before the rain it might have been accounted for by everything being dry. There was a large fire yesterday at 4 A.M.; another this afternoon, which is not yet fully extinguished. Near the city, outside the West gate, are limekilns; the other night there was a conflagration which illuminated the heavens; seven of their great stacks of straw were burnt, valued at several hundred dollars.

One of the finest sections between the Yang-tsze and the Tsien-tang rivers is the country directly east of the city of Huchow. Besides many places of considerable size, there are three large market towns, each of a population of 50,000, ten miles from each other, forming a triangle, Wu-tsen, Nan-tsin, and Sang-lin. Besides being in the centre of the silk district, they have a large trade in hogs, sheep, potatoes, &c. At this time trade is very brisk; in the mornings all the country people come in to buy a few ounces of fish, a little oil, a few cash worth of vegetables, &c., so the streets are thronged.

Travelling on the Grand Canal, one sees improvement. A good tow-path has been put in repair; new and beautiful bridges are built which would be an ornament to any country.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 2nd December; the English mail from London Oct. 13 was received on the 26th November. The North China Herald contains the following summary of news :—

The Woosung Railway was re-opened for public traffic on the 1st December. A translation of the Taoutai's proclamation respecting the arrangement made with Mr. Mayers at Nanking, and also six Rules agreed to between the Taoutai and H.B.M.'s Consul, "for the safer conduct of the traffic," have been published. The Taoutai's proclamation states fairly enough the circumstances of the case. It of course reverses the real position, which is that the payment is purposely spread out in order to give the officials a plausible reason in the eyes of their people for consenting to the resumption of a traffic which they had denounced; but that is only a way of putting it. The main point is that the trains shall run, and it is regrettable that a month should have been already lost. The delay in this respect was not attributable to the Chinese; and we cannot very well understand why trains should not have recommenced running, at least to Kongwan, directly affairs were settled. The regulations for the safe conduct of the traffic are clear and to the point, and will no doubt be effective. It is sincerely to be hoped that they will prove so, for the occurrence of any accidents will no doubt tend to weaken the future prospects of the line; and immunity from such will give it a much better chance of permanence.

We mentioned some time ago that Mr. Mayers had succeeded while at Nanking, in obtaining the assent of the Taoutai to the road extensions which he had hitherto opposed. The letter on this subject to the Consular body, which is published with the Municipal minutes, is written presumably in consequence of this arrangement. The two new roads which are there suggested—from Carter-road to Siccawei-road, and from Siccawei to Jessfield will no doubt be appreciated by-and-by; but the two first-named extensions are those which are most wanted.

The departure of the present mail steamer has been postponed for thirty-six hours, to enable the members of the Chinese Embassy to proceed thereby. The delay has been authorised by Sir Thomas Wade on behalf of the Government, so far as regards the departure from contract time; but it is likely that the Travancore will still get away from Hong Kong on her due date. Homeward steamers nearly always make a long stay there, being allowed too much time on the run down; so the detention, on this occasion, will merely be at Shanghai instead of in the South. Apart from their desire to get on with their journey, the Envoys quite appreciate, we believe, the advantage of landing calmly from the P. and O. steamer in London, at their own time; instead of being hustled out of a Channel steamer unkempt and unshaven, after possibly a rough passage across the Channel and certainly a long railway journey through France. There is a good deal in first impressions, and there is a great difference between the appearance of a man travelstained and weary, and a mandarin carefully dressed in full and proper costume.

A Tungchow correspondent, writing on the 20th Nov., says:—'You will probably have heard of the mob at Mrs. Mateer's, during Mr. Mateer's absence. All the Presbyterian Mission, excepting Mrs. Mateer and Mrs. Mills's two youngest children, are at Chefoo attending presbytery. On the 16th Nov. a number of soldiers began beating the husband of Mrs. Mateer's amah. On hearing of it Mrs. Mateer sent out her cook to inquire into it. The boys from the school, hearing how things were going, went out to help to rescue the man who had been attacked by six or eight soldiers. The boys were in the majority, and did some fighting, capturing one of the soldiers. The mandarins hearing of it, hurried to the spot brought away the captured soldier, and promised to look into the matter. That night a large body of soldiers stole out of barracks, and started to Kwan Yin Tang to wreak vengeance. The mandarins heard of it, however, and overtook them before they reached their destination. Most of them were punished. On the 19th, while all were gone to Sunday-school, except one of the students and the cook's wife and child, a party of more than twenty soldiers broke open the outer gate, beat the student severely, also the keeper of the garden behind, tore open doors and windows, and broke up things generally, telling the boy that was only the beginning, they would come again. Mr. Crawford hearing of it went over, reaching there just before Mrs. Mateer got home from Sunday-school. A mandarin was already there with his followers, but the guilty ones were gone. Mr. Crawford remained there all night, is still there, and will stay until Mr. Mateer arrives. (He has been sent for.) Report says the soldier who was taken in to Kwan Yin Tang has died, but we do not believe it. None of the mandarins have said so during all the discussions that have been going on about it. The Chifu has sent a guard of four men, who are now at Mrs. Mateer's. No violence has been offered at the other houses, but we do not know how it will turn out. Some of the people are turning to the old story, "now's the time to kill all the Christians," and some of the Christians are much alarmed. Mr. Crawford is the only foreign gentleman here. We go about without fear, but are rather apprehensive there may be further disturbances. These soldiers have given us a great deal of trouble; they are old rebels turned into Imperial soldiers. The mandarins seem anxious to keep them in subjection. The Chifu has sent several times to inquire into matters. He sent Mr. Crawford word this morning that the soldiers had been punished, and sent a messenger to examine into the extent of the damage at Kwan Yin Tang. Most of the damage was to the school premises, only one door of Mrs. Mateer's residence was injured."

We have received a copy of a new Chinese paper, the Sin-pao, whose advent has been announced for some weeks past. It is, we believe, published under the auspices of the Taoutai, and its official connection is more clearly shown by the fact that the head of the Lekin office is its official manager. One speciality it affects is the insertion of a few English paragraphs.

The Temperance Society gave their usual fortnightly entertainment on the 24th Nov., at the hall in Nanking-road. There was a crowded audience, including an unusually large number of ladies. The programme was well rendered; a reading by Mr. O. B. Bradford, a song by a lady amateur, and a pianoforte solo by another lady amateur, being much appreciated. A long address by Mr. Wheatley, in advocacy of temperance principles, was listened to with great attention. Altogether a very enjoyable evening was spent.

We hear that the committee of the Skating Club purpose erecting a shed of the same extent as last year, but with only two instead of three avenues, so that there will be much more open space. The covering, too, is to be arranged so that it will roll up. Last year the frost was severe enough to freeze water under cover as well as exposed, but we may not always be so lucky; and the provision for opening the roof at night is a very necessary one.

Marks of favour have been received by several of the foreign employés at the Kiangnan Arsenal. In the Translation department, Mr. Fryer has received the 3rd rank, Mr. Kreyer the 4th, and Mr. Allen the 5th. In the Mechanical department, Mr Bayley a button of the 4th rank, and Messrs. Allan, Atkinson, Bretschneider, Cowan and Rennie of the 5th. We are also informed that during his recent visit to Shanghai the Viceroy presented Messrs. Allan, Rennie, and Bretschneider with silk robes suited to the honour which ha now been conferred upon them. There is a difference betwee the ranks of the literary and mechanical employés. The forme[n] have the hsien rank while the latter have the ting tai rank[r] These official ranks seem to have been bestowed in accordanc[e] with the length of time in Chinese service; Mr. Fryer's is the highest, therefore, because he has been here longer than any of the others.

The Sin-pao prints a code of regulations for the guidance of Envoys to foreign countries, which are said to have been lately sanctioned by the Emperor, at the instance of the Tsung-li Yamen. The term of service of an Envoy is to be three years, which is, we believe, to be the duration of Kwoh's Embassy to England. All Envoys are to receive rank of either the 1st, 2nd or 3rd class. The salary is to be from Tls. 1,200 to Tls. 800 per mensem for senior, and Tls. 700 for assistant Envoys; and the expenses of the mission are apparently to be paid by the Government. The remittance of all these sums is entrusted to the Inspector-General of Customs.

We are glad to hear that there is still thought to be a fair chance of saving the Lapwing. A breakwater of sandbags is being built round her, to prevent the sea breaking her up in case of a storm; and when that is completed the endeavour will be made to dig her out. She has been completely dismantled and emptied, and will now float in six feet six inches of water.

Mr. Eckfeldt has appealed from the decision given by the United States Consular Court in his case, last May, to the Minister. Mr. Seward, having reviewed the case, sees no reason to disturb the judgment—considering that substantial justice was done.

The steamer Hanyang is taken off the berth of the China Merchants' Company's steamers, and we understand that she is to be lengthened amidships to the extent of fifty feet.

H.M.S. Charybdis arrived at Chefoo on Nov. 25, and left for the Miaotao Islands on the day following.

H.B.M.'s gunboat Swinger arrived at Shanghai on Nov. 23, and will remain in port during the absence of the Charybdis.

The plot of land lying east of the Racket-court, bounded on the south by Nanking-road, and on the east by Kwangsi-road, was sold on Nov. 24, at auction, by Messrs. Wheelock and Co., for Tls. 2,000. It purports to contain per title-deed 5 m. 2f. 5l., but really contains a little more than 4 mow; so the price is equal to about Tls. 500 a mow.

Messrs. Bisset and Co. report as follows upon the Share Market:—

Business has been quiet since our last report. We quote S.S.N. Shares Tl.1 lower, and Yangtszes Tls.2½ lower. Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank: Business has been done at 22 per cent. prem., exchange 75. The market is now quiet. S.S.N. Company: Sales were made on the 30th and 1st at Tls. 65. Pootung Dock Company: A sale is reported at Tls. 80. There are buyers at this rate. Shanghai Gas Company: A lot was placed at Tls. 140, at which there are still buyers. French Gas Company: A sale was made at Tls. 70, ex dividend. Yangtsze Insurance Association: The market is quiet, with sellers at Tls. 620. Chinese Insurance Company: Shares have been sold at $210 and $208, with exchange 75.

A resident in the French Concession was attacked by several men in Hongkew about the middle of November. He was very severely injured, being struck over the head by one of his assailants with an iron bar. He summoned one of them before the German Consul a day or two ago for assault. The case was tried, and the man was sentenced to the light punishment of six days' imprisonment, the Consul allowing him to commence his incarceration on December 1. It is to be hoped he will not go away in the meanwhile.

The Yangtsze arrived from Hong Kong on the 21st November, having on board three seamen—deserters from H.M.S. Immortalité. The Hong Kong authorities having telegraphed to Shanghai the fact of their being on board the steamer, when she arrived the police quietly arrested them, and they are now in the Hongkew Police Station.

The German gunboat Cyclops has left for Tientsin.

Letters have been received announcing the opening of new coal mines in the districts north of Tai-wan (Formosa). Sometime ago, Shen Pao-chen, the former Governor of this province, applied to the Emperor for permission to work these mines, and received the Imperial authority. The Tsung-li Yamen then deputed some foreign mining engineers to go and inspect the proposed coal-fields, and authorised them to purchase the necessary plant; this has now arrived, and the engineers are returning, and will at once proceed to erect the requisite buildings. We also hear that Ting Jih-chang has suggested to the Government the advisability of appointing Yeh Wen-lang, Expectant-Taoutai of Canton, as overseer of these mining works in Formosa. This officer was formerly manager of the arsenal at Foochow. Ting Futai is also desirous that Yeh should be sent to report upon the sulphur, petroleum, camphor, and tea plants which are believed to exist in the southern part of the island. If these four things are found to exist, it is intended to take measures for turning them to good account.

We are exceedingly glad to hear that a movement is likely soon to be set on foot to present Mr. Medhurst with a testimonial, prior to his retirement from the long and useful career he has led in China. Mr. Medhurst's position has been always a difficult, often a very painful one, and we hail with sincere pleasure an opportunity of testifying our appreciation of his many personal excellences. We hope to hear more of this project before long.

The Celestial Empire supplies the subjoined items of intelligence :—

The trial trip of Messrs. Farnham and Co.'s new stern wheel steamer Pao Kong took place on Nov. 28. It was intended she should be taken as far as the Customs' Signal Station at Woosung and back, a distance of about twenty-six miles. This, however, was not carried out. Everything worked satisfactorily till near Gough's Island, when something went wrong with the feed pump, which would not draw water for the boilers, whereupon the engines had to be stopped and the anchor dropped in order that the defect might be remedied. A similar defect might occur to any steamer, so that the trial trip may not be said altogether to have been a failure, her performances from starting till the pump gave out being highly satisfactory, and on the first occasion of her going out last week she kept pretty well up with the C.M. Company's steamer Kiang-kwan. It is but fair to state that Messrs. Farnham and Co. were aware that the feed pump was not exactly in proper working order before the steamer started, but as they did not wish to disappoint the invited guests they concluded to let her go and trust to the chapter of events to get back safe again.

The following are the dimensions and particulars of the Pao Kong:—Length, 158 feet ; breadth, 28 feet ; draft, 7 feet ; with a carrying capacity of about 1,000 tons measurement, and her registered tonnage is 466 tons. On the trial she only drew three feet. Her engines, of which there are two, one on each quarter, are high pressure of 60-horse power nominal each, capable of being worked up to about 150-horse power effective each. She has two boilers, the tops of which are level with the upper deck, and, with the smoke-stack, are well forward, while the steam is conducted to the engines through a pipe which runs along under the upper deck. On this deck are the cabins, saloon, officers' quarters, and wheelhouse. The cabins will accommodate sixty-five Chinese passengers, and, in addition to this, there is accommodation forward for a few first-class. The vessel is flat bottomed, and, consequently, can carry a large cargo on a very light draft. She has not been coppered yet, that being left till some future period, if necessary. Her hull is composite, having iron framework, and her planking is three inches thick. The upper portions of her sides are of iron, so that, with the wood and iron, she is very strong. With 80 lbs. of steam on the wheels made twenty-two revolutions per minute, while, with 73 lbs. of steam, the revolutions were reduced by two turns in the same time. The ship, engines, and everything connected with her have been built and constructed in Shanghai under the superintendence of Messrs. Blethen and Simpson, to whom much credit is due.

HONG KONG.

Dates extend to the 7th Dec.; the French mail from London Oct. 20 arrived out on the 30th Nov., and the following P. and O. mail of Oct. 27 was received on the 4th Dec. The Overland China Mail supplies the following items of intelligence :—

The jury have acquitted Mr. Gillies, the Secretary of the Hong Kong and Whampoa Dock Company, of the charge of having caused the death of a Chinaman. The China Mail gives the following summary of the case, which places the nature of the charge in a clear light :—

It is admitted by the prosecution, by the defence, and by the Chief Justice, that Mr. Gillies's statement lays the foundation of the case; and an examination of this statement, in connection with the unimpeachable testimony of the English witnesses, will give us an outline of the first picture. At three o'clock in the afternoon Commander Jephson laid a hawser from the starboard side of the Narcissus, right across the slip of land between the two docks, to the inshore eastern buoy. The ship commenced to move out at half-past five o'clock, and ten minutes afterwards she was nearly a third part out of the dock. At this point the hawser got foul of two mud-punts, which were fastened to the pier head nearest the buoy, and on the order of Commander Jephson, Mr. Gillies went and cleared it, pushing over one of the coolies as he did so. This was done at about twenty minutes before six, in a light by means of which the dock manager said "he could read a newspaper." At six, or five minutes after six, the bow of the Narcissus was well clear of the dock, and at eight or ten minutes past six the gunner and others came down the whole length of the pier and asked Mr. Gillies to give them a passage on board. The request was granted, and immediately on the gig's return, Mr. Gillies followed them on board the ship of war. This fully accounts for Mr. Gillies' stay on shore, and takes us up to six-fifteen or six-twenty ; and subsequently the accused, after remaining on board to see the vessel safely moored, left for Hong Kong about seven o'clock. In accordance, therefore, with the admissions (the "foundation of the case,") backed by the reliable narrative of events from the Narcissus officers, any act of violence committed by the accused in connection with the anxious time of undocking would have been committed at the time the ship was in the critical condition stated to exist just before the foul hawser was cleared—viz., some time before six o'clock, and while the vessel was still two-thirds in dock—upon the body of one of the four or five men engaged in towing the mud-punts, and not upon any of the men who were engaged on the opposite side of the pier in hauling the vessel out of dock. No evidence is given to show that the admitted assault had at the time any serious effects; but evidence of the most convincing kind is brought forward to the effect that no coolie was lying on any part of the pier up to certainly a quarter past six. The picture shown by the prosecution is a very different one to that presented by the light of the English evidence. From it we find that the five coolies, i.e., the four native witnesses and the man who is stated to have subsequently died—were engaged towing the ship from half-past five till she was clear of the dock, and that they did not leave the vessel till then (i.e., till past six) ; and that they then, not having any other work to do, went to tow the mud-punts to another part of the dock. We find that no hawser was laid across the pier whatever, and that consequently it never could have got foul of the punts in any way. And we find that the anxious critical period having passed, Mr. Gillies came up to the five punts coolies, and without reason, cause, or provocation, struck two men (one of whom fell down), then kicked the fallen man twice in the belly, and left him lying on the ground like a dog until he was dead and was ultimately taken away by the police. No attempt appears to have been made to trace the body of the man who was admittedly pushed or kicked by the accused ; and, thus, if the jury took the "foundation of the case" in its entirety, and accepted the Narcissus testimony, they found an impassable gap over which they could not even leap and preserve their oath inviolate, in the face of the other manifest discrepancies of the Chinese evidence and its general improbability. We are of opinion, therefore, that, considering all the facts and circumstances of the case, the jury were driven to the alternative, either to believe that Mr. Gillies, without any cause, provocation, or object whatever—after all incentive to anxiety or anger had passed away - had kicked the deceased man to death during the five minutes just before he went on board the frigate, and while waiting the return of his gig; or to disbelieve the evidence as laid before them by the prosecution. There appears to us to be no middle course in deciding "upon the evidence," and it is matter for congratulation that the jury possessed the good sense, acumen, and courage to decide in favour of the accused.

A public meeting of those interested in horticulture took place on the 23rd Nov., but did not result in any definite resolutions. It is hoped, however, that the usual flower-show will be possible without a public meeting.

The temperance movement continues to flourish. On the 23rd Nov. a public tea and entertainment was given at the Temperance Hall under very favourable circumstances. About one hundred and fifty sat down to tea in the lower rooms, and after partaking of a substantial meal they adjourned to the upper rooms, in which the entertainment took place, and there the numbers were greatly augmented, there being at least two hundred and fifty persons present. The Rev. Mr. Baynes occupied the chair (a rather imposing piece of furniture, by-the-bye), and in his usual happy manner conducted the proceedings, eliciting roars of laughter by his quaint remarks.

The Local Government Gazette notifies the approval by the Home Government of the appointment of the Hon. James Russell to be Acting Attorney General of the Colony. The Chinese Mail says it has received authentic news from Peking in regard to the movements of the Chinese Embassy to the United States, Peru, and Spain, and states that intelligence circulated a short time ago by a local native paper, as to the different persons composing this mission and their salaries, is premature, as the list of the diplomatic and consular corps has not yet been submitted to the Government, and, so far, the various appointments as reported have not been made, though it is probable that they will be proposed by the Minister elect, and approved by the Government.

The half-holiday movement it appears is likely to fail, the opinion of the Chamber of Commerce being in favour of the step by only a very small majority—too small to secure its being carried out.

A meeting of the shareholders in the Canton Insurance Company took place on the 7th December, at the offices of Messrs. Jardine Matheson, and Co., the general agents, the Hon. W. Keswick in the chair. The report and accounts were duly passed. The statement for "office 1874" showed the net profits for the year to have been $154,006, of which $25,000 had been passed to the reserve fund, and the remainder paid in dividends and returns to contributors. The open statement for office 1875 showed an estimated balance at credit of $88,412.96, of which sum it was proposed to pass $15,000 to reserve fund, to pay a first dividend of $40 per share and a first return on contributions of 3½ per cent., absorbing in all $51,000, and leaving $37,412.96 to meet further possible liabilities or for payment of further dividends on finally closing the accounts of the office. The open statement for office 1876 showed the very satisfactory sum of $407,536.01 at credit, after allowing for all known and anticipated losses to date.

The Audacious arrived at Hong Kong on the 6th December, and the vessels of the Flying Squadron left that day for England.

Severe weather has been experienced on the coast.

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

MANILA.

The Straits Times translates the following items of intelligence from Manila newspapers :—

The Governor-General of the Philippines, by decree dated 21st Nov., has enacted that from the 1st January next the dues now levied on account of light-houses, the harbour master, and for dredging purposes are to be consolidated into one tax, to be called the impost of navigation, and to be levied only in those ports of the Philippines that have been opened to foreign commerce. This impost is to be on the tonnage of vessels at the rate of 8 cents per ton on all classes of vessels from the high seas, no matter from whence they come, 2 cents per ton on coasters under twenty tons, and 5 cents per ton on the same measuring twenty-one tons and upwards. The following vessels are exempted from paying this navigation impost :—Spanish men-of-war ; Spanish and foreign merchantmen, and also foreign men-of-war, which arrive in distress, which transhipcargo into other vessels, or discharge cargo to take it in again afterwards. Spanish mail steamers, vessels plying inside the bays and rivers of the open ports, and lastly those vessels which, after having paid the navigation impost in any of the open ports of the Philippines, return to them from stress of weather.

The official Gazette of the 2nd Decemher notifies for general information that Mr. W. S. Palgrave, who had been appointed British Consul in the Philippines, had assumed charge of the Consulate.

It appears that the German vessel Minna, seized in the Sooloo Archipelago, will be released as soon as the parties interested give the required security, amounting to upwards of $19,000, on the vessel and cargo.

The eminent service rendered during the Sooloo Campaign by Mr. Richardson, the engineer of the Panay, has been recompensed with the red cross of the First Class of the Order of Military Merit.

In several provinces of Luzon the paddy crop has been short, owing to drought. In other portions of the Philippines rats have been destroying the standing crops.

On the night of the 27th November a slight shock of earthquake was felt at Manila.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

—o—

SINGAPORE.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 14th December ; the P. and O. mail from London Nov. 10 was received on the 11th December. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times :—

The meetings of the Legislative Council held since the date of our last summary have not been brimful of results, and with the exception of forwarding some Bills, which have already been noticed, and a discussion upon the Penang Post-office, nothing of any particular interest has formed a theme for our legislators, with the exception of an explanation or justification of the policy of the Government, given by Sir William Jervois, in reply to a question regarding the agreement entered into by the chiefs of the Nine States, by which all differences among them in future shall be arbitrated upon by the Maharajah of Johore. Notwithstanding the interest which the question of the trial of Sultan Abdullah and the Chiefs who were charged with complicity in the murder of Mr. Birch is naturally creating, the Government vouchsafed no reply to a question by Mr. Adamson as to the course which is proposed to be adopted relative to the trial, the Governor simply declining to give information pending the resolution which the Colonial Office may come to. The unpleasant announcement made at the commencement of the session in relation to our finances is now being brought home to us, and it has been decided by the Government that light-houses and other public works, of a most necessary character, which had already been in course of erection, shall be stopped, owing to the drain upon our finances by advances to the Native States, and that course has been adopted after $142,000 had been expended in those works.

The difficult problem of the best means of grappling with the Chinese secret societies which has been discussed in our columns is still occupying public attention. Many here are in favour of the remedies suggested by Mr. Pickering ; others, who have had much experience, share with our Hong Kong contemporaries a doubt as to their efficacy, but though our correspondents advance many good principles in theory the only defined practicable suggestions come from Mr. Pickering. A correspondent, "Lex," who has dissected the various arguments, and has favoured us with several communications upon the subject, suggests the education of the Chinese to ensure confidence in our administration in their minds, and as a result distrust in the actions of the secret society leaders, but with a people particularly jealous and imbued with an innate inordinate sense of their own self-importance and keenness of perception a course of such education would take years to accomplish, and would then not be likely, if it ever would, to result beneficially to the class who are made the victims of the designing leaders whose interest is to flatter dupes with their importance, thus encouraging the weaknesses which are their bane, and which militate against us.

We are glad to be able to announce that our telegraphic communication is now complete, and we are assured the laying of the cable between Rangoon and Penang will be commenced as soon as the laying of the one between Aden and Bombay, which is now in progress, shall have been completed. We may conclude when this happy result shall have been accomplished that there will be no likelihood of a repetition of the isolation from which we have been only lately released.

At last some little increase of pay is to be given to the sub-inspectors of police. Three in Singapore, two in Penang, and one in Malacca are to receive $45 per month each ; six in Singapore, three in Penang, and one in Malacca are to have $40, or the magnificent addition of $5 all round. If double this had been proposed it would have been only fair, but as it has no been it looks like paltriness.

His Imperial Chinese Majesty's screw corvette Yang Woo, Captain P. Luxmore, C.B., R.N., from Foochow and Hong Kong, anchored in the roads on the 7th Dec., and exchanged the complimentary salute with Fort Canning. She is commanded by an English naval officer, is armed with nine heavy guns, has a complement of two hundred and fifty men and is bound on a foreign cruise.

The average Note Circulation of the local branches of the banks in Singapore and Penang during the month of November was as follows :—Oriental Bank, Singapore, $163,075 ; Chartered Mercantile Bank, Singapore, $376,665, Penang, $284,455 ; Chartered Bank of India, Singapore, $530,475, Penang, $129,940.

The Acting Chief Justice opened the Civil Sittings on the 11th Dec. No case was heard, but several motions were made, and the usual amount of preliminary talk took place. The Civil Court Sittings stand adjourned till the 14th Dec., and the Acting Chief Justice expects to be relieved on the arrival of the French mail next week.

The Government Gazette contains the following new notifications :—

Captain A. R. Ord, Assistant Collector of Land Revenue and Assistant Treasurer, Malacca, reported his return from leave of absence on the 30th November, and proceeded to Malacca on the 5th December, to take up his duties.

Information has been received from the Dutch Consul-General that the Government of Netherlands India have prohibited export, import, and transit of arms and ammunition for all the Netherlands India possessions.

Market Reports.

IMPORTS.

SHANGHAI.—Business during the week had been again disappointing. Dealers and importers both looked for a "spurt" on demand for the north, but no increased inquiry had occurred for that quarter, and the season was fast drawing to a close.

HANKOW.—The Chamber of Commerce Circular says :—The business transacted during the past fortnight has been very limited. Cotton Goods :—Grey Shirtings : Some inquiry has existed for the better qualities of 8¼lbs. Grey Shirtings, but at very low prices. A few sales of common, amounting to 1,700 pieces, have been reported at previous rates. In other classes of imports there is little to note, a small transaction in Gentian Jeans at Tls. 2.16 per piece being the only business. Metals :—Lead : We have to notice a further slight improvement in this article, and LB is now worth Tls. 6.20 to 6.25 per picul. Quicksilver is firm at Tls. 58 to 59, although there is very little demand for consumption at present.

CANTON.—Imports had not met with much inquiry, and but very few sales are reported. W. B. Lead was worth $9.10 to 9.20 per picul and common sorts $8.95 to 9 ; sales 4,000 piculs, stock 300 piculs. Quicksilver was worth $82 to 83 per picul.

MANILA.—Messrs. Smith, Bell, and Co.'s Circular says :—Our Piece Goods market has been a little quieter during the past fortnight, dealers refraining from entering into further important operations at present, owing to the near proximity of the Christmas holidays. In view, however, of the reported advance of prices at home, and enhanced value of produce here, importers hold firmly to their stocks, and in many cases an advance on low rates is demanded.

SINGAPORE.—During the fortnight extreme dulness had prevailed in the market ; there had been a general falling off in the demand for almost every article excepting Grey T-Cloths ; prices had not, however, shown much alteration, stocks of the principal staples being light. The approximate amount of sales during the fortnight were 6,500 pieces Grey Shirtings, 36,000 pieces Grey T-Cloths, 16,000 pieces White Shirtings, 500 corges Cambrics, 2,500 pieces T. R. Cambrics, 120 bales Grey Yarn, 45 bales T. R. Yarn, 80 bales Coloured Yarn.

CHINKIANG.—Messrs. Spencer and Wolff write on the 29th Nov.:—During the week now under review a good demand has existed for almost all kinds of 8¼ lbs. Grey Shirtings. As the supplies of good medium cash have again been insufficient to meet the requirements of our dealers lower grades have been taken to some extent, but the commonest sorts still fail to attract attention. Heavies and 7 lbs. quite neglected. Grey Shirtings: Amongst the sales reported are the following standard chops of 8¼ lbs.:—Horse and Jockey, Tls. 1.78 to 1.79 per piece; Red Pheasant, Tls. 1.72 to 1.75 per piece; Red Lion, Tls. 1.74 per piece; Pagoda, Tls. 1.71 per piece, and various others down to Tls. 1.35 per piece. T-Cloths have been quite neglected, the only inquiry being for good 7 lbs. Mexicans at Tls. 1.33 to 1.37 per piece. English Drills: The only business passing has been in good makes at Tls. 1.92 to 2.02 per piece for 14 lbs., and Tls. 2.0 to 2.06 per piece for 15 lbs.

HONG KONG.—The market for all Cotton and Woollen manufactures had relapsed into an exceedingly dull state, and sales were almost impossible to effect even at concessions of 2½ to 5 cents per piece, and 10 to 15 cents per piece in Long Ells, dealers being fully supplied by recent speculative purchases. Nos. 16/24's Yarn were still in good request, and higher prices were obtainable for most chops. The transactions consisted of 55 bales No. 24's, under the different Dragon chops, at $98 to 101 per bale. In Grey Shirtings, 2,000 pieces 7 lbs. Mandarin and Wife, at $1.47½ per piece; and 250 pieces 8¼ lbs. Blue Joss at $2.38 per piece. T-Cloths: 1,000 pieces 8 lbs. Magpie chop, at $1.25 per piece; 500 pieces 7 lbs. Mexicans, Dog and Pheasant, at $1.72½ per piece; 8 lbs., 500 pieces Red Joss, at $1.80 per piece; and 600 pieces V. V., at $2.50 per piece. Camlets: 50 pieces LLL, at $15.25 per piece; 300 pieces BBB, at $19 25 per piece; and 10 pieces AAA, at $16.80 per piece. 120 pieces German Spanish Stripes at $1 per yard. Drills—Warrior chop: 250 pieces 15 lbs., at $2.67½ per piece; and 500 pieces 14 lbs., at $2.57½ per piece. Metals: Iron—Nail Rod: Sales of Belgian, at $2.60 to 2.65 per picul; a slight improvement upon former transactions. English scarce, and readily saleable. Lead: Cargo on the spot commanded full quotations; for arrival there had been several speculative purchases, at $8 to 8.10 per picul for L.B.F.B. brands and Hole chop. Market closed somewhat weaker.

PENANG.—A moderate demand had prevailed for most descriptions of imports, but business had been of a limited character, as importers were insisting in a great measure upon cash transactions.

EXPORTS.

TEA.

AMOY.—Settlements of Amoy Ooloongs had been on the following basis of rates, viz., low to good common $16 to 18 short; fair $20 to 21; good $23 to 24; superior $25 to 26; showing on the whole little or no change in value from purchases made during the previous fortnight. With the receipt of 4,000 to 5,000 half-chests more the yield for the season was expected to be complete. Formosa Ooloongs: foreigners were buying at fully maintained prices.

SHANGHAI.—Black: A small business reported for the interval, at lower prices for common teas. Stock 21,652 chests. Green: The market had remained very firm, and a large business had been transacted at higher prices; buying had been checked towards the close by the rise in the rate of Sterling Exchange, and the Teamen were unwilling to accept lower prices for their teas.

FOOCHOW.—Messrs. Westall, Galton and Co's Weekly Letter of 2nd December says:—The active business last reported on this market has continued, and buying has become rather more general. Purchases have again been principally for London settlements for the week are:—Congou 19,098 chests; Souchong, 496 chests; Oolong, 279½ chests; Flowery Pekoe, 198 chests. Congou: In the prices reported, some irregularity is noticeable, but taken all round, a rise of at least a tael per picul may be quoted. At this time last year the laying down cost of common to good common was ½d. to 1d. per lb under what it now is. Souchong: A few chops have been taken at former rates. Oolong: No change to report. Flowery Pekoe: 198 chests have found buyers. Scented Teas.—No stock. The export to Great Britain and the Continent of Europe amounts to 47,297,024 lbs. (including 1,126,350lbs. per s.s. Sarpedon, lost), against 58,566,629 lbs. To the Colonies, 15,730,202 lbs. against 14,112,733 lbs. To America, 454,241 lbs. against 974,665 lbs. at same period last year.

CANTON.—Messrs. Deacon and Co.'s Report says:—A quieter tone has prevailed in our market, and only moderate transactions have taken place. Congous: A few settlements have been made here; prices both at this port and at Macao are unchanged. Scented Teas: The larger portion of the business of the past fortnight was transacted in the first week; latterly, however, there has been little disposition shown to continue operations. Scented Capers have been dealt in at rather easier prices, but when quality is considered, purchases cannot be deemed to have been on more favourable terms. The musters now shown are very unattractive, being most deficient in scent; there is now no scenting flower of any virtue to be obtained, and teamen will consequently have a considerable quantity of unprepared leaf left on their hands till next season. Pekoes have commanded fully as high rates as previously; a few common "new makes" have been taken at Tls. 15 to 16 per picul, and "long leaf" kinds have found buyers at Tls. 23 to 32 per picul. Canton Greens: No transactions are reported. The following is a summary of the fortnight's business:—Congou, 1,200 boxes at Tls. 19 to 33; Scented Caper, 9,700 boxes at Tls. 16 to 30; Scented Orange Pekoe, 3,700 boxes at Tls. 15 to 32 per picul.

SILK.

SHANGHAI.—The market report of the North China Herald says:—Only 255 bales were shipped by the French mail of the 24th November, nearly the whole of which was on consignment on native account, and business since then has been confined to 300 bales of re-reels purchased for America at Tls. 540 to 570 for middling cargo, best chops being firmly held at quite disproportionate prices, the reason given being the small supply in stock and to arrive. With the steady advance in exchange to 5s. 7¾d. for 6/ms. st. documentary paper, and continued advices from London and Lyons of a stagnant market, with weakening prices whenever a sale can be effected, the silkmen have been more inclined lately to lower their asking rates for Tsatlees coarse silks are pressed without meeting with the slightest inquiry, and beyond a few bales of Tsatlees and some yellow silk taken on joint account there is still no semblance of a market here. Common Tsatlees could perhaps be purchased at Tls. 450; for chops it is impossible to give a quotation, and the lower grades of re-reels, mostly very mixed and inferior silks, might be had from Tls. 500 per picul upwards. Arrivals during the past fortnight are within 1,000 bales, and the stock shows a slight increase and is estimated at 23,200 bales or rather less. The export since the 18th October mail to all ports is 2,268 bales only, against 9,982 bales for the corresponding period in 1875.

CANTON.—Messrs. Deacon's Circular says:—There is very little of importance to chronicle. Dealings in the past fortnight have been on a restricted scale, and the present tone is one of apathy. In the first week 300 bales were taken, and since then 50 bales have been purchased. Prices have been steadily dropping, but unfortunately the decline here does not keep pace with the retrograde movement which had set in on the other side. It is impossible to foresee what turn this market will take, but unless more encouraging accounts are received from London we look for a further period of inactivity, and still lower rates. Long-reels: Of Seulam and other common sorts, 50 piculs are reported settled by Parsees. Re-reels: Only 120 boxes are announced as contracted for. The tendency for these sorts is downwards. Stock is estimated at 1,300 to 1,400 bales Tsatlee, 100 to 200 bales Cumchuck and Lucklow, and of inferior sorts about 200 bales.

TELEGRAMS FROM THE FAR EAST

(DAILY NEWS TELEGRAM.)

BERLIN, JAN. 8.—It is probable that Germany and England will soon send men-of-war to the Philippine Islands for common action against the vexatious obstacles which Spain puts in the way of their commerce with Sooloo. The sovereignty of Spain over the Sooloo Islands is not conceded by Germany.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAM.)

MADRID, JAN. 9.—The differences which have arisen between the Spanish authorities and the English and German Governments concerning the maritime traffic with the Sooloo Islands are semi-officially represented here to be purely of a commercial character, of no gravity from a diplomatic point of view. The questions pending are now stated to be in course of arrangement, and an early and definitive settlement is expected. The news published by a London morning paper of the probable despatch of British and German men-of-war to the Philippine Islands, in connection with the matter, is therefore regarded here as erroneous.

THE ATCHIN WAR.

THE HAGUE, JAN. 10.—Intelligence received here from Atchin dated the 7th inst., announces that the new Rajah of Simfrang-Olina, has accepted the conditions imposed for his submission to the Netherland authorities, and the blockade of the district has consequently been raised.

THE OPIUM TRADE AND THE NEW CONVENTION.

We have been requested by the Secretary of the Anglo-Oriental Society for the Suppression of the Opium Trade to give publicity to the following correspondence :—

To the Right Hon. the Earl of Derby, P.C., Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, &c.—

My Lord,—The Times and other newspapers having published what purports to be the substance of a Conventioncon cluded by Sir Thomas

Digitized by Google

Wade with the Government of China, in which, among other important articles, some concessions appears to be made to China, in respect to the levying of duties upon Opium, we venture to take the opportunity of reminding your Lordship that a considerable number of Her Majesty's subjects who have no direct interest in our general commercial relations with China do most sincerely desire that something should be done to relieve our country from the charge which is brought, they believe with justice, against us, of upholding the Opium trade with China by our military supremacy, to the serious injury of the population of China, and in violation of the plainest dictates of justice and humanity.

The third article of Section III. of the new Convention, inasmuch as it recognises the right of the Chinese Government to control the Opium trade within their own territory in the manner they deem most expedient for the national welfare, appears to us to be a step in the right direction, and we trust that it will meet with your Lordship's approbation.

At the same time, we may be permitted to point out that if Opium be thus, for well-known reasons, recognised as "an exceptional commodity," it is extremely undesirable that Her Majesty's Government should even appear to extend to it any unusual support. We trust, therefore, that in case your Lordship should see fit to advise Her Majesty to ratify this Convention, you will take the opportunity to assure the Government of China that Great Britain has no desire to coerce them to receive our opium; that proposals from China intended to secure the diminution or suppression of the trade in Opium will always receive the most favourable consideration from Her Majesty's Government; and also that your Lordship will cause provision to be made in the Convention for its revision at a not very distant date, with a view to still further development of the policy now happily inaugurated.

We have the honour to be your Lordship's most obedient servants.

Signed on behalf of the Anglo-Oriental Society for the Suppression of the Opium Trade. W. McARTHUR, Vice-President.
F. S. TURNER, Secretary.

Canada-building, King-street, Westminster, Nov. 24, 1876.

Foreign-office, Nov. 30, 1876.

Sir,—I am directed by the Earl of Derby to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 24th inst., on the subject of the Convention recently concluded at Chefoo with the Chinese Government by Sir Thomas Wade.

I am, Sir, your most obedient humble servant, TENTERDEN.

W. McArthue, Esq., M.P., &c.

THE CHINESE EMBASSY TO ENGLAND.

(NORTH CHINA HERALD.)

The despatch of a Chinese Embassy to permanently represent the Emperor of China at the English capital marks a great change from the early days of our intercourse, when Foreign Envoys were regarded as tribute-bearing barbarians, and the possibility of the Solitary Man condescending to send a representative at all, much less to apologise for a wrong, to the Sovereign of a Western State, would have been scouted as monstrous. The improvement of our political relations with China and the extension of our intercourse may be slow, but it is at least steadily continuous. It is only eighty years ago that we read of a Dutch Embassy "brought to the capital like malefactors, treated when there like beggars, and sent back to Canton like mountebanks, to perform the three times three prostrations at all times and before everything their conductors saw fit; these on their part standing by and laughing at their embarrassment in making the evolutions in their tight clothes. They were not allowed a single opportunity to speak about business, which the Chinese never associate with an Embassy, but were entertained with banquets and theatrical shows, and performed many skilful evolutions themselves upon their skates, greatly to the Emperor's gratification, and received, moreover, a present of broken victuals, which had not only been honoured by coming from the Emperor's own table, but bore marks of his teeth and good appetite." It is only sixty years since Lord Amherst's Mission was summarily dismissed from the capital without an audience, because the Ambassador would not perform the kotow. The wars of 1842 and 1858, after which peace was dictated in, respectively, the southern and northern capitals, had progressive effect in persuading the Chinese that the barbarians had at least the power to enforce, if they were not entitled to, respect; and subsequent events have come one after another, slowly, if often unsatisfactorily, to shake still further their conviction of immeasurable superiority. After the massacre of Tientsin the Peking Government had to send Chung-how on a mission of apology to France. Subsequently they had to admit the Foreign Ministers to an audience, the circumstances of which they did their best to narrow in public estimation, but which still abandoned the kotow, and was at least a step towards a recognition of equality. And now, after the Yunnan outrage, they have been required not only to send a mission of apology to England, but to establish a permanent embassy at the Court of St. James's. Every attempt to repel foreign intercourse has led to its extension; every explosion of intolerance has obliged them to descend one step further from the pedestal of exclusivism and superiority upon which they imagined themselves to stand. And this time the innovation has been a greater one than before; not only is an official, well qualified by his rank and reputation to fill the post, appointed Ambassador to London, but the rules for the guidance of foreign envoys which we publish elsewhere show that the late memorial of the Tsung-li Yamen in favour of the principle of foreign embassies is not meant to remain a dead letter. We have already learned the appointment of Consuls to New York and San Franciso, and the intention to send a Chinese Minister to Washington was also indicated. However unwillingly the Chinese have been persuaded to take these steps, and however unsatisfactory the causes that have led to their propulsion on the forward path, there can be no question that progress is implied. The men who consent to send high mandarins as Ambassadors to England and America have come to see things differently from those who guided the counsels of Hienfung, and encouraged him to direct the utter extermination of the barbarian brood. There is very much to be learned yet; but a much clearer appreciation of the relative position of Eastern and Western nations is very evidently dawning upon the more intelligent and influential Chinese Statesmen; and the very steps that are being now taken can hardly fail to lead to further enlightenment.

The Rajah of Sarawak—An Account of Sir James Brooke, K.C.B., LL.D., given chiefly through Letters and Journals.—By GERTRUDE L. JACOB. London: Macmillan and Co.

This work comes somewhat late after the death of the well-known Rajah Brooke, which took place in 1868, but the fulness of the particulars which it supplies of his difficult and adventurous life fully compensate for the delay in its publication. All who have had their attention directed to Sir James Brooke's career at Sarawak will peruse the work with satisfaction, while to the large number to whom the facts narrated are entirely new it will be of still greater interest. Some years ago a narrative entitled the English Rajah was drawn up by the authoress of the present volume for the Monthly Packet, but was delayed in publication in consequence of the late Mr. John C. Templer being unable, as he had intended, to fulfil a hope long cherished by him of compiling the Rajah's Biography. This manuscript forms the basis of the present narrative, and the authoress has received valuable aid from large numbers, who were personally acquainted with the subject of the memoirs, among whom were Admiral Keppel, Mr. W. H. Read, member of the Singapore Legislative Council, and many others well known in the East. The present narrative will be welcomed no less on its intrinsic merits than as a complete refutation of many of the calumnious charges which were freely made against him at the commencement of his career. It shows that he was actuated in the course which ended in his obtaining the Rajahship of Sarawak by thoroughly upright motives, and that he carried them to their conclusion in a way that reflected well both upon his honour and his courage. General G. L. Jacob in a preface to the work speaks in forcible language upon this point, and relates how in 1853 an offer was made to him by Mr. Read, of Singapore, to introduce him to Rajah Brooke, and how he at first hesitated to accept it, but having done so was fully satisfied of the groundlessness of the charges which were made against him. He concludes his preface by justly observing that Rajah Brooke's life furnishes a lesson in the Government of Eastern peoples which those who have to deal with them would do well to study, and that it shows with what facility a false cry may be raised, and, in the name of humanity, how humanity may suffer.

Treaties between Great Britain and Foreign Nations.—By EDWARD HERTSLET, C.B. (Librarian and Keeper of Papers at the Foreign-office). London: Butterworths, Fleet-street; and Harrison and Sons, Pall-mall.

We have received the volume of this very valuable work relating to Italy. This volume contains a history of the treaties of commerce, &c., concluded between Great Britain and Italy since 1815; copies of treaties now in force; abstract of contents of those treaties; tariff on imports, &c., &c. We have already paid a tribute to the care which has been bestowed upon this work, and the present volume fully justifies a continuance of the high opinion already expressed.

The Geographical Magazine for this month continues the interesting paper on the Trigonometrical Survey of India, already noticed. It also contains, among other valuable articles, notice of some important contributions on Thibet, from the pen of the Abbé Desgodins, who, while engaged as a missionary at Yerkaldo, has acquired much information with regard to the still obscure geography of this region between India and China. He has obtained facts from native sources which go to prove that the Irrawaddy must rise south of latitude 30 deg. N.

MEETINGS OF SOCIETIES.

At the Geological Society, on Dec. 20, Professor P. M. Duncan, President, in the chair, the following communications were read: "On Pharetronspongia Strahani, a Fossil Holorhaphidote Sponge from the Cambridge Coprolite Bed," by Mr. W. J. Sollas; "On the Remains of a large Crustacean, probably indicative of a new Species of Eurypterus, or allied Genus (Eurypterus? Stevensoni), from the Lower Carboniferous Series (Cement-stone Group) of Berwickshire," by Mr. Robert Etheridge, jun.; "On the Silurian Grits near Corwen, North Wales," by Professor T. M'Kenny Hughes; and "On Mineral Veins," by Mr. W. Morgan.

At the Meteorological Society, on Dec. 20, a paper was read—"On Observations with the Psychrometer," by Dr. R. Rubenson. It contained an account of the instructions issued to the Swedish observers in order to obtain trustworthy results from the psychrometer, or dry and wet bulb hygrometer. These instructions, however, do not differ from those followed by English observers at the present time. A second paper—"Contributions to Hygrometry; the Wet Bulb Thermometer," by Mr. W. Marriott, was also read. It contains the results of observations made with several wet bulbs in different positions, and under different conditions, which were carried on in order to determine what a wet bulb thermometer should be.

Naval and Military.

The Hon. H. N. Hood (1870) has been appointed to the command of the Hart, on the China station, vice Commander Royse who has been promoted.

Captain Francis Henry Woodgate, of the Bengal Staff Corps, has been killed by a fall from Wolverhithe Cliff, at St. Leonards. Captain Woodgate entered the Indian army in February, 1857, and served with the volunteer cavalry with General Havelock's force from its first taking the field in July, 1857. He was present in the various actions which preceded the relief of Lucknow, at the subsequent defence of the Residency, and at the final assault and capture of Lucknow. He afterwards commanded the cavalry of the Kupoorthulla contingent in all the actions in which that force was engaged. In 1860 he went to China with the 8th Punjab Infantry, and served throughout the campaign of that year, including the assault and capture of the Taku forts and the occupation of Peking.

The following officers, whose last term of service was on the China station, have received appointments as under:—Captain B. W. Bax (in the Dwarf from 1871 to 1874) to the Sylvia, 3, surveying vessel, China; Navigating-Lieutenant G. F. Whitmore (in the Midge from 1872 to 1874) to the Indus, flagship, Devonport; Mr. P. Burgess, surgeon (in the Naval Hospital, Hong Kong, from 1873 to 1876), to the Lord Warden, 18, armour-plated ship, Portsmouth; Mr. G. M. Cuffe, surgeon (in the Audacious in 1876), to the Growler, 4, gun-vessel, China; Mr. W. C. Sandys (in the Hornet from 1874 to 1876) to the Hornet.

The promotion to vice-admiral's rank of Rear-Admiral Beauchamp Seymour, C.B., will probably not lead to any immediate change in the command of the Channel Squadron. It is not improbable that on the completion, in September next, of Admiral Seymour's three years' period of service, Rear-Admiral Lord Gilford will be appointed to the command, should he not previously assume that of the new detached squadron, in which case it is said Rear-Admiral Sir John Commerell will succeed Vice Admiral Seymour.

The undermentioned officers have been awarded Naval pensions of £50 a year:—Retired Commander Richard E. Bullen, vice Commander H. N. Atkinson, deceased; Retired Commander Godolphin J. Burslem, vice Commander C. Autridge, deceased; Retired Commander Henry B. Davis, vice Commander W. Y. Gill, deceased; Retired Commander William Royse, vice Commander R. E. Pym, deceased; and Retired Commander Nelson G. Spencer, vice Commander J. Coleman, deceased.

On the 4th inst. Messrs. Laird Brothers launched at Birkenhead the war sloop Falcon, which carries three guns, one 4½ ton 100-pounder muzzle-loading rifled gun amidships, and two 64-pound muzzle loading rifle guns, one at the bow and the other at the stern. The vessel will be fully rigged for steam or sail, and is fitted with horizontal direct acting compound engines of 750-horse power. The christening of the vessel was performed by Miss Pritchard, of Anglesea.

Commander Royse has been promoted to the rank of captain. He stood thirty-sixth on the Commanders' List, entered the Navy in 1849, became Lieutenant in 1857, and Commander in 1868, and is now in command of the Hart, on the China station. Of his twenty-seven years in the Service, only two have been passed on half pay, and he has held a command at sea for nearly four years and a-half. His age is forty-one years.

In consequence of a growing habit amongst seamen of adopting a sort of long-shore rig when on leave of absence, some cases of which have doubtless come under their Lordships' notice in the streets of London, an Admiralty order has been promulgated at the home ports expressly forbidding the wearing of civilian clothes by petty officers and seamen unless they have the permission of their commanding officer for so doing.

The Army and Navy Gazette says:—The first regimental command falling vacant under the five years' rule will be that of the 80th Regiment, to which Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel H. C. Smith was gazetted in January, 1872. There is naturally some anxiety as to whether or not Colonel Smith will be summarily removed. He has thirty-two years' service, and is now with head-quarters in the Straits Settlements.

The Admiralty have removed the names of a firm of engineers from the list of those invited from time to time to tender for engineering works to be executed for the Government, in consequence of a member of the firm having offered a sum of money to one of the dockyard officials with the view of obtaining his support in certain transactions in which the firm was concerned.

It has been decided to allow the officers of the late Arctic Expedition six weeks' leave of absence on full pay. This is the amount usually granted in cases where the absence on foreign service has extended over three years; and as double time is counted for Arctic service, this entitles the late officers of the Alert and Discovery to six weeks' leave.

The Boxer, screw gun vessel, which left Sheerness on the 5th inst., had to take refuge in the Downs from the boisterous weather in the Channel. She is now at Plymouth, and will be detained there two or three days to make good some slight defects before leaving for the West Coast of Africa.

It was announced some few weeks ago that the only son of a noble Irish family had enlisted into "a crack cavalry regiment." Lord Berehaven was the nobleman alluded to, and the regiment the 2nd Life Guards, in which his lordship remains, and has recently been promoted to corporal.

A torpedo boat for service at Bermuda is being constructed for the Government by Messrs. Rennie and Co., of Greenwich. She is to be an iron vessel, about 70 feet long, and she will be employed both for practice and for laying submarine mines for the defence of the island.

Orders have been received at Portsmouth for the Dwarf, gunboat, just returned from China, to be paid off at that port, and not to proceed to Sheerness, as had been anticipated.

The captain's good service pension of £150 a year, vacant by the promotion of Captain the Hon. F. Foley to the rank of rear admiral, has been conferred on Captain J. C. Soady.

The relics of the Polaris expedition, which were brought to England by Sir George Nares, have been forwarded by the Foreign Office to the United States Government.

A report has been circulated that Her Majesty's ship Crocodile had been lost, but it has been disproved by her arrival at Malta.

It is rumoured that the Duke of Connaught will succeed Colonel the Hon. F. A. Thesiger, C.B., as commandant at Shorncliffe.

H.M.S. troopship Orontes arrived on the 9th inst. at Penang, all well.

SHIPBUILDING FOR THE NAVY.

From the periodical return of the strength of the Royal Navy, just issued, we find that more vessels have been added to the list within the last six months of the past year than in a similar period for some time past. According to that return no less than 11 vessels of various tonnage and power have been launched in that period, and at the present time there are under construction at the various Government Dockyards and by private firms 38 others of various sizes, including 13 ordered to be built within the six months referred to. The vessels recently launched and in course of completion for sea are the Emerald, Ruby, and Turquoise, composite screw corvettes to carry 14 guns each, of 1,864 tons, and engines of 2,100 indicated horse power. The first-named was built at Pembroke Dockyard, and the two others by Earle's Shipbuilding Company at Hull. The Turquoise is now at Sheerness. These vessels are known as the "gem ships," from the fact of their being named after precious stones; the engines are compound, with two horizontal cylinders, 57in. and 90in. diameter respectively, with a stroke of 2ft. 2in. They are each 200ft. between perpendiculars, with extreme breadth of 40ft. The Osprey and Penguin, two of four screw composite sloops to carry six guns each, of 1,124 tons, and engines of 900-horse power; the Osprey was built at Sheerness and the Penguin at Glasgow; the latter vessel has since arrived at Devonport The Wild Swan, another of this class of vessels, was completed some time since, and the Pelican is not yet finished. The Northampton, one of two 12-gun double screw iron armour-plated ships, of 7,323 tons and 6,000-horse power engines, built at Glasgow, by Messrs. Napier and Sons. The Bacchante, a sister ship to the Boadicea, a 16-gun iron screw corvette, cased with wood, of 3,932 tons, and engines of 5,250-horse power, launched at Portsmouth. Two vessels of the Lily class, with iron frames, beams, &c., cased with wood, three-gun screw composite gun vessels, each of 774 tons and 750-horse power engines, named the Flamingo and Griffin, the former built at Devonport, and the other at Birkenhead, by Messrs. Laird. Two double-screw iron gun boats, each of 363 tons and 310-horse power engines, to carry three guns each, named the Medina and Medway, built by the Palmer Shipbuilding Company, at Jarrow-on-Tyne, now completing at Portsmouth. The new vessels ordered within the six months to be constructed, and for which the necessary preparations have been made, include a six-gun screw composite sloop, of 1,124 tons and 900-horse power engines, preparing to be built at Sheerness, to be named the Gannet. Six screw corvettes, to carry 14 guns each, to be constructed of steel and iron, sheathed with wood. They are to be of 2,377 tons each, with engines of 2,300-horse power. The contract for these newly-designed vessels has been taken by Messrs. Elder and Co., of Glasgow, and they are to be named Carysfort, Champion, Cleopatra, Comus, Conquest, and Curaçoa. The introduction of steel for the hulls of war ships will effect a considerable diminution of weight, and consequently insure increased speed. The steel hull is to be encased in teak and covered externally with copper sheathing. The machinery and boilers are to be protected by a strong armoured deck, and it is anticipated that they will attain a speed of about 20 miles an hour. Messrs. Elder and Co. are to be allowed two years to complete the vessels. The other new vessels commenced are six double-screw iron gunboats of 363 tons each, and engines of 310-horse power. They are to be called the Dee, Don, Esk, Slaney, Trent, and Tweed, and are intended to carry three guns each. The contract for these vessels has been given to the Palmer Shipbuilding Company, at Jarrow-on-Tyne.

The other vessels under construction include two double-screw iron armour-plated turret ships, to carry four heavy guns each, and are to be of 8,492 tons, with engines of 6,000-horse power each; they are to be named Agamemnon and Ajax, building at Chatham and Pembroke respectively; a 12-gun double-screw iron armour-plated ship, similar to the Northampton, of 7,323 tons and 6,000-horse power engines, ot be named Nelson, and under construction by Messrs. J. Elder and Co., of Glasgow. An iron screw corvette, to carry sixteen guns, of 3,932 tons, and engines of 5,250-horse power; this vessel, which is cased with wood and has a covered battery, is being built at Chatham, and is to be named Euryalus. The Garnet, another of the gem ships, similar in every respect to those of the same class already launched, is building at Chatham. The Pelican, a sister ship to the Osprey and Penguin, is under construction at Devonport; a 6-gun composite sloop, of 1,124 tons and 900-horse power engines, building at Chatham, to be named the Cormorant; two double-screw steel despatch vessels, of 3,735 tons each and 7,000-horse power engines, designed to carry ten guns, are both being built at Devonport, and are to be named Iris and Mercury; two vessels of the Lily class, each to carry three guns, of 774 tons of 750-horse power engines, named the Condor and Falcon, both launched this year, building at Devonport and by Messrs. Laird at Birkenhead respectively. Of gunboats, in addition to those previously referred to, there are now under construction six screw composite gunboats, to carry four guns each, of 455 tons and 360-horse power engines—two building by Messrs. J. and G. Thomson, of Glasgow, to be named the Firebrand and Firefly; two under construction by Earle's Shipbuilding Company at Hull, to be called the Firm and Forester; and two others, the Forward and Foxhound, being built by the Barrow Shipbuilding Company at Barrow-in-Furness; four 3-gun double screw iron gunboats of 363 tons and engines of 310-horse power, to be named respectively Sabrina, Spey, Tay, and Tees, contracted for by the Palmer Shipbuilding Company at Jarrow-on-Tyne. There are also four double screw iron gunboats, of 264 tons and 168-horse power engines, each to carry one gun, ordered to be built at Pembroke, to be called Gadfly, Griper, Pincher, and Tickler, but the construction of these boats has for some considerable time been suspended.

Miscellaneous.

KNOWLEDGE OF CHINESE.

The following letter has appeared in the Scotsman:—It was stated in a recent newspaper paragraph that Dr. Legge, the learned occupant of the newly created Chinese Chair at the University of Oxford, was unable to boast of a single student. His occupation, like Othello's, is gone. But is not that a pity? There has been a long felt want in the Straits Settlements for competent Chinese scholars, and late files of Singapore papers teem with articles and speeches on the subject. It is proposed that Government should send out cadets to China, in order that they may enjoy full opportunity of studying that most difficult tongue, and that they should thereafter be drafted into the service of the Colonial Government. The Governor (Sir Wm. Jervois) has stated that this scheme has met with his most cordial approval, and that he has already referred the matter to the Home Government. There are, it seems, only two Europeans in the Straits Settlements able to read the written language; and as competent interpreters in the various law courts are urgently required, and it is constantly needed to translate Chinese documents into English and official proclamations into Chinese it will be seen that there is a good opening for Englishmen who care to qualify themselves for thepost. In other days Scotchmen would have rushed to fill the breach, and as, after all, the versatility of an Admirable Crichton is not necessary here—only three years of somewhat arduous study—perhaps some young Scot may yet pluck up courage and make essay. I have been asked so often for indications of a suitable career for young men abroad, that I venture to make this suggestion public. I do so all the more readily since, with a chair at Oxford, a short residence in China would suffice to perfect candidates in the language.—I am, &c.,—J. S. D.

TEA ADULTERATION.

A meeting has been held in Southwark for the ostensible purpose, according to a circular which has been issued, of holding a "Tea Conference," "to take such steps as may be deemed necessary to induce the authorities to order the destruction of spurious teas now in bond, and prevent in future the importation thereof; fix the standard or testing points of tea; and to take such steps as may be deemed necessary for placing the trade on a more satisfactory basis." There could be no doubt of the usefulness of such an aim, whatever its ultimate result, if only that it made the public more perfectly acquainted with the true nature of much of the matter now put before it as "tea." It has long been known that much of the so-called "tea" is unwholesome, in some cases because of adulteration before importation, in other cases in consequence of its having become unsound after being brought into this country. Cases are also on record of tea which has been sunk in the river Thames, and, after recovery, redried at kilns which are to be found in "Lower London," and subsequently passed to the hands of retail dealers, and by them sold at a merely nominal sum per pound. "Rotten" tea was also well known in the market, although it was said that its condition was "genuine as imported," and, further, that adulteration is not practised to any great extent in this country. "Lie" tea, which we believe to be old leaves of tea re-dried and "faced" or coloured, is also known extensively sold, and when to this category is added "tea" which consists of an admixture of herbs, sand, iron-filings, &c., it may be readily understood that a "conference" which promised to inquire into these matters, to disclose them for the benefit of the public, and "to take steps to place the trade on a more satisfactory basis," had a wide field of usefulness before it. The circular also stated that "the amount of fictitious tea now in bond is such as to cause a considerable amount of apprehension, not only to the public, but also to the retailer, who may, innocently enough, be brought under the penalties of the Food and Drugs Act, 1875." It is to be regretted that the promise held out by the circular was very far from being realised in the "conference." The main point brought forward was the value of compressed tea above "loose" tea, and Dr. Hardwicke, Coroner for Middlesex, and Dr. J. W. Tripe, Medical Officer of Health for Hackney, and Public Analyst (the latter having been voted to the chair on the sitting of the "conference") expressed a favourable opinion of it, principally on the ground that the "fibre" of the tea was, by the pressure used in the compressing, more thoroughly broken and opened, the "theine," "volatile oil," &c., being thereby more completely extracted. The four following "motions" were put before the meeting and adopted:—"1. That, in the opinion of this meeting, the amount of adulterated and unsound tea in this country is such as to cause serious apprehension, not only on the part of the public, but in the mind of the retailer, who may be brought under the penalties of the Food and Drugs Act for being the holder of such tea. It is therefore imperative that the present state of the trade should be brought under the notice of the sanitary authorities and the Board of Trade, to procure the destruction of all such tea now in bond and to induce the Custom-House authorities to prevent such tea being taken in bond for the future. 2. That from competition and the reasons stated in the former resolution the position of the tea trade is in an unsatisfactory state, and that some steps should be taken to place it on a sounder basis both as regards the retail profits and the standard of excellence. 3. That a critical examination be made of the merits of compression and the other methods of treating tea, instituted with a view of eliciting definitely the amount, if any, to which the value of tea is enhanced by compression, &c. 4. That a mixed committee of tea experts, scientific gentlemen, and representatives of the general public be elected to carry out the foregoing objects and report thereon." These motions having been formally proposed and seconded, the "conference" closed with a vote of thanks to Dr. Tripe, as chairman.

THE GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY,

The fourth meeting of the Royal Geographical Society for the present session was held on the 8th inst., at the University of London. The President, Sir Rutherford Alcock, occupied the chair. The minutes of the last meeting having been read, Sir Mordaunt Wells rose and said that before the minutes were confirmed he desired to bring under the notice of the meeting a subject in which many of the Fellows took a considerable interest—namely, the regulations made by the officers of the Society for their accommodation at the meeting lately held in St. James's-hall, under the presidency of the Prince of Wales. On an occasion like that to which he referred he could not but think that it was very strange the comfort and convenience of the Fellows should have been, as he might say, altogether ignored. They had been treated in a manner which he believed was unprecedented, and when he found on inquiry the extent to which patronage tickets had been issued, he would say it was also not becoming on the part of such a Society. No less than 500 patronage tickets had, he found, been issued and 300 seats reserved in the best part of the Hall. The President said he must rule that the speaker was not in order. That was not an occasion on which the question could be entertained whether the Council had exercised the powers conferred on them well or wisely or judiciously. He had only to consider whether the speaker was or was not in order. Sir Mordaunt Wells bowed to the decision of the President, but desired to ask a question on the subject of the papers read at the last meeting. It was quite impossible, owing to the manner in which that meeting was held, for any of the members to enter, at that meeting, into a discussion in reference to the Expedition to the North Pole. The President again ruled that the speaker was out of order. The question did not arise out of the minutes before the present meeting. Sir Mordaunt Wells said that as the President so ruled he was bound by his decision. At the same time he begged respectfully, on behalf of many Fellows who were not then present, to protest against the system which had been adopted at the last meeting. The minutes of the last meeting were then confirmed.

Mr. Robert Michell then proceeded to read a paper on "The Russian Expedition to the Alai and Pamir," situated on the borders of Turkestan, between the 73rd and 76th degrees of longitude. The expedition, although accompanied by "flying columns," was of a scientific and not of a military character, and had resulted in much interesting information, which was mentioned in detail, as to the physical features of the country. The paper consisted to some extent of a translation of the reports of the Russian officers who had visited the regions in question, and gave some accounts of the tribes by which they are inhabited. A discussion of a technical character, principally relating to the physical characteristics of the district, followed, in which Colonel Yule, Sir Henry Rawlinson, Sir Douglas Forsyth, General Strachey, and Sir George Campbell, M.P., took part. The President, in winding up the discussion, observed that the regions visited by the expedition and described in the paper were, perhaps, the least known in Central Asia. They contained vast and confused ranges of mountains, some of the peaks of which were among the highest in the world. He trusted that when further expeditions of the kind were organised steps would be taken by our Government to secure that at least two Englishmen of requisite scientific attainment should be allowed to accompany them. That was a matter which, he thought, the Society might reasonably press upon the consideration of the Government. There was, of course, much political interest attached to such expeditions, but that was a subject on which, as a Society, they could not touch. He hoped now that Sir T. Wade's Convention with China had opened Mongolia to them that no opportunity would be lost of sending scientific men with any expeditions which went into this unknown district. A vote of thanks to Mr. Michell closed the proceedings.

HEALTH IMPROVEMENT IN GREAT CITIES.

On the 8th inst. the first of two lectures on this subject was given at the London Institution by Dr. B. W. Richardson, F.R.S. Having sketched in a lucid and interesting manner the progress of sanitary science since the treatise of the Rev. Stephen Hales, rector of Teddington, appeared in 1733—from which time all our new knowledge of a sanitary kind might be dated—the lecturer summed up the matter in the following requirements:—Pure air, pure water, freedom from damp, sunlight, and equable temperature, which were the five fingers of the right hand of health. Dr. Richardson then drew a picture of the sort of house which he should like to see take the place of the one that he condemned. He would build a house on a basement of three arches, which should be thoroughly ventilated and applied to various purposes, but which should have no direct communication with the house. His staircase he would have in a separate shaft at the back, each floor communicating with it by a door, so that the floors would be what might be called flats, and each of them could be ventilated independently. A lift and the water-closets he would dispose in a similar manner. On the third floor he would place the kitchen at the front, and the servants' dormitories at the back, and from a pipe in the kitchen hot water could be conveyed to every floor, which should have its separate sink and dust shaft, so that there would be no going up and down stairs with pails and dust-boxes. At the top of the house he would have, on a firm, almost level, asphalted roof, a brick and glass-covered garden, equal in extent to the area of the house. Into this the stair-shaft would finally enter, and any emanations from the lower part of the house would be eaten up wholesomely by the living vegetation. Heated readily from the kitchen the garden might have at all times a summer temperature; the children could engage in luxurious and healthful play; the ladies would find occupation in the cultivation of flowers and evergreens, and in it the sterner sex might spend those hours which were now found so unspeakably dull, owing to the monotony of one or two rooms. In this garden, with the pleasant, the natural, and the beautiful, Health would be trained, and Happiness, her dependent sister, nourished.

CROWN AGENTS FOR THE COLONIES.—An important improvement is about to be made in that department of the Colonial-office to which the management of the Crown Colonies is entrusted. The present Crown Agents are Sir Penrose Julian, C.B., K.C.M.G., and Mr. C. Sergeaunt. The Colonial Secretary has determined on appointing a third agent, the gentleman selected being Lieutenant Ommaney, the military private secretary to Lord Carnarvon. In addition to this, an increase of salary is to be given to the whole staff of the department, in recognition of the recent increase in their duties. No application to Parliament for funds to meet the proposed increase of expenditure is needed, as there is an accumulation of nearly £100,000 colonial balances available for the purpose.

THE officers of customs in London have just stopped what was doubtless the commencement of a most nefarious trade. They have seized a harmless-looking fluid which, on analysis, proved to be nicotine. The importation, which was from Hamburg, was exceedingly small in bulk, being about twenty-three gills. Its terrible potency may, however, be imagined from the fact that it was the produce of 2,500 lb. of tobacco sweepings mixed with alcohol. The presumed intention of the Hamburg chemist was that it should be used as a ready means of converting our early York cabbages into the finest Havana tobacco. The Commissioners of Customs retained a sample for their museum, and ordered the rest of the fluid to be returned to the port of shipment.

A DEPARTMENTAL difference about the place in London for the sitting of the Wreck Commissioner has arisen. The Wreck Commissioner has only consented to sit at Poplar provisionally and as an experiment, and persists in considering the region of the Admiralty Court in Westminster Hall as his proper and permanent abiding place. It is believed that the Lord Chancellor supports him in this contention. The Board of Trade take the other view, and have written that no judge, however competent, sitting at Westminster can command the respect of the seafaring population so thoroughly as a judge at Poplar.

THE excavations at Olympia have produced new valuable results. The horses' necks of a quadriga, and the torso of a female figure have been discovered, so that only four or five figures are still wanting for the reconstruction of the whole frontispiece composition. The most important find is a well-preserved female head, the creation of Alkamenes, the "second master after Phidias," as Pausanias calls him. A metric dedicatory inscription was also discovered, which Pausanias had read, but not copied. The inscription is perfectly preserved.

THERE is a project very much talked of just now of a daily illustrated paper for London after the fashion of the New York Daily Graphic, which has been in existence for two or three years, and is understood to be a success. There is still a certain improvement necessary in the reproducing process in order to facilitate the enterprise, but when this has been attained, as it is believed certain to be, the attempt at an illustrated daily paper will, we believe, positively be made.

THE receipts on account of revenue from the 1st April, 1876, when there was a balance of £5,119,587, to January 6 were £54,810,026, against £54,695,119 in the corresponding period of the preceding financial year, which began with a balance of £6,265,322. The net expenditure was £60,938,820, against £60.587,546 to the same date in the previous year. The Treasury balances amounted to £1,372,113, and at the same date in 1875 to £2,013,188.

THE ARCTIC EXPEDITION INQUIRY.—The following are the names of the committee appointed by the Admiralty to inquire into the cause of the outbreak of scurvy in the recent Arctic Expedition:—Admiral Sir James Hope, G.C.B. (president); Admiral Sir R. Collinson, K.C.B.; Vice-Admiral E. A. Inglefield, C.B.; Dr. James Donnet, Inspector of Hospitals, R.N.; Dr. F. R. Fraser, F.R.S.E. Mr. Vansittart Neale has been appointed secretary.

THE inquest on the body of James Thomas McLaughlin, a lad thirteen years of age, and the son of a stoker on board the Kestrel, gun-vessel on the China station, has been concluded at Portsmouth. The circumstances under which the deceased met with his death were reported last week. The surgeon having proved at the adjourned inquiry that death might have resulted from natural causes, the jury returned a verdict accordingly.

COLONIAL GOVERNORSHIPS.—The appointments of Mr. William Wellington Cairns, C.M.G. (now Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Colony of Queensland), to be Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Colony of South Australia and its dependencies, and of Sir Arthur Edward Kennedy, K.C.M.G., C.B. (now Governor of Hong Kong), to be Governor of Queensland are gazetted.

SIR THOMAS WADE and Lady Wade are at present on a visit to Lord Ebury at Moor Park, Rickmansworth.

SIR THOMAS WADE'S RETURN.

IN our last number we announced the return of Sir THOMAS WADE, Her Majesty's Minister in China, after bringing to a conclusion, which we trust may prove satisfactory, his arduous labours in the settlement of the Margary difficulty, and in the arrangement of the terms of the Chefoo Convention. There can, we think, be little doubt that this Convention will be ratified by Her Majesty's Government, and we trust that the details in it which have still to be dealt with will be settled upon a basis such as will permanently secure the advantages which the Convention, if bona fide adhered to by the Chinese authorities, is calculated to produce. The address which Sir THOMAS WADE made to the residents at Shanghai, prior to his departure, gives us some insight into the motives which have influenced him in arriving at the present settlement of the Yunnan difficulty. Although he does not—as in fact could scarcely be expected—state so in so many words, it is evident that our Minister himself does not look upon the settlement which he has arrived at as in every respect satisfactory. There is, unfortunately, one great hiatus in it, which it is impossible to gloss over. The main result which it was hoped would be secured by the Grosvenor Mission and the long negotiations at Peking has not been attained. No accurate account has been arrived at as to who was immediately responsible for the murder of Mr. MARGARY, and no satisfactory security has been given that the Chinese Government will hunt out the culprits and bring them to justice. That this would be the case must have become apparent to Sir THOMAS WADE so soon as he heard the results of the Grosvenor Mission. As yet there is no official information as to what those results were, but there seems to be little room to doubt that the inquiry was abortive, so far as finding out and punishing the malefactors were concerned. At the same time it would be unjust to deny that considerable praise is due to Sir THOMAS WADE for what he has succeeded in accomplishing. If he has not done all that he wished, he has at least accomplished all that was possible. Deplorable as the murder of Mr. MARGARY was, it did not amount to an outrage of a sufficiently grave character to be made a casus belli, so long as the Chinese authorities showed a willingness to do the best they could with a view to finding out and punishing the delinquents, and to preventing the recurrence of a similar outrage in the future. Pending further information than we have at present, we may fairly assume that a diplomatist of Sir THOMAS WADE'S lengthened experience has been careful to satisfy himself fully upon both these points. If he found that the failure to punish the offenders did not result from unwillingness on the part of the Chinese Government to do so, but from their inability, in consequence of the defective means of intercommunication and the want of organisation in the public administration, to bring the arm of the law to bear upon the culprits with sufficient rapidity, it was only wise and reasonable for him to accept the fact and to throw all the force of his influence into inducing them to take due measures to prevent a repetition of such an offence. In this he appears to have succeeded much more completely than was considered likely to be the case from previous attempts in the same direction. The proclamation agreed to has been duly posted; and a more conciliatory spirit than is usually manifested by the Chinese has been displayed. So far we may hope that the Yunnan outrage has been settled upon a reasonable, if not altogether a satisfactory basis, and passing to the commercial portion of the Convention, we have undoubted reason for congratulation upon the general terms which have been agreed upon. We trust, however, that sufficient security will be obtained that the new regulations as to the transit dues will be respected; and that the result of the present Convention may not be that the existing exactions upon foreign trade will be continued only with the name changed to lekin dues. This danger is so obvious that we cannot but believe that Sir THOMAS WADE has been careful to guard against it, and that he will obtain from the Chinese an agreement for carrying out the new provisions such as will prevent any such unsatisfactory result. We shall look with interest for the publication of the Convention in its final form, after ratification, before which no doubt this and other points will be cleared up satisfactorily, either with the Chinese Ambassador now shortly expected, or by reference, if necessary, to Peking.

THE REBELLION IN JAPAN.

THE details which have been brought by recent mails of the rebellion in Japan, of which a short account was transmitted by telegram, are satisfactory as showing that dangerous opposition to the present order of things is not to be apprehended; but, at the same time, are less reassuring in so far as they indicate the state of feeling generally existing in the country. The outbreak appears to have been organised mainly with a view of overthrowing the existing Government, and not from any hostility to the MIKADO. It was thus rather in the nature of a revolt than a revolution, and though, had it not been speedily suppressed, it might have assumed the latter character. The immediate cause of the outbreak appears on all hands to be admitted to be the oppressive measures which the existing Government has adopted against the ancient gentry of the country, since the revolution which deprived them of their power. The last straw which broke the camel's back in the present instance appears beyond doubt to have been the strong step recently taken by the Government, by which the above-named class were deprived at one blow of the larger portion of their revenues. An insurrection, headed by a Samurai named MAYEBARA, was the result, and the garrison of Kumamoto, together with nearly all the officials of the district, were surprised and cut to pieces on the 26th October last. Vigorous action on the part of the Government troops put down the rising in little more than a fortnight, MAYEBARA and the most important ringleaders being captured. Our Yokohama correspondent states that a commission has been appointed to try the insurgents; but it is expected that the Government, relying upon its strength, will be content with the execution of the chief movers. It is sincerely to be hoped not only that they will display moderation in this respect, but also that the present Administration will take warning by the outbreak, that it behoves them to exercise their powers with moderation, and that oppressive and unjust measures cannot be resorted to even by the most powerful Governments with impunity.

A LETTER, given in another column, which has appeared in the Scotsman, signed with the initials—well known to China residents—of "J. S. D.," recommends young Scots to "pluck up courage," and learn Chinese, with a view of obtaining appointments in the Straits or in China. We deem it right to raise a warning voice to any who may be inclined to follow the advice given, until some new arrangements be made at the Colonial and the Foreign Offices with reference to the appointment of interpreters; as, otherwise, those who may devote three or four years to the study of Chinese will find themselves grievously disappointed at the end of the time. At present those who are designed for Government interpreters are sent out to Hong Kong and China to learn the language at those places. The qualifications for appointments are influence in Government quarters and general educational attainments; and a knowof Chinese forms no part of the requirements. Until this system is altered it would clearly be premature for anyone to enter upon the study of Chinese with the hope of obtaining an appointment; and, while we trust some change in the method of providing interpreters will ere long be made, we would certainly not advise energetic young men—Scots or others—to adopt the study of Chinese as a means of entering upon a suitable career abroad.

A SOMEWHAT curious telegram is forwarded by the Berlin correspondent of the Daily News to the effect, namely, that it is probable that Germany and England will soon send men-of-war to the Philippine Islands for common action against the obstacles which Spain puts in the way of their commerce with the Sooloos. The report is, however, contradicted by the Berlin Official Gazette, which announces that the German schooner Minna, which had been seized by a Spanish man-of-war near the Sooloo Islands, was released in November last, in consequence of telegraphic orders from the Spanish Government. The Gazette calls attention to the agreement concluded in April, 1876, between England, Germany, and Spain, in accordance with which neither Spain nor Sooloo has a right to restrict direct commercial intercourse with the ports of the Sooloo Archipelago. The German Consul was therefore (says the Gazette) perfectly justified in clearing the Minna direct to Sooloo. Considering the friendly relations subsisting between the German and Spanish Governments, it is hoped that the negotiations which have again been opened will speedily lead to a complete and unrestricted exercise of the freedom of commercial relations which had previously been recognised.

WE give elsewhere a letter from a correspondent with reference to the new Companies Ordinance, which was proposed in the Hong Kong Legislative Council. He holds that the Chief Justice over-estimated the bearing of the measure, as it would not have the effect of making the shares either of the company specially concerned or companies generally so small that they would fall into weak hands, but that practically they would be in much the same hands as at present, namely, those of the average of the mercantile communities in China. We should have stated that the Chief Justice's objections as regards limited liability were that the measure would be a dangerous extension of that principle, not an introduction of it—as it has already been introduced, though in a less elaborate shape, by the Local Legislature.

THE short report by Mr. Consul KNOX upon the trade of Siam during the year 1875, which we reproduce from the Blue-book just issued, gives a discouraging view of the commercial prospects of that country. It appears that trade is shackled by heavy imposts, there being "no busi-"ness of any sort in which a Siamese can engage which does "not immediately bring him face to face with the tax-"gatherer."

AS will be seen by the report, of which a summary is given in our Money Article, the shareholders of the Suez Canal Company have given their sanction to the Convention, by which, it is anticipated, a reduction in the tariff will shortly be effected.

THE OPIUM TRADE.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—As I surmised, your correspondent, an "Old China Resident" has no shred nor tittle of evidence for the novel, and important statement to which I called attention. That statement was, that Opium smoking has been going on in China over 130 years as a familiar habit, and that there is conclusive evidence of this. The extract quoted by him, giving the evidence collected by Mr. Hobson, dates the knowledge of the drug Opium, and the growth of the poppy in Yunnan, and the medicinal use of the drug further back than 134 years previously to 1870; but not Opium smoking. All that Mr. Hobson says is 'that the drug was known and used;' Sir R. Alcock goes no further in express language, though the large amount which he supposes to have been produced in China "many thousand piculs annually" "suggests some other than medical use. I cannot, however, allow that a mere loose guess, though made by so eminent a person as Sir Rutherford Alcock, is of the nature of evidence at all; still less the conclusive evidence your correspondent boasted of.

That strong prepossession and great carelessness combined should have originally led your correspondent to the mistake of misinterpreting the paragraph he quotes is easily understood. But I regret to perceive that he persists in the false reading after his attention has been particularly called to the point. As to moral responsibility, it is perfectly clear that so long as the drug was used, or supposed to be used for medicine, the trade was a praiseworthy one. I point out that there is no evidence that the drug was otherwise used until after the East India Company's trade began. But that really matters nothing, so far as our national moral responsibility is concerned. We knew nothing about the Chinese vice of Opium smoking until near the close of the last century. When we did know of it we persisted in the Opium trade in spite of our knowledge. The more we knew of its evils the more we persisted. Therefore I said the effort to draw a red herring across the scent must certainly fail.—Yours, &c.,

BLUE BOOK.

THE PROPOSED NEW COMPANIES' ORDINANCE FOR HONG KONG.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—Permit me to call attention to one or two points in connection with the above-named measure, which I do not think have been adequately set forth in the reports which have come forward of the proceedings in the Legislative Council, and without which, an undue importance would appear to attach to the opposition to the measure which was made by Chief Justice Smale. The original Ordinance for effecting this change was introduced into the Council some months back, with the object of permitting a particular company to subdivide its shares from one of $1,500 to three of $500; and the second Ordinance—the one now under notice—was brought forward as it was thought the authorities here approved more of a general measure than a measure affecting only a special company. There was, therefore, nothing so unusual, as the Chief Justice appeared to think, in the re-introduction of the Ordinance; and I would submit that he over-estimates the effects which the measure is calculated to produce.

I do not deny that it would be dangerous in Hong Kong for companies with shares of very small denomination to be established, especially in conjunction with limited liability; but no such result would immediately have followed the passing of the proposed measure in the particular case which it would have effected, as shares of $500 or say £100 are large enough not to be liable to fall into very weak hands. In point of fact, they would remain in very much the same hands as they are in at present, that is, those of the average mercantile men in China, and I cannot help thinking that a measure to which in reality no valid objection existed has been somewhat unfortunately thrown out in consequence of its effects being largely overrated.—I am, &c.,

A CHINA MERCHANT.

HEALTH IN CHINA.

IN our last number we briefly noticed the medical reports on China for the quarter ending March 31st, 1876; and, as they contain much valuable information, we propose laying before our readers such portions as are of special interest to the general public. Some time back the Inspector-General of Customs drew up a memorandum which was circulated to the Customs Medical Officers at the various ports in China, and which, if adhered to, would have the effect of greatly increasing the practical utility of the interesting reports from time to time issued by them. Mr. HART suggested that returns should be made half-yearly of the general health of the different ports; the death-rate among foreigners, and as far as possible a classification of the causes of death, the diseases prevalent at the different places, and other like particulars. In reviewing the reports on previous occasions, we pointed out the desirability of some such classification as is indicated in the Inspector-General's memo. being more rigidly adhered to, and, without in any way desiring to detract from the merit of the papers now under notice, would again suggest that this point be taken into further consideration. It is true that the particulars roughly indicated in Mr. HARTS' memo. are generally given by the various medical gentlemen in their respective reports; but they appear in one report in one place and form, in another in a different place and connection, so that it is extremely difficult to form any accurate idea on the subject, except by more careful perusal and analysis than most people have time to devote to it. A well-arranged schedule, in which the Medical Officer at each port should be called upon to fill up the particulars demanded, would entirely meet the requirements in this respect, and we make no doubt that a suitable schedule of this kind could be drawn up by Dr. R. ALEX. JAMIESON of Shanghai, who we notice is charged with the arrangement of the reports for publication, and than whom no more suitable person could have been selected.

CHEFOO.—Dr. Carmichael reports that the health of the community was unusually good, only one death having occurred among Europeans, and this being of a child during dentition. He notices that fevers, dysentery, and diarrhœa, so common in the South, are seldom found at Chefoo, and that those which are met with are generally imported from the South. In most cases, however, they yielded to small doses of quinine. It appears that the cold weather has the effect of "bringing them out." Dr. Carmichael notices an unpleasant visitor from Japan, in the form of a peculiar fever of the typhus character, to which it seems all nationalities are subject. It appears to be of a severe nature but not very fatal, as only two deaths took place out of a total of fifty cases which came under the doctor's notice.

CHINKIANG.—Dr. A. R. Platt reports that the health of the foreign community has been good, but there has been scarcely an individual of it but what has been afflicted with some form of disease, more or less grave; but all cases have yielded readily to treatment, doubtless due to the exceptionally healthy surroundings. No death among foreigners has occurred. Small-pox has been epidemic, and deaths in the city and suburbs very numerous; but the three cases recorded are stated by Dr. Platt to have been so very mild in form that they more properly come under the head of varioloid.

KUKIANG.—Dr. J. Jardine reports that during the twelve months under notice the health of the community has been good. No epidemics have prevailed among foreigners or natives, and no deaths have occurred among the former. The diseases that have come under notice during the period have been of a mild type, and, with two or three exceptions, have yielded to the usual treatment. Dr. Jardine notes a simple and useful mode of curing the troublesome skin disease known as Urticaria, namely, by baths made by boiling common pine-wood shavings in water. He says that tar appears to be the chief agent in the bath, and as this is an agreeable way of using it, it may prove useful in this form in other cases of skin diseases where this remedy is indicated.

TAMSUI AND KELUNG.—Dr. B. S. Ringer states that during the heat of the summer a few cases of rather severe diarrhœa, attended with occasional vomiting and febrile disturbance, occurred at the tea settlement, Twatutia. He is inclined to believe the cause was malarious, as the neighbourhood is surrounded by swampy paddy fields and vegetable gardens that are watered with liquified human excrement, and in no case was the attack traceable to any indiscretion in diet; however, in a week or two, under ordinary treatment and a change for a day or two at the sea-side, each case terminated favourably. In Kelung one or two cases of ague have been noted; which may probably be accounted for by the dampness of the climate and the fact that the foreign residences are for the most part built at the foot of a steep hill. No fatal cases, however, have to be recorded.

TAKOW AND TAIWANFOO.—Dr. T. Rennie states that the health of the foreign community was not so good as in past winters. There were no fewer than five of the community who suffered from repeated attacks of simple intermittent fever. Four out of the five cases had their origin in a locality which has for some time been admitted to be decidedly malarious, and out of which situation it is very seldom that among the Europeans a case of malarious fever appears. Of those affected with fever, two, beyond the anxiety of the disease while it lasted, had no further suffering; a third was rendered very anæmic, and a fourth, who had formerly suffered from ague and enlarged spleen, had on the present occasion much turgescence of both liver and spleen on the legs irritable ulcers formed, which were with difficulty healed, and when healed, broke out with a fresh attack of fever.

NINGPO.—Dr. J. H. Mackenzie reports that during the year under notice the health of the foreign community has been very good, and that only one death took place during that period. As usual the predominating complaints were diarrhœa and dyspepsia, the months of June, July and August having contributed the greatest number of cases of the former disease, the latter being distributed throughout the whole year. In most instances fruit was the cause of diarrhœa; and people cannot be too careful as regards both the quantity and the quality of the fruit they consume. Several cases of severe purging and vomiting came under notice, caused by eating clams and other shell-fish, and although alarming at the time, were easily managed. A few cases of dysentery occurred, but only one of them of a serious character.

SWATOW.—Dr. Scott reports that the general health of European residents for the six months ending March 31, 1876, was good. Four deaths—a large number for so small a community—occurred, but only one case, namely, of abscess of liver, could be traced to the effects of climate. This number of deaths is quite exceptional, many years passing without the death of any European resident occurring.

AMOY.—Dr. Manson reports:—The past winter has been a very healthy one. There have been no deaths among the foreign residents. Among sailors there has been one death, in the month of October, from congestive apoplexy. The case was that of a negro, about forty years old, who had not previously complained of bad health. He died suddenly while engaged in mending a sail on the ship's deck. At the post-mortem examination nothing was discovered beyond an intense congestion of the vessels of the surface of the brain and of the brain substance.

FOOCHOW.—Dr. Somerville gives an elaborate series of meteorological observations, and traces the connection between the weather and health. He notes that "malarious" diseases are rare at Foochow even during the hot season; and that zymotic diseases, so fatal at home, have hardly any existence there, with the exception of typhoid fever, which appears in sporadic cases now and again. Of the deaths which have occurred during the last fourteen years, most have been caused by dysentery.

TIENTSIN.—Dr. Frazer states that the health of the foreign community was very good during the past half-year. No deaths occurred, and no serious cases of disease or injury came under observation.

SHANGHAI.—Dr. R. Alex. Jamieson reports that according to the Municipal Burials Register there were forty-five deaths during the half-year ending March 31, 1876, among the foreign community, from which, subtracting twenty-one deaths among non-residents, we obtain twenty-four as the number among the residents, eight of which occurred among infants under three years of age. The mortality from disease among foreign residents is thus reduced to sixteen (fourteen males and two females), as against seventeen during the same period of 1875. During October and the early part of November a brief and limited epidemic of cholera passed over Shanghai. An epidemic of measles occurred during the latter part of the half-year. The cases were of rather more than average severity, but none were fatal.

THE TRADE OF SIAM.

The subjoined report by Mr. Knox, Her Majesty's Consul-General in Siam, on the trade of the year 1875 has been issued from the Foreign-office:—

A larger number of vessels entered this port during the year 1875 than in any previous year. The aggregate tonnage amounted to 213,174 tons, and of these 110,625 were British. The following table represents the British shipping and the value of their cargoes during the past three years:—

	Entered.			Cleared.
	Vessels.	Tons.	Value.	Vessels.	Tons.	Value.
1873	84	32,713	£409,634	83	32,296	£406,740

The amount of rice exported during 1875 was in excess of all previous years by about 1,000,000 piculs. There is, however, no reason to believe that this arises from new land being brought into cultivation, but simply that the season was a good one, and the demand for rice in China was constant throughout the year. Burmah and Cochin China having the advantage of telegraphic communication with the rest of the world, and their trade being on a more regular footing, the rice from those countries is all taken away as soon as it is ready. In Siam the export, though far less on the whole than in either of those countries, continues throughout the year. I fear there is little reason to believe that Siam will produce, at least for some time to come, more rice than she does at present. Nothing is done to encourage the cultivators, and a system of advances made by officials on the crops is growing up, which eventually takes all profit out of their hands. The only business that shows signs of increasing is that of teak. If this trade were encouraged it would rise to great importance, but as the Government does nothing but collect the duty on the timber, and those engaged in the trade have but little capital, it has to struggle against many difficulties. The production of sugar is yearly diminishing.

The fact is the country is overtaxed. Nearly all the profits made by producers are taken from them by the Government or the numerous officials, who are largely in excess of what is required either for maintaining order or for the purposes of administration. No part of the taxes obtained by Government is spent for the benefit of the people or for the encouragement of trade; it is either hoarded or spent on useless frivolities. There is no business of any sort in which a Siamese can engage which does not immediately bring him face to face with the tax-gatherer.

HAMBURG, JAN. 9.

Before this report reaches its destination the great election battle will have been fought, and we shall know whether the Liberal party has been strong enough to keep the destructive element down. Great exertions seem to have been made on both sides, but they are by no means to be compared with what is generally done in England in such cases, and the money spent here upon political agitation purposes would amount to but a very small sum in comparison with the enormous funds which are expended in England to secure the victory for one candidate or the other. In two districts here the Liberal candidates will probably be carried through, but in the third the result is very questionable.

The Hamburg-American Steamship Company has sustained yet another misfortune, in the form of an accident to one of its steamers. The Saxonia, s.s., Captain Frobvess, from the West Indies, via Plymouth and Havre, to Hamburg, on Friday last stranded on the island of Heligoland, and is reported a total loss. The cause of this disaster, the third which has occurred in a few months, the captain attributes to the new fog-signals which have been fired since the month of November last on the island, and of which the captain knew nothing, as the ships-husband of the company had forgotten to instruct one of the agents at Plymouth or Havre to make the captain acquainted with this new means for the protection of shipping. There being a fog at the time, these signals when heard by the captain were mistaken by him for the gun-fire from the outer lightship, and without thinking it necessary to take a single cast of the lead, which no doubt would have shown him his error, he altered his course accordingly, and steered his ship direct to destruction. The Saxonia, a sister-ship to the unfortunate Austria (burned at sea in 1859), was insured to her full value, and the company therefore suffers no loss. The captain of the Goethe, s.s., recently stranded at La Plata, has been arrested by the Government of Uruguay for some reason not yet known. The German Consul declining to protect the captain, the company by telegraph has requested the Germau Ambassador to investigate the affair. The particulars are as yet unknown, but it is not very unlikely that one of our ironclads may have to pay a visit to the little Republic.

The weather has been very mild, last Sunday being actually spring-like, and many people availed themselves of the opportunity to enjoy the fresh air. To-day it blows almost a hurricane from the S.W., with heavy rain and an unusually high thermometer. To the northward, especially in Sweden and Norway, fearful masses of snow have fallen, and the railways have been so much obstructed that, for example, the mails from Stockholm and other places have for a whole week been missing. In Russia the extreme frost has disappeared, and at present the usual winter climate is prevailing. In some parts of Russia and in Denmark the frost at times has been so severe that numbers of wild fowl, such as ducks, geese, &c., have been found frozen to death.

Another fatal disaster has happened on our river, in which an English vessel is involved. The Hamburg barque Hercules, from Akyab, after a voyage of 216 days arrived in the river, and while being towed up, was run into by the English steamer Alford, Captain Mallet, bound to London. The collision happened at half-past five in the morning, and the barque went down almost immediately, and the Alford, s.s., returned to harbour with a large hole in her bow, and with her fore compartment full of water.

A very melancholy rumour was circulated here last night. The German corvette Vineta, at present in China waters, was said to have been lost on the China coast, with all the crew, except the commander and a few other officers. The Admiralty to-day formally contradicted this rumour, adding at the same time that the Vineta on the 30th December last left Yokohama for Manila all well. Notwithstanding this announcement some uneasiness is still perceptible.

The Russian Government promulgated a decree in December last, according to which all import duties from January 1, 1877, are to be levied in gold instead of paper currency as heretofore, but the Government has since granted a postponement of the measure till January 13. All goods reaching the frontier and the Custom-houses before the 13th inst. will pay duty in paper currency.

The inundation of the River Nogat is still increasing, and the waters are spreading over all the neighbouring lands. A great many villages are deserted by their inhabitants, and the ruin of buildings and property makes further progress every hour. The floating ice is carried with great force against the walls of the edifices in the inundated villages, and does much mischief.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

Our trade has not yet revived after the holidays, and this circumstance, in connection with the now warlike aspect of the Eastern question, induces only limited transactions and necessitates much caution on the part of operators. The Money Market is still well supplied. Cotton has been in brisk demand and quotations show an advance. Spices have been rather quiet, with the exception of Pepper, which is in good request. Singapore quality is quoted m.42½ to 43 ; Penang m.37½ to 38 ; Mace, m.4.50 to 5 ; Nutmegs m.2.30 to 3 per ½ kilo. Cloves are quiet ; Zanzibar quality is quoted m.142 to 144 per 50 kilo. Transactions in Rice have been of limited extent, but prices are maintained. Tea has been quiet, without transactions of importance.

SHIPPING.

The trade on our river has now been a week without any impediment, and the arrivals and departures, having regard to the time of the year, are satisfactory. Of arrivals from the Far East are reported the Therese, Wever, from Levuka, and Atalanta, Schoof, from Enderburg. The Feronia, s.s., Schultz, belonging to the German Steamship Company, after discharging her cargo from Batavia, in Holland, has arrived here, and has taken the berth for the usual route to China, via Penang and Singapore. The Hesperia, s.s., of the same Company, did not obtain a full cargo here, and had to call at London to fill up. As regards vessels on the berth for East India and China, there is no alteration to be reported.

HOLLAND.

AMSTERDAM, JAN. 10.

The Members of both the Chambers are still enjoying their holidays, and consequently a lull prevails in politics. The papers are busy with discussing the pro and con of the Bill to alter or to improve our lower class educational system. Mr. Heemskerk, who has done all he could to avoid the rocks and quicksands of politics, and to remain good friends with all parties, did not of course dare to propose a radical measure. His Bill, therefore, bears a most uncertain character, so that instead of friends he has only created foes. Only a very few newspapers support the Bill, and the large majority condemn it on the ground that it is only a half measure. It may safely be foretold that, if its provisions are not enormously changed by amendments, there is not the least chance that the measure will be carried. I need scarce y say that many are of opinion that a Ministerial crisis is near at hand. The Education question is not the only stumbling-block in the way; the Reform Bill, the reorganisation of our system of taxation, the question of national defence, &c., are all matters by which the Ministers may come to grief.

According to a statistical return of our shipping trade during the year 1876, 7,495 vessels arrived from foreign ports in our harbours, whilst 7,511 sailed. I am glad to say that the new canal from this town to the North Sea is gradually improving, so that the traffic becomes larger and larger. Since the 1st of November, when it was inaugurated, 243 vessels, measuring 81,987 tons, have passed through. The canal has already proved a great benefit to our town. Cattle, for instance, were formerly almost exclusively shipped to England, via Rotterdam, but for some weeks past a regular service has been opened to convey sheep from North Holland to your country. When the canal is completed so as to admit ships of the largest tonnage (which will be the case on the 1st of August) attention will be fixed more and more on the plan for making dry land of the Zuyderzee.

The French Minister of Public Works, M. Christophe, has honoured our country with a visit. His aim was to study our railway system and to examine our public works. He only remained three days in Utrecht, Rotterdam, and here, so that his inspection must have been somewhat hurried.

The Steamship Company "Nederland" published on 1st January a new tariff for passenger fares. The principal alteration is that children under two years are carried free, whilst formerly only a child under eleven months was allowed a free passage.

The largest ironclad of our fleet, the Konig der Nederlanden, has been fitted out, and will start for Batavia on the 15th March.

AMSTERDAM, JAN. 11.

The members of the Sumatra Expedition—a few only excepted—will start on the 13th inst. by the steamer Conrad. The amount subscribed for this geographical expedition is sufficient to enable the members to remain in the island for one year. The committee, however, is of opinion that so much more will be contributed that it will become possible to extend the operations for at least two years. The leaders of the expedition are Messrs. J. Schonn Santvoort and D. D. Veth.

In the course of this year 2,500 soldiers will be sent to Java in order to reinforce the East India army.

The members of the Second Chamber will reassemble on the 13th of February. The First Chamber met yesterday for the despatch of business.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

The trade in Colonial Produce has been limited, except as regards Coffee and Sugar. Prices, in general, are well maintained.

COFFEE.—Business has been very lively, and important lots have changed hands both for actual wants and for export. The unfavourable news from Rio about the crop and the very small stocks have influenced this market enormously. The value of good ordinary Java is 57c. to 57½c. ; of Malang 58c. to 58½c. About 20,000 bales, ex different vessels, have been sold at secret prices. The stock includes 322,000 bs., against 663,500 bs. in 1875. Floating, on December 31, 413,200 bs., against 211,000 bs. on that date in 1875.

TEA is very quiet for the moment, in waiting for the forthcoming public sales. The nominal quotations are : — Good ordinary China Congou, 75c. to 80c. ; Java, 65c. to 70c. ; ditto Souchong, 80c. to 85c. ; Java, 70c. to 75c. Stock in Holland 17,600/4 chests Java, and 7,900/4 chests China.

SUGAR.—The market is very firm, and only very small quantities are offered. About 14,000 mats have changed hands at f.9¼ to f.10, above October prices. Holders, however, refuse to operate at these quotations, because they are of opinion that pricet still will go higher. The article looks very healthy. Refined is somewhat duller.

RICE without transactions in first hands. The imports have been large, and amongst them appears 2,000 tons from Japan.

SPICES very quiet, but prices are well maintained. A few small lots Nutmegs and Mace have changed hands. Cloves without business. Pepper has met with a good demand, 2,243 bs. ex Feronica were sold at secret but firm prices, and for 650 bs. ex Celebes 21½c. was paid.

JAVA TOBACCO without business, and the arrivals have been of no importance. The stock includes 9,993 bs. Java, 430 bs. Sumatra, 3,000 bs. East Indian and 3,450 m. Apenhaar.

COTTON.—The market opened with the New Year very lively, in consequence of the reports from America, stating that the receipts in the harbours had decreased. An advance is now quoted on the last prices.

DRUGS are as a rule very quiet ; only 800 piculs Gum Damar have changed hands, at prices which were kept secret. Camphor dull, China is quoted 48c. to 50c.; Japan 49c. to 51c.

RATTANS.—A lot of 150 pic. ex Professor Simon Thomas has been sold.

INDIGO.—Very quiet, and transactions were most insignificant. Prices unaltered.

DIVI-DIVI.—About 1,000 lbs. ex Pera changed hands at f.9.

TIN is still very dull. Some small lots Banca were sold at f.44⅜ but holders decline now to operate under f.45. Billiton is nominally quoted at f.44 to f.44¼.

Monetary and Commercial.

In the Produce Markets business generally has been steady but quiet, the unsettled condition of European politics and the extremely unfavourable weather having combined to check the development of trade. Tea and Silk are without alteration. Coffee is active, and prices continue to advance. Gambier is also in demand at higher quotations. Sugar is very dull. Spices are in large supply, and Mace and Nutmegs have declined in value. Sago is likewise lower.

The total quantity of tea delivered from the bonded warehouses in London for the week ended with the 6th inst., was 3,416,715 lbs., of which 2,373,043 lbs. was for home consumption, 499,225 lbs. was removed coastwise, 327,252 lbs. was exported, 214,562 lbs. was sent coastwise for exportation, and 2,633 lbs. was for ships' stores, while the amount of duty received during the same period was £59,326.

It is announced that the Customs authorities have made an important concession to the tea trade. They have permitted, under certain necessary regulations, the "mixing" or "blending" of teas in bond.

On the 10th inst. the South-Eastern Railway Company conveyed from London, via Folkestone and Boulogne, en route for Milan, 948 cases of silkworm's eggs, weighing 26 tons 11 cwt. The eggs came to Liverpool from Japan.

The following are the latest quotations of Banking and other Companies connected with the Far East:—Agra Bank, 10 to 10¼; Chartered Bank of India, 18½ to 19½; Chartered Mercantile Bank, 28½ to 29½; Comptoir D'Escompte, f.672 to 675; Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank, 31 to 32; Oriental Bank, 45 to 46; P. and O. Company, 36 to 38; Messageries Maritimes, f.620; Suez Canal, f.672½; Japan Loan 9 per cent., 110 to 113; ditto, 7 per cent., 101 to 103.

The demand for Bar Silver has been good during the week, and considerable business has been done for the East, at 57¼d. per oz., and we quote this as the last price, with every appearance of a firm market. Mexican Dollars have been sold at 58⅛d., being an improvement on the price previously current.

The amount of bullion per P. and O. Steamer Australia, from Southampton on the 11th inst., was—In silver to Penang £41,400, to Singapore £1,700, to Hong Kong £5,315; total £48,415.

The tenders for the India Council drafts and telegraphic transfers on the 10th inst. show that there is still a fair demand for means of remittance to the East. The 35 lacs of rupees were allotted as under:—£183,300 on Calcutta, and £16,700 on Madras; applicants at 1s. 10d. for drafts, and 1s. 10 1-16d. for telegraphic transfers, receiving about 16 per cent., while on Bombay £150,000 was taken in bills, applicants at 1s. 10d. receiving 20 per cent.

The Suez Canal Company held a meeting of the shareholders in Paris on the 10th inst. to sanction a convention signed last February by M. de Lesseps, in the name of the Company, and by Colonel Stokes, on the part of the British Government, purposing to put an end to the differences between the Company and Maritime Commerce. The text of this Convention is as follows:—

"Between M. Ferdinand de Lesseps, G.C.S.I., &c., Managing President of the Company of the Suez Maritime Canal, with full powers from the Board, on the one part; and Colonel John Stokes, C.B., &c., authorised by the Government of Her British Majesty, on the other part, the following has been agreed upon:—Article 1. M. de Lesseps engages to get accepted by the said Company all that has been done at Constantinople relative to the question of tonnage for the tariff of transit by the Suez Canal, conformably with the final Report of the International Commission of the 18th of December, 1873, and adopted by the Ottoman Porte. Article 2. In return for this declaration, the British Government will undertake negotiations, the result of which will be to replace the present provision on the reduction of the surtax by an arrangement in virtue of which the first reduction of 50c. commences on the 1st of January, 1877; the second reduction of 50c. on the 1st. of January, 1872; the third, on the 1st of January, 1881; the fourth on the 1st of January, 1882; the fifth, on the 1st of January, 1883; the sixth, on the 1st of January, 1884; so that after the last date the surtax is extinct, and the maximum of f.10 per ton of nett official freight is alone to be levied. Article 3. M. de Lesseps engages that the company will execute the extraordinary works of construction over and above the works of ordinary maintenance for a sum of f.1,000,000 per annum during thirty years. Article 4. As soon as the British Government has communicated to M. de Lesseps the favourable result of the negotiations referred to in Article 2, M. de Lesseps will withdraw all his protests against the Ottoman Porte."

The accompanying report announces that the final instrument which is to authorise the execution of this Convention, and is to emanate from the Ottoman Porte, not having yet been notified by the Company; that as, on the other hand, according to the Company's terms of concession, no modification of the tariff can be applied till after a notice three months in advance, the dates of the reduction of the tariff contemplated in the said Convention will be postponed from the 1st of January till the 15th of April, 1877. In the contrary case, the reductions of the tariff would necessarily undergo a further delay. At the meeting the Convention was approved with only four dissentients, there being from 170 to 200 shareholders present. M. de Lesseps announced officially that the dividend on the shares would probably reach 28f. for the year 1876, taxes deducted.

Towards the end of the present month the Yangtsee, a new steamer for the China line, is to be launched by the Messageries Maritimes, from their yard at La Ciotat, near Marseilles. It is built upon the most approved model, and will be about the dimensions of the Djemna and the Meikong. Its length will be 115 metres, and its breadth of beam 10 to 12 metres with a tonnage of 3,610 tons (French). It is intended to replace the Meikong, which will be shortly laid up for repairs. The fitting up of the new vessel will take four or five months, so that it will not go to sea before July next at the earliest.

With reference to the announcement of the dissolution of partnership between Messrs. Ferdinand Rösing and C. E. Melchers, mentioned in our last, Mr. Ferdinand Rösing has issued a circular announcing that he will continue business in London at 11, Billiter-square, and in Manchester, and resume his old firm of Rösing Brothers and Co., having admitted his brother-in-law, Mr. Hermann Bossier, late of Bossier and Co., Manchester, as a partner.

Mr. James Whittall, late partner of Messrs. Jardine, Matheson and Co., of China, has joined the Board of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China.

The Great Northern Telegraph Company's traffic receipts for December, 1876, were f.323,258, against f.375,315 in December, 1875. The total traffic receipts from 1st January to 31st December were in 1876 f.4,895,757, in 1875 f.4,155,905.

The report of the Union Bank of London adopted at the meeting on the 10th inst. showed a net profit of £95,638, and inclusive of a sum of £1,709 brought in an available balance of £97,347, was left. The dividend at the rate of 12½ per cent. per annum absorbed £87,188, and to the next account £10,160 is carried. The liabilities on current and deposit accounts are £13,185,909, and on acceptances (under cover), £5,315,345, making the total of these two items £18,501,254, against £18,374,286 on the 31st December, 1875. The cash in hand and at call amounted to £4,017,978, against £4,267,879, and the loans and bills discounted to £13,626,282, against £12,969,102 at the corresponding period in the previous year.

The directors of the Anglo-American Telegraph Company will recommend at the meeting next month a further dividend of 1½ per cent. on the ordinary stock, making a total distribution of 4½ per cent. for the past year, as against 5 per cent. for 1875. The deferred stock receives a balance dividend of 2½ per cent. for the half-year, making with the ½ per cent. paid in October, 3 per cent. for the year. The sum of £25,000 is placed to the renewal fund, and £22,000 (part of which is spare cable) is carried forward.

At a meeting of the Consolidated Bank, to be held on the 18th inst., the directors will propose to pay a dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum, to add (including interest) £5,000 to the reserve fund, and to carry forward £5,555 to the next account. At the corresponding period last year the dividend was at the same rate. £7,500 was added to the reserve fund, and a balance of £5,674 was carried forward.

The directors of the Wilts and Dorset Banking Company have declared a dividend at the rate of 24 per cent. per annum for the past half-year, making a total distribution of 22 per cent. for the year 1876.

The North and South Wales Bank notify the payment of a dividend and bonus for the past half-year, together at the rate of 17½ per cent. per annum. The Liverpool Commercial Bank announce a dividend and bonus of 15s. per share, making 12½ per cent. for 1876; and the Liverpool Union Bank a dividend of 10s. per share, being 10 per cent. for the twelve months.

The Union Bank of Australia will pay a dividend of 7 per cent. and a bonus of 5s. per share, being together at the rate of 16 per cent. per annum. The dividend and bonus will absorb £100,000 of the net profit, leaving £8,237 to be carried forward.

The National Bank of New Zealand will pay an interim dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, free of income-tax, for the six months ending the 30th of September last.

The Liverpool Commercial Banking Company have declared a dividend of 10s. per share for the last half-year, being at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum; also a bonus of 5s. per share.

The directors of the London and Provincial Marine Insurance Company will recommend the payment of interest for the half-year ended 30th of December last at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum, being the same as last year.

At the annual meeting of the Norwich Union Fire Insurance Company a dividend of £22 10s. per share (£30 per share paid), was declared, being at the rate of 75 per cent. per annum.

The Globe Telegraph and Trust Company announce that their interim dividends for the quarter ending the 18th inst. will be three shillings per share on the Preference Shares and two shillings per share on the ordinary shares. These are the same rates of distribution as at this time last year.

THE BOARD OF TRADE RETURNS.

The Board of Trade Returns for December and for h twelve months have been issued, and again show that the unsatisfactory position of the export trade continues. The value of the imports of foreign and colonial produce for the month amounted to £29,105,022, against £32,114,441 in the corresponding period of 1875 and £28,683,186 in 1874. For the year ending December 31st the value of the imports was £377,003,771, against £373,941,125 in 1875 and £370,054,894 in 1874. The imports of raw cotton have decreased 9 per cent. in quantity, but as much as 22¾ per cent. in value; raw silk decreased 33½ per cent. in quantity, but only 4¾ per cent. in value; wool increased 15½ per cent. in quantity and 24½ per cent. in value; sugar decreased 26¾ per cent. in quantity, but increased 1½ per cent. in value; tea decreased 7½ per cent. in quantity and 6 per cent. in value; coffee decreased 51 per cent. in quantity and 54¼ per cent. in value; cocoa increased 22 per cent in quantity and 26 per cent. in value; butter increased 17 per cent. in quantity and 21¼ per cent. in value; cheese increased 12 per cent in quantity and 13½ per cent in value; bacon decreased 13½ per cent. in quantity and value; rice decreased 27¼ per cent. in quantity, but only 8 per cent. in value; wine decreased 17¾ per cent. in quantity and 12¾ per cent. in value; tobacco decreased 27½ per cent. in quantity and 20½ per cent. in value; and wood and timber increased 5½ per cent. in quantity and 8¾ per cent in value.

The value of the exports of British and Irish produce for the month of December amounted to £15,526,950, against £17,297,543 in the same month of 1875 and £17,830,148 in 1874. For the year 1876 the total exports were valued at £200,575,856, against £223,465,968 in 1875 and £239,558,121 in 1874. The exports of cotton yarn have increased 13½ per cent. in quantity, but the value has decreased 1 per cent.; cotton piece goods increased 3 per cent. in quantity, but decreased 8 per cent. in value; linen and jute yarn decreased 21 per cent. in quantity and 32 per cent in value; linen piece goods decreased 20½ per cent. in quantity and 24½ per cent. in value; woollen and worsted yarn decreased 12¼ per cent. in quantity and 21 per cent. in value; woollen cloths decreased 6½ per cent. in quantity and 10¾ per cent. in value; worsted stuffs decreased 1¼ per cent. in quantity and 5 per cent. in value; coal, coke, &c., decreased 1¼ per cent. in quantity, but as much as 14 per cent. in value; and iron and steel decreased 10 per cent. in quantity and 18 per cent. in value.

SILK.

There has been hardly anything doing since the 1st of the month Prices remain, for all classes, unaltered, and there seems little disposition to accept anything under quotations. For fine Silk, Japan, Tsatlees, and best Tsatlee reels, Cantons, the feeling is that we shall see stiffer rates when business is again resumed. Deliveries are low, but such is always the case at the beginning of the year.

COFFEE.—With continued animation, chiefly on speculative account, a good general business has again been done on the spot and afloat, prices exhibiting a further upward tendency. The prices realised have been, Plantation Ceylon, triage, 95s. 6d. to 102s., small 111s. to 113s., low middling (old crop) 117s. 6d.. middling to good middling new crop 122s. to 124s. 6d., bold 126s., pea-berry 125s. to 125s. 6d. Native Ceylon, small 80s. 6d., ordinary 91s. 6d., fine ordinary 94s., rather bold 94s. 6d., bold 97s. 6d., pea-berry 92s. 6d. to 95s. 6d. Of other descriptions of East India the public sales have been 1,950 bags Indan Manila, pale greenish at 91s. 6d. to 92s., good yellowish at 93s., with one lot at 93s. 6d. 102 bags Manila, Zamboanza at 88s., and 211 bags Java at 85s. 6d. to 86s. 350 bags Singapore were bought in, picked Bally kind at 84s. By private contract a good business (chiefly re-sales) has been done at very full rates, including 250 bags good ordinary Native Ceylon at 93s., 500 bags Indan Manila, pale at 94s., yellowish at 96s. Also for arrival about 100 tons Native Ceylon, January-February shipment, at 93s. 6d. to 94s., and several parcels of Plantation, par crops, particulars not reported.

CANTHARIDES.—Of 9 cases China 2 cases sold at 2s. 6d., the remainder bought in at 3s.

COCOANUT OIL is in rather more demand, and 20 tons Ceylon in puncheons near at hand by steamer have been sold at £37 15s.

CHINA PRESERVES.—At auction the large supply of 1,263 cases met a moderate demand, but holders being generally free sellers about 500 cases sold at lower prices, Samshing in small jars at 5¾d., Quang Cheong Attal in ditto 6¾d. per lb., and Chyloong at 19s. to 19s. 6d. per case. 86 cases Chow Chow chiefly sold without reserve at 4½d. to 4¾d. per lb.

CHINA STRAW PLAIT.—At auction 380 bales met little demand, and only 45 bales found buyers at about the former value, common mottled £5 10s., fine narrow ditto £20 5s., chiefly white common £7 17s. 6d., low middling to middling £9 2s. 6d. to £10 15s., good £19 per bale.

GAMBIER.—With a good demand further sales have been made on the spot at 22s. 3d. for whole bales, and 100 tons for arrival, January-February shipment, at 22s. ex ship. At public sale a good supply of 2,221 bags free cubes met a limited demand, and only 950 bags found buyers at lower rates, fine pale rather blocky at 35s., blocky 34s., the bulk damaged, first-class at 30s., the remainder bought in at 37s., fine Java 38s. 570 bales and about one ton pressed cubes all sold at full prices, fine dark 26s. 3d. to 27s.

GUM BENJAMIN.—Of 27 cases Sumatra 2 cases fair seconds rather mixed with dark sold at £7 10s., and 10 cases good middling ditto at £6 17s. 6d.

HEMP.—The market for Manila continues flat, and a moderate supply at the periodical auctions met offers only on lower terms, and the bulk was bought in, a small part being sold at easier rates; fair current is now quoted £30. Of 1,994 bales offered the bulk was bought in at £29 to £31, with fine at £34, only about 400 bales finding buyers, fair brown at £28, mixed quality below fair at £29 5s. to £29 10s., white Quilot at £35 to £35 15s., ditto inferior at £33 to £34. Ten bales China were sold at £21 15s. per ton.

INDIA-RUBBER.—Business has been done at full rates to a slight advance; a good quantity of old Borneo has been sold at 1s. 3½d., new ditto being firm at 1s. 4d. For arrival business has been done in Borneo at 1s. 4½d. per lb.

MANCHESTER GOODS.

With continued activity and advancing prices in Liverpool, this market has become daily dearer, and stronger in tone; a fair amount of orders have been placed, but buyers have shown no disposition to enter into large transactions. Producers are very firm in holding for the further advance noted in our quotations. A fair inquiry exists for both Yarns and Goods, particularly of the better qualities, but the extreme prices now asked materially restrict business. At the same time the feeling that values will not recede is becoming more manifest.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

YOKOHAMA.

The present French mail brings advices from this port to the 5th December, and we have advices by the Occidental and Oriental Company's steamer Oceanic, via San Francisco, six days later, viz., to the 11th December. The P. and O. mail from London, October 13, arrived out on the 29th November, and the following French mail of October 20 on the 5th December. The Japan Herald supplies the following items of news:—

A severe disaster has befallen Tokio. On the night of the 29th-30th November a fire broke out in that city, and before it could be extinguished a space of about two and a-half square miles was devastated. A fire is, during the winter months, of almost nightly occurrence in Tokio, but this was of unprecedented magnitude, even surpassing the fire which in April, 1872, originated in the Mikado's castle, and burnt its way between Kiyobashi and Shinbashi down to the sea at Tsukidji. A strong north-west wind was blowing, and drove on the fire in a south-eastern direction with such appalling velocity that by half-past one A.M. part of Tsukidji was in flames. From the house where it originated—it is said through the upsetting of a kerosene lamp—the fire travelled over the Tokaido between Nihonbashi and Kiyobashi, destroyed the quarter lying east to that part of the Tokaido,—the most populous business part of Tokio,—ravaged Shimabara,—whose large theatre is now a thing of the past,—and only stopped at the last canal in Tsukidji. The foreign settlement in Tokio, which was sadly visited by the fire in 1872, has again suffered heavy losses. Messrs. Kniffler and Co.'s large and beautiful compound, formerly belonging to Mr. Heeren, and only recently rented to the Austrian Legation, was burnt down; so were the houses and business premises of Mr. Clataud, Mr. Joseph Ruel, Mr. Charles Hesse, and Mr. Richard MacCance, likewise Dr. Martin's house. This is the third time that Mr. Ruel has been burnt out in Tsukidji. This time we believe he was insured, as were also Messrs. Kniffler and Co., Dr. Martin, and Mr. Clataud. The butcher's shop and general store of Messrs. Hall and Co., enveloped as it was in smoke, and an almost unbearable heat, under an incessant rain of falling sparks, embers, and burning wood, only escaped destruction through the strenuous exertions of its occupants. The French Mission's premises have also fortunately been saved. The fire leapt three canals, and the number of houses burnt down can scarcely be computed at less than 9,000; in the area over which the fire raged innumerable godowns are standing unburnt. Many lives were lost, and adjacent to the smoking embers of the great fire Tokio presented an animated appearance next day. The streets were thronged with spectators and houseless people, and with carts, some removing furniture, and some carrying building materials,—for many of the compounds are already fenced in to be built upon anew. The misery and destitution caused by such an extensive fire must be very great. The number of houses destroyed has not been officially declared, but estimates vary from ten to fifteen thousand. Even the lowest of these computations would show that some fifty or sixty thousand people have been rendered homeless. The Government has provided temporary food and refuge for the more destitute, and many of the Japanese are subscribing for the relief of those in distress. A subscription has also been opened at the office of this paper, to which foreigners have liberally responded.

We recently announced the collapse of the insurrection and the departure of the Minister of Justice for the scene of the outbreak to try the rebels. This has now been completed. Mayebara and some dozen others of the principal leaders have been sentenced to be decapitated, and we learn by telegraph that the penalty was carried out on the 3rd December. Of the others many have been condemned to various terms of imprisonment, whilst a still-larger number have been released.

Our import market has been very dull since the departure of last steamer, and transactions of all descriptions have been small. In Silk but little has been done, for, although the market at one period showed some activity, this has since subsided. In Tea the demand has been fairly sustained, settlements amounting to nearly 4,000 piculs.

The fourth annual celebration in Yokohama of the festival of Scotland's patron saint was observed on Nov. 30, and, as on former occasions, it took the shape of a dinner at the Grand Hotel. The gathering may be taken as an example of Scotch hospitality, for probably the guests present numbered nearly as many as their hosts. The dinner was presided over by Mr. Cargill, Mr. J. A. Fraser officiating as croupier.

The Government seems determined to prosecute with vigour the attempt to introduce sheep-farming in Japan, additional importations both from China and Australia having taken place. On the other hand, the manufacture of indigo appears to have been the reverse of successful, the native papers reporting that the originator of the scheme has lost $150,000 in the attempt.

In spite of the supposed abolition of torture in Japan, it would appear that it is still practised, the case of a Chinaman who was recently tortured in Kobe having again called attention to the subject.

The rumoured change in the Press Laws has not yet been announced, and unfortunate editors are prosecuted in the most vindictive manner.

Another effort is about to be made to have our settlement lighted during the winter, the native gas company having made a reduction in their rates.

The U.S.S. Yantic left here on the 4th Dec. for Nagasaki, Hong Kong, Batavia, and thence home. The U.S. men-of-war in harbour are the flagship Tennessee and the gunboat Palos.

It is announced that the Mikado will leave for Kioto about the middle of January.

The Japan Mail contains the following items of news :—

The city of Tokio, the scene of so many calamities, has again been visited with one of terrible proportions. A fire broke out on the night of the 29th November, and spread rapidly under the influence of a brisk wind. Before morning dawned an area of something like two and a half miles square had been cleared by the flames, and upwards of seventy streets, composed of over eight thousand houses, destroyed. Allowing an average occupancy of six to a house, fifty thousand persons of all ages must have been rendered homeless, and when regard is had to the number of sick, of very young and very old, embraced by such figures, a sad picture of human misery is produced on the mind. The people bear up with their usual patience and fortitude, and means have been organised for the relief of all immediate distress. But the blow is a crushing one, and will alter the whole complexion of very many lives. Advantage will be taken of the occurrence by the Government to lay out the ground in an improved manner, and make the whole neighbourhood less liable to similar disasters in future. Incendiarism is suspected - we know not whether on strong grounds—and the man on whose premises the fire broke out, a Government hay and straw contractor, is said to be under examination by the police.

Intelligence has reached us of the arrival of the Empress at Kioto on the 4th Dec., where she was received with the utmost demonstrations of loyalty and affection, the people from the surrounding districts having flocked in large numbers to the old capital to welcome her. Extra trains had been put on the line between Osaka and Kioto, but they they did not afford sufficient accommodation, and large numbers of all classes were disappointed of their intended holiday.

It is officially notified that vessels will be permitted to trade betwee Japan and the Island of Sagahlien, now Russian territory, in the same way as the coast trade is carried on; that is, vessels will be permitted to enter and clear free of port dues, and carry goods duty free, but all vessels must enter and clear at one of the ports open to foreign trade.

Mr. Tomita Tetsunosuke, the late Japanese Vice-Consul at New York, has been appointed to the post of Consul-General at Shanghai in place of Mr. Shinagawa.

YOKOHAMA, DEC. 11.

Once more I avail myself of the Trans-Pacific route to communicate with you, with every probability of my letter reaching you in much less time than it would by the English mail leaving at the same moment. The Oceanic, which takes this, sails tomorrow at daylight. She has been docked, overhauled, and painted in Hong Kong, and made the passage thence hither in the splendid time of five days, fourteen hours, and forty minutes. She is expected, and I believe intended, to do her best this trip to San Francisco. What that best may be I leave you to infer from the fact that during the fifteen hours before she came into this port she steamed an average of sixteen knots an hour. The last trip the City of Peking made hence to San Francisco took a little over fifteen days. The O. and O. Company mean to try to beat this, and probably the Oceanic is intended to make the attempt.

Since the date of my last Tokio has been visited by a most destructive fire—a fire to which even the great one of 1872 can hardly be compared. On the night of the 29th November while a strong northerly wind was blowing, at about eleven o'clock a fire broke out in Sukyacho, in the house of a heimin, and rapidly spread to the adjoining buildings, whence it was carried with the most alarming rapidity over the immense area of five or six square miles. Some idea of its magnitude may be formed from the fact that more than 8,000 houses were swept away, and 100,000 people rendered homeless. You can judge of the rapidity of its progress, when I tell you that it was extinguished by eight o'clock next morning. The line of the streets, after the fire, could only be distinguished by the mud-godowns, which in this, as in many instances, proved that they were fire-proof, at least against fires which sweep, as do those in Japan, swiftly over the districts they devastate. An eye-witness of the fire in 1872 in Tokio, told me that it spread, and passed faster than he could walk. The day after this last great fire a subscription list was opened at the Herald newspaper office, where in a few days more than $2,000 was subscribed for the relief of the victims. Only yesterday, I passed over the ground which had been laid bare. Carpenters and joiners were at work, houses had been rebuilt, and in a fortnight from now there will be no trace of the disaster; so rapidly do these Asiatics repair the destruction wrought by great calamity. The flames, I must not forget to mention, spread to the Foreign Concessoin in Tsukidji. where they burnt down, among a comparatively few houses situated in the north-west corner, the Austrian Legation, on the block owned by Messrs. Kniffler and Co. The Japanese Government, hearing of the loss, sent the Austrian Minister a present of some chairs, and other furniture, in token of its sympathy. Two days after this alarming fire another broke out in a neighbouring district, and destroyed upwards of two hundred houses; but this event, coming so soon after the other, has been here passed over as almost unworthy of notice.

I hear no more of the insurrection. The last act of that drama was played on the 3rd inst., when Mayebara and eleven of his associates knelt down in a blood-pit, and bowed their necks to the sword of the executioner. I can feel sincere regret in some respects for Mayebara; but I do not see how his fate could have been averted. His life was forfeit, and he knew it from the moment of his arrest, and he appears to have met his doom as a brave man should. Some of the native papers, however, do not disguise their contempt for him, not for the fact of his joining and heading the insurrection, not even for his failing in his design, but, forsooth, because, when he failed, he did not open his own abdomen in the orthodox style. So much for public opinion.

People here who have read Sir Charles Dilke's article on English influence in Japan are divided in opinion as to which is the greater, his ignorance or his impudence. His ignorance is evident in every line, as when he speaks of Okubo as Prime Minister. The Japan Mail says this error is as venial as if he spoke of Mr. Cross as First Lord of the Treasury, a very correct parallel. But this mistake is by no means the least. Fancy Sir Charles saying that Shimadzu Saburo wrote "Bemmo," when he only wrote a short introductory preface to it. A jinrikisha coolie in the street could have set him right upon this, or any one of the hundred other mistakes into which his ignorance or carelessness has led him. His impudence has probably never been equalled by any other traveller in Japan; though it is true that nearly every globe-trotter who passes a week here knows more of what takes place than the oldest resident; and sees more clearly what should and what should not be done than does a careful, thoughtful student who may have devoted years to the study of Japan and its relations, internal and foreign.

General T. B. Van Buren, American Consul-General here, is an accomplished lawyer; and his decisions are generally so accurate, that it is, or appears at least, arrogance on the part of a layman to call any one of them in question. Mr. J. M. Batchelder, an American resident in Tsukidji, bought some lots in that concession, at public auction, in 1870. He paid the first year's ground rent to the Japanese authorities; but declined to pay rent for subsequent years, on the ground that the Japanese, by allowing many foreigners in and out of their employ to reside in Tokio, outside of the concession, had broken their part of the bargain, and so damaged his property, and rendered valueless the improvements he had made upon it. He was sued in the U.S. Consular General Court by an official representing the Tokio-fu. Many witnesses were called by the defence, and the damage alleged was proved beyond a doubt to have been sustained. After some months' delay, General Van Buren has at length given judgment in favour of the defendant. Mr. Batchelder had put in a counter-claim against the Tokio-fu for $10,000, and though the Consul-General declined to give judgment for this sum "against the representative of a Sovereign State who submitted voluntarily to his jurisdiction," yet he "certified" that the damage had been actually sustained. In other words, he recommended, by inference, that the Government should reimburse the defendant in the suit in the amount he alleged he had lost. Now, I find that, on the evidence, the decision was just. But the Consul-General spoke only of the "Conventions," and said nothing of the leases. Further, only one side of the case was really heard. The Tokio-fu, the plaintiff, was quite unrepresented by foreign counsel; and the Japanese who did appear was not only ignorant of foreign law, but must have but imperfectly understood what was going on. The result of the decision, if it stands, will be to place the Japanese in a most embarrassing position, as far, at least, as regards American citizens who have leases from them. I hardly think other Consuls would follow General Van Buren in similar cases which might be brought before them. But it seems as though Americans living in Foreign Concessions in Japan can avoid paying ground-rent because others are allowed to live outside the Concessions. Surely it is reasonable to suppose that a Sovereign State has the right to allow foreigners to live where it chooses, and in the Conventions I do not find that Japan disclaims this right. Certainly she never meant to injure herself with her own regulations. I believe the matter is to be appealed, when the Tokio-fu will employ foreign counsel. I trust that this will turn out to be true, though I did hear to-day that a probability exists of the matter being settled in another way.

About 120,000 silk-worms egg cards go to Europe by the Oceanic, many on account of Japanese. The season is now closed, and the Japanese have had the best of it. They will send no more cards, in order to avoid possible injury to their consignments already made. The native Banks have controlled the market, and have been successful in keeping up the prices, so that Europeans have hardly been able to operate at all.

CHINA.

TIENTSIN.

A correspondent of the North China Herald writes from this port as follows:—

The weather still continues fine, with only a little ice along the edges of the river in the early morning. A great many poor people are about, who have come in from the country seeking employment and food. Accounts from the interior show that the peasantry are likely to have a hard time of it this winter. The autumn crops prove a comparative failure, and will be barely sufficient to maintain life till the coming spring.

We are glad to learn that the Lapwing has received no serious injury. She was thrown almost high and dry on a shingly beach, where at low tide she has only about a foot of water forward and none aft. It is thought she will receive no harm as she lies, if not dug out till the spring. The officers and crew are well, not having been injured in the least. The Curlew, which arrived on the 25th November, is expected to winter here.

It is said that Messrs. Jardine, Matheson and Co. will not retain a separate agency here after this season, but that their business will be transferred to the firm of Messrs. J. Hatch and Co., who will occupy the premises of the former company.

The Alpha and Beta left for Takoo on the 27th November, en route for Foochow. The Viceroy went to Takoo to witness the discharging of the large guns of these vessels before their departure. They still fly the English flag.

The China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company has bought the premises on the bund formerly occupied by the late Mr. Hanna. The Company has now a very large property of houses and godowns in Tientsin.

HANKOW.

A fire of considerable magnitude occurred in the northern suburbs of Hankow, just off the concession, on the night of the 29th Nov. It broke out in a mat-shop near the London Mission Hospital, and as there was a slight wind blowing it speedily communicated itself to the surrounding buildings, which were made of similar combustible material. Without loss of much time a party of officers and sailors from H.M.S. Kestrel was on the spot, and by hard fighting succeeded in getting the mastery of the flames. At one time great fears were entertained for the safety of a brick tea-manufactory belonging to a Russian firm, as well as for the London Mission Hospital, as the flames were blowing directly towards these buildings; but just at the right moment the wind died away, thus saving a great amount of property.

CANTON.

The Daily Press correspondent writes under date of the 12th Dec.:—

A military review was held on the Northern Parade Ground the other day. There were about 500 soldiers on the ground, who were put through various manœuvres, and sword and gun exercise. The practice was fairly well gone through, that is, of course, for Chinese.

I hear of a disturbance at Fatshan between gamblers and "squeezers." I have not learned the details of the affair, but it appears a very warm fight took place, each party numbering, it is said, from three to four hundred. A number of persons were severely wounded, three or four, it is feared, fatally.

The result of the Kwang-tung province military examination for the Yin degree will be made known on the morning of the 14th inst. The candidates numbered about 3,000, and it is rumoured that out of this number fifty-nine only have been successful.

A young man was robbed of Tls. 200 the other day in a rather heartless manner. His father had just died, leaving a deposit of this amount in the bank. The son went to draw this money, and returning home with it went into a tea shop for some refreshment. Whilst there he met a friend, who, not being aware of the loss his companion had sustained in the death of his father, asked him how that worthy was. In reply to this the information was given that the old man was dead, and the son added that he had just been to draw his money from the bank and had the Tls. 200 with him. This candour proved to be rather injudicious, for the conversation was overheard by some thieves, who followed the man with the money to his house. They went in after him and demanded the cash. As they were armed and he had no means of defending himself, he quietly gave it up. After they were gone he raised an outcry, but the thieves were lost in the crowd and escaped.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 8th December; the French mail from London Oct. 20 was received on the 7th December. The North China Herald contains the following summary of news:—

Some serious disturbances occurred on the railroad, on the 4th Dec., in the neighbourhood of Woosung. A mob of country people gathered and heaped ballast on the rails, an attack was threatened on a station, and another suicide was attempted. Fortunately no accident resulted from the first attempt, the second was repelled by the pluck of the station-master, and the last was defeated by the caution of the engine-driver. The ring-leaders of the rioters were arrested, and the would-be suicide is also in custody. In consequence of the attempt to damage the line, the latest trains, which run in the dark, will be discontinued for a few days. A preliminary inquiry into the matter has been held at the Mixed Court, but did not throw very much light upon it. So far as appeared, the row was simply between two sets of coolies, one of whom was jealous of the other's pitjin. No one would confess to any knowledge how the ballast got piled up on the rails. The would-be suicide gave a vague statement of his motives, which very fairly simulated mania. The other accused persons made contradictory statements and the case was adjourned sine die, all the prisoners being left in custody of the Municipal Police

The names of the following gentlemen are associated with a proposed testimonial to Mr. W. H. Medhurst, H.B.M.'s Consul, on his retirement from that office and approaching departure home:—Messrs. J. Bell Irving, M. S. Gubbay, A. A. Krauss, F. H. Bell, A. G. Wood, W. H. Tapp, W. A. Turnbull, E. Henderson, M.D., G. B. Glover, E. Cameron, A. Hennequin, R. A. Mowat, Chevalier de Boleslawski, A. Lind, L. Ewald, J. Hart, W. S. Fitz, R. T. Rennie, W. H. Lavers, F. Hubbé, J. G. Purdon, F. W. Lemarchand, and John Wilson. A meeting in furtherance of the proposal has been held, at the Agra Bank, at which nearly all the above-named were present, when it was resolved to present a suitable testimonial and address to Mr. Medhurst, and the following committee was appointed to make the necessary arrangements:—Dr. Henderson, Messrs. A. A. Krauss, W. A. Turnbull, G. B. Glover, and F. W. Lemarchand.

A new schooner was launched on the 6th Dec. at the Old Dock; she is to be called the Franzisa, carries the German flag, and has been built by Messrs. Farnham and Co. for Captain Hernsheim, for the South Sea trade. Her deck length is 72 feet, while at the water line she measures 65 feet. She is 17 feet 6 inches wide, 7 feet 3 inches deep, her draught when empty 4 feet 6 inches, and when laden about 7 feet 6 inches. Her cargo capacity is 80 tons dead weight, and the same quantity measurement. Her keel is of one solid piece of timber, and altogether she has the appearance of a strongly-built craft. Between twenty and thirty spectators assembled to see her take the water. Everything was in readiness, and when the dog-shores were knocked away, she glided into the river without the slightest hitch or difficulty. We believe that she is the first vessel that has been built in Shanghai for the South Sea trade.

The Appin, which leaves on Dec. 8 for Tientsin, is likely to be about the last for the season. The S.S.N. Company's steamers Paunting and Shantung, and the C.C.S.N. Company's steamer Haining, are taken off the berth; hence it may be inferred that no more steamers will leave for that port until the winter is over. We have not yet heard of ice in the Peiho river except near the banks, but recent northerly gales indicate that severe weather might be daily expected. Mails for Peking, Tientsin, and Newchwang will be made up this winter in the usual manner at the Custom-house, and despatched, via Chinkiang, after the arrival of each European and American mail. No newspapers will be sent to Tientsin or Newchwang; and none to Peking, excepting for the Legations and Inspectorate-General of Customs.

A meeting of shareholders in the French Gas Company has been held, to confirm the election of Mr. Morel as director, and to elect an auditor in his stead. The election was confirmed, and Mr. Vinay was appointed auditor. The opportunity was also taken to discuss some statements which Dr. Pichon had made regarding the position of the Company, and which were shown to be based on misapprehensions. A vote of confidence in the directors was proposed by Mr. F. G. White, seconded by Mr. Peters, and carried unanimously.

The annual meeting of the members of the Shanghai Gymnasium has been held at the Main Guard. There were twenty members present. Mr. Harvie presided. The Hon. Secretary, Mr. S. Voelkel, read the financial statement, which, owing to the absence of a quorum on two occasions last year, was for two years. It showed that there was a balance in hand of $213.58, together with a reserve fund in the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank of $528.67. On the motion of Sir William Johnston, seconded by Mr. Fabris, Messrs. Holliday, Anderson, Harvie, Ruttmann, and Voelkel were appointed a committee for the ensuing year.

The first lecture of the series to be delivered during the winter, in connection with the Shanghai Temperance Society, was given in the Hall on the 6th Dec. The lecturer was the Rev. W. Speer, D.D., of Philadelphia, who had chosen for his subject "The American Centennial."

On the 4th Dec. the first Paper Hunt of the season was held; it was won by Mr. Ogle, a light-weight, Mr. Hinckley coming in second. Mr. Brandt was nearly winning the heavy-weight prize, but his pony fell when near home.

We understand that members of H.M.'s Consular service will shortly visit the new ports, to select and report on suitable sites for foreign Settlements. Mr. Davenport is likely to go to Wuhu and Wenchow, and Mr. King to Ichang.

The members of the Club Concordia Liedertafel and Theatre Verein gave their first performance of the present season on the 5th December. The pleasant little theatre had been repainted and decorated, and presented a cheerful appearance.

A Naval Court held at Chefoo, to inquire into the loss of the British barque Salacia, outside Newchwang, has acquitted the master and officers of blame.

The gunboat Frolic, which is expected here shortly from the North, is likely to be stationed at Chinkiang.

The yacht Nimrod has been sold at auction for Tls. 370.

No news has been as yet received from home of the ratification of the Chefoo Convention. Probably that happy consummation will not be so speedily arrived at. We mentioned more than a month ago that the Foreign Ministers at Peking were dissatisfied with several articles of the Convention, notably those which involved the legislation of likin and those in which the Chinese Government was referred to them for their opinion on certain questions of diplomatic etiquette. The Diplomatic Corps at Peking is perhaps not altogether the most united and loving body of men in China—excepting over the dinner-table—and in this respect offer rather a strong contrast to the Court of Consuls in Shanghai. But on this matter the Ministers seem to be agreed, and have made protests, more or less strenuous, to their respective Governments, against the acceptance of the new Convention. It seems possible therefore that before Her Majesty's Government can ratify the agreement in full it may deem it advisable to defer to the other European Powers which are represented at the Court of Peking, as they have also a stake in the matter.

Iron of excellent quality has been found in Chihli, not far from the east end of the Great Wall. The quality is good, but not equal to that in the hills east of Peking, which is of the finest kind. The new-found iron ore, however, is suitable for most purposes, and can be made into pigs, or bars, or plates at a very low cost, as coal fit for smelting abounds in close contiguity to the beds of ironstone. One million of taels, if judiciously expended, would found a most valuable industry in the province of Chihli. It is said that for the present the five mines near to the eastern and western hills will not be used, on account of nearness to the Imperial tombs. The iron recently discovered near to the Great Wall's eastern end is of the black band sort, but the ores of the east and west hills are of the hæmatite, spathic, and limonite kinds, and very rich.

The Day of Intercession for Missions has been observed at Trinity Cathedral. The sermon was preached by the Very Rev. the Dean, the lessons being read by the Rev. William Muirhead. The collections made after the morning and evening services amounted to $425. This may be considered very satisfactory, as the entire amount required was only $500. The funds are to be applied to the erection of a church, in connection with a recently-established training college for young men who contemplate joining the native ministry at Ningpo.

Business in Piece goods has continued quiet, and notwithstanding telegraphic advices of higher prices in Manchester there is evidently more disposition evinced by sellers to realise than by dealers to purchase. A decline of two to three taels in Black Teas has induced some business, which has been limited, however, by the steady advance in exchange. Prices are now from one to two taels below last year's for similar teas. Not a single settlement has been effected in Green Teas. With the exception of a small demand for No. 5 Tsatlees, at Tls. 450 to 460 (21s. 6d. to 22s.), there is no change to note in the position of the Silk Market.

HONG KONG.

The French mail brings dates from the above port to the 14th Dec.

The finding of the Naval Court of Inquiry with reference to the collision between the steamer Leonor and the American barque Frances Lewey, which resulted in the sinking of the latter, has been published. The Court find the third mate, Mr. Harry Thomas Wavell, officer of the watch of the Leonor, guilty of great negligence in leaving the bridge, and in not adopting the proper means to avoid the collision when first he saw the Frances Lewey's light, and directs that Mr. Wavell's certificate of competency (No. 441, Hong Kong) be suspended for twelve months from this date. It is also of opinion that the master, Matthew Young (No. of certificate of competency 32,637), although not called until a collision was unavoidable, did not evince that readiness to meet the emergency which he should have shown, but the Court sees no reason for suspending Capt. Young's certificate. It considers that after the collision the masters and officers of the Leonor did all in their power to rescue the officers and crew of the sunken vessel.

A robbery of a somewhat extensive character has taken place at the auction-room of Mr. Guides. On the morning of the 12th December it was entered by thieves, who carried off property, in the shape of chains, watches, and notes, to the value of $400. To get to the safe in which the articles were kept the burglars had to open three of Chubb's padlocks. A case of jewellery was left untouched, having apparently escaped their observation. Two coolies in his employ and two belonging to Mr. Achee are suspected, as they have disappeared. Information was given to the police, and rewards for the apprehension of the absconding coolies offered. A coolie who slept in the same room with the four chair coolies who have absconded has been arrested, as it is suspected he knows something of the matter.

Upon telegraphic information being received from Copenhagen that Mr. H. Kier had been appointed Consul for Denmark in the colony, the Danish residents and captains in port gave a complimentary dinner to that gentleman in the City Hall.

A notification in the Gazette states that the police rate has been fixed for the year 1877 at 7¾ per cent. for houses in the city of Victoria, and at 5 per cent. for houses in British Kowloon and the outlying villages of the colony, and the lighting rate at 1½ per cent., the fire brigade rate at ¾ per cent., and the water rate at 2 per cent. per annum for houses in Victoria. The police, lighting, fire brigade, and water rates will be payable quarterly in advance at the Colonial Treasury between the first and last days of the first month in each quarter.

The Daily Press makes the following comments with reference to an old trouble in China:—It is satisfactory to note that the magistrates are anxious to put down the practice to which sampan and other boat people are addicted, of obstructing the fairway of steamers when entering port. Mr. Stewart fined two boat-owners at the Police-court for this offence, and pointed out the folly and danger of such a course. Not only does it entail a great deal of worry and annoyance to the masters of vessels, and renders it difficult for them to get to their moorings, but the occupants of the boats also place themselves in considerable peril. The efforts that captains have to make to keep clear of the small craft which swarm round their steamers as soon as they enter the harbour are sufficient to try anyone's patience, and it speaks well for their care and humanity that so few of their tormentors are run down or capsized. But it is certainly hard that they should be under the necessity of exercising such vigilance merely to avoid injuring boats which often purposely obstruct them.

A correspondent writes:—General regret is felt at the approaching departure of Sir A. Kennedy, who has gained much popularity among all classes. It is noticeable that the Daily Press, which is seldom over-laudatory of officials, and is, in fact, the recognised opposition paper, acknowledges in handsome terms the obligation the colony lies under to him. Although for my own part I do not agree with all that Sir Arthur has done, I think he fully deserves his popularity and has had the welfare of Hong Kong and the dignity of the English nation fully at heart in all the measures he has adopted—many of which have the merit of being thoroughly well considered and sound. I may perhaps without impropriety add, that he possessed the merit, which is not found in all governors, of being constantly and universally courteous and considerate.

COCHIN CHINA.

SAIGON.

The Independant of the 15th December has the following:—Dr. Harmond, the indefatigable explorer, left Pnum-peuh on the 4th of this month to explore for a second time, in a scientific and archæological point of view, Upper Cambodia and Laos. Our readers are aware that Dr. Harmond has been instructed to make this exploration by the Minister of Public Instruction, the Committee of the Museum of Natural History, and the Geographical Society of Paris. The plan of our young and intrepid explorer is to go from Pnum-peuh to Somboc, to traverse the formidable rapids of the Meikong, to enter Laos, to traverse Annam, and to come out into Tonquin. The difficulties which Dr. Harmond will encounter on the route are large; the principal will be to ascertain if he can succeed in crossing the frontiers of Cambodia without opposition, as it is not to be forgotten that in May the Cambodian rebels occupied the frontier and prevented Dr. Harmond from going further. We learn from an undoubted source that the rebels do not any longer occupy these passages; that the presence of the Viceroy Ouperat, with a troop of 5,000 men, has put to flight in another direction the Pretender Savolta, and we venture to hope that no obstacle will impede our courageous traveller in his researches; but the greatest difficulty for him will be to cross Annam in order to arrive in Tonquin. Whatever may be the result, we cannot but admire the courage and constancy of Dr. Harmond in his new exploration, above all when we see him depart under circumstances which might have caused the bravest to pause. He has left without any companion—that is, no European accompanied him; and, in order not to burden himself with too great supplies, he has taken with him neither flour, biscuit, sugar, nor wine: he has thought it his duty to sacrifice his comfort to science. We cannot conclude without adding that Dr. Harmond has received at the hands of the King of Cambodia all that he could hope from this Sovereign, who kindly placed at his disposal a steam-launch to accelerate his arrival at Somboc, where the first rapids are encountered. His Majesty has also given with his own hand to Dr. Harmond letters of introduction both to the Viceroy and to the Governors of Provinces of Cambodia, in order to afford Dr. Harmond all the aid he has a right to expect.

The elections for the new Municipal Council were going on at Saigon when the mail left, and appear to be attracting more than usual interest.

BORNEO.

—o—

SARAWAK.

The Sarawak Gazette of the 14th December gives the following:—

The news from the Batang Lupar Residency contained in the Resident's despatch is most important, and plainly points to the death blow of the many troubles which the Sarawak and Netherlands Governments have had in dealing with the large and wandering tribe which take their name from Batang Lupar. This tribe for many years has inhabited a tract of country both on Kapuas and in the interior of Sarawak, covering an area of between two and three hundred miles. We may confidently state it is the desire of the Sarawak Government to earnestly second the efforts of the Netherlands officials in the Kapuas in regulating these Dyaks. A consistent course of policy, maintained with bonâ fide sincerity, apart from any petty feelings of jealously between the officials who have to act principally with the people in question, cannot fail to foster a mutual impression of goodwill among all, and this will go far to make matters run smoothly in future in the interior.

The Borneo Company have been obliged to stop their operations, at the order of the Court of Westminster, pending the suit of Mr. L. V. Helms, late manager of that Company in this country. The Company's Offices are closed to all mercantile and monetary transactions. The mining of the quicksilver and antimony veins are at a standstill, owing to all the coolies—numbering 700—having been paid off. The building of a new brick office, half finished, remains exposed to the coming N.E. monsoon, and a large staff of Europeans, under agreement to the Company on high salaries, are doing nothing. This unlooked for stoppage, after over twenty years' steady and active business in this country, may not prove very serious in the long run, but it must cause great loss to many parties, apart from the Company itself, and do the country generally a considerable amount of harm. The coolies will seek other employment, and many leave the country and when the operations are renewed fresh ones will have to be found and taught mining, and the many other branches of labour.

SIAM.

BANGKOK.

The Siam Weekly Advertiser of Dec. 22 states:—

The King is taking very stern measures with those who get their living by plunder, and beat and kill without scruple to secure their ends. A few weeks since there were several executions of Siamese, who plundered subjects of British Burmah on their route from Siam to their own country. In cases of execution the criminals first receive ninety lashes. In this case the British Consul-General begged the whipping should be omitted. The last Government Gazette speaks of three executions where the ninety lashes were received. The criminals were people of Rachaburi, and their deeds were committed there—seven others implicated received thirty lashes, were branded in the forehead and imprisoned. Some implicated in receiving stolen property were whipped, and an account of their deeds written down and placed on their persons, and they exposed in a public place as a warning to others. One would think people would fear to do wrong, if they did not love to do right.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

—o—

SINGAPORE.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 21st December; the French mail from London Nov. 17 was received on the 19th December. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times:—

There has been some serious rioting in Market-street, organised by some Chinese rowdies. Mr. Maxwell, Superintendent of Police, happened to be about the neighbourhood, when he found the rioters attacking the Market-street Police-office, and upon his attempting, while alone and unarmed, to remonstrate with them he was knocked down, and while in this position most cruelly battered with sticks, stones, and broken bottles. It is a miracle how he escaped with his life. At a meeting of the Legislative Council a discussion took place relative to the riots. The authorities, having ordered the arrest of about twenty towkays, who, it is suspected, were concerned in the instigation of the riots, found that the powers of dealing with them were confined, and thereupon the Governor applied to the Council for special powers in the face of the present state of affairs. This was opposed by the unofficial members, on the grounds that it might be styled panic-stricken legislation, and it was advanced that the Government should have been conscious of their powers before, and not come forward, as in the present instance, at the last moment, for additional laws, when there was no proper opportunity for consideration or discussion. The Governor said that the unfortunate dupes of these crafty leaders were the sufferers; that some of them had lost their lives and others their liberty, whilst the really guilty parties would escape, unless, as in other colonies, power was given to the Government to deport them if they were found guilty of instigating riots against the authorities. He felt that measures should be taken which would put outside probability any repetition of the proceedings. After considerable discussion, it was eventually arranged that the further consideration of the matter should be postponed until after inquiry into the conduct of the towkays now in custody.

The police force to the number of 150 men and the various officers, were paraded on the 18th Dec., under the command of Mr. Superintendent Maxwell, in front of the Central Police Station, for the purpose of being reviewed by the Governor. His Excellency, having inspected the men, thus addressed them:—

I desire to express to Mr. Superintendent Maxwell, the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the force my high appreciation of their gallant conduct during the recent disturbance. Whilst using every endeavour to quell disorder without having recourse to unnecessary force, their steadiness and discipline were exhibited in a remarkable degree when, in consequence of repeated and dangerous assaults by overwhelming bodies, they were obliged to fire upon the rioters in self-defence. I congratulate the police that owing mainly to their efficient action the disturbances in the town have entirely ceased, and that there is now no probability of further rioting. I feel sure that should the necessity ever unfortunately again arise the Singapore police will act as steadily, as gallantly, and as efficiently, as they have acted within the last few days. I have desired that an extra week's pay be granted to the whole Singapore Police Force.

It must be satisfactory to the force that their services have been appreciated from all quarters, and the public will endorse the assertions of his Excellency. It has not yet been decided what course shall be adopted towards dealing with twelve of the rioters, who are detained on board the Pluto. We are glad to state business is being conducted as usual in the markets and shops. Mr. Read, in his capacity of Chairman of the Municipal Commissioners, has to be thanked for his exertions throughout the disturbances in inducing the dealers to supply food at the markets, in which after much trouble he was successful.

At the annual general meeting of the Chamber of Commerce the following office-bearers for the ensuing year were elected :—Chairman, W. G. Gulland, Esq. (Paterson, Simon and Co.). Vice Chairman, John Cameron, Esq. (John Cameron and Co.). Members Committee : Hon. W. H. Read (A. L. Johnston and Co.); Hon. W. Adamson (Gilfillan, Wood and Co.); Hon. J. R. McArthur (Hamilton Gray and Co.). F. C. Bishop, Esq., (Manager, Mercantile Bank); J. Henderson, Esq. (Boustead and Co.); J. Brussel, Esq. (Behn, Meyer and Co.); M. Suhl, Esq., (Rautenberg, Schmidt and Co.).

One or two official changes are spoken about as likely to take place before long. The Colonial Treasurer intends to go to England on leave, and rumour has it that the Postmaster-General is to act for him, and the Assistant Treasurer at Malacca will take charge of the Post-office.

The newly-accredited Chinese Ambassadors to the Court of St. James's, paid an official visit on the 13th inst. to H.I.C.M.'s corvette Yung Woo, lying in the roads, and were received with the usual salutes.

The Government Gazette contains the following notifications :—

The Governor has been pleased to appoint Captain F. C. Annesley, Assistant Superintendent of Police, Penang, to be Acting Coroner for Province Wellesley during the absence of Mr. J. E. Hewick.

Mr. E. E. Isemonger, Magistrate of Police, Malacca, having reported his return from leave of absence, will resume duties on the 16th December.

ST. ANDREW'S WATERSIDE MISSION, GRAVESEND.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—I have been requested by the Committee of the Sailors' Mission at Yokohama to obtain for them a grant of £120 a year from the St. Andrew's Waterside Church Mission, in order that they may retain the services of an excellent Missionary who has for some time been doing good work among the sailors there, to the satisfaction of the Committee, and also with the full approval of Admiral Ryder, the Commander-in-Chief on the Station. Hitherto we have only been able to grant £25, and send out supplies of books for distribution. By the last mail the Chaplain writes, "The Committee also wish me to state how difficult it is in a small and mixed community like this to raise money for such a purpose, and they greatly hope that you will be able to give us the assurance of a fixed grant from the Society of not less than $25 a month." This is more reasonable; and as the work to be done is very important, and the influence of sailors, for good or evil, in a large foreign port is worth a great deal of attention by all who are interested in and responsible for the trade, I should be glad to be able to give a favourable answer; but this must depend upon the aid we receive before the next meeting of our standing committee, by which all the new grants must be made. Any contributions sent for a special destination will, of course, be duly applied, whether it be for China or Japan.

I may mention that there are few ships or steamers which sail from London to the East that are not already brought under the influence of the St. Andrew's Waterside Mission; most of them carry our Library Boxes, some are supplied by us with books for service, and all are visited by the Mission clergy either in the docks or at Gravesend; therefore if the influence begun in England is continued in the ports abroad, as well as on the voyage, by the medium of the books lent or distributed, the work is more thoroughly done, and the effect likely to be proportionately great.

This Mission has mission curates attached to the principal dock parishes on both sides of the Thames, and has supplied upwards of 2,000 ships with libraries for their crews. It received upwards of 25,000 volumes of books last year, besides large quantities of magazines, illustrated papers and tracts for distribution, and it has agencies in many foreign ports. Captains, officers and pilots all testify to the good that is being done by it. Several of the old China residents have been amongst its best supporters, and for the last twelve years it has been steadily increasing in influence, and has always been managed as a labour of love. About 60,000 persons come under its influence in the course of a year at Gravesend alone. Cheques should be crossed London and County Bank, and Post-office orders be made payable at Gravesend. Gifts of books of all kinds may be sent to the Depôt, 36, City Chambers, Railway-place, Fenchurch-street.—I am, Sir, your faithful servant,

JOHN SCARTH, Hon. Sec.,
Vicar of Holy Trinity, Gravesend.

The Eastern Telegraph Company's station has been removed from 74, Old Broad-street to more commodious premises (nearly opposite) at No. 11, Old Broad-street.

MR. J. ASHBURY, M.P., arrived in London on Thursday from China.

Naval and Military.

The Queen has confirmed the appointment of Brevet Major S. G. Huskisson, 80th Regiment, as aide-de-camp to Major-General the Hon. F. Colborne, K.C.B., commanding at Hong Kong. Lieut. Colonel W. J. Stuart, R.E., has been appointed commanding Royal Engineers at Hong Kong, vice Colonel J. Y. Moggridge. Permission has been granted for Lieut.-Colonel L. F. Hall to continue in command of the Royal Artillery at Hong Kong.

The Wild Swan, 6-gun, composite sloop, will shortly be commissioned for service on the China Station.

A court-martial was held at Hong Kong on the 13th ult., on board the Victor Emmanuel, upon Navigating-Lieut. Ballistom and Lieut. Pike, of the Vigilant, in connection with the defalcations of the late Assist.-Paymaster of that ship, and both those officers were honourably acquitted. At a court-martial held on the 12th ult., Assist.-Paymaster G. Spain, of the Ringdove, was sentenced to nine months' imprisonment, and to be dismissed the service for defalcations in his accounts.

Another old wooden vessel will soon disappear from the Navy—the Scout, 17, screw corvette, 2,187 tons, 1,327-horse power, which has been floated into dock at Chatham Dockyard to be broken up, having been pronounced unfit for further service. Her engines and boilers had been previously removed, to be re-manufactured for other uses. The Barossa, 17, gun sloop, which for some years formed one of the China Squadron has just, been broken up in the dock now occupied by the Scout.

The Gazette notifies the reconstitution of the Admiralty Board as follows:—The Right Hon. George Ward Hunt, Admiral Sir Hastings Reginald Yelverton, G.C.B., Rear-Admiral Arthur William Acland Hood, C.B., Rear-Admiral Richard James Meade (commonly called Lord Gilford), and Sir Lopes Massey Lopes, Bart.

The Dwarf, 4, double screw composite gun-vessel, Commander the Hon. Edward S. Dawson, which recently returned from the China Station, was paid off at Portsmouth on the 16th inst. by the Hon. W. C Carpenter, of the Duke of Wellington, and will be placed in the third division of the Steam Reserve.

Lieut. Raymond B. Needham has been appointed to the Victor Emmanuel on the China Station.

AMSTERDAM, JAN. 17

A very noisy question about which a good deal was said in the papers has just been terminated. Some time ago steps were taken by a judge at Bois-le-Duc, Mr. D'Aulnis de Bourouil, in order to forbid the Catholics in the province of Limburg from organising processions in the streets. This proceeding made the population angry, although it was quite according to the law. The local papers suggested that this judicial functionary ought to be dismissed. A fortnight ago it was suddenly rumoured that he had asked for his dismissal, and that it had been granted. It was now the turn of the Liberal papers to grow angry, because they regarded it as a concession to the Roman Catholics. Mr. Van Lynden Van Sandenburg has stated in his reply that Mr. D'Aulnis has resigned solely in consequence of his bad health, but that his resignation had not been accepted under the actual circumstances.

Mr. Fransen Van de Putte has published in the Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant a very long article on the subject of his policy regarding the Atjeh question. It is very strange, says the Dagblad, that the ex-minister is now more talkative than ever, and hints that this must be ascribed either to nervousness or to a restless conscience. It is very strange that he does not explain why the war was inevitable, and why it was undertaken with such rashness at a moment when we were anything but ready. It is scarcely generous to make his successors answerable for his blunders.

I regret to record the death of one of the children of the Prince of Wied, who married the daughter of Prince Frederick. It died from the effects of pulmonary disease, and the elder Prince is also affected by this malady. The corpse of Prince Hermann will be transported to Neuwied. At Rotterdam there have died Mr. F. W. C. Blom, ex-member of the Second Chamber, and Mr. Joseph Graven, a meritorious sculptor, and at Amsterdam the well-known lawyer, Mr. A. Brugmans.

Rumours have been in circulation that Mr. De Roo Van Alderwerelt was on the eve of being appointed Secretary-General of the Department of War. This on dit is, however, most positively contradicted. The Minister, it is said, declines to appoint a military man to these functions.

THE silk trade in Cheshire is at present in a most serious state. In Macclesfield there has been a slight revival in the manufacturing department, some orders having been given for figured goods. The great majority of the weavers in the plain branch are very short of work. In Congleton both manufacturing and throwing branches are in a seriously depressed state; the largest throwing mill in the borough having gone on short time, while several of the smaller mills are either stopped entirely or working very little time, and migration from the neighbourhood has set in amongst the weavers.

An unofficial announcement states that M. Bartholdi will shortly be replaced as French Minister at Washington by M. Max Outrey, at present French Minister to Japan, and adds that M. Bartholdi will return to Paris to fill an important post in the Ministry for Foreign Affairs.

THE CHINESE EMBASSY.

THE Chinese Embassy, of the composition and movements of which we have from time to time given particulars, will have arrived in England shortly after the issue of the present number of this Paper. It may be interesting at the present moment to place before our readers the opinion which is expressed of the Ambassador KUO, by one of the most competent judges on such a subject, namely Sir THOMAS WADE, our Minister at Peking. In a despatch which he addressed to the Earl of DERBY, when the Embassy was first spoken of in China, he writes as follows:—"Mr. HART, who sees him to great advantage, "has formed a high opinion of the Envoy KUO, as a man "of honesty, clearness of sight, and determination; and this "without forgetting that the Envoy is always a Chinese, and "that the chief purpose of his confidence is probably to "obtain light as to the conduct of the Yunnan affair. On "the other side, we must not forget the remarkable line "taken by the Envoy KUO in 1859, when he denounced "Prince TSENGOLINSIN for having opened fire upon us; nor "the character that has clung to him of being an original "and determined man." On the whole, we may conclude from the facts stated in the above extract that the chief Ambassador is likely to appreciate the importance of his post and to use his endeavours earnestly and fairly to maintain the friendly relations between this country and China. His colleague, LUI-SI-HING, is also well spoken of.

It is worthy of note that the present Embassy comes direct to England, that is, without visiting any Continental Courts, and that having taken the P. and O. steamer to Gibraltar, nearly all the ports they have touched at have been British. At Malta and Gibraltar the Envoys were received with due ceremony. At the former port, at which they arrived on the 12th, they were saluted, and had the customary military honours extended to them; and at Gibraltar, which they reached on the 16th inst., they landed, and were received by Lord NAPIER of MAGDALA, Governor and Commander-in-Chief. The reception was held at the Government House, in presence of the Staff and the heads of the civil and military departments, and his Excellency and the members of the Embassy afterwards drove round the Rock and visited the galleries. They will thus on the way home have been impressed with the power and importance of this country, and this will no doubt have a good effect and prepare them to give up some of their old exclusive ideas, and to recognise fully that the time has passed when foreign nations can be regarded as "outer "barbarians."

Some doubts have been expressed in the comments in contemporary papers whether the present Embassy will in reality tend to create a more enlightened feeling in China, with regard to this country and foreign nations generally. If the Embassy were only of a temporary character, like the Burlingame Mission, such doubts would be justified; but if, as is stated on good authority, this Embassy is to be made one permanently representing the EMPEROR of China—and we have reason to believe that this will prove to be the fact—there can be no question that the advance which has been made in despatching it is one of a very important character, and that it will tend more than anything that has happened for many years past to cement friendly relations between the two countries.

THE LAST CHINA BLUE-BOOK.

IT is impossible not to feel some disappointment in the perusal of the Blue-book just issued, with reference to the negotiations connected with the murder of the late Mr. MARGARY, which have now dragged their slow length along for over two years. As could be foreseen by all who have watched this question, the satisfactoriness or otherwise of those negotiations, so far as they relate to obtaining reparation for the outrage, must be dependent upon what was done by the Hon. Mr. GROSVENOR when in Yunnan, but the present batch of papers stops short at precisely the point at which they would be of practical interest, and leaves the history of the affair at the date when that gentlemen had arrived in Yunnanfoo. No account is given of the reasons which induced him to leave so rapidly, and we are still left without his report, which it was certainly expected would be forthcoming before this time. Until we are in possession of this document it is impossible to feel thorough confidence in what has been done. The obtaining commercial concessions is no doubt satisfactory in itself; but far more than has been conceded in the Chefoo Convention would be very dearly paid for if it were accepted as a compensation for the gross outrage that has been committed. It is to be presumed that the present Blue-book is only a prelude to one that is to come giving the required information as to the proceedings in Yunnan; but it is impossible not to feel that it would have been better to have kept it back, as without its legitimate conclusion it only serves to make confusion worse confounded, and to render still more obscure a matter which has never been over clear.

Of the general history of the negotiations the present papers give little information that is not already known. The attempt was at first made by the Chinese authorities to make it appear that Mr. MARGARY was waylaid and murdered by some desperate characters; then it was admitted that the militia was raised on its becoming known that the Margary Expedition was approaching, and that some lawless offenders took advantage of the occasion to commit robbery and murder; later on it is discovered by LI-HAN-CHANG that there were "manifest falsehoods and suppressions in the depositions taken from the prisoners," and officials are ordered to elicit the actual facts; when at last it is declared to have been admitted by one of the prisoners that "in the twelfth moon of last year (January, "1875), the notables of the Sub-Prefecture of T'eng-yueh "(Momein), on learning that foreigners were about to come "forward at the head of a large body of troops, and fear-"ing that they would commit disorders, raised a force of "local train bands for the protection of their own lives and "property (of which they) had communicated an intimation "to him." All this evasion is only what is invariably encountered when any matter of this kind has to be settled with the Chinese authorities; and it is but just to admit that it conveys a good idea of the extreme difficulty which must be experienced by our Ministers in conducting such negotiations. Possibly, under all the circumstances, Sir THOMAS WADE was justified in hoping that the judicial inquiry in Yunnan would be the most likely way to arrive at the discovery of the malefactors; but unfortunately it is to be feared that this measure has failed; and before we accept this as inevitable we ought to know definitely from the Hon. Mr. GROSVENOR'S Report what were the causes which led to this unsatisfactory result.

TEA PACKING.

WE give, under our Legal Intelligence, the report of a case of great interest to mercantile men generally, but more especially to those connected with the China trade. The case in question, "POTTER v. WILLIS and SON," was a claim brought by the plaintiff against the owners of the well-known ship Black Adder, for compensation for loss which they alleged resulted from careless stowing of a parcel of 260 half-chests of tea which were shipped at Shanghai in the usual manner, and for which a clean bill of lading was given in the usual form. On delivery of the tea it appeared that eighty of the cases were damaged. The question was argued at great length, but it turned upon whether the packages were of reasonable make and strength, and whether there was anything about them which had been concealed from the mate and captain, and which they could not discover. Upon the evidence before them the jury gave a verdict for the plaintiff on both these points; but the case is of considerable importance, inasmuch as the judge, in charging the jury, pointed out that if there were defects in the packing, which the captain or mate of the vessel could not discover, the ship would not, failing proof of liability on some other ground, be responsible for the damage that resulted, Mr. Justice FIELD drew an analogy between this case and one which occurred some time back, in which damages were claimed against a steamer on the ground that the dampness of the hold had caused some shirtings to mildew, but in which it was shown that in consequence of the "heavy sizing" introduced into the goods, they had a tendency to mildew of themselves. In this case it was held that as the cause of the damage was one which the mate or captain could not discover, the ship was not liable; and the judge in the case under notice seemed to be inclined to apply a similar rule to the packing as to the goods themselves. It is open to question, however, whether there is a strict analogy between the two cases, and it is important to notice that the presumptions are in opposite directions in them respectively. It is the duty of the mate to see that the packages he receives are, as he declares them to be on the bill of lading, in good order and condition—that is, externally—and it is, on the other hand, the duty of the shipper to ascertain that the goods themselves are so packed internally that they will not become injured on the voyage. If injury results from the inherent nature of the goods it is prima facie the shipper's default; if it results from defect in the packages, it is prima facie from the mate or captain's default, as that officer should not have received them, but have sent them back from the ship's side. In the one case the shipper must explain his shortcoming, and in the other the burden of proof rests with the ship to show how goods which it turned out ultimately were badly packed had come to be taken on board, and a receipt given for them as in good order and condition.

It would appear, however, from the case which has just taken place that a very fine point arises here. Tea chests, as our readers are for the most part aware, are finished off by the Chinese by being papered and varnished over, and when so finished it is difficult, if not impossible, to see any defect which there may be in the wood; so that the mate of a ship might easily be deceived in this respect; and the authority of the case under notice would go to exonerate the ship, where it could be proved that damage had resulted from such defective packing. On the other hand, it would be well that the mates of tea ships should exercise increased caution, both as to the manner in which they receive teas on board, and that in which they stow them. It is quite clear that unless such precautions be taken, disputes of a serious character, such as the present, are likely more and more to arise, now that so much hurry takes place in shipping off the Teas, especially at the opening of the season; but we trust that the attention which this case will call to the matter will be productive of beneficial results.

Before leaving this subject, we deem it desirable to mention that, as has happened before, considerable difficulty at one stage of the proceedings arose, in consequence of the bill of lading being signed by the agents of the ship instead of by the captain. As a matter of convenience to both parties, bills of lading are ordinarily so signed in China, but it should be carefully borne in mind that in strictness they are not legal documents, and can be disputed by the shipowners, if they desire to do so. In the present instance, this plea was with equal good sense and fairness abandoned by the defendants—and in fact was not made in Court; but there might arise cases in which the same reasonableness might not or perhaps could not be shown. If as a matter of office detail it is impossible for the captain or mate to sign all bills of lading, he should leave a power of attorney or other sufficient authority to do so in the hands of his agents or their responsible assistant. It is by no means impossible that a case might arise in which it would be discovered too late that advances upon bills of lading, signed in this manner, had been made in reality without security.

WITH reference to the paragraph given under the news from Sarawak, to the effect tbat the Borneo Company had been compelled to suspend their works at the order of the Court here, pending the suit of their late Manager in this country, we are glad to be able to state, upon authority, that the operations of the Company were resumed at the beginning of the present month, and that every difficulty has now been removed.

SIR RUTHERFORD ALCOCK has written a letter to The Times enclosing a communication from the British Consul-General at Zanzibar, in which that gentleman states that on his attention being drawn to the advantages of the exploration of the interior of Africa, the Sultan has promised his cordial support to the gentlemen who have recently expressed their intention of forming an exploring expedition.

A TELEGRAM, dated Berne, Jan. 15, states that Ceylon is to be included in the Postal Union as well as Hong Kong. Japan has also officially signified her wish to enter the Union.

MR. BOUTIN, Secretary to the French Legation at Yedo, has been appointed Chevalier of the Legion of Honour.

THE MARGARY NEGOTIATIONS.

A further Blue-book (China No. 4, 1876) has just been issued, in continuation of that presented to Parliament in April, 1876. It gives a large amount of detail of the earlier stages of the negotiations; and shows that Sir Thomas Wade had to contend with an unusual amount of prevarication and misrepresentation. In writing upon this portion of the negotiations to the Earl of Derby on the 2nd Feb. this year, Sir Thos. Wade justly observes: —"It is not worth while to follow the Ministers step by step through the series of fictions, puerilites, and prevarications with which they are used, as in this instance, to sustain a controversy." The first despatch of importance is the communication from Li-Hung-Chang on his arrival at Yunnan-foo on the 29th Jan., for the purpose of investigating the affair. It runs as follows:—

Commissioner Li Han-chang to Sir T. Wade.

(Translation.) Yunnan Fu, January 29, 1876.

The writer had the satisfaction, in the early part of last summer, of at length enjoying a conversation with the British Minister on his visit to Hu Peh, and he has not ceased ever since to regret the slight degree of attention it was in his power to show at that time. He has now to acknowledge the receipt of the British Minister's note of the 15th December, which reached him on the 28th inst., and in which a copy was inclosed of the note previously addressed to him in October last from Shanghai.

On perusal of this communication he would observe that [the conduct of] the officials and people of Yunnan, in failing to afford protection to the British officers who came forward from the side of Burmah provided with passports, and thus leading to the murder of Mr. Margary and the obstruction of Colonel Browne, was indeed most wrong and reprehensible [or, altogether outside of what is right]. Having been commissioned by his Majesty to institute inquiry and take action in this matter, were the writer to do otherwise than prosecute the investigation in the most earnest and searching manner, he would fail in responding not only to the desire which actuates his own Government to consolidate with all care its international relations, but also to the purpose which the British Minister cherishes of drawing closer the bonds of harmony between friendly States. With these considerations in view, he has sought for information along the line of his journey since setting out from Hu Peh, and besides this, he has despatched emissaries to proceed in disguise to the scene of the disaster, for the purpose of making secret inquiries. He wrote, in addition, to the Acting Governor-General Ts'en, desiring him to have the guilty parties and witnesses apprehended and brought up for trial. On reaching Yunnan he appointed capable delegates to conduct the examination with all needful stringency, and [caused], first and last, the civil and military functionaries [implicated in] the affair to be stripped of their rank and placed on trial, holding it imperatively requisite that the actual truth be elicited, to the end that the demands of justice be satisfactorily attained. The British Minister observes, in his note now under acknowledgment, that what "is essential is that there should be no doubt as to the identity of persons who may be brought to trial on the credit of statements that may be made, either for the prosecution or the defence." This is a remark which proves how thoroughly the British Minister appreciates the principles which should govern affairs, and the writer cannot feel otherwise than gratified by its expression. The prisoners who have at present been brought before the Court have made distinct confessions, of the truth of which there can be no doubt; whilst, with regard to the circumstances affecting the civil and military officials who have been stripped of their rank, depositions are at this moment in process of being taken. On Mr. Grosvenor's arrival, now shortly to be expected at Yunnan Fu, so soon as he shall have been present as a spectator of the proceedings [the case] will assuredly be made perfectly distinct [or, intelligible]. The British Minister may feel assured that, when the time arrives, attention shall be paid to his expressed wish that while a memorial is, on the one hand, laid before the Throne by the writer, a report shall be made, on the other, by Mr. Grosvenor to the British Minister; [after which], on a decision being arrived at in consultation, the penalty of justice shall in each case be carried into effect according to law.

Sir Thomas Wade's instructions to Mr. Grosvenor, after alluding to the assertion of the Chinese officials at Peking, that the murder had originated simply from the action of some misguided and ignorant men, go on to say :—"The information in my possession forbids me, as you are aware, to accept any statement so absurd, and the antecedents of the ex-Vice President Sieh, whether as a Minister of the Tsung-li Yamen or otherwise, are not favourable to the conclusion that, in appointing him to the Commission, the Chinese Government was determined to act fairly by this unfortunate case. I have written all this in my despatch dated 14th December, which was forwarded to you in triplicate ; but as this may not have reached you, I have here repeated briefly the opinions I therein stated. I repeat at the same time my instructions, to the effect that you are to make your stay at Yunnan Fu as short as possible ; that if a respectable number of witnesses be produced at that city, you are to instruct your deputies to hear what they have to say, and should their evidence be greatly at variance with that I have made known to you, to confine yourself to pointing out the discrepancy, and then, insisting always on my injunction that no one condemned in the proceedings is to be put to death till the Tsung-li Yamen and the Legation shall have been communicated with, to prepare a plain report, copy of which, without debate, you are to apply to the High Commissioners to send on to me. If the authorities insist on torturing any witness your deputies are to protest and withdraw. His Excellency Li is further to be requested to secure the safe passage of yourself and your whole party to Manwyne ; and thence, when Mr. Margary's remains have been recovered, and any inquiry you may see fit to institute on the spot completed, to the frontier, where you will be met by the escort which, by orders of the Government of India, is now waiting for you at Bhamo. The Tsung-li Yamen has been informed that the escort in question is at Bhamo, and I am writing myself to his Excellency Li in the same sense, in order that there may be, in this instance, no pretext of misunderstanding possible."

On the 29th April Consul Medhurst telegraphs from Shanghai to the Earl of Derby as follows :—

Shanghai, April 29, 1876.

Private note received from Grosvenor to-day dated 23rd March. To leave Yunnan Fu in two or four days, and expects to reach Manwyne on 5th May. Asks me to telegraph Chief Commissioner, Rangoon, his arrangement, to be handed over by Chinese to British escort at Manwyne. Every one in best of health. People's demeanour perfect.

The subjoined despatches, with which the Blue-book now under notice concludes, show the point to which the negotiations were brought up to the end of June last :—

Sir T. Wade to the Earl of Derby.—(Received May 29.)

(Telegraphic.) Peking, May 18, 1876.

The long Report to the Throne of the High Commissioners was, with other documents, placed in the hand of the Chinese Secretary on the 8th inst. at the Yamen. It is asked by the High Commissioners that the Yamen and the Board of Punishments may be requested to take the Report into their joint consideration. A decree has accordingly been issued, but nothing has been published.

I have addressed a request in writing to the Prince of Kung, asking that these papers may be communicated to me officially.

All the blame of the murder is sought to be laid on the savages by the Chinese Government, and they try to prove that the attack on Colonel Browne was solely instigated by Li, the gentry of the district having been alarmed by Colonel Browne's arrival. All the higher officials and gentry would thus be exonerated.

I cannot accept this story with the other evidence in my hands. The paper contains contradictions and falsehoods, and, in view of the former history of such acts, and the equivocal conduct throughout the present affair of the Chinese Government, I have made a protest against the punishment of Li or the execution of the savages. I add that I do not demand any longer the punishment of the provincial authorities. I fix the whole responsibility on the Central Government, and demand such reparation as will in the future better secure foreign relations.

The papers are voluminous. Only yesterday the last translation was finished. Towards the end of the month I shall be at Shanghai to meet the Secretary, and until I have seen him I shall not close my report to your Lordship.

Judicial satisfaction is unattainable, and I shall have difficulty about the form of reparation. I may have to refer again to your Lordship on this account. I see no reason, however, to despair, if the Chinese believe us to be in earnest.

Sir T. Wade to the Earl of Derby.—(Received June 5.)

Peking, April 7, 1876.

My Lord,—My telegram of the 3rd inst. will have informed your Lordship that I had received a letter from Mr. Grosvenor. I have the honour to enclose a copy of it. Mr. Grosvenor, it will be seen, reached Yunnan-fu, the capital of the province, on March 6, and wrote to me the day following. He was in receipt of my letter, forwarded by different channels, in triplicate, copy of which formed Inclosure No. 1 in my despatch to your Lordship of December 16, 1875. Hence, I assume, the guarded tone of his to me. He was in doubt, I imagine, about the security of correspondence intrusted to Chinese Government couriers. I shall look for some communication from him by a private hand. This, however, can hardly arrive for some weeks.

Mr. Grosvenor's letter, it is to be observed, took twenty-seven days to reach me. The letter to me from the High Commissioners, translation of which was forwarded your Lordship in my despatch of February 16, was received at the Legation upon February 15, that is, seventeen days from the date of its expedition.

I have earlier referred to my belief that the Tsung-li-Yamen was in possession of information that it was keeping back from me, and this suspicion is confirmed by other [illegible] that supplied by the inexplicable difference in the rate of speed at which the above letter of the Commissioners and Mr. Grosvenor's letter have been transmitted. A rumour was current a few days since that the Grand Secretary Li, Governor-General of this Province, was on his way to the capital. As his Excellency Li had declared himself very anxious to see Sir Douglas Forsyth, who was staying with me, and as, if this rumour were true, there was every chance that Sir Douglas Forsyth and he might miss each other, I instructed Mr. Mayers to call on the Envoy designate, Hsu Chien-shen, who is a relative of the Grand Secretary, to make inquiries. The Envoy, Hsu, had heard nothing about the contemplated visit, but adverting to the receipt of news from Mr. Grosvenor, he remarked that he had been satisfactorily received by the High Commissioner Li ; Mr. Grosvenor, as his letter shows, had not yet seen the High Commissioner.

I infer that the Yamen is in possession of letters of later date, which doubtless speak of Mr. Grosvenor's reception of the evidence that would be tendered him regarding the outrage. Why, it may be asked, should it be withholding intelligence that must be presently communicated ? Most likely because it is trusting in luck ; hoping that something may turn up in the chapter of accidents that will diminish the difficulties now before it. I have not replied to the short note of the Minister's which gave cover to Mr. Grosvenor's letter, but I have requested a conference to-morrow, the result of which I shall, of course, report to your Lordship.

I have, independently of the Yunnan affair, another very thorny question on my hands. I shall explain the complication elsewhere.—I have, &c., (Signed) THOMAS FRANCIS WADE.

Mr. Grosvenor to Sir T. Wade.

Yunnan-fu, March 7, 1876.

Sir,—I have the honour to report that, in company with Messrs. Davenport and Baber, I reached the provincial capital in health and safety yesterday afternoon.

The official residence assigned to the use of this mission is comfortable and fairly clean. The Magistrate of the Mixed Court at Shanghai, Chên, was deputed by their Excellencies Li, Sueh, and Ts'en to receive me. I returned their Excellencies my best thanks for the care taken to provide for my comfort since I had reached the Province of Yunnan.

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of three copies of a despatch, dated December 14, 1875 ; each copy containing as an inclosure your instructions to me of the 30th October last. Yesterday evening his Excellency Li Han-Chang sent me the English version of a despatch you had addressed to him.

I shall request his Excellency Li Han-Chang to forward this despatch to you as quickly as he can.—I have, &c.,

(Signed) T. G. GROSVENOR.

The Earl of Derby to Sir T. Wade.

(Telegraphic.) Foreign-office, June 14, 1876, 5.25 P.M.

You should avoid pledging in any way Her Majesty's Government until Mr. Grosvenor's Report has been received and considered by them, when instructions will be given to you for your guidance.

Lord Tenterden to the Secretary to the Admiralty.

Foreign Office, June 29, 1876.

Sir,—With reference to my letter of the 12th instant, I am directed by the Earl of Derby to state to you, for the information of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, that a telegram, dated the 24th instant, has been received from Sir T. Wade stating that he finds it impossible at present to dispense with the four ships of the detached squadron now in China.—I am, &c., (Signed) TENTERDEN.

THE PRESS ON THE CHINESE EMBASSY.

The Standard says :—When we consider that the Court of Peking, being more punctilious—with its Board of Rites and Ceremonies, forming one of the great boards of State government, of which there are six—than any European Court, the omission of Imperial credentials on all occasions shows that they never were intended to be despatched as genuine embassies under the conduct of ambassadors or plenipotentiaries. This arises chiefly from the ancient policy of this so-called "Celestial Embassy," which presumptuously arrogates to its despotic Emperor a power and supremacy above all other earthly monarchs. Moreover, if he sent an embassy to any of them it would be an acknowledgment of equality between princes and their superior, contrary to the celestial doctrines of Kong-foo-tsze—whose name the Jesuit fathers Latinised into Confucius—where he says that as there is only one sun in the heavens, to which all other heavenly bodies are subordinate and inferior, so on earth there can only be one supreme Sovereign, to whom all other kings and princes must yield allegiance ; and such is the position of him who sits on the "Dragon Throne" of the "Great Middle Kingdom"—the centre of the earth. But times have changed even in that ancient nation since the era when China was consolidated out of forty principalities, after the system set in motion by that sage and lawgiver. The despised "outer barbarian" from the Western seas has at length invaded the supposed invulnerable shores and capital of Cathay, and broken down the barriers of exclusiveness. Even within the last few years European ambassadors and embassies sent to Peking were ranked with the envoys and missions from tributary States, such as Corea and Annam, the ordinary presents brought by them from their Sovereigns to the Emperor being received as tribute, and audiences granted to them as if they were foreign tribute bearers. Recent events, however, have affected this ancient celestial policy, and that—as heretofore in all the vital changes affecting the Government of this multitudinous, unwieldy empire—chiefly through British action and diplomacy. Our Minister Plenipotentiary at Peking, Sir Thomas Wade, has by his judicious, conciliatory, but firm negotiations with Li-hung or Lee-hoong Chang, the leading statesman in China, negotiated a new convention favourable to our own and foreign interests generally, to be presented for ratification by two genuine ambassadors accredited by the Regency at the Court of Peking to the Queen at the Court of St. James's. Sir Thomas Wade has already arrived in London, doubtless to furnish details concerning the embassy and its personnel to Her Majesty's Government, so that they may be prepared to receive it with all due consideration.

The Globe has the following :—England will soon witness the arrival of some even more interesting visitors than his puissant Majesty the Shah. The Chinese Embassy has already reached Gibraltar, where its members appear to have been received with due honour. The question is whether this visit of some really intelligent and highly cultivated Chinese gentlemen to Great Britain will lead to anything. In the case of Japan we know that a closer acquaintanceship with European civilisation has completely metamorphosed that country. Manners, customs, administration, government, the naval, military, and civil services, even the national costume, have undergone more or less change during the last ten or twelve years, so that those who knew Japan in former times would scarcely recognise it under its new development. Will a similar state of things result from the visit of the Chinese Ambassador and his many named suite? We doubt the probability ; we question whether the governing class in the Celestial Empire, from whose ranks the embassy has been selected, will ever help to introduce a form of civilisation which in the end would inevitably diminish their authority. Although the two peoples have a great deal in common, the Chinese official intellect is unlike the Japanese in its invincible repugnance to every sort of change. It was recently seen, in the case of the Woosung Railway, that they had contrived to make the people believe such works highly objectionable, by representing that the real object of railroads was not so much to improve the means of inter-communication as to desecrate graveyards and demolish temples. It will not be surprising, therefore, if our new visitors devote the chief part of their attention to the ways by which the barbarians manage to make their troops so formidable. Our arsenals and dockyards will probably receive minute inspection, and Aldershot may have to turn out in force for the gratification of his Excellency. One good thing may, however, result from this educational process. The Ambassador, who is reported to be an intelligent man, can scarcely fail to come to the conclusion that his country is not yet in a condition to venture on a war against Great Britain.

☞ The subjoined paragraph has appeared in the Daily News :—The announcement made of the appointment of a Secretary to the Chinese Embassy which is now on its way to England justifies the expectation that the new mission will exert a salutary influence on the relations of the two countries. The chief Ambassador, Kwo-sung-tao, although a man of high character and of great natural energy, not only has no knowledge of the English language, but actually speaks a patois which even in official circles in Peking is almost as strange as a foreign tongue. Mr. Chan Laisun, the Secretary of the Embassy, on the other hand, is an excellent English scholar, and on more than one occasion has addressed English audiences in their own language with remarkable fluency, and even eloquence. As a member of the Chinese Educational Mission he visited both the United States and this country about two years ago, and made a careful inquiry into our educational system. In a speech delivered at the close of his tour, he spoke very strongly in praise of the institutions, both public and private, which he had had an opportunity of inspecting ; and no doubt, if the decision had rested with him, a certain proportion of the Chinese youth who are now being educated at the public expense in the United States would have been placed in the schools of this country. The education which the Chinese Government is providing for these young men is of so thorough a character that we regret that they have not been afforded the opportunity of pursuing their studies in Great Britain. We cannot imagine any better mode of imparting to the Chinese all that would be really good and useful to them in Western civilisation, and at the same time of enabling both nations to get rid of unfounded prejudices. It is satisfactory to learn that Yung Wing, the chief of the educational mission of which Mr. Laisun was a member, has received the appointment of Assistant Minister at Washington. Yung Wing was formerly a student of Yale College, and is married to an American lady. These, as well as other appointments lately made by the Chinese Government, may be regarded as indications of a desire on the part of the present rulers of China to adapt themselves to the altered circumstances in which they have been placed by the course of events, and to establish friendly relations, in reality as well as in form, with those foreign Powers with which they have been brought into contact.

HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE.—COMMON PLEAS DIVISION.

GEORGE V. WATTS AND OTHERS.

This was an action against the owners of the steamship Singapore for not carrying a passenger safely and according to the terms agreed upon from Shanghai to London. It appeared that in June, 1873, the plaintiff took a passage from Shanghai to London in the Singapore, paying about £30, and receiving a ticket for cabin passage. He complained, among other things, of the accommodation and food provided for him, which, he said, were inferior to what would be implied by the expression "cabin passage," but the action was practically brought for injuries to himself and the loss of his effects in the wreck of the ship on the coast of Africa, which, he alleged, happened in consequence of the negligence of the defendants' servants. The circumstances of the wreck were as follow :—Near the entrance to the Red Sea the ship went ashore during the night on the African coast. She was going at a speed stated to be from 8½ to 10½ knots, and immediately after striking heeled right over to starboard. Two hours were occupied in attempting to get the port lifeboat out, but without success ; but eventually some other boats were launched and got ashore in safety. The one in which the plaintiff was taken had only two unbroken oars and no rudder, but was steered with part of another oar, and immediately after passing from under the lee of the ship was capsized. The plaintiff was washed ashore safely, but was very seriously injured by the coral beach on which he was dashed by the surf, being bruised and cut all over his body. He, with the remainder of those who had escaped from the vessel, proceeded towards Aden, depending for food on the natives. The plaintiff was unable to walk from the injuries he had sustained, and was placed on a dromedary, but said that he suffered much from the heat, hardships, and privations of the journey. After forty days' travelling they were taken off by Her Majesty's ship Dalhousie to Aden. Evidence as to the state of the plaintiff's health in consequence of his sufferings was given by his medical attendants, and he himself proved the value of the effects lost by him in the wreck. The negligence suggested by the plaintiff which led to the wreck was that the reversing wheel of the engines was lashed in such a way, being so lashed in consequence of its defective state, as to make it impossible to reverse the engines in less than four or five minutes after the order came from the bridge. It was impossible to arrive at any other previous cause of the ship going ashore, as all the officers and the chief engineer had been drowned at the time of the wreck in the execution of their duty ; but one of the subordinate engineers, who was on duty at the time of the wreck, was called to prove this defective arrangement in the reversing wheel. It did not, however, appear very clear from his evidence whether the engines could not with this arrangement have been reversed in a much shorter time, though he at first gave his opinion that it would be more than four or five minutes, and he could not, of course, form any opinion as to whether any such delay in reversing the engines was the cause of the ship's going ashore.

At the close of the plaintiff's case, Mr. Littler, for the defendants, submitted there was no evidence of negligence to go to the jury ; but the learned Judge declined to withhold the case from their consideration. For the defendants another engineer on duty at the time of the accident was called, and said that the engines were reversed and going astern within one or two minutes after the order, that the lashing of the reversing wheel could be slipped off at a moment's notice, and that the arrangements for lashing it in no way interfered with the working of the reversing gear. He also stated the ship was going about 10½ knots at the time, with a fair wind, and could not in any case have gathered stern way in less than ten minutes after the order to reverse was given. The Surveyor of the Board of Trade and the Surveyor of Lloyd's also expressed their opinion that a ship of the size of the Singapore, going at the rate of speed she was, could not gather sternway in a time less than from ten to fifteen minutes, and also expressed their opinion that the arrangements for lashing the reversing wheel would not in any way interfere with its immediate action.

The questions, therefore, for the jury were, whether the injuries to the plaintiff had been occasioned by the defendants' negligence, and the jury, at the conclusion of the case, informed the learned Judge that they had all agreed on the verdict. The learned Judge did not therefore, sum up the case in extenso, only informing the jury that the question was whether there was any evidence of negligence ; and the jury found a verdict for the defendants.

QUEEN'S BENCH DIVISION.

POTTER V. WILLIS AND SON.

This was an action of special interest and importance to China merchants. It was brought by a tea merchant of Mincing-lane against the owners of the clipper ship the Black Adder, to recover compensation for damage sustained by a parcel of 260 half-chests of tea, such damage having, it was alleged, been caused by the improper stowage of the chests. The facts were briefly as follows. The chests in question formed part of a cargo of 24,000 which were shipped in June, 1875, at Shanghai. When the cargo was unloaded in the East India Docks it was discovered that eighty out of a parcel of 260 half-chests were damaged. Some of them were what are termed, "turn outs"—that is to say, the cases were damaged, but the contents were taken out, the case repaired, and the contents put back. Some were what was termed "repacks"—that is to say, the cases were so much damaged that it was necessary to put the contents into fresh cases. By the bill of lading, it was stated that the chests were "shipped in good order and condition," and the mate's receipt was a clean one. The case for the plaintiffs was that the cases were improperly stowed, and that the damage to the eighty chests had resulted in consequence. In answer to this, the defendants set up that the chests containing the teas were not of the ordinary character, but were of a brittle and defective character; and it was further alleged that, in consequence of the manner in which tea-chests are furnished by the Chinese packers, it was impossible for the mate of the ship on receiving them to discover the defects. The native packers in China finish the chests by covering them with paper, over which a varnish is spread; and it is thus impossible to discover by inspection the nature of the wood underneath the paper, which may be rotten and unfit for the voyage, while the case is to all appearances perfect. Several skilled witnesses from the docks were called by the defendants to prove the defective packing, and they stated in substance that all packages of tea from Shanghai were more or less damaged from bad wood, &c. It was further stated that the damage to cargoes of tea from that place owing to defective wood and the fragile nature of the cases was on an average about 5 to 7 per cent. The plaintiff stated in rebuttal of this evidence, that he had been in the habit of receiving teas from China for about twenty years, and that he had never known the loss from this cause to go beyond something like 2 per cent. In the present case the loss came up to as much as 30 per cent. The case was argued at considerable length, but no precise precedent was put in on either side ; so that the point to be decided was one almost new. A case was cited as bearing upon the present one by analogy, where a claim was made against the owners of a steamer for compensation for loss sustained from mildew in a parcel of grey shirtings which had been shipped in the vessel. The plaintiff's case was, that the hold of the steamer was unusually damp, and that the steam thus generated had been the cause of the shirtings becoming mildewed. It was, however, shown by the defendants, that the shirtings in question were especially liable to become mildewed in consequence of their having been finished with what is known as "heavy sizing," that is a species of sizing designed to increase the weight of the goods. Upon these facts the Court held that the vessel was not liable, as the cause of the damage was traceable to the goods themselves.

Mr. Justice Field in summing up the case for the special jury, after giving a review of the facts, laid it down that upon the basis of the case cited with regard to the shirtings it would appear that the ship could not be held liable for damage to cargo resultant from any defect connected with the cargo itself, which it was not possible to discover on receiving it; and he laid the following questions before the jury for their decision: 1. Whether in their opinion these packages were all of reasonable make and strength to stand the voyage. 2. Whether there was anything about these packages which was concealed from the mate or captain, and which they could not discover. 3. Whether the word "contents" in the bill of lading meant the whole of the packages or only the tea in them.

The jury without retiring, and after only a short consultation, returned a verdict to the effect that the packages were ordinary and reasonably secure packages, that there was not anything concealed from the officers of the ship, and that the word "contents" meant the tea in the packages.

Upon this judgment was entered for the plaintiffs—damages £102.

THE NEW CONVENTION.

The following letter, evidently from the pen of someone well conversant with Chinese matters, has been addressed to the Spectator :—

The Standard informs us :—"The year has seen the settlement of the very serious difficulty with China caused by the murder of Mr. Margary, and the attack on the expedition commanded by Colonel Browne. Twelve months ago it seemed as if that difficulty would not be peacefully arranged. It is true, indeed, that the Chinese Government professed its readiness to give all the requisite reparation. But at the same time, it evasively put off making good its professions. The prospect thus opened up was serious, not for any doubts that we should be able to exact the redress due to us, but because of the probability that our success would be more complete than we should wish ourselves, and that, in fact, if once we began hostilities, we should break up the Chinese Empire. In spite of the vitality the Mongol Government is proved still to possess, by the success with which it has suppressed the formidable insurrections that during the past quarter of a century have threatened to tear away some of its most valuable provinces, all who understand the condition of the country are aware that there are forces at work which, in the event of a disastrous foreign war, would probably rend asunder the empire. But whatever faults the Chinese system of government may possess, at least it has the merit of maintaining tolerable order and a certain degree of well-being and civilisation among a population larger than any subject to a single sceptre, save only that which owns the sway of our Sovereign. But with a knowledge of what followed the dissolution of the Mogul monarchy in India, it was a serious responsibility to undertake the overthrow of so vast an empire. Fortunately, we have been spared the necessity. Owing to the skill and firmness of Sir Thomas Wade, the Chinese Government has been induced not only to give as full satisfaction for the murder of Mr. Margary and the attack on Colonel Browne's expedition, but also to yield on all the other points in dispute between us. It has thrown open additional ports. It has agreed to the opening-up of Yunnan. It has recognised by public proclamation and made known to the provincial Mandarins the Treaty rights of foreigners; and it has conceded the right of the European Ambassadors to have audiences with the Emperor. On every point, in fact, we seem to have obtained full satisfaction."

Now, what are the facts? The Chinese Government have not given "full" or any satisfaction for the murder of Margary and the attack on Colonel Browne's expedition; on the contrary, the "inquiry" into the affair has been a farce from the beginning of it to the end. If ever Mr. Grosvenor's report sees the light it will satisfactorily establish this; and now, although the Chinese Government pretends that it has hit upon the real criminals, it coolly says—and I believe the Treaty itself embodies the sentiment—"that the maintenance of good relations between countries is better than vengeance," and therefore the guilty are to go unpunished. Then the public are told that the Chinese Government has "yielded all other points in dispute between us." It would be much nearer the truth—if, indeed, it would not be the truth—to say that the English Government has so yielded. For thirty-five years we have insisted that the Chinese have no right to impose "Leikin" duties on British goods over and above import and transit duties, and yet the Treaty in which the latter are said to have yielded everything provides that the Chinese Government may in the future levy "Leikin" duties on all British goods outside the foreign settlements, so long as they do not levy them inside. Now, as there is not a foreign settlement in the whole of China that is a mile broad by a mile long, and as British goods are not concerned in the foreign settlements, so far from the Chinese having yielded anything, it is the English Government that has legalised the imposition of duties that for thirty-five years it has insisted were a gross infraction of Treaty rights. Again, since the Treaty of Tientsin, the claims of British subjects on the Chinese Government for actual losses sustained by them in consequence of infraction of Treaty rights, of illegal confiscations, of robbery of goods and money by Imperial officers and soldiers, of destruction of property, and in respect of many other matters, amounts at the least to two millions sterling, and if interest was added, to a very great deal more. Yet by the Treaty all these claims, together with the indemnity for the Margary murder and the expenses of the expedition from India, are fixed at Tls. 200,000, about £60,000. If those claims were fair and proper claims, and they have been sifted and sifted ad nauseam, and admitted to be right, such a compromise is a gross wrong to the British claimants; but it is as a matter of policy even worse, for it establishes as a principle that the Chinese Government may plunder foreigners, may infringe treaties to their own benefit, and then, when brought to book, compromise all their iniquities for a trifle,—for an amount, in fact, barely appreciable. It is notorious that the Chinese Government has repaid itself over and over again, by deliberate and systematic violation of the Treaty of Tientsin, the indemnity it had to pay to the British Government for previous infractions. In other words, it has made British goods pay every farthing of the fine inflicted on it, and a great deal more, and has pocketed thousands of pounds sterling besides. So much for the points yielded by the Chinese in the Treaty just settled between the British Minister and Li-Hung-Chang. Then we are told that the Chinese Government has recognised the "Treaty rights" of foreigners, and made them known by proclamation to the provincial mandarins. Why, it did this fifteen years ago! Is this another specimen of yielding points in dispute, that it should be accounted a merit to recognise that which was solemnly recognised fifteen years ago, and to proclaim again what was then proclaimed? Finally, we come to the last concession, viz., that the Chinese Government has ceded the right of the "European Ambassadors" to have audiences with the Emperor. "Ambassadors" have always had this right. So there is nothing new so far, but there is something peculiarly ludicrous at the present moment in putting this forward as a concession—if ever it was one—inasmuch as the present Emperor is almost a baby, and therefore neither Ambassadors nor Ministers would take much by an audience with him.

"On every point, in fact," says the Standard, "we seem to have obtained full satisfaction." My answer is, it is untrue, for on no one point have we obtained a single concession. We have failed in the Margary affair, we have failed in the settlement of bonâ fide British claims; we have failed in procuring the abolition of the "Leikin" duties; and we have done worse, for we have admitted their legality, and thus enabled the Chinese Government to ruin British trade at any moment it thinks fit, by over-weighting British goods with these duties. We have allowed them to increase the import duties on opium, thus protecting the native article, and encouraging its more extended growth. We have been satisfied with the opening of two or three ports of no great moment, when we ought to have insisted upon the opening of the whole country to trade, a privilege enjoyed exclusively by Russia, to the terrible injury of our commerce. We have failed in getting the Chinese Government to sanction the building of railroads or the opening of mines, and as a matter of fact, so far from the negotiations of the past year being satisfactory, they are just the reverse. We have been played with and humiliated, and the Chinese Government has gained a real diplomatic triumph, which entitles it, from a Chinese point of view of course, to all the credit, which we, in our incredible folly, presumption, and ignorance, claim for our own proceedings.

Monetary and Commercial.

The China Customs Gazette for the third quarter of 1876 has been issued. The imports of Grey Shirtings into Shanghai shows an increase, as compared with the same quarter of 1875, being 1,465,916 pcs., against 1,225,782 pcs. T-Cloths, however, show a marked falling off, viz., 602,241 pcs., as against 911,709 pcs. In the returns of the ports north of Shanghai the returns generally show a continued falling off in the imports of manufactured goods, with the exception, however, of Newchwang. Tientsin—the most important depot after Shanghai—again shows a considerable falling off in the two leading staples of Manchester manufacture, Grey Shirtings and T-Cloths. Of the former only 272,000 pcs. were imported, against 478,000 for the corresponding period in 1875, and of T-Cloths only 176,000 pcs., against 217,000 pcs. At Canton there has also been a falling off in the import of manufactured goods. At Amoy Shirtings have fallen off, but T-Cloths increased.

In the Produce Markets the tone of business continues quiet, under the influence of the Political situation, and prices of some articles have given way. Tea is dull, without important alteration in quotations. Silk is very quiet, and exhibits a declining tendency. Coffee is in less demand, and has fallen 3s. to 4s. per cwt. Pepper and Sugar are also lower. Gambier and Sago Flour have been in speculative demand at advanced quotations. Other articles remain without change of importance—p. 65.

The total quantity of tea delivered from the bonded warehouses in London for the week ended the 13th inst., was 3,734,733 lbs., against 3,416,715 lbs. in the preceding week, or an increase of about 9¼ per cent. Of the above total, 2,622,726 lbs. was for home consumption; 715,313 lbs. was removed coastwise; 243,759 lbs. was exported; 149,051 lbs. was sent coastwise for exportation; and 3,884 lbs. was for ship's stores. During the same period, the duty received amounted to £65,570, which, compared with £59,326 of the previous week, shows an increase equal to about 10½ per cent. The following were the quantities of the other principal dutiable articles withdrawn from the London onded warehouses for home consumption during the week nding the 13th inst.:—Coffee, 664,883 lbs.; cocoa, 258,148 lbs.; obacco, 394,264 lbs.; cigars, 21,905 lbs.; wine, 158,187 gallons; brandy, 37,922 gallons; and rum, 34,907 gallons.

Messrs. J. Henry Schröder and Co. announce that the half-yearly interest on the Imperial Government of Japan Customs Loan for £1,000,000, due on the 1st prox., will be paid on and after that date at their counting-house.

A telegram from Shanghai, dated the 15th inst., announces that the sale of the business of the Shanghai Steam Navigation Company to the Chinese Merchants' Steam Navigation Company has been sanctioned by the shareholders.

The market for Bar Silver has continued active, and prices have again followed an upward movement, the closing quotation being 58d. For Mexican Dollars a similar advance has been established, the value at the close being 58½d. per oz.

The Eastern Telegraph Company's report for the half-year ending September 30 last shows a net profit of £108,416. An interim dividend of 1¼ per cent. for the quarter ending June 30, 1876, paid in October last, and a further interim distribution of 1¼ for the quarter ending September 30, 1876, paid on the 15th inst., amounted, together with interest on debenture and preference shares, to £105,457, leaving £2,958 to be carried forward.

The directors of the Paris Banking Company (Limited) report their net profits for the past half-year at £84,445, including £7,508 brought from the previous account. From this an interim dividend at the rate of 15 per cent., taking £29,362, was paid last July, and it is now proposed to pay a futher dividend at the same rate, along with a bonus of 10s. per share, all tax free, which will absorb a further £39,150; £10,000 is to be added to reserve, raising it to £180,000, and the balance carried forward.

The report of the directors of the Central Bank of London (Limited) gives the net profit, including the balance brought forward, as £7,707, exclusive of rebate on bills not yet due. A dividend at the rate of 8 per cent. is recommended; £1,500 is added to reserve, and a balance of £2,208 carried to the new account.

The Inman Steam Shipping Company have declared a dividend of 6 per cent. for the half-year, making 12 per cent. for the year.

LAUNCH.

On the 15th inst. the Glenesgle, a screw steamer of 2,500 tons, and 320-horse power, was launched by the London and Glasgow Shipbuilding Company, for Messrs. Allan C. Gow and Co., Glasgow. She is the eighth steamer built by this firm for the "Glen" Line of China steamers since 1870. The steamers of this line have several times been first to arrive with the first cargo of new season teas.

GENERAL SHIPPING NEWS.

LOUDOUN CASTLE.—On the 15th inst. the latest addition to the splendid fleet of Messrs. Thomas Skinner and Co., the Loudoun Castle, proceeded down the Firth on a preliminary trip previous to sailing on her maiden voyage to China. The Loudoun Castle has been built and engined by Messrs. James and George Thomson, Clyde Bank, and is the sixth steamer that firm has built for Messrs Skinner and Co.'s line. The new vessel is 2,500 tons measurement, 340 feet long, 36½ feet breadth of beam, 25 feet depth of hold, and is propelled by direct-acting compound surface-condensing engines of 400-horse power. Externally her model is very pleasing to the eye, while internally everything has been provided which will enable the vessel to travel the distance allotted her in the shortest possible time and under the most favourable circumstances. On the trial, with a superabundance of steam, an average speed equal to 13¼ nautical miles on a loaded draft of 20 feet was attained, which was considered most satisfactory, and builders and owners were congratulated on the result—the hope being entertained that she would be able to make the passage between Shanghai and London in 36 days. A number of gentlemen interested in the China trade were invited to accompany the steamer, and the day being fine the outing was much enjoyed. After the average speed of the steamer had been ascertained at the measured mile, the company were invited to dinner in the main saloon, Mr. Thos. Skinner occupying the chair, while the duties of croupier were discharged by Mr. James Thomson. In a few words Mr. Thomson subsequently proposed "Prosperity to the Loudoun Castle and her Owners," which Mr. Skinner acknowledged, and afterwards proposed "The Health of the Builders and Engineers," to which Mr. George Thomson replied. "The Health of the Captain," Alex. Marshall, commodore of the fleet, who is to command the ship, was also cordially pledged. The guests left the steamer at the Cloch, when she proceeded direct to London, where she will load for Shanghai, and sail early next month. The performances of the Loudon Castle will no doubt be watched with considerable interest, as she is likely to be engaged in this year's race home from China.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT

Mr. J. T. COOPER,
In his celebrated TRAVELS IN CHINA, published in 1871, says:—
"I had with me in my travels a quantity of "Holloway's Ointment. I gave some to the people, "and nothing could exceed their gratitude: and, in "consequence—milk, fowls, butter, and horse-feed "poured in upon us, until at last a teaspoonful of "Ointment was worth a fowl and any quantity of "peas, and the demand became so great that I was "obliged to lock up the small remaining stock."
This fine OINTMENT is invaluable in the cure of BAD LEGS, BAD BREASTS, OLD SORES, wounds, ulcers, gout, rheumatism, and all skin diseases.

JAPAN.

YOKOHAMA.

Our advices from this port by the present mail are only one day later than those received vid San Francisco on the 17th inst., and published in our last issue.

NAGASAKI.

The Spring Regatta at this port, as at present arranged, will take place on the 25th April. The local Rowing Club appears to be reviving, as efforts are being made to get up a four to meet crews from Shanghai and other ports.

H.B.M.'s ships Audacious and Hart left on the 25th November, the former for Hong Kong and the latter for Kobe. The Thistle has arrived to replace the Hart.

CHINA.

TIENTSIN.

A correspondent of the North China Herald writes from this port as follows :—

We are glad to know that one of our old residents has drawn attention to a new iron field, some eighty miles from this, and that some of the Chinese merchants and others are beginning to manifest a good deal of interest in the working of coal and iron mines. Perhaps at no distant day we may see our hopes fulfilled. The Chinese gentlemen who are desirous of engaging in this new branch of industry are also anxious to have railways. It is believed by many that H.E. Li is ready to open and work the mines with foreign machinery, introduce railroads, and other foreign methods for developing the resources of the country, were it not for the obstructions placed in his way in Peking. There is the deadlock. It is to be sincerely hoped that the projectors of the Woosung Railway have not laboured in vain, but that that little road may be continued and extended, after passing into Chinese hands. Let them be comforted in having Chinese sympathisers.

Each returning autumn brings changes to our little community in the way of departures, temporary or permanent. Mr. Henry Beveridge, who has been agent for Messrs. Jardine, Matheson, and Co. at this port for the last five years, left on the 2nd Dec. He goes to England to join his family, which preceded him in the spring. Mr. Beveridge has gained the confidence and good-will of passengers and shippers generally by the kind and obliging spirit he has shown. Mr. E. Myer, another resident of several years' standing, leaves in a few days for the Fatherland. Although he does not propose a return to China, we learn that he intends continuing his business relations with this port, so that his friends may yet hear from him again, and have the opportunity of congratulating him on future success, as they now do for past success as a merchant. The Commissioner of Customs, Mr. J. Macpherson, has given up the duties of his position, preparatory to returning to his native land in a few days. Mr. Mouillesaux de Bernieres is now in charge.

Many persons are still coming to Tientsin from the surrounding country. Four soup kitchens have been opened under official supervision, where a small amount of millet gruel is furnished to those in need. Gentlemen who have recently been travelling in the section of country lying W. and S.W. of this bring very much the same report of poor crops as that published in your columns a short time since. In one low-lying tract they found that the crops had all been destroyed by water, and they had to be ferried a distance of eleven li, or make a long detour.

The China Merchants' Company have recently purchased the lot formerly owned by Messrs. A. Heard and Co. in the American Concession, and lying next to the British Concession on the South. More recently they have bought the property in the British Settlement which belonged to the estate of the late John Hanna, and recently occupied by Messrs. Hatch and Co.

A considerable export trade is springing up at this port, or increasing in importance and value over past years. The more prominent articles are sheep and camels' wool, straw braid, feathers, bristles, hair, curios of all sorts, including the renowned inlaid and enamel work.

The wind is blowing from the north, cold and threatening. Two or three such days will so chill the water in the river as to cause it to freeze rapidly when the wind falls and the surface becomes quiet. It is thought that no more steamers will come up the river. We hear there is much floating ice at Taku.

CHEFOO.

The correspondent of the North China Daily News writes from this Port under date 9th December as follows :—

On the 20th of November the Mosquito arrived here, and it was reported by her officers that the Lapwing could not be got off, and that all hopes of getting her off were abandoned. Whereupon, Mr. Detring, the Commissioner of Customs, offered the services of the Harbour Master, Mr. W. C. Howard, who had suggested to him a feasible plan for floating her. These services were accepted, and Mr. Howard was invited to proceed to the wreck. He arrived there on the 21st of November, and after examining the Lapwing suggested his plan to the Commander, and said she could be floated for about $2,000. (A Chefoo contractor who was on the spot offered to float her for Tls. 8,000, nothing to be paid if he failed.) Mr. Howard's plan was accepted. It was simple, and has proved successful. It was merely to make a breakwater around her by means of 10,000 or more bags of sand. This would preserve her against the heavy seas running in a gale from the north-east, and she could be floated off either at the next spring tide, or, at latest, on one of the high tides in March. Mr. Howard came at once to Chefoo, purchased bags, and returned to the stranded vessel to begin operations, in concert with her commander and her officers. Five hundred coolies were employed in filling the bags with sand, and making the breakwater. A trench was dug around the vessel, and three anchors were placed, awaiting a high tide. There was no difficulty in procuring as many coolies as were required at 150 to 200 cash a day. It is reported they did not work well in the water, and that the trench was chiefly dug out by the men of the Charybdis.

On the 28th of November a gale blew from the N.E., and was so severe that the vessel was driven higher on shore. The breakwater at this time was only half completed, but it was the expressed opinion of the commander of the Charybdis and of all the officers who were present that had it not been for the breakwater the vessel must have been totally destroyed. It was proposed several times to blow her up, so doubtful seemed the chances of succeeding in getting her off. But Commander Wiseman and Mr. Howard adhered to the plans commenced. The result proves the wisdom of the steps adopted. The trench was completed and everything made ready to float the vessel at the first high tide. At twelve o'clock on the night of the 4th Dec. the Lapwing floated, and so complete were the arrangements that she was safely off before half her crew could get on board, and at 8.30 the following morning she was towed to a safe anchorage. She is in good condition, and is now being rigged to proceed shortly to Shanghai, in company with the Charybdis and Frolic. The cost of floating her does not exceed $2,100.

Winter is upon us in earnest, and it has been snowing for the past two days. The Chefoo Taoutai and Superintendent of Customs, Hung-I-Tu, is leaving for a visit to Peking. He hoped to go by a Chinese gunboat to Taku, but it has come on so cold that he has decided to go by land. I do not envy him his trip. During his absence, Chang Yiu Huan will officiate in his stead. He is a Taoutai, and is in charge of the forts here.

HANKOW.

A correspondent of the Celestial Empire writes as follows :—

Fearful rumours have been flying about the river. At Nanking they said that Hankow had been reduced to ashes and the entire population consumed in the flames. The tale was gradually modified, however, as it approached the port from which I write until it reached the real truth, to wit, that a fire had broken out in some houses bordering the settlement, and that the captain of H.M.S. Kestrel had received a broken head while valiantly attempting to put out the fire. On the evening of the 29th Nov., at about nine o'clock, a fire broke out in some Chinese houses in the neighbourhood of the London Mission Hospital, and close on the borders of the Concession. The brick tea manufactory of Messrs. Cherepanoff and Co., together with some other foreign property, was for some time in considerable danger. Fortunately, the timely arrival of a party from H.M.S. Kestrel and of several energetic residents prevented the fire from spreading. Before eleven o'clock it was well under control, and gradually burnt itself out. Happily there were no more serious accidents than a broken head and a few slight burns.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 15th December ; the P. and O. mail from London Oct. 27 was received on the 10th December. The North China Herald contains the following summary of news :—

Four of the native employés of the Woosung Railway Company, who were forcibly carried off by the mob during the recent disturbances at Woosung, were produced at the Mixed Court on the 13th Dec. They had been sent to Paoshan, before the magistrate at which place they stated that they were badly ill-treated while being taken to Chu Feng-feng's house, where they were detained two days and a night. Now they all said they were beaten by the mob before arriving at the house, but not afterwards; though one of them, a Ningpo man, who lit a fire to warm himself, causing the people in the house to think he intended setting it on fire, was hung up by the wrists, his arms being tied behind him, in which position he was kept for some time. This man also said he had been robbed of $8, which sum was forwarded to Chen by the Paoshan Magistrate, and handed to the man in the Mixed Court. The tepao will be instructed to look after the three men from his district, and security will be obtained for the Ningpo man, so that they may be again produced when the case against Feng-feng and the other prisoners is ready for full investigation.

An attempt has been made to forcibly enter the treasure-room on board the S.S.N. Co.'s steamer Hupeh, and the would-be-robbers were caught red-handed. The robbery of the steamer's treasure by Thomas Henry Brown, the second pilot, appears to have been long contemplated, and to carry out his plans he took into his confidence the second officer, Edward Rosquist, and a shore friend, named William Edwards, who lived at Hongkew. Rosquist, however, while pretending to acquiesce in the scheme, at once went to Captain Steele and informed him of the plot. Thus forewarned the agents of the company were able to make arrangements to frustrate it, and to make preparation for the capture of the burglars when the event should take place. Through Rosquist, who was instructed to continue to appear to share in the design, they were informed that all arrangements were completed for the robbery to take place at half-past ten on Sunday night, when it was supposed that there were Tls.57,000 in gold and Tls. 8,000 in silver in the treasure-room. Edwards was to be alongside the steamer with a sampan to receive the treasure from Brown and Rosquist, who were to trust him to bury it no the Pootung shore, where it was to await subsequent events. Captain Steele was prepared for the occasion ; he had Mr. Penfold, the Superintendent of Police, and a staff of assistants and several others ready to pounce on Brown, when a preconcerted signal was given that practical operations for the robbery had been commenced. Rosquist and Brown were forcing open the treasure-room door with a crowbar, when the signal was given, and the captain and the police authorities boarded the steamer. Brown bolted, and was not found for twenty minutes afterwards, when he was discovered comfortably in bed, with the key of the Chubb's lock on the treasure-room door of the steamer Kiangsi, belonging to the same company, under his pillow. He was taken into custody. Edwards, in the sampan, escaped, but was subsequently apprehended by the police.

We are glad to learn from the minutes of a meeting of Treaty Consuls that the amount needed to pay the fee of the Dutch gentlemen who lately surveyed the Woosung Bar has been collected, and that the work of surveying land for the new outside roads is progressing favourably. It is less satisfactory to learn that the Taoutai still neglects to answer all representations on the subject of wharfage dues. But we are glad to see the Consuls have rescinded their decision to interview him personally on the subject, and purpose instead addressing him a decided note, informing him that his lack of courtesy and failure in duty leave them no alternative but to represent his conduct to the Ministers for communication to the Government. At the close of the proceedings Mr. Medhurst resigned his functions as Senior Consul in view of his approaching departure, and it was decided to ask Mr. Godeaux to accept the office. Failing his consent it will devolve upon Mr. Myers, who took the opportunity to pay a warm tribute of respect to the retiring chairman.

A few days ago a Chinese seaman, who had signed articles for and was working on board the British steamer Glenfalloch, was permitted to come on shore to endeavour to obtain payment of $4 from another native, who owed him that amount. The men met in a public thoroughfare in Hongkew, and high words ensued between them. Some passers-by saw that the seaman was menacing the other with what looked like a fan, but which was really a dagger concealed under that semblance. They were afraid to interfere, but told a municipal native constable of the occurrence, and he, going up from behind, seized the seaman's hands, took the fan-dagger from him, and made him prisoner. The case was brought before Mr. Mowatt, who, however, declined jurisdiction, and referred the matter to the Mixed Court magistrate, as prisoner was a native, and the offence was committed on shore. The latter sentenced him to be deported to his native place. As, however, he had signed articles to serve for twelve months on board the Glenfalloch, Captain Hogg made application that he should be put on board, the vessel being bound for New York and London. The magistrate consented to this course, and the prisoner was taken on board, the vessel sailing the same day.

At the Mixed Court a preliminary investigation has been made of the circumstances of the assault, by stone and mud throwing, upon Mr. Love and two ladies, while in a boat on a creek opposite Tung-ka-doo, on the 14th October last. The accused, including men, women, and children, were villagers of Chang-kia-pang. The persons produced were the tepao, his two deputies, an elderly man and woman, and a boy, ten years old, grandson of the latter. Mr. Love and Dr. Burge having given evidence of the misbehaviour of the villagers on the occasion, it transpired that the tepao had informed the Che-hsien, and had actually signed a bond in that official's yamen to the effect that he had seen the British Consul, who had told him to apologise to Mr. Love; that he had done so, and that Mr. Love had consented to withdraw from the prosecution; the fact being that he had seen neither the Consul nor Mr. Love. It was also shown that none of the parties brought to Court, except the boy, were concerned personally in the affair, and they therefore could not be proceeded against. The case was in consequence adjourned; the tepao, however, being detained in custody to answer for his misconduct. The others were sent to the Che-hsien to be forwarded to their homes, with a request to the Che-hsien that the real culprits might be produced. In the meantime, the Taoutai will be communicated with officially on the subject generally.

A meeting of the Temperance Society has been held, to elect officers for the ensuing year. Mr. Blethen and the Rev. J. Thomas were respectively re-elected President and Vice-President, Mr. A. Gordon was appointed Secretary in the place of Mr. R. D. Cheetham resigned, the Rev. H. S. Holt was chosen Treasurer, and Mr. Amoore was appointed Librarian. A Committee of seven was also elected. After the meeting, the usual fortnightly entertainment was given. There was again a crowded attendance, including, as on the last occasion, many ladies and leading residents.

A meeting of the Asiatic Society has been held under the presidency of Mr. Medhurst. Drs. Henderson, Jamieson and Pichon, and Messrs. Sutherland, Howe, Skatchkoff, Martin, W. M. Cooper, Artindale and Hertz were elected members; and more than twenty new members were proposed. Papers on "the style of Chinese Epistolary Composition," by Dr. Martin, and on the Boat Architecture of the Chinese and their use of the Mariner's Compass," by Dr. Edkins, were read. A collection of Chinese coins was exhibited.

We hear that large numbers of refugees from the distressed districts north of the Yangtsze are flocking into this province, and congregating at the principal cities. At Soochow alone there are said to be 10,000. Matsheds have been erected there for some 7,000, and two meals of conjee are served out per day, which is probably sufficient to keep body and soul together. It is a pity the Government does not take the opportunity to employ the people on some useful public work.

A Chinkeang correspondent writes that large numbers of people are coming down from the famine-stricken districts and are lying about around the city and the foreign Settlement evidently in great destitution. It has been reported that the Government are taking steps to plant some of the sufferers on the lands which have been lying waste since the rebellion, in Anhwei; but very little symptom is shown by the Chinkiang officials of a desire to help those who are at their doors.

The business done in the Share Market during the week has been very small. The sales reported consist of a few Bank Shares at 22 per cent. prem., exchange 75, a lot of Shanghai Gas Shares at Tls. 142, a lot of Yangtsze Insurance Shares at Tls. 617½, and some S. and H. Wharf Shares at Tls. 94. There are sellers of Bank and S.S.N. Shares. Other stocks are quiet.

The fluctuations in silk and exchange during the current twelve months have been remarkable. The lowest figure for Blue Elephants was at the beginning of the year, when they were quoted at Tls. 320. They steadily rose till August, when they stood at 575; in about a fortnight they fell to 540, but soon rose to 570; the upward tendency, continuing till October, when they reached the maximum, 712½. An equally rapid decline has followed, the present quotation being only 520. Some good business was done a few months ago in silk; the profits of a single shipment being enormous, bringing to memory the most palmy days of the trade. The fluctuations in exchange have been equally great. Starting in January at 5s. 7½d., it fell in March to 5s. 1½d. and to 5s. 1d. in July, its lowest point. The next month, however, it had risen to 5s. 9d., after which it continued to fall, the quotation at the end of September being 5s. 1d. Remaining almost stationary for some time, it has during the past week or two taken rapid strides, this mail's figures—5s. 11½d.—being the highest of the year, with too, an, excelsior tendency.

A choral wedding has been celebrated in Trinity Cathedral, in the presence of a crowded congregation. The occasion was the marriage of Mr. Joseph Welch, of Messrs. Adamson, Bell, and Co., to Miss Edith Bois. The ceremony was performed by the Right Rev. Dr. Russell, Bishop of North China, assisted by the Very Rev. the Dean, and the spectacle was a very pretty one. The Glenfalloch, Leander, and several other vessels were gaily decorated, and the P. and O. Company paid the happy couple the compliment of hoisting Messrs. Adamson, Bell, and Co.'s house-flag from the mizen of the Malwa.

The two gunboats Alpha and Beta, each armed with a twenty-six ton gun to fire over the bow, two smaller guns, and a Gatling, built for the Chinese Government by Sir William Armstrong, left Tientsin on the 27th November for Taku to undergo firing trials before Li Hung-chang, Mr. Robert Hart and others. They passed a satisfactory examination, and have now left for Foochow, where the foreign crews will be paid off and Chinese placed in charge.

We are informed that three Spanish war vessels are expected here shortly, for the purpose, it is said, of demanding satisfaction for outrages committed by the Chinese in Formosa eleven years ago, in connection with the loss of the Sovrana on that coast. It is said that the Chinese Government has delayed making compensation up to this date. It is hinted to us, however, that the meditated visit of these war vessels has even more to do with the Cuba Coolie trade.

Our Municipal authorities are extending the usefulness of their postal arrangements. Four pillar post-boxes have been erected outside the Settlement, and the receipt and delivery of correspondence will take place three times daily, except on Sundays, when the pillars will only be emptied once.

From Yunnan we have news that peace has been restored throughout the province, but the Yunnanites appear to be very much dissatisfied with the terms of the Chefoo Convention.

The undergraduates who caused a disturbance in the Examination Hall at Kwei-chow are being punished for their temerity, and will probably be deprived of the right of competing at the examinations for two or three generations.

FOOCHOW.

We take the following from the Foochow Herald of the 30th Nov.:—

The enterprising proprietors of the little s.s. Taiwan have announced that she will leave her moorings off the long bridge for Pagoda Anchorage and Quantow one hour after high water every morning, returning every evening on the flood tide. The fare to Pagoda Anchorage for Europeans is 50c. The foreign public will no doubt find this improved means of communication with their shipping highly advantageous, and Chinese passengers are already beginning to appreciate the advantages derivable from the more rapid means of conveyance.

One of the largest conflagrations on local record, occurred last Monday, the 27th Nov., in the southern suburb. The fire originated in a dwelling-house about a quarter of a mile east of the large bridge, at about 8 A.M. As is too often the case, woman, lovely woman, was at the bottom of the mischief! Two elderly females, while engaged in cooking rice for the morning meal, are said to have capsized the earthenware stove commonly used for such purposes, thereby setting the house in a blaze. The wind was high at the time, consequently the flames spread with extraordinary rapidity, and as a matter of course nothing was done to check the devastation. At first, the fire took a westerly direction, traversing the waterside suburbs as far as the bridge. At about 11 A.M., however, a shift of wind caused the flames to spread in the direction of the city, destroying some very valuable property, the contents of large shops in the main street of the southern suburb. Altogether, upwards of 2,000 houses were destroyed, and property to the value of nearly $800,000. A number of lives were lost, but the actual loss of life has not yet been clearly ascertained.

The same paper of December 7 gives the subjoined items :—

From a report of proceedings at the annual general meeting of shareholders in the Foochow Ice Company we regret to observe that the affairs of the company are not so flourishing as might be ; but we trust that with increased public support the concern may become more profitable.

The great conflagration on the 27th ultimo, to which we eferred in our last issue, caused more destruction to property r han was at first supposed, and we regret to add that a number o[f] people, chiefly aged persons and children, are still missing. As a proof of the rapidity with which native houses may be reconstructed we may mention that several dwellings destroyed by the fire in question are now nearly rebuilt.

The nineteenth vessel built at the Mamoi Arsenal was successfully launched on Saturday, the 2nd instant. Like several of her predecessors on the Mamoi stocks, she is said to have been built entirely by the Chinese, but we presume that a certain amount of foreign supervision was exercised. The vessel is a steam transport, built of composite material, and was launched with her engines, &c., on board. She was named the Tai Ngan.

We understand that a new channel has been formed near the Mingan Pass, by which the dangerous detour of Spiteful Island, now supposed to be necessary, may be avoided. A correspondent (a pilot) wishes to know if he would be justified in using this channel, pending an official survey of it. The subject is one on which we are unable to give an opinion ; but we would say that any departure from the course laid down on the officially recognised river chart would be inadvisable. The subject will doubtless be taken up in the proper quarter.

For stealing from the Mamoi Arsenal a small quantity of copper —the property of his Imperial Majesty of China—an unlucky "soldier-man" was a few days ago summarily deprived of one of his ears, and placed in a cangue near the main entrance to that establishment. We have no desire to enter into a consideration of this very questionable mode of punishment, but merely mention the fact of its infliction to prove that the Chinese authorities are by no means slow to deal with cases in which their Government is directly interested, and they themselves, if it so happen, tolerably clean-handed. Had they taken off the man's head we should not have expressed the least surprise.

AMOY.

The China Mail correspondent writes under date of the 5th of December :—

H.M.S. Vigilant arrived here on the 20th ult., followed on the 30th by the Audacious, bearing the flag of Vice-Admiral Ryder. On the 2nd inst. H.E. turned over to the Vigilant and left the same night for Swatow and Hong Kong. The Audacious left for Hong Kong on the 4th. It was very much to be regretted that during the stay of the vessels in port the weather was so bad as to prevent their officers duly appreciating our lovely settlement. The last of the fine weather was on the 30th, when the Scotch picnic, which was a great success, came off at the Tung-lignam Temple. Two steamers were leaving unfortunately north and south the same day, and reduced the attendance somewhat, but notwithstanding all the drawbacks there was a very fair show of both Scotchmen and guests.

The Bachelors' Ball on the 1st inst. will long be remembered in Amoy, on account of the presence of the band of the Audacious, which had kindly been lent by Captain Colomb and the officers. We have so long been accustomed to dance to a piano and cornet that the presence of a real band gave us an additional impetus, and dancing was carried on till past three in the morning.

During the stay of the Audacious a cricket match had been arranged "Fleet v. Shore," but the rain prevented its taking place. It was a great disappointment, especially as the band had been promised for the occasion.

HONG KONG.

Dates from the above port by the present mail extend to the 21st December. It was then anticipated that Sir Arthur Kennedy would leave for his new post as Governor of Queensland about the end of January. The China Mail states that a despatch has been received from the Home Government, to the effect that it is impossible to say at what date the arrangements for the admission of Hong Kong to the Postal Union will be complete, but that there is no reason to apprehend a long delay.

The above-named paper also gives the following items of news :—

The annual examination of the elementary schools of Hong Kong, under the grant-in-aid scheme, are now being held by the Inspector of Schools. On the 8th Mr. Stewart examined the St. Stephen's Church Boys' School, Taipingshan, when forty-nine were presented for examination in six standards. Of these 80 per cent. passed what was pronounced by the Inspector to be a good examination. The raising of the requirements in Standards III. and IV. this year has, however, told upon the result, which is less than last year by 11 per cent.

The St. Stephen's Church School, Saiyingpoon, which was opened in February last, underwent examination for the first time on the 14th by Mr. F. Stewart, Government Inspector, and of thirty-three boys present eighty-eight per cent. passed. This is a most satisfactory beginning, and we trust that it will be maintained in future years.

Mr. F. Stewart examined on the 15th, in the Baxter Memorial School, Taipingshan, fifty-two girls belonging to the Baxter Vernacular Girls' Schools. Of the Saiyingpoon School 86 per cent. and of the Taipingshan School 90 per cent. passed a most excellent examination—which figures are creditable to all concerned.

A sale of land took place on December 19 at Sowkewan. Nine lots were sold and realised prices which indicated the prosperity of this village. The amount obtained was over $3,900, and it would have been somewhat larger had not one of the lots sold been situated in front of a Joss-house. The Chinese have a superstition against occupying houses built in front of, or facing Joss houses. Tung Aluk is the chief purchaser in this sale.

The District Grand Lodge of Freemasons in China held its annual meeting on the 19th Dec., at the Freemasons' Hall, when there was a large attendance of members of the craft. Additional interest was lent to the proceedings by the installation of the Right Worshipful District Grand Master, under a patent dated November, 1875, issued by the Most Worshipful Grand Master of England, H.I.H. the Prince of Wales, to R. W. Bro. Theophilus Gee Linstead, who has been appointed District Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Hong Kong. A congratulatory address was delivered by W. Bro. Adams, expressive of the high appreciation, by the members of the Grand Lodge and the officers who had worked with him for so many years past, of the qualifications of Brother Linstead for the exalted office which he had been called upon to fill, and the pleasure of the brethren at the honour thus conferred upon one who had so long been associated with them. The District Grand Master returned thanks in suitable terms, and said it would be his endeavour to make his appointment tend to the advancement of Freemasonry and the furtherance of its excellent objects. The ceremony of installation of the R.W.D.G. Master having then been duly performed, he then proceeded to instal into office the officers of his lodge for the ensuing year. A donation was voted to the Masonic Institution for Boys and a subscription list was opened and well filled on behalf of the sister institution for girls-schools in England at which a large number of Freemasons' children are maintained and educated.

A meeting was held at the Hong Kong Hotel on the 15th December, when a project for establishing a Mutual Building Society for Hong Kong was brought forward. Mr. J. B. Coughtrie, who took the chair, explained the objects of the proposed society in his address, as follows :—

You have been invited here to consider the advisability and feasibility of establishing in Hong Kong a Mutual Benefit Building Society, and I have been requested to lay before you a few arguments which seem in the opinion of those who are desirous of promoting the scheme to favour the project. I have written down what I hope may answer this purpose, and at the outset I may tell you that I have drawn largely from a treatise on "Associations for Provident Investment," by Arthur Scratchley, M.A., published last year, which is, I believe, a standard book on the subject. In the first place, I would briefly draw your attention to the desirability of this or any other project which would enable small sums to be placed on deposit at regular intervals, safely, and with the prospect of very lucrative results as regards interest and bonuses. Although the community of Hong Kong is not a large one compared numerically with those of English towns, yet I think the class of residents who do more than live from hand to mouth and who are able to save a portion of their salaries out here is equal in extent to that of a much larger community at home. There seems to be to the promoters of the present scheme a fairly large field of operations before them, a larger section of the residents to whom they would appeal than might at the first glance appear probable. In England and elsewhere the chief supporters of these societies are the superior class of artisans ; and it is noticeable that the effect such societies have had is the fostering of a careful and provident spirit among their supporters. They have exercised a powerful influence all over England, and have added increased value to land and houses, and greatly assisted the development of towns. What has elsewhere been the case might naturally be expected to result here, and on these, which may be called public grounds, the object in view is a desirable one. It would probably be found that the bulk of the supporters of a local Provident Society would be drawn from the class holding the position of skilled artisans. These would comprise an already large and continually increasing number of residents employed in Docks, Engineering establishments, Steamers running to and from the port, manufactories and upon Government works. Then there is a numerous body of European Inspectors and constables in connection with the Civil and Naval establishments, and the Harbour Master's department. To all these men the opportunity of investing sums of $5 to $10 per month would be a boon. Then among our Portuguese fellow-townsmen there are doubtless many who would be glad of the privilege, if it were afforded, of laying up small savings, and not a few might be glad to have the chance of buying, upon the easy terms which it is part of the Society's scheme to offer, a house suitable for their requirements, which they could not only occupy all the days of their life, but leave behind as a possession for their families.

Mr. D. Welsh then addressed the meeting, stating that the promoters

Proposed to have three classes of shares: 1st class of $5 per month most suitable for small investors who are permanent residents in Hong Kong, or for those members who intend to borrow; 2nd class of $10 is more suitable for larger investors, but will also suit borrowers; and the third class of paid-up shares of $600 each is intended simply for investors, that is, members who merely join the society for the purpose of getting interest for their money. There will be no limit to the number of members, but as the successful working of the society depends not upon one class of members but two, namely, both lenders and borrowers, it follows that if we cannot get borrowers, we must limit the number of investing members. A share upon which monthly payments are made is of the ultimate value of $500. This sum of $500 is made partly of these payments and partly of compound interest. A $5 share, according to the rules, is realised in about eight years. The monthly payments during eight years amount to $480, and interest to $158, so that when withdrawn a member receives $638. In the same way a $10 share is realised in four and a half years. The payments amount to $540, and the interest to $80, and the member will receive $620. This he can invest in a fully paid-up share, which bears a good interest, and gives a better return to him than if he took out two $5 shares at the first. The reason $5 shares are better for borrowers is that when a loan is granted to them the amount is measured by the number of shares they hold, and not by the value of the shares; ten $5 shares would obtain as large a loan as ten $10 shares. The interest proposed to be given is at the rate of about seven per cent. per annum

The meeting was adjourned for the purpose of enabling those interested to consider the speeches made, and to discuss the subject more fully on a future occasion.

The China Mail gives the subjoined account of the Chinese Embassy to Government House:—

The visit of the Chinese Embassy to Government House on the 6th, although a very formal affair, was nevertheless an interesting one. It was interesting as a result of the thawing of Chinese exclusiveness, thanks to the foreign influence brought to bear upon it, as well as from those paying the visit forming the pioneer embassy of China, and there was a natural curiosity to see something of its members, who are doubtless destined to attract some considerable amount of attention in London. Like English visitors their Excellencies announced their arrival by sending in their cards—not neat little white slips of pasteboard such as fill the cardcase of the European, but pieces of pink paper of a rather formidable size, and inscribed with great black Chinese characters, which no doubt made the Governor perfectly au fait with the names of his visitors, although we must confess that the attention his Excellency bestowed on those imposing letters was of an exceptionally cursory nature. The proceedings that immediately followed were a little mixed. The Chinaman shakes hands with himself when he follows the etiquette of his own country, but on this occasion the Envoys alternated between the Chinese and English customs, generally commencing by shaking their own hands and finishing by shaking those of the gentlemen to whom they were introduced. The conversation that ensued, having to be interpreted, was not, as might be expected, very lively. His Excellency did not venture beyond "generalisms," and his guests seldom beyond "yes" or "no." There was, however, one point with respect to the very few questions addressed by the Envoys to the Governor about which we scarcely feel clear. It is now eighteen months since the chief Envoy was appointed, and knowing that he was about to undertake this journey, it is certainly most remarkable, notwithstanding the fact of his being a Chinese official, if he is really ignorant of the fact that there is a civil population at Malta, or that he would find other governors to visit at Singapore Malta, Gibraltar, and other places at which he will touch during the voyage. Possibly the questions were addressed to furnish material for conversation rather than to obtain information. One of the interpreters attached to the Mission spoke English exceedingly well, and addressed several remarks to the Governor. We understand there are two native interpreters attached to the Embassy, both of whom visited England on the occasion of the Burlingame Mission in 1868. They are selected from the School of Languages at Peking.

On the 14th Dec., before the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Snowden, in the Supreme Court, an appeal was made in the matter of the Trust Deed in the estate of Augustine Heard and Co., to set aside an order by Mr. Justice Snowden dismissing a summons taken out by the China Traders' Insurance Company, limited, for the issue of a commission to examine certain witnesses in England in reference to a claim of the Company against this estate. It appeared that when Augustine Heard and Co. failed, in April 1875, the partners entered into an indenture with the creditors, and trustees were appointed under this deed. Mr. Ray, as secretary, signed on behalf of the China Traders'. The books were examined by the trustees, who sent in a return to the China Traders' that the company stood as creditor of the estate to the extent of about $184,000. After correspondence it was shown, however, that there were items of £10,000, £7,500, and £6,322 belonging to the China Traders', placed to the account of Augustine Heard and Co. by orders of the latter. The deed of trust was signed by all the creditors without the amount of claims against their names, and the China Traders' signed the deed without specifying the amount due. After the return was sent to the China Traders by the trustees of the amount of their claims against Heard's estate, it was discovered by subsequent correspondence that the £10,000 and £7,000 in the hands of Fearon and Co. had been used up by Augustine Heard and Co., and that when they failed the £6,322 of balance in Fearon and Co.'s hands was also put to the account of Augustine Heard. This money should be the property of the China Traders', and the trustees admitted it to be so.

After some discussion the Chief Justice, on examining the signature of the account said he thought there had been a mistake in the working of the liquidation, and also in the proof of the claims. Probably it would be better to dismiss this petition than let the China Traders' prove their claim in the proper manner, and notice be sent to the London creditors that the proof they had given of their claims was nil. Finally the appeal was adjourned sine die.

CANTON.

The Daily Press correspondent writes under date of the 12th Dec.:—

That a military review had been held on the Parade Ground, when about 500 soldiers were put through various manœuvres of sword and gun exercise. A disturbance had taken place at Fatshan between gamblers and "squeezers," when a number of persons were wounded, some, it is feared, fatally. An affray with smugglers also took place on the Western Bund a few days since, in which several soldiers were severely wounded, the smugglers, it appears, were walking along the Bund with the opium in their possession, and the soldiers endeavoured to search them. The smugglers objecting, a fight ensued; but the latter succeeded in carrying off their booty, leaving the soldiers considerably the worse for the encounter.

SIAM.

BANGKOK.

The Weekly Advertiser of the 7th December says:—

Almost everywhere there is trouble about the currency. In America it has been one of the questions deciding the candidate for President. We in Siam have great reason to congratulate ourselves. We have a good silver medium fresh from a new mint, and the copper change is everything that could be wished. Last year there was great trouble to get small change. We ourselves had so much annoyance that we made small bills and were our own bankers.

The same paper of Dec. 14 contains the official Customs Returns of the imports and exports of Bangkok for the month of November last. The values are as follow:—

BATAVIA.

General Diemont reports from Atchin on the 20th November that no important military operations had taken place there, patrols being, however, sent out to ensure security in the mountains between the IV. and VI. Mukins. The forts opposite the Dutch S.E. line of outposts were more weakly garrisoned than formerly by the enemy, their main body being in the XXVI. Mukims, where Habib Abdul Rachman was busily engaged gathering money together, but was apparently losing influence more and more. During the fortnight ending with the 20th November 140 Chinese coolies arrived at Atchin, who were very welcome there, from the much road-making going on. The weather was rainy, the river repeatedly overflowing its banks. There was much fever prevailing, but the deaths were few.

On the 12th November there took place the letting of the revenue farms for 1877. There was but little competition on the occasion. The opium farm was rented for f.8,310 per month, and the gambling farm for f.7,550, the latter being less than for the previous year.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 27th December; the P. and O. mail from London Nov. 24 was received on the 25th December. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times:—

We have constantly in our columns drawn attention to the dangers which might, under circumstances, threaten the peace of the community from the machinations of Chinese secret societies, and we have had an illustration of the mischief which interested leaders are capable of accomplishing since the date of our last summary. The Chinese coolies have always been accustomed to remit their savings, which amount to a large sum annually, to their relatives in China through the medium of private individuals—their own countrymen—who have realised handsome profits by the transactions, and which formed for them a regular source of income. The revenue of course lost the goodly amount which these profits represented, and for a long time past the attention of the authorities was directed towards devising means by which the revenue might gain the advantages reaped from this business, securing, of course, the safe delivery of the sums entrusted, to not only the ports of China, but also to the interior of the country. The well known jealousy of the Chinese against any attempt at interference with their customs, however unfair to the State, was an obstacle in the way of legislation, and from time to time the consideration of the question was postponed. Lately, however, a plan was devised which it was supposed would meet the wishes of all persons, except the few whose pockets it would affect, and with that view the Postmaster-General secured the services of a Chinese firm, who under his supervision, and at the risk of the Government, undertook to forward sums of money to China at the same rates as those which for years past have been charged by private individuals. For small sums it was announced the charge would be at the rate of ten cents per dollar, and for large amounts at a rate in less proportion to be settled by agreement. An announcement of the establishment of the Sub-Post-offices here and in Penang appeared in the Government Gazette, and it was supposed the poorer classes of Chinese would hail as a boon the institution of a system which, while not increasing the rates which they have been accustomed to pay, would secure the safe delivery of their money. But it was viewed otherwise. Interested agents whose occupations were gone, assisted by the leaders of the Secret Societies, put their heads together to create a disturbance, proclamations were issued and posted near the markets and in leading thoroughfares, appealing to the people to resent an innovation which in the hands of the Chinese firm who were entrusted with the sub-Post office would be made the medium of a system of "squeezing," and calling upon the Chinese to sack the Post-office, when it should be opened for business, and offering a reward for the heads of the post-office "farmers," as they were described.

The proclamations having been discovered, a short notice in Chinese characters was issued by the Inspector-General of Police, with the view of reassuring the minds of the people, and a reward was offered for information which would lead to the discovery of those who issued the proclamations. So far matters did not look particularly threatening, until the morning of the 15th December, when crowds collected before the Sub-Post office, which had been opened, entered the house, stole the money there, ransacked the place and broke every piece of furniture. The police were quickly upon the spot, but the rioters attacked them with broken bottles and large sticks, and emboldened by their imaginary victory actually attacked two police stations in great numbers. The police showed great coolness and consideration, and fired their guns in the air, with a view of frightening the crowd, but as this had not the desired effect and the police-stations were being threatened they eventually were forced to fire upon the rioters, when three men were killed and a number were wounded. The rioters were appalled and a number were arrested, and no serious attacks were again made, though there was an uneasiness in the state of public feeling for that day and for some days afterwards. Proclamations were again issued by the leaders, but the determined action of the Government and the courageous conduct of the police disarmed any further fears of a repition of the disturbances One of the twelve towkays accused of being concerned in instigating the riots has been removed from on board the Pluto, and placed on board the M.M.S. Meikong, by which he will be taken to Hong Kong, to which port his passage has been paid. He was sentenced to deportation, and he will not be permitted to enter these Settlements again. His name is Lim Ah Tye, and he is the head of the Teo Chew Branch of the Ghee Hin Secret Society. Ten other towkays removed from on board the Pluto were brought before the magistrate and were ordered to enter into recognisances, themselves in $3,000 each and two sureties in $3,000 each, as a guarantee for their future good conduct.

The trial of Maharajah Lela, Datu, Sagor, and five others who were charged with complicity in the murder of Mr. Birch before a native court in Laroot has concluded, after a number of witnesses had been examined. The prisoners were found guilty, and were at once sentenced to be hanged. They were ably defended at the expense of the Government, and all of them, with the exception of Datu Sagor, who pleaded his innocence, received the sentence of death with stolid indifference. Thus has concluded the trial of the first batch of prisoners for Mr. Birch's murder; when and where Sultan Abdullah and the other chiefs will be tried is left to the decision of the Home Government, and no opportunity is left us beyond surmise of giving information upon the subject.

Those members of the Bar who are now present in Singapore paid a tribute to his Lordship, the Acting Chief Justice, Phillippo, on the 21st Dec., being the last day he presided. The Attorney-General, before the Court rose, addressing his Lordship, said :—"They regretted the loss which the members of the Bar and the public, too, will sustain, in the retirement of his Lordship from Singapore. In leaving Singapore [his] Lordship might rest assured that, having earned and enjoyed the good report of all classes and persons here, he would carry with him their best wishes for his future prosperity and promotion in the profession." His Lordship briefly replied :—"Mr. Attorney-General and gentlemen, I am gratified at the manner in which you have expressed yourselves; I am afraid you have spoken in too flattering a way, and given expressions to sentiments of which I am not quite worthy. I came to you as a perfect stranger, and when I met you for the first time I hoped to work harmoniously with you, assured that we were all equally concerned to maintain the dignity of the Bench. I must say that both in Singapore and in Penang this our mutual understanding has been well kept. I have done my best, and if I have succeeded in gaining this good will on your part I have accomplished a great part of what I have striven for. I have in every instance, while free to oblige you, yet endeavoured to keep up the dignity of the Bench."

An important matter, to which we have repeatedly directed public attention, is the absence of Judges in these Settlements, and public opinion has been so decidedly expressed both here and in Penang upon the grievance that we trust efforts will be made to remedy the evil. Not only are the authorities to be blamed for this neglect but we cannot acquit the judges themselves from their share of apathy; they are certainly deficient in studying the wants of the community, a feature the directly opposite in character to their unselfish and hard-worked brethren of England.

The ex-Regent of Siam arrived on the 8th December in Penang, where he was the guest of the Rajah of Quedah. His Highness was received by a guard of honour, and a salute was fired from the fort on his landing. The Penang Gazette complains of the incivility which was shown him in the fact that he called upon the Lieutenant-Governor and the visit was not returned, and his Highness appears to have felt the slight.

The steamer Mariveles, which arrived at Manila on the 20th December, experienced a typhoon, in which her decks were swept, and the portion of the mail in the captain's cabin was washed away.

We learn from the Penang Gazette that a fire broke out in one of the timber yards in Ujong Passier, Penang, on the 8th December, which destroyed property of the value of $10,000.

The following notifications appear in the Government Gazette:—

The Governor has been pleased to make the following temporary judicial appointments :—Mr. Justice Phillippo to be Acting Chief Justice; Mr. Justice Ford to be Acting Judge of Penang.

The Secretary of State for the Colonies has been pleased to extend with half salary, for one month, commencing from the 18th December, the leave of absence granted to the Venerable Archdeacon Hose, Colonial Chaplain of Singapore.

Mr. E. E. Isemonger, Magistrate of Police, Malacca, will take charge of the Treasury at that Settlement from the 1st January, 1877.

The rains still continue, and the weather is cool.

Market Reports.

IMPORTS.

CHEFOO.—Messrs. Wilson, Cornabé, and Co.'s Circular says :—Cotton Goods : For Grey Shirtings and T-Cloths we have had a fairish inquiry, and sales can still be made at the previous quotations. Drills have also been inquired after, but for Fancy Goods there has been no demand. Metals : Iron—both nail rod and bar—is wanted, and prices have, if anything, an upward tendency. Lead is in small stock, but, on the other hand, there is little inquiry for same.

HANKOW.—The Chamber of Commerce Circular says :—During the past fortnight no business has been reported, and the little inquiry that at one time existed for good 8¼ lbs. Grey Shirtings appears to have quite subsided. Lead : The market is firm, and L B sells at Tls. 6.25 to 6.30 per picul. Quicksilver : No change in quotations, but the demand is very trifling.

CHINKIANG.—Messrs. Spencer and Wolff write on the 13th December :—In our last report dated the 6th inst., we advised an unsteady feeling as prevailing in this market for Grey Goods. At that time it appeared as though this would merely result in a lower range of prices being established, for the demand was then good for all kinds of 8¼ lbs. Grey Shirtings. Later on, however, advices reached us of a further decline having taken place at Shanghai, owing to the rise in exchange, and since then it has been impossible to negotiate sales, as the dealers fancy that the lowest point has not yet been reached. Grey Shirtings : In the absence of sales we do not give quotations, but as some kind of guide to values it may be reckoned that prices have fallen from five candareens to a mace per piece. T-Cloths and English Drills have both ruled dull for some time past, and in the present state of our market they are simply unsaleable.

SHANGHAI.—The notable advance in sterling exchange, about 5 per cent. since departure of last mail, had been productive of much eagerness to realise on the part of importers of seasonable descriptions of piece goods, and where hard cash had been obtainable considerable reductions in prices had been conceded to buyers. In Grey Shirtings the principal private sale had been 32,500 pieces Dewhurst 8-4 lbs. Eagles at Tls.1.85 per piece. Other sales had been for the most part confined to good common, good medium sorts of this weight which had been given, generally for prompt payment, from Tls.1.65 to 1.75 per piece; CPH 8-4 lbs. peacock chop Grey Shirtings realised only Tls.1.25 at auction, and the commonest cloths were for the moment unsaleable. T-Cloths had been most difficult to realise even at lower prices, and values were nominal. White Shirtings: Best 64 to 66 Reed wanted at Tls.1.95 to 2.05 per piece, and sales of favourite 72 Reeds reported at Tls.2.25 per piece. For inferior qualities little demand. In Drills very little business passing. Fancy Cottons entirely neglected. Woollens and Worsted: Prices realised at auction marked a decline in currency proportionate to the advance in exchange. The business in metals had been small, although there had been many willing sellers anxious to take advantage of the increased advance in exchange.

HONG KONG.—The market conoinued exceedingly depressed, dealers still declined to make any offers for goods for which they could not find immediate outlets. Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular says:—Cotton Yarns: Nos. 16/24 are in demand, but business is restricted as holders are not anxious to sell owing to the small quantity now on offer here: No. 21/33 are quiet and No. 38/42 have been quitted at a decline. Piece Goods: Transactions have again been very small and prices generally have ruled weaker, as importers have been willing to accept easier rates for nearly all goods. 8.4 lb. Grey Shirtings and 7 lb. Mexican T-Cloths are the only articles which have commanded any attention, and the sales of these have been insignificant in extent. Drills are neglected and can be bought at lower figures. Woollens: The market continues in a very quiet state, and the small settlements now reported have in most cases been made upon easier terms. Metals: Lead is now less inquired for and sales cannot be made at previous prices; parcels of Hole chop have been reported as quitted at $7.80 per picul. Quicksilver has declined and is now quoted lower, but at the close the market shows indications of an upward tendency. Yellow Metal is in better supply and prices are at present somewhat easier. Tin is dull, but rather more inquiry is noticeable for Tin Plates. Coals: The sales have been 1,700 tons of Cardiff at $10, to arrive, 1,800 tons of Australian at $9.50 to $9.75, to arrive, and 500 tons Japan at $6 to $8, ex godown.

MANILA.—Coloured goods had been in great demand, and large sales of Printed had been reported at remunerative rates. Plain Staples, notwithstanding the reported advance in prices at home, continued very quiet, and to make sales a reduction on late rates would have to be accepted.

SINGAPORE.—The market for Cotton goods had been exceedingly quiet during the fortnight; there had been very little demand for any staples excepting T-Cloths and Grey Supers. Importers were not pressing sales as telegrams advised higher rates at home. Prices generally had continued steady, and there had not been much alteration to notice in quotations. The fortnight's sales include 8,500 pieces Grey Shirtings, 28,000 pieces T-Cloths, 7,500 pieces Grey Supers, 2,000 pieces Drills, 12,000 pieces White Shirtings, 2,000 pieces T. R. Cambrics, 80 bales Grey Yarn, 100 bales T. R. Yarn, 75 bales Coloured Yarns.

PENANG.—The demand for all descriptions of Cotton goods had continued very limited, and again a very small business is reported.

EXPORTS.

TEA.

SHANGHAI.—A few chops have been taken, and settlements for the week are 2,500 chests. There had been a further slight decline, making the total fall about three to four taels; the settlements now reported at eleven to twelve taels, being the same teas for which fifteen to sixteen taels were refused some time ago. The market was quiet at the close, teamen being very unwilling to accept home values. Green: The continued high rates of exchange combined with rather disappointing values by wire from New York had kept buyers entirely aloof; on the other hand, arrivals had been on a most limited scale, and teamen were as firm as ever; it may therefore be some time yet before business is resumed.

FOOCHOW.—Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular, dated December 14, says:—During the earlier part of the interval an active demand was continued at former quotations, but for some days past there has been less inquiry, and transactions have been limited. At the close the market is quiet and dull, but holders are not as a rule disposed to sell at below our last quotations. Settlements amount to 21,078 chests consisting for the most part of grades under Tls. 15.8 on board. Further arrivals are only 570 chests making the total for the season to date 734,520 chests, to which it seems probable, that only small additions will be made; in any case supply is unlikely to exceed 740,000 chests and probably will not fully reach it. Last year's supply was 751,642 chests. Of Souchongs 536 chests have been taken at Tls. 15.55 to 19.8 on board leaving 558 chests in stock. Of Ooloong, purchases are reported amounting to 324 half-chests at Tls. 20.8 to 24.8 on board; stock is 1,179 half-chests. Prices remain without change for both descriptions. Flowery Pekoes have been dealt in to the exent of 230 chests at Tls. 18.8 to 39.8 on board. In Scented Teas nothing more has been produced and none are on offer.

AMOY AND FORMOSA.—The latest advices from Tamsui report the market unchanged, with little or nothing arriving from the country. The total export to Amoy at date was 7,785,967 lbs, against 5,337,902 lbs. at same time last year. On the Amoy market purchases had been made on a basis of $30/31 D.P. for good to superior; $36/37 for fine, and $39/42 for finest to fully finest, showing but little change from previous rates. Of these purchases about 1,000 half-chests had been taken for England. The stock was 51,160 half-chests. In Congou and Amoy Ooloong there was nothing of interest to report.

CANTON.—Messrs. Deacon and Co.'s Report says:—The business transacted during the past fortnight has been very small. Congous: One or two small parcels have been taken at former rates on this market, and from Macao moderate shipments continue to be made. Scented Teas: Very few purchases of Scented Caper are reported, and our market for these teas has been quiet throughout the past two weeks. The larger portion of the settlements consists of teas costing Tls.17½ to 18, and these show a decline of half a tael to one tael on last mail's quotations; teamen are firm in their demands for teas of better grade, and consequently little business has resulted. Prices for Pekoes are unchanged, and the few parcels which have changed hands do not show any better value than previously; new-make kinds have been taken at Tls.17, and long leaf at Tls.25 to 29. Canton Greens: No settlements are reported.

SILK.

SHANGHAI.—The North China Herald Report says:—Native consignments and a few purchases on joint account made a total of 480 bales only taken by the French mail, and although we have since received advices by wire of an improved feeling in the home markets with quotations fully 1s. 6d. per lb. higher, the extraordinary rise in exchange has almost entirely put a stop to business. Silkmen are firm holders of Tsatlees, and although the tael price may be unchanged we are nearly 6 per cent. higher for documentary bills than we were at the departure of the French mail. Some few bona fide purchases have been made, including Grasshopper and Blue and Yellow Elephant at Tls. 545, 530 and 515; Gold Lion Nos. 3 and 4 at Tls. 535 and 515; K.F.S. Beautiful Woman No. 2 at Tls. 520; Mountain chop No. 1 at Tls. 510, and market Tsatlees on a basis of Tls. 460 for middling No. 5. The total settlements, though including some 150 bales of re-reels for New York only amount to about 700 bales, and speculators' views differ considerably as to the market value of their goods. Arrivals for the fortnight are almost nil: from inquiries amongst all interested the stock of Tsatlees appears to be within 6,000 bales, and but little to be expected from the country. Exchange is against a large business being done, but it is possible with the confirmed better news from home that we may see the now dormant speculation revived, and the tael price almost on a par with the rates ruling two months since.

CANTON.—Messrs. Deacon's Circular says:—At no previous period of this season have we had a fortnight of such inaction as that just past. Only 160 bales Tsatlee were settled for last French mail, and no transactions have since been reported. There has been some inquiry on the part of foreigners, but the present high rate of exchange, coupled with the absurd prices asked by Chinamen precludes business being done; it seems probable, however, that holders will ere long moderate their ideas as regards values.

HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE.—COMMON PLEAS DIVISION.

TWYCROSS V. GRANT AND OTHERS.

This matter, which had already been before the Court on several occasions, is again on trial. It may be remembered that the plaintiff was a shareholder in the Lisbon Steam Tramways Company (Limited), and that he sued to recover from the defendants, Mr. Albert Grant and Messrs. Clark and Punchard, the contractors, the amount which he had paid upon some shares in the company, upon the ground that there had been fraud within the meaning of the 30th section of the Companies' Act of 1867. He alleged that before the issue of the prospectus of the company there had been an agreement of July 6, 1871, entered into between Messrs. Clark and Punchard and Messrs. Grant and Co. to the effect that, in consideration of services rendered and to be rendered by Messrs. Grant and Co. in obtaining for Messrs. Clark and Punchard a contract upon such terms as should be satisfactory to them, from the Lisbon Steam Tramways Company, for constructing and keeping certain lines of tramways, and also in consideration of other services, they should pay, in all, to Mr. Grant, £45,800. Further, that there had been another agreement between Messrs. Clark and Punchard and his Excellency Field-Marshal the Duke of Saldanha, a director of the Company, that, in consideration of his transferring to them such part and interest in the concessions granted to him as would enable them to establish, maintain, and work for ninety years railways on the system Larmanjat, on certain roads near Lisbon, he should receive £22,000. It was also alleged that the defendant knowingly and fraudulently, and with intent to induce persons to take shares in the said company, published the prospectus and notice of the said company inviting persons to take shares, but did not therein mention the above-named contracts, and that the plaintiff, on the faith of the prospectus and notice, took shares in the company and paid his money. The section of the Statute states that, "Every prospectus of a company, and every notice inviting persons to subscribe for shares in any joint-stock company, shall specify the date and the names of the parties to any contract entered into by the company, or the promoters, directors, or trustees thereof, before the issue of such prospectus or notice, whether subject to adoption by the directors of the company, or otherwise, and any prospectus or notice not specifying the same, shall be deemed fraudulent on the part of the promoters, directors, or officers of the company, knowingly issuing the same; as regards any person taking shares in the company on the faith of such prospectus, unless he shall have had notice of such contract." The case came on for trial at Guildhall, when the defendant's counsel applied to have the hearing postponed, but this application not being successful they withdrew, saying that they would submit to the judgment. The plaintiff's counsel, however, acting under the Judicature Act, declined to accept the judgment offered, and called witnesses to prove their case. This led to Mr. Albert Grant appearing in person and addressing the jury for several days. Lord Coleridge left a number of questions to the jury, and upon their answers a verdict was entered for the plaintiff. The next step was a motion to enter judgment for the plaintiff. Mr. Benjamin, Q.C., on the part of Mr. Grant, obtained a rule for a new trial, upon the ground that the jury had not assessed the damages upon a proper principle, they having awarded the plaintiff the whole £700 which he had paid upon his shares, whilst he still held the shares, and any rights which he might have under them. A similar rule was also granted upon the application of Messrs. Clark and Punchard; and these different rules now came on for argument.

Sir Henry James, Mr. Morgan Howard, Q.C., and Mr. Tindal Atkinson appear for the plaintiff; and Mr. Benjamin, Q.C., Mr. Cohen, Q.C., Mr. C. Bowen, and Mr. Webster for Mr. Grant. The case is likely to occupy some time in hearing.

Miscellaneous.

THE GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.

The Society met on the 22nd inst. under the presidency of Sir R. Alcock. The sitting was mainly occupied with the reading of a paper "On Later Explorations in the Island of Madagascar," by the Rev. Dr. Mullens, Foreign Secretary of the London Missionary Society. The paper gave an account of five journeys of unusual importance, and over entirely new ground, by English missionaries in Madagascar during the last two years. The first was to the Kingdom of Ikongo, in the south-east of the island. When King Radama in 1820 conquered the Betsitleo tribes, and so extended the Hova dominion towards the south, a portion of the forest tribes held out. The Tanalas submitted, and in the fortress town of Ampshimanga the Princess Raovana now rules in the name of the Queen of Madagascar. South of these Tanalas lives a hardy branch of the same tribe, the Ikongo, on an immense isolated hill which Radama vainly besieged twice, once during eighteen and the second time for twelve months. The Hovas, whom the Ikongos hate, have never set foot on the hill. But on October 1st, 1874, Mr. G. A. Shaw, of the Betsitleo Mission, having been invited by the King of Ikongo, set out to pay him a visit. Mr. Shaw at length had a most friendly reception from the King of Ikongo, Patsiandraofora, and it was arranged that teachers should be sent to instruct his people. A visit to the Ibara tribes was next described. They were known to live on the south and south-west borders of the Betsitleo people. Occasionally Besitleo folks and Hovas have found their way amongst them during the late years of peace, but at much risk. Their rude appearance, their uncouth speech, and the lumps into which their hair was rolled had been remarked. Gradually the English missionaries got acquainted with them, and the tribes had found out that Englishmen were kind, can heal the sick, and wish to teach their people. On reaching the border of the Ibara, at Tsi-ata-Calala, a bold rock 600 feet high, next day, they passed through the noble granite range called Andringitra. Still going west and south through the well watered valley of Is'abanam, they came to Besekaona. Of this country Dr. Mullens's paper gave an interesting description, in the words of the travellers. Going further west through Ivily and Kivory with their numerous cattle, they came into the valley of Central Ibara, with Josbosy as its chief town, consisting of 220 houses. In one of the villages (which count from twelve to fifty houses each), named Ipamamara, a king lives, and beyond this district to the south is an uninhabited desert of three or four days' journey. The north is also a wilderness for between one and two days' journey, and the west over three days' journey. On the east, though it is not strictly speaking a desert, there are but few inhabitants. The missionaries saw over thirty patients in the morning, some of whom were Ibara. In the afternoon two or three of the Ibara kings arrived, and hearing of the foreigners in the town, brought them food. These kings came from villages north and south of Josy, where the greater part of the population under the Governor live. Returning to the eastward, they passed one of those peculiar rocks in which the graves of the kings have been hewn at a great distance from the ground. The coffins are placed in the back parts of the crevice, with the skulls of bullocks in the fore part. The travellers notice the style of headdress as differing from that of any other tribe they had seen. When the travellers came to Menarahaka, South Ibara, the people rushed out en masse to see them. Most had never seen a white man. The usual questions were asked about the health of the Queen. They found the missionary a good house and plenty of provisions, an ox, a pig, rice, and firewood. Both among the central and southern Ibara the way was prepared for the establishment of schools and for free intercourse with other parts of the islands.

After a brief discussion the proceedings terminated with the usual votes of thanks. Sir Mordaunt Wells again brought under notice the exercise of patronage in the distribution of tickets for the Arctic Expedition meeting at St. James's Hall, and intimated that he would propose the appointment of a committee of investigation at a convenient time.

THE CHINESE IN SAN FRANCISCO.

The San Francisco Alta says:—We regret to chronicle the outrages and cowardly assaults made upon the unoffending Chinamen daily in our public streets, the publication of which places our Municipal Government and people in no enviable light either at home or abroad. We ask, in the name of justice, why it is that those people are beaten and maltreated at high noon on our streets, and "no arrests" invariably recorded? On New Year's-day these people were assaulted and beaten in different localities, in crowded streets, in this Christian city, and we have not heard of an arrest. We give a sample:—A China boy, not over fourteen years of age, was attacked by a gang of street Arabs on Townsend-street, near Third-street, and pelted with broken brick, one striking him in the mouth and cutting him terribly. He was knocked down and beaten in a most cruel manner. To add to the outrage, a crowd of men gathered and urged on the hoodlums. A well-known citizen, passing in a carriage, stopped and went to the assistance of the Chinaman, when he was ordered to stand back and not interfere. On Third-street, near the market, a Chinaman was set upon by drunken hoodlums and knocked down and beaten, but got away from them and took refuge in a saloon, but was ejected by the proprietor. A large crowd collected, and when the Chinaman came out he concluded to show fight, and went for one of his assailants, armed with a door-rug, which he laid over the scoundrel's shoulders until he beat a retreat. On Kearney, near Sacramento-street, one of the large plate-glass windows of Ching Lee's store was demolished by a rock weighing ten pounds, which went crashing through the beautiful Chinaware exhibited in the window. "No arrests." Another Chinaman was knocked down and beaten in Pacific-street, near Montgomery-street.

THE GOVERNMENT AND THE SLAVE TRADE.—A despatch from Jeddah recently announced that a fugitive slave had sought refuge on board Her Majesty's ship Fawn, and that the captain, not knowing what to do with him, had handed him over to the British Consul, who sent him to the Turkish Governor, by whom he was transferred to his master. The Committee of the British and Foreign Anti-Slavery Society have addressed a letter to Lord Derby in which they call his attention to this case as being one in which they cannot but think the action taken has been opposed to humanity and the policy and traditions of England, besides being contrary to Section 2 of the Slave Circular of August 10, 1876. In reply Lord Derby states that no information on the subject has yet been received at the Foreign-office, but that inquiries shall be made.

AT the general meeting of the Eastern Telegraph Company, held Thursday, the chairman, Mr. Pender, drew attention to the successful application of Muirhead's duplex system to the cables of the company between Suez, Aden, and Bombay, by means of which its system is duplicated throughout. The new cable between Suez and Aden is also completed, and the remaining section, between Aden and Bombay, is expected to be laid in March, which will further increase the facilities of communication by this company's route to India. The general application of the duplex system, which is also at work between Malta and Marseilles, will, when completed throughout the whole of the company's system, practically establish four lines of communication between this country and India by the Eastern Company's route.

THE Moscow Gazette says that the northern portion of the Pamir having been explored by the Russian Alai Expedition in the course of last year, fresh roads have been opened between Turkestan and Kashgar. As to the much-debated question whether British India is accessible from Turkestan by way of the Pamir, the Moscow Gazette asserts that the leaders of the Kara Kirghis rebellion, when pursued by the Russian Alai column, effected their escape to the dominions of the Kaisar I. Hind.

MR. B. S. BROOKS, who represented, in connection with Colonel F. A. Bee, the Chinese side, before the late Congressional Committee at San Francisco, has been the recipient of a magnificent present from the Chinese merchants, as a New Year's Gift. The presents consisted of one set of nineteen pieces of silver-ware; a large case, containing fifty-two pieces of "Imperial silver" spoons, forks, &c.; six boxes of tea, and a complete Chinese tea-set, of rare workmanship.

FRAUDS on the revenue to a considerable amount have been discovered in one of the London bonding warehouses. It seems that an inspector of gaugers, having paid an unexpected visit to the warehouse in question, caught the cooper in the act of filling a cask, from which the wine had been abstracted, with water. The authorities are instituting a most searching inquiry into the matter, and important results are expected.

COMMANDER CAMERON, R.N., C.B., has read a paper to the African section of the Society of Arts on "The Trade of Central Africa, Present and Future." The chair was occupied by Sir T. Fowell Buxton, and among those present were Mr. Whalley, M.P., Admiral Ommanney, Sir Rutherford Alcock, Admiral Nolloth, Mr. Carleton Tuffnell, Dr. Badger, and Dr. Mann.

MRS. DUNCAN, who left Hong Kong in the steamer Ajax for England with her children, was missing shortly after leaving Singapore. She had been in a despondent condition, owing to the trial and imprisonment of her husband for defalcations at Hong Kong.

WE are glad to notice that the gentlemen in H.B.M. Consular Service who have made use of their leave of absence to study law are obtaining very creditable successes at the Inns of Court. We recently noticed that Mr. SPENCE had been awarded a Scholarship of 100 guineas in Roman Law; and we have now much pleasure in noting that the Council of Legal Education have made the following awards to Mr. EDWARD HARPER PARKER, also of H.M. Consular Service, and of the Middle Temple, who obtained the first place in the recent examinations held at Lincoln's-Inn Hall:—A studentship of the value of 200 guineas, to extend over two years, for Roman Law, International Law, and Jurisprudence; the second prize for Constitutional Law, Jurisprudence and Legal History; a prize of £30 for the highest aggregate of marks in any two subjects, being in this case the Common Law of England, and General Jurisprudence. Mr. PARKER will leave shortly for China.

THE difficulty with regard to Sulu seems to have been satisfactorily settled. According to a telegram dated Madrid, January 27, the Ministerial newspapers state that the new Governor of the Philippine Islands has announced that, subject to the approval of the Spanish Government, foreign vessels may carry on trade with the islands of the Sulu Archipelago without requiring permission from the Government of the colony.

China and Her Apologist.—We have received a copy of a trenchant reply which has been made by Dr. H. B. Dennys, formerly editor of the China Mail, to the article by Sir Charles Dilke, which appeared a short time back in Macmillan's Magazine. So experienced a writer upon China subjects as Dr. Dennys makes very short work of the fallacies which are set forth by Sir Charles, and upon which we commented at the time when the article appeared. A very strong view is taken by the writer concerning the settlement of the Yunnan outrage. Upon this subject he writes as follows :—

The general view is that he (Sir Thomas Wade) has gained some tradal concessions of doubtful value—concessions which will benefit the Chinese far more than foreigners—at the expense of our national honour; and that he cannot cover the thorough failure of his negociations to obtain satisfaction for Mr. Margary's murder by a partial success in a totally different way. I am not oblivious—no British resident in China can be—of the services which Sir Thomas Wade has rendered to his countrymen during his lengthened career. As a scholar he is pre-eminent, and as Chinese Secretary of Legation his duties were performed in a way that justly earned him the gratitude of his chiefs. But I cannot admit that he has correctly interpreted his duty at this vital period of foreign intercourse with China. It is the fashion to represent the British merchant as caring for nothing but tradal interests; and in a sense this is correct. But it may safely be asserted that scarcely a British merchant in China does not feel his flag disgraced by the announcement that the refusal of the Chinese to render proper satisfaction for Margary's murder is to be considered as atoned for by the opening of some new ports. If this was all that was to be got, why was it not obtained within two months of the catastrophe? There is no possible excuse for the failure. People at home as well as the Government were disposed to amply back up any just demands made by Sir Thomas Wade; the first of those demands should have been, not the payment of blood-money or the cession of doubtful privileges to trade at new places, but the punishment of those responsible. "But," say the Minister's apologists, "The Chinese refused this demand." So they "refused" to open the gates of Pekin, with a result which has amply justified our action at the time. In this case refusal was impossible if the most ordinary decision had been exhibited. In place of this, with a strong fleet close at hand, a home Government which placed unlimited powers in his hands, and an entire nation anxious to see our honour and prestige vindicated, the British representative showed himself to be most easily cajoled. If not cajoled he foresaw the end of his negociations: but that is hardly likely; firstly, because he is too honest (however mistaken) to have misled the Home Government, and so allowed the Queen to announce that arrangements were being made for obtaining due satisfaction; and secondly, because, with all his experience, his weak point has always been a too facile belief in Chinese good faith.

The Sunday Magazine gives a well-written descriptive article on the Korea from the pen of Mr. E. Duffield Jones. He sets forth in an easy readable style many of the most interesting customs of the Koreans. The following description of the rigid reserve imposed upon married ladies is noteworthy. Possibly some little of the same reserve may not always be so antagonistic to happiness as Mr. Duffield Jones assumes :—

On the nuptial day, the bride is required by custom to show the greatest reserve in her words, and during the ceremony she does not even speak. This state of constraint between the newly-married couple is not confined to the marriage day, but, according to etiquette, it ought to last a long time, and for months the young wife scarcely opens her mouth to ask for the most necessary things; she never holds any connected conversation with her husband, and there is no confidence and no cordiality between them. As regards her father-in-law, custom is still more severe; often it is years before she lifts up her eyes, or utters a word to him, except sometimes to make a brief reply to his questions. With her mother-in-law she is rather more at her ease, but even with her she will rarely talk much, if she be well brought up.

From what has been said, it will be readily seen how seldom marriage in Korea can be productive of real happiness, a state of things which is intensified by the utter want of all pure religious feeling. The wife has literally no duties, except towards her husband, whilst he has none at all towards her. Conjugal fidelity is not obligatory, except for the wife; however deeply she may be injured, she has no right to exhibit any jealousy, and the idea never even occurs to her. Besides, mutual love and affection between the two is a phenomenon, which the manners and customs of the country render well-nigh impossible, and the husband would be laughed at by his friends, if he gave his wife any mark of real affection, or loved her as the companion of his life, the sharer of his joys and troubles. In his eyes she becomes, in point of fact, a slave of a rather higher class, destined to be the mother of his children, and to look after his household affairs. Among the nobles a bridegroom spends three or four days with his bride, and must then leave her for sufficient time to prove that he does not make too much of her; to depart from this custom would be considered in very bad taste. Stories, indeed, are told of some nobles who, for having let fall some tears on the death of their wives, have been compelled to absent themselves from their friends' houses, in order to avoid their incessant laughter and ridicule.

England and China: Two Episodes of Recent Anglo-Chinese History. By JUSTUM. London: James Bain, Haymarket.—This pamphlet, which is from the pen of Sir Charles Dilke, reiterates the arguments, which he advanced in his recent article with reference to the Woosung Railway, and which were noticed in these columns at the time. Sir Charles also takes up the Ocean and Fusing collision case, which came before the Consul and Taoutai at Shanghai in April, 1875—and urges the injustice which has been done by the judgment in that case not having been put into effect—the Consul after awarding reparation to the families of the persons drowned in the Fusing declaring he had not power to enforce his decision. Sir Charles Dilke omits to notice that Mr. Consul Medhurst repeatedly informed the Chinese authorities that his powers in such a Court as he was urged to preside over in order to try the personal liability of the captain would be limited to an investigation of the matter; and he also omits all allusion to the still more important fact that an action was brought by the owners of the Fusing against the Ocean, in the Supreme Court, and substantial damages obtained. The value of this little brochure can be judged of by the above facts.

The Contemporary Review has passed into the hands of a limited company, of which Mr. Samuel Morley, Mr. Francis Peek (of the London School Board), and the Rev. Mr. Paton (of the Independent College of Nottingham) are the chief members, and there has been a separation between the Review and its late editor, who proposes to establish forthwith a new Review, to be called the Nineteenth Century, and to conduct it upon the same principles as have governed the Contemporary during his connection with it. We believe that Mr. Tennyson, Professor Huxley, Cardinal Manning, Dr. Tyndall, the Deans of Westminster and St. Paul's, the Revs. Dr. Martineau, Baldwin Brown, and Guiness Rogers, Mr. Grant Duff, Sir John Lubbock, Sir J. Fitzjames Stephen, Sir Henry Thompson, Sir George Bowyer, Lord Arthur Russell, Mr. Matthew Arnold, Dr. Carpenter, Mr. W. R. Greg, Mr. Frederic Harrison, Mr. G. H. Lewes, Dr. Appleton, Professors Mivart, Clifford, and Robertson, Mr. C. T. Newton, Mr. W. Spottiswoode, and Mr. Arthur Arnold have, among others, promised their support to the Nineteenth Century.

China; a Geographical, Statistical, and Political Sketch. By ALFRED E. HIPPISLEY (Clerk in the Statistical Department of the Chinese Customs, Shanghai).—The above brochure will be useful as conveying in a concise form the leading facts and statistics connected with China. It does not contain anything that is new to those familiar with that country, but will be an assistance to persons at home who are not acquainted with the standard sources of information. No doubt it will be perused with some interest, coming out, as it does, just at the time of the departure of the Chinese Embassy. The total value of the foreign trade with China for 1875 is given at 136,000,000 taels, or say £40,000,000, of which over three-quarters is British.

A new daily paper, bearing the title of Coming Events, is about to be started. It will consist—as its title indicates—exclusively of information upon everything that is of interest to the general public of London and suburbs, of the occurrence of which previous information is to be obtained, but will give no account of past events, with the exception of Births, Marriages, and Deaths, and English Stocks and Funds. The information will be given under two heads, To-Day and After To-Day; the latter giving early intimation of the more important events only; the former giving a complete list for the day of publication.

Who's Who for 1877? A. H. Baily and Co., Cornhill.—This invaluable little work of reference has just been issued for the current year. It has been thoroughly revised and the information brought down as far as possible to the date of going to press, namely, the 15th December, 1876. The main feature of the present edition is the great augmentation of the general officers of the Indian army, consequent upon the extensive retirements which have taken place.

Proceedings of the Royal Geographical Society.—The volume of the above for January, which has just been issued, contains Sir Rutherford Alcock's Inaugural Address at the Opening of the Session, Sir Douglas Forsyth's paper on the "Buried Cities in the Sands of the Great Desert of Gobi," and other matter of much interest.

The Society of Japanese Studies in Paris has appointed the Comte de Mont Blanc its president for 1877.

MEETINGS OF SOCIETIES.

At the New Shakspere, F. J. Furnivall, Director, in the chair, the paper read was "On some Points of Contact between Shakspeare and Contemporary English Dramatists," by Mr. J. Knight. After asserting that the establishment of blank verse, as the great medium of dramatic expression, was principally due to Marlowe, and showing that with him it reached a point at which little room was left for improvement, Mr. Knight compared certain creations of Marlow with others of Shakspeare. He then instituted comparisons between Shakspeare and Marston, Webster and Beaumont and Fletcher, contrasting at some length the terrors of realisation in the "Duchess of Malfi" and "Vittoria Corrombona" with those of suggestion in "Macbeth." The absence from early dramatic literature of any keen appreciation of domestic life was dwelt upon, and also the fact that, throughout the whole range of the Elizabethan drama, there is no attempt to dwell on the beauties of landscape, and scarcely an instance in which the mention of the sea shows a sense that it was an object of delight rather than of terror.

At the Anthropological Institute, Colonel A. Lane Fox, President, in the chair, Mr. Moseley, naturalist to the Challenger Expedition, read an account of the inhabitants of the Admiralty Islands. He considered that in their arts, as shown in the ornamentation of their weapons, &c., they resembled the natives of New Guinea, while in a peculiar note in their chants or singing he noticed a strong Fijian resemblance. Their manner of hafting the stone implements differed from that in other groups, the stone being fixed in a slot in the wood. Obsidian spear and knife heads were shown, the mounting of the Obsidian flakes in the spear-heads being effected with a strong gum and twine, The lecturer described the customs, dress, and manners of the natives, and gave some thirty-five words of the language. The whole was illustrated with maps, sketches, and numerous objects.

At the Historical, Dr. J. Rae in the chair, Mr. Hyde Clarke read a paper "On the Khita or Hittite Epoch and its Relations to the Old and New World." Referring to the discoveries of Dr. Schiemann and Mr. G. Smith he treated them as illustrative of that period of culture. After describing the Hamath or Khita syllabary and his determination of the connexion with it of the Cypriote he proceeded to offer observations on the influence of astronomical symbolism or mythology on the formation of characters and numbers. He proposed an explanation of the V form from the Hyades, and of the distribution of 4 and 3 in the pyramids of Egypt and America from Orion. After connecting Etruria and the Mediterranean countries with the same era of culture he assigned to it early India, and Peru, and Central America.

At the Linnean, Professor Allman, President, in the chair, the description of two new and remarkable forms of deep-sea ascidians was given by Mr. H. N. Moseley, of H.M.S. Challenger. One trawled in the North Pacific from 2,900 fathoms, cup-like, and allied to Boltenia, he names Hybythius calcycodes. It has a series of symmetrical cartilaginous plates on its soft test. The other ascidian, Octacnemus bythius, was obtained at 1,070 fathoms. This is star-shaped, and in several respects its anatomical structure is quite peculiar, and totally unlike already-known living forms.—A commercial cane, termed "Whangee," a species of Phyllostachys, formed the subject of a note by Mr. J. R. Jackson. He regards that, in the trade, as the rhizome and not the stem; and the pale colour he thinks produced by bleaching.

At the British Archæological Association, Mr. H. Syer Cuming in the chair, several fragments of the Roman pavement discovered in 1875 opposite Crosby Hall were exhibited by Mr. R. E. Way. The pavement was hardly noticed at the period of its discovery, owing to the rapidity with which it was either covered up or destroyed. It had tessera of red and white, and it most probably formed a part of the large Roman villa of which much of the foundations (well-known) was met with several years ago in Old Broad-street. Mr. Way also exhibited sundry other objects of interest, including some sling stones from Sidbury Castle, near Sidmouth.

At the Astronomical, W. Huggins, D.C.L., President, in the chair, a paper was read by Mr. Marth, giving an ephemeris for the satellites of Uranus for the year 1877. This is one of a series of papers which Mr. Marth has presented to the Society, giving ephemerides useful for physical observations of the major planets and their satellites. It was remarked by the President that these ephemerides involved great labour in their construction, and the astronomical world is deeply indebted to Mr. Marth for their production.

Naval and Military.

Two gunboats of the latest design, and calculated to carry heavy ordnance, have recently been purchased from a private firm for the Chinese Government. It is stated that they will be navigated out to China by half-pay naval officers, who will probably retain their commands until their Chinese crews have become well acquainted with the vessels.

The Serapis, Indian troopship, Captain Duncan G. Davidson, which left Bombay on the 19th of December arrived at Portsmouth on the 21st inst., and steamed into harbour with the yellow flag at the fore. It appears that two men belonging to the troops from Delhi were attacked by small-pox soon after leaving Bombay, and were landed at Malta. Captain Davidson had all the usual precautions taken in the way of burning, isolation, and carbolising, but in spite of these steps it was discovered some time after Malta had been left behind that the hospital orderly who had attended upon the patients and the soldier who slept in the adjoining bed were suffering from the infection. On the ship reaching Spithead the sufferers were placed on board a tug and taken on shore, when they were conveyed to the infectious ward in connection with the Portsea Military Hospital. Pratique was granted by the sanitary officers about a couple of hours after the ship had been moored alongside the jetty. But for the prompt measures adopted by the captain the infection would doubtless have spread, as the number of women and children on board was very great. Six deaths, three of men and three of children, had occurred during the passage between Bombay and Portsmouth.

Sir Fairfax Moresby, G.C.B., Admiral of the Fleet, died at Exmouth on the 21st instant, in his ninety-first year. He was the son of Mr. Fairfax Moresby, of Stow House, Lichfield. He entered the Royal Navy in 1799, and served as midshipman under the Earl of St. Vincent in the Hibernia, and obtained the rank of lieutenant in 1806. He became commander in 1811; captain, 1814; rear-admiral, 1849; vice-admiral, 1856; admiral, 1862; rear-admiral of the United Kingdom by Royal Patent, 1867; and admiral of the fleet, 1870. He commanded the Menai, Pembroke, and Canopus, and was commander-in-chief in the Pacific 1850-55. He was created Hon. D.C.L. of Oxford in 1854. He was also a Knight of the Order of Maria Theresa of Austria.

An address on the Military Geography of European Turkey has been delivered at the Royal United Service Institution by Lieut.-Col. C. E. Howard Vincent, late of the 23rd Welsh Fusiliers. The chair was taken by Major-Gen. Stephenson, C.B. With regard to the defence of Constantinople, the lecturer pointed out that the twenty-one ironclads of Hobart Pacha were in first-rate condition, but by taking from them what would be required for the Bosphorus and the Dardanelles there would not be more than ten left for naval operations against the three or four circular ironclads and the fleet of the Russian gunboats.

The command of the troops at Shorncliffe has been assigned to Col. Peyton, and not to the Duke of Connaught, as was rumoured, but it is asserted that when Col. Peyton becomes a major-general, probably about twelve months hence, his Royal Highness will be his successor. Col. Peyton served in the 98th Regiment with the expedition to the north of China in 1842, and was present at the operations in the Yangtsze-Kiang, the attack and capture of Chin-Kiang, and at the landing before Nanking. He has also served with distinction in India.

The Army and Navy Gazette says:—The appointment of additional medical officer to the flagship on the China Station, now held by Fleet-Surgeon G. B. Hill, for special service in connection with the Lock Hospitals in Japan, is, we believe, likely soon to be abolished. It is proposed to hand over the charge of these hospitals to the Japanese Government, and it is probable that a higher class of native medical practitioner than hitherto employed in this department will be placed in charge in future.

The Admiralty having given directions that the armour-plated ship Téméraire, 8, 8,412 tons, 7,000-horse power, is to be ready for sea by the 30th June, great exertions are being made to get her complete by that time, additional workmen being set to work on board. Her fitments, &c., are now getting well-advanced, and in the course of two or three months she will be able to leave Chatham and go upon her trial trip at the measured mile off the Maplin Sands.

Some important boiler experiments are being made at the present time on board Her Majesty's ship Boadicea, at Portsmouth, in accordance with instructions from the Admiralty. The object is to ascertain whether priming, which has lately proved a great obstruction to the steam trials of men-of-war, can be obviated by modifications in the internal structure of boilers.

Messrs. Mauser, the inventors of the Mauser rifle, have constructed a pistol on the same principle, and likewise bearing their name, which is now being practically tested in the German army. If approved it is intended to take the place of the revolver in the hands of officers in the mounted services.

The Royal Humane Society's Testimonial has been presented to Lieut. J. W. Osborne, of H.M.S. Narcissus, for saving Marshal Mannard, of the same ship, who fell overboard at Woosung on the 18th of October last.

The vacant Brigade-Majorship at Shoeburyness is to be filled by Capt. H. H. Goodeve, who has been Adjutant of the School since July, 1874, and bears an excellent reputation in his regiment.

Some petty officers and seamen of the Royal Navy have held a meeting at Portsmouth to protest against the recent Admiralty order that when on shore they should always wear uniform.

It is stated that a general revision of the complement of the engine-room staff—including officers—at present allowed to Her Majesty's ships is under consideration at the Admiralty.

The German corvette Elizabeth, en route to Japan, arrived at Table Bay on the 28th ult.

THE CHEFOO CONVENTION AND THE LEKIN DUES.

PENDING the issue of the expected explanations of the bearing of the recent Convention, it would be premature to discuss its merits in detail further than they have already been considered; but it may be desirable to point out an error which has been very generally fallen into with respect to its effect upon the Lekin taxes. In order to put an end to a constantly recurring grievance in the foreign settlements—but more particularly that of Shanghai—from the collection of Lekin taxes actually within the limits of the settlements, and as soon as the goods on which the tax was levied had left the foreign merchant's warehouse, Sir THOMAS WADE has stipulated in the Convention that no Lekin tax shall be levied within certain specified boundaries at Shanghai; and it is to be presumed that a similar regulation will be applied at other ports. In this, the right to levy Lekin duties in defiance of the transit pass regulations is not in any way recognised; but the plan is simply designed to put an end to the constantly recurring difficulties with regard to levying Lekin in the settlements themselves. The rule with respect to the transit passes will remain as before, with, however, this additional advantage, that by the present Convention Sir THOMAS WADE will obtain the definite recognition of the principle concerning which there was some negotiation some years back, that a transit pass will exempt the goods which it covers from all further taxation in transitu, irrespective of whether such goods be owned by foreigners or Chinese. This concession is one of very great importance; and, if the terms be adhered to, the difficulties hitherto experienced in getting foreign goods to the centres of trade ought to be very much mitigated. The effect, therefore, of the regulations under the new Convention, stated briefly, will be as follows:—The right of foreign goods upon which the half tariff duty has been paid in commutation of transit dues to exemption from taxation, en route, when they are covered with a transit pass, will be recognised, irrespective of whether such goods belong to a foreign merchant or to a Chinaman, and they can thus be conveyed from the port of entry to any inland depôt free of inland taxation either by a foreigner or a native. When, however, the goods arrive at their destination, and the bulk of the parcel is broken, the Chinese Government hold they become subject to the Lekin duties as levied on similar goods at the place where they are sold. By this plan, although the arrangement does not go so far as to exempt goods under transit pass from all further taxation, it will at least secure the goods from being overladen with burdensome taxation on the way to the inland depots, and to this extent the present arrangement will be an advance upon that hitherto existing. The Chinese Government has not, as has been erroneously supposed, already recognised the exemption of foreign goods in native hands from transit taxation under the passes, and if they can be made to adhere to this, a very great advance will have been made upon the state of things heretofore existing. It is no doubt to be regretted that the Chinese authorities cannot be induced to give up the levy of Lekin, upon foreign goods altogether; but the difficulties in the way of this are apparently insuperable. The only practical check upon it is to be found in the opposition which the native traders are themselves ready to make when it becomes excessive; and we may hope now that there are more and more Chinese interested, both directly and indirectly, in foreign trade, sufficient pressure may be exerted upon the local authorities in this matter to keep down the levy of the Lekin at something like a reasonable rate. The extreme view in favour of the right conceded under the Transit-dues clauses in the Treaties is that the goods should be exempted from all internal taxation on the payment of the commuted rate; but to this it is impossible to bring the Chinese to accede; as they claim that the exemption accorded is with reference only to taxation en route, and that they have a right to levy the local dues on the goods when they arrive at their destination. The theoretic correctness of this last position is certainly open to question; but practically it is impossible to prevent the levy of such dues; and if the existing arrangement will go so far as to prevent our goods being overburdened with imposts as they pass from barrier to barrier, a distinct advance will have been gained. It is also important to remember that it is much easier for the Chinese interested in the trade to oppose any excessive taxation on the goods at their destination than while they are on the way, as in the latter case a tax which, before the journey is completed, becomes of a very burdensome character, is levied by such small individual instalments that it is difficult to oppose them at each stage.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF JAPAN.

IN the course of his review of the trade of Japan for 1875, which has recently been issued in Blue-book form, Sir HARRY PAPKES makes some very important remarks with regard to the necessity of developing the resources of the country. He notes that a comparison of the imports and the exports shows that there is a balance against Japan to the large amount of $12,000,000; and that this results in a drain of treasure which can only be stopped by the natural products of the country becoming more fully developed than at present. The chief staples of export, tea and silk, the aggregate value of which is about £5,000,000, do not pay for the various articles which Japan takes from Europe; and in order to ameliorate this state of things Sir HARRY PARKES suggests that other sources of production, more especially her mineral deposits and grain, should be more assiduously worked. With regard to grain, he does not deem it likely that Japan rice will ever compete with that from India, Burmah, and Saigon, but he justly observes that a cheaper range of prices would at all events at times encourage a demand for Northern China, and also, to some extent, for San Francisco and Australia. He adds that better communication with the western coast, which could be easily supplied by continuing the railway from Kioto to Otz, on the Biwa Lake, a distance of ten miles, and by constructing a good ordinary road from Macbara to Tsuruga, a distance of thirty miles, would enable the rice, which is grown in great abundance on the west coast, to be brought at a much cheaper cost than at present from Niigata to Osaka. In Yezo, an island of 35,000 square miles, with a population of little over 100,000, there are vast tracts of land, untouched by spade or plough, which are as admirably suited to wheat cultivation as the Pacific slopes or the plains of South Australia; and even on the main island it is estimated that not more than a fourth part of the area has been brought under cultivation. The mineral deposits of the country promise, however, in Sir HARRY'S opinion, the readiest return, but Mr. PLUNKETT'S Report has shown how little has yet been made of these by the Mining Department of the Government, which has held them in its charge for several years. While the present system continues the mines of Japan will remain comparatively unproductive. This state of things is undoubtedly to be much regretted, and it is to be hoped that the Japanese Government, who are anxious to progress, will pay due attention to the well-weighed opinions of a friendly critic.

SIR ARTHUR KENNEDY.

BY the last accounts from Hong Kong it was still uncertain at what date H.E. Sir ARTHUR KENNEDY would be removed from that colony to his new sphere of usefulness in Queensland, Australia. As our correspondent pointed out, Sir ARTHUR leaves the colony with general good wishes; and we think he has well earned the popularity which is extended to him. With some of the measures adopted by the retiring Governor we have not been able completely to agree, but we have always been willing to acknowledge the earnestness with which he has devoted himself to the task of governing a colony which is peculiarly difficult to administer effectively, especially as regards the native population, and now that he is retiring from his post it is our pleasing duty to offer a well-merited tribute of praise for what he has accomplished. He has the satisfaction of leaving the colony in a state of good order, and, so far as the public revenue is concerned, of solid prosperity. We should have been glad if the blockade question with regard to which he has taken great pains had been settled; but we understand that this will in all likelihood be accomplished before he leaves. His efforts in this direction will at all events have laid the basis of a settlement of the matter by his successor with comparative ease; and in respect to the other local questions of importance—the improvement of the police force and the suppression of crime—Sir ARTHUR KENNEDY deserves the warmest thanks of the colony. The police force is now efficient and well organised, and crime in the colony has been reduced to a minimum. In regard to the latter element Sir ARTHUR KENNEDY did great service by introducing a more rigid system of punishment into the gaol, making the "hard labour" in fact really hard, and so causing Chinese criminals to fear being sent to prison; while, before that time, it had been really almost a matter of indifference to many whether they were imprisoned or not. In addition to this, Sir ARTHUR KENNEDY has done much towards improving the roads, bridges, and water supply, and adding to the healthiness, comfort, and prosperity of the colony. In addressing the Legislative Council on taking office he stated that, if he could not claim to be a man of brilliancy, the residents might rely upon one thing, that they would never find anyone who had his heart more in the performance of the duties which devolved upon him; and we do not think we can pay a more well-deserved tribute to Sir ARTHUR than by acknowledging that he has fully redeemed the pledge which he then made.

THE appointment is gazetted of Mr. GEORGE PHILLIPPO as Attorney-General of Hong Kong. He was called to the Bar of the Inner Temple in 1862, and was Queen's Advocate in Sierra Leone in 1868, Attorney-General of British Columbia in 1870, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of British Guiana in 1871, and after filling other appointments was Senior Puisne Judge of the Straits Settlements in 1874. Mr. PHILLIPPO'S experiences in office have been of a varied and valuable character. In 1868, when at the Jamaica Bar, he was professionally engaged before the Royal Commissioners appointed in consequence of the disturbances in the Island; and he was also on the Commission appointed in 1871 to revise the Laws of British Columbia.

A SPECIAL telegram from Berlin to the Pall Mall Gazette states:—"Commercial intercourse between Russia and "China has come to a complete standstill, owing to a pro- "hibitory decree issued by the Chinese Government. The "decree is prompted by suspicions aroused by Colonel "PRZEVALSKY'S exploring expedition and other Russian "movements along the Chinese frontier, which are taken in "China to indicate hostile designs. The Chinese Imperial "decree entirely forbids commercial intercourse with "Russia." Our experience of similar decrees upon former occasions will not warrant the belief that commerce will be in reality suspended; but the measure will doubtless throw considerable obstacles in its way.

H.E. KWO, the Chinese Ambassador, had an audience with Lord DERBY at the Foreign-office on Tuesday last. It is now officially announced that the present Embassy will continue for at all events three years; and it may, therefore be presumably taken as the prelude to a permanent Embassy in London. Up to the present the date at which the Ambassador is to be presented to the QUEEN has not been settled. A residence has been taken for the Ambassador and his suite at 46, Portland-place; but it will probably take some little time for them to adjust a European house to the various exigencies of a Chinese Yamen, the model upon which the establishment will of course be to a great extent based.

THE Rock—the organ of the Ultra-Protestants—has a paragraph with reference to the appointment of Mr. POPE HENNESSY to the Governorship of Hong Kong; in which, after alluding to his being a Roman Catholic in terms so offensive as to be unworthy of reproduction, it goes on to say that "as nearly all his clients at Hong Kong will be "heathens he will be comparatively innocuous." The foreign residents in Hong Kong have been often abused, but this is the first time that they have been set down bodily as heathens.

THE Chinese Government has officially notified to the French Government that it will take part in the Paris Exhibition of 1878.

THE CHINESE EMBASSY.

As may be imagined, considerable sensation was caused in Southampton by the arrival of the Chinese Embassy, which took place on Sunday, the 21st inst. Before the magnificent steamer Peshawar, one of the finest of the P. and O. Company's fleet, had come alongside of her moorings at the Dock, a vast crowd had assembled to witness the expected landing of those who to so many were interesting strangers from afar. To persons who are familiar with China and the Chinese the intense curiosity of the mass of people here seems very strange; but still when the differences of dress, manner, and appearance are taken into consideration, it is scarcely surprising that they should attract attention. His Excellency Kuo had decided not to land until the steamer came alongside, although many of his fellow-passengers came ashore in the Isle of Wight steamer, the Lady of the Lake. The numerous suite of the Ambassador landing, some in the business-like style which attaches to the Chinaman who has already been abroad and seen something of the world; some with their eyes in all directions, and evidently quite unfamiliar with the foreign surroundings in which they found themselves placed; others, again, with the peculiar sang froid which distinguishes the well-bred Chinaman even more than the well-bred Frenchman or Englishman—were the subject of remarks both numerous and humorous on the part of the crowd. If some of the observations made were not precisely complimentary they were all friendly and good-natured; and if a crowd forms any indication of what public opinion is likely to be, the Ambassadors ought to be contented with the sentiments of the British public. The landing was not of a very imposing character, and was in fact merely an official recognition that the Embassy was looked for. Kuo-Tah-Jen does not look the worse for his journey, and the various Chinese with him are, speaking generally, a good specimen of the natives, and have not the withered appearance too often observable among the inhabitants of the Flowery Land. In the suite of the Ambassador are Liu-Si-Hung, two Chinese Secretaries, and Dr. Macartney, of the Nanking Arsenal. Mr. W. C. Hillier was present from the Foreign-office, and Captain Gillson, the Superintendent of the P. and O. Company at Southampton, and Mr. J. W. Dyson and Mr. P. Hedger as representing the Southampton Dock and the London and South-Western Railway Companies also "assisted." The steamer Peshawar was delayed in consequence of an accident. She had been telegraphed from Hurst Castle at two o'clock in the morning, and would have arrived in due course about three hours afterwards; but in the dense fog prevailing she about three o'clock grounded on the Brambles, and remained there till the next high water at two, o'clock in the afternoon, and it was consequently getting towards dusk when the Ambassador and his party landed. The Embassy did not make any stay at Southampton, but left at once for London in a special train provided by the South Western Railway Company, and consisting of five saloon carriages. For the convenience of the party it was run into the dock alongside the steamer, and must have impressed the Chinese Ambassador and his friends with at least some of the conveniences of railway travelling. The train left for London at ten minutes past five in the evening.

The "Special" of the Standard gives the following description of the "feminine element" of the Embassy:—

We had understood previously that the Chief Envoy had brought two wives with him, but this is not the case, only one of the ladies claims the title of Lady Kwoh. We had the honour of being introduced to her, and were rewarded by a charming smile for our salutation. She appears to be in the prime of womanhood, with most pleasing features of the Mongolian type, and an exquisite complexion, cosmetics notwithstanding. Her hands are small and finely shaped, with taper fingers, only some of them are spoilt by having very long nails. This is to show her high breeding, that she cannot dress herself or adorn her hair. Hence she has two ladies' maids, who, although not fourteen years of age, are skilful in doing up back hair and other feminine accomplishments of the coiffure. The manner this was done appeared elegant, in the disposition of the jewels which adorned her head, and the glittering earrings, which we shall not attempt to describe. Suffice it to say that the style is that one adopted in North China, which differs from the South in that part of woman's attire, and consists of a broad band of velvet over the forehead, set with gems. The effect is very pretty, and serves for a bonnet to keep the head warm in cold weather. Then the bootikins which covered her "golden lilies," as ladies feet are called in the flowery language of China, are superbly embroidered with gold, which contrasted exquisitely with the rich tints of the silk and satin drapery in the loose robes above, and the unmentionables below. We should say that her first appearance at Court, or elsewhere, will create a pleasing sensation. Her companion is an elderly lady, who acts in the capacity of a duenna, and the two maids are slave girls, trained up to the business from their childhood, and assist their mistress in her musical accomplishments. As the four rose up to take their departure from the ship, some of the charm was gone on seeing Lady Kwoh walk out of the cabin, for the small feet do not add to the graceful movements of the body, and of course no Chinese lady dances.

THE PRESS ON THE CHINESE EMBASSY.

(THE TIMES.)

Another Embassy from China has reached our shores. It is very different from the half Chinese, half American Mission which Mr. Anson Burlingame conducted to this country nine years ago. The hopes which were excited at that time were quickly dissipated by events. No candid mind could resist the conviction that the American diplomatist had been made the instrument, and was probably from the outset the dupe, of the astute and persistent statesmen of Peking. The proposals of diplomatic equality which Mr. Burlingame conveyed to Europe were simply so much dust thrown with a delicate and deliberate hand in the eyes of the Western World. But the central forces of the Chinese Government have been changed, and changed again, since that time; the death of the Emperor, the removal of the Empress-Mother from the control of affairs, the political downfall of Prince Kung, all tended to strengthen the Conservative reaction. Sometimes the pendulum swung back, as when Prince Kung's influence rose once more, and waned and rose again. Looking merely at the personalities of Chinese politics, we have reason to believe that the civilisation of the West finds less favour now than it did nine years ago. Yet we have no hesitation in saying that the present mission to this country marks a great, though possibly an unconscious, and certainly an undesired, advance upon Mr. Burlingame's. To speak plainly, Mr. Burlingame's mission was a sham, and dealt in shams. It was idle to imagine that it could be otherwie. The traditions of the Chinese polity and the rooted beliefs of their social life alike forbid the concession of truly representative Powers to a foreigner. The native officials who were joined with Mr. Burlingame in his European Embassy were persons of inferior rank and of no remarkable capacity. The promises of an enlarged and liberal policy which Mr. Burlingame and his colleagues were instructed to make have not been performed; the introduction of European science and letters, on which so much stress was laid, was never seriously attempted; the "Imperial University" at Peking, starved, discouraged, and even subjected to insult, has almost perished of inanition and has dwindled to a paltry elementary "School of Languages;" the facilities for the intercourse of foreigners with Chinese, though only contested upon technical points, are everywhere challenged in spirit and obstructed with ingenious trickery by officials, who abhor the whole system. The murder of Mr. Margary was only a single example out of a vast number, though it happened to be the most striking, of the antipathy to foreign contact which is still the most powerful national feeling in the official Chinese mind.

But it is precisely because this antipathy exists and is painfully manifest that the meaning of the new Embassy may be made the foundation of reasonable hopes. We know how, not by inference, but by experience, that the Chinese are not opening their arms, as some sanguine people imagined eight years ago, to the ideas and alliances of the West. So far as the dispositions and the policy of the Chinese Government and the Chinese officials are concerned we are as distant as ever in reality, possibly farther than ever in visible fact, from free intercourse with China and all its consequences. The most powerful personage in the Chinese Empire is at present Li-Hung-Chang, an able, sagacious, but very timid Conservative, and his policy is intelligible enough. He wishes to exclude foreign influences from China as far as possible, and he is not scrupulous as to the means; but he is careful to stop short of a collision with the foreign Powers. The policy of Li-Hung Chang and of the powerful Mandarin party which sympathises with him would consent to no compromise with the foreigners if it were not that two conclusions have impressed themselves even upon the most unwilling official. The first is that the Chinese masses who have been brought into contact with European commerce would no longer submit to unmitigated measures of exclusion; and the second is, that the foreigners are too masterful to be excluded. The consequence is that, reluctantly, the Chinese Government has for the first time determined to send a properly accredited Envoy to a foreign nation. This is a decisive movement in advance. The Chinese have now deliberately stepped within the circle of diplomatic intercourse, and have entered upon the responsibilities of political negotiation through Envoys with full powers. It is recognised in China that the Envoys who landed at Southampton on Sunday are representatives of the Imperial Government at Peking in a sense altogether different from that in which Mr. Burlingame could be said to represent it.

Some dissatisfaction has been expressed at the lack of official significance in the selection of the envoys to England. There does not appear to be much ground for criticism upon this point. No doubt Chinese statesmen of higher rank and greater capacity might have been chosen, but, after all, the business which the Envoys have to transact is not of supreme importance. The terms of the settlement with the Chinese Government have been fixed by Sir Thomas Wade, and the duties of the Embassy are rather formal than operative. It may be observed, too, that even in this country we do not usually send our Premiers and Secretaries of State upon diplomatic missions, save upon the rarest and most critical occasions. Moreover, without gauging very precisely the comparative dignities of Chinese officials, we may assume that the chief of the Mission which has just been received in London is a personage of official rank equal, or nearly so, to the majority of European Envoys. Kwoh-Sung-tao is an officer of long experience, and, it is said, of pacific and kindly disposition towards foreigners. He was a fellow-countryman and an early friend of Tseng-Kwo-fan, in his time the most powerful and revered of Chinese statesmen. Through this connection, probably, Kwoh-Sung-tao rose to high positions. He was Secretary to the Governor of Tientsin when the treacherous attack upon the Taku forts was planned, and, in spite of his warnings, perpetrated in 1859. Afterwards he filled the most responsible offices beneath the grade of the Provincial Governors, and acted for a time as Governor of Kwangtung, the province which has for its capital the great city we call Canton. He fell into official disgrace for some reason unexplained, and during nearly ten years, it seems, he remained in obscurity, but two years ago he found his way back to Peking under the patronage of the brother of his eminent friend, Tseng-Kwo-fan. He became Judicial Commissioner of Foochow, and was discharging the duties of that office when the Embassy was offered to him. The names of the persons and places we have mentioned may be unfamiliar to our readers; but it is not difficult to understand that the provincial governorships and judicial commissionerships are the most important offices in the official hierarchy of China. The fact that the Chief of the Embassy to England has filled all but the highest of these must tend to fix the attention of the Chinese people more than might otherwise be possible upon this strange and mysterious communion with the foreigners. The official and individual characters of the remaining members of the Embassy are less important: some, we believe, accompanied Mr. Burlingame's mission, others have been trained in the Peking University, and one or more have a certain acquaintance with English. But the individual impressions of Kwoh-Sung-tao will be of far greater consequence than the meagre interpretations of his subordinates. It is worth remembering that rather less than a year ago the Chief of the Embassy paid a visit to Mr. Hart, the head of the Chinese Customs, and had an interesting conversation with that gentleman upon the relations between England and China. Some points in this conversation Sir Thomas Wade records in his despatches to Lord Derby. According to Mr. Hart, the Envoy is strongly in favour of pacific intercourse and is an enemy of warlike preparations, which a year ago were hastened ostentatiously by the Chinese Government. Of course, this "open mind" may have merely been assumed for the purpose of ignoring the Yunnan difficulty, at that time unsettled. We are bound, however, to admit that both Sir Thomas Wade and Mr. Hart—and there are probably no two men who know China better—have expressed the highest opinion of the Envoy's character. The former calls him "an original and determined man," and the latter speaks of his "honesty, clearness of sight, and determination." It is, at any rate, an advantage that such a representative of Chinese thought and feeling should see what England is and understand for himself what are her aims in the Far East.

(THE STANDARD.)

An event unprecedented in the history of the relations between China and foreign countries has occurred—namely, the arrival of two Chinese officials of high rank as Ambassadors to the Court of St. James's. The Celestial Empire, in a spirit of arrogant ignorance, has always sought to avoid any communication with foreigners, but since 1860 it has been found necessary to despatch several missions to Europe. The envoys have, however, been native officials of comparatively inferior rank, with the exception of the American, Burlinghame. Moreover, they have invariably been not the representatives of their Sovereign, but merely delegates of the Chinese Foreign Department. Naturally, they were not received with much honour, and their journeys have been productive of little good. A change of policy has at length taken place at Peking, and two Chinese officials of high rank have arrived, as direct representatives of their Sovereign. That the mission is one of business and not of mere form may be gathered from the fact that the whole staff of the Ambassadors consists of but twelve persons, excluding women and attendants, and that everything is to be conducted on an economical scale. These unostentations surroundings of the Embassy will, however, only hurt the vanity of China. For ourselves, our only object is to inaugurate an honest and liberal policy, and provided that such is the result of the mission, we can well dispense with want of splendour. Besides, a most significant proof that China at last acknowledges the advisability of conciliating us is shown by the rank of the Envoys. Coming after the proclamation of Her Majesty at Delhi as Empress of India, this unheard of concession on the part of the Court at Peking cannot but add to our prestige all over the East. It is not so long since that British ambassadors to China were subjected to humiliations, and now we are the first to obtain from the rulers of that country a concession which, great as it may appear to us, great as it really is, seems to the Chinese themselves still greater. No small credit is due to Sir Thomas Wade for having thus added a proud page to British history. He will have the satisfaction of reflecting that not by brute force or intrigue has his triumph been obtained, but by simple honesty, firmness, and strength of moral character. Nothing could be more unnatural and unsatisfactory than Chinese intercourse with us hitherto. Indeed, many amongst them saw that a change was inevitable, and have co-operated heartily in bringing it about. Possibly evil might have resulted from an attempt to hurry the natural course of events, but a leaven of enlightenment is now working in China. During the last fifteen years our power has been quietly, but with increasing force, impressed upon them, and the most exclusive country in the world is now so far familiar with English current history that, as Sir Thomas Wade relates, a high official actually quoted the Tichborne case in proof that judicial investigations were, under the most favourable circumstances, difficult.

(DAILY TELEGRAPH.)

To-day we receive two distinguished foreigners, whose arrival in this country ranks among the noteworthy events that have happened during the present century. For the first time in its history, the great Empire of China has despatched to a "barbarian" Power a regularly accredited embassy, such as one potentate sends to another. Hitherto all Chinese Envoys who have visited Europe have been subordinate officials, and have been accredited in this spirit. Force of circumstances has occasionally compelled the Middle Kingdom to hold diplomatic relations with Western barbarians. But in such cases it was only an agent or agents of the Tsung-li-Yamen, or Foreign-office at Peking, who were sent, not regular Plenipotentiaries of the "Dragon Throne," with credentials signed by the "vermillion pencil" of the "Cousin of the Sun and Moon." In a word, so far as concerns political missions, till to-day we have been treated by China as though we were a poor savage feudatory, like Corea or Annam. Now we are recognised as being worthy of something better, and for the first time in the history of the world the great empires of the East and West, under whose sway more than half the human race live in orderly organisation, meet on terms of equality and, diplomatically speaking, give each other the right hand of fellowship. These are truly the days of "motion and march," when events move with an electric rapidity which we ourselves, living in their midst, can scarcely estimate with exactitude. Not more than a year ago a singularly acute observer of Chinese life, Mr. Walter William Mundy, in his instructive and picturesque work on "Canton and the Bogue," told us that, after two hundred years of intercourse, our efforts to break through the phlegm of the Chinaman have only been rewarded with partial success. "We are," said Mr. Mundy, still "looked upon as intruders; we are only permitted to remain on sufferance; and whether the future will bring any improvement in these respects is more than the most sanguine of us can answer satisfactorily." Yet that the future—and within a few brief months, too, after the publication of Mr. Mundy's excellent work—has brought about a marked improvement in our relations with China is a fact to which the arrival in London of an Embassy formally accredited by the Court of Peking bears most emphatic testimony. Some hasty and superficial critics were inclined to carp at the Chefoo Treaty negotiated by Sir Thomas Wade last September because he did not insist on avenging Mr. Margary's murder in a sufficiently bloodthirsty manner. They must surely now be convinced that our Ambassador's humane craft ought not to be confounded with complaisant weakness. By obstinately clamouring for the execution of suspected and possibly guilty tools of high officials beyond his reach, Sir Thomas Wade would not have brought back the dead to life. He would merely have failed to achieve what has baffled the skill of every British Envoy for the best part of a century—the opening up of direct diplomatic relations between the Courts of St. James's and Peking. In accomplishing this splendid diplomatic triumph, one which formally procures for his Sovereign what has hitherto been denied—a formal recognition of her equality as a Potentate by the Imperial Court of China—Sir Thomas Wade has nobly vindicated the wise moderation which distinguished his singularly successful policy. The better class of the Chinese officials, indeed, had long been in favour of conducting the business of the Tsung-li-Yamen, or Bureau of Foreign Affairs, in a rational manner. They had often urged the Ministry to cease treating with all the great Western Powers on the "foreign devil" theory of diplomacy. They more than once had besought the Imperial Court to recognise the fact that Great Britain and the other Powers were not vassals of the Dragon Throne, that their Ambassadors were not mere tribute-bearers or homage-offerers. They had frequently demonstrated that it was no longer possible to avoid sending Embassies from the Peking Court to Western Monarchs—Embassies so accredited as to directly recognise the diplomatic equality of Potentates who, though "barbarians," had still the power to thunder both their desires and demands through the iron throats of rifled cannon. No doubt had the skill and tact of Sir Thomas Wade, in settling the Yunnan affair, not averted war, had he not persuaded the Prince of Kung to sign the Treaty of Chefoo in September, these liberal aspirations would have been checked, perhaps for an indefinite period. By that Convention, however, our Ambassador not only obtained satisfactory reparation for Mr. Margary's murder, but he succeeded in getting formal expression given to the project for opening direct diplomatic intercouse between the Chinese Emperor and Her Britannic Majesty.

Of course it is impossible to say what beneficial results may not be produced by this new Chinese Mission to England. Naturally we all hope that it will break down the firm barrier of abhorrent contempt for Europeans which has isolated China for 2,000 years from the rest of the world. We cannot regard with indifference any step in such a direction at a time when our trade with this Empire of mystery is worth something like forty millions sterling a year. When the leaders of the official class, under the influence of better acquaintance with strange countries and governments, get rid of their aversion to foreign intercourse, a great point will be gained: for most intelligent travellers in the "Flowery Land" say that the people themselves have no hostile feeling to us. Indeed, they seem only too eager to trade with us, and make a profit out of the business, if their priests and rulers would only let them. These hopeful individuals, however, are part and parcel of what is called the "social system" of the Empire, and by keeping it unchanged they fancy they promote its interests along with their own. To them the sum total of political wisdom is embodied in the French maxim, "Heureux le peuple dont l'histoire est ennuyeuse." Unalterable monotony and rigid isolation from all foreign influences seem to them the best means of attaining political felicity and worldly comfort. But the old order is changing even in China. It was once a capital crime to emigrate from the Empire. Now there is no continent save Europe into which the Chinese labourer has not pushed his way. At one time no Western Envoy could look on the countenance of the Emperor and live. Now European Ambassadors have a right to speak face to face with the "Son of Heaven," who, in the meantime, is a very small boy, under the tutelage of his Imperial grandmammas, and, as we all know, neither party has been a bit the worse for it. An "outer barbarian," De Quincey, said that if he were compelled to live in China he should go mad. He wrote with his mind permeated by a deep sense of the stolid intolerant exclusiveness, the terrible unvarying monotony, the hopelessly unsympathetic mode of life characteristic of what in his day was thought to be a civilisation unchangeable even in its effeteness. Perhaps if he were alive now—if he saw Celestial emigrants pouring in myriads into our colonies—if he saw their ports one after the other gradually opening their gates for the reception of our wares—if he saw Chinese Envoys directly representing their august Emperor at European Courts, and peradventure quaffing a loving cup with the Lord Mayor himself, he might be inclined to modify the hopeless melancholy with which he regarded the future of the Middle Kingdom. It may be that the hoary age of the race has eradicated all the elasticity and potency of youth from the four hundred millions of individuals who now represent it. Perhaps the experience of another century may confirm the "Opium-eater's" impression that a "young Chinaman was but an antediluvian man revived." But hopefulness is one of the cardinal virtues of a wise practical policy. And it is our duty to believe that the closer relations which are now established between Great Britain and China, that her voluntary participation in the free and fraternal comity of Western nations, are signs indicating that she has fairly and with no faltering footsteps at last entered on the broad path of progress. If the administration of China were once freed from corruption; if the Court were relieved from the pestilence of back-door intrigue, which saps the authority of the best Ministers in all Eastern countries, there is no reason why the Celestial Empire should not advance. Her despotism is more enlightened than that of Russia; it has ever rested on the great principle that men must be ruled by moral agency, and not by physical force. Imperfectly as its rulers may have carried out this idea, they have ever striven to do it, and there is, as a matter of fact, really nothing in a civilisation, no matter how stiffly it may be constructed, permanently incompatible with progress, so long as it is based on this grand vivifying principle.

THE TEA CONFERENCE.

The Standard gives the following on the above subject:—

The late Conference on Tea has attracted less attention than it deserved. It object was announced to be for the purpose of testing critically the merits of various improvements which have been made or proposed in the art of treating teas for the market, and of preparing infusions, of discussing the question of fixing the standard or testing-points of tea, and of taking such steps as might be deemed necessary for the destruction of spurious teas now in bond and for the prevention of their importation for the future, and generally for placing the trade on a more satisfactory basis. To suppose that in the time devoted to the Conference all these topics could have been exhausted would be to suppose an impossibility. Only the fringe, so to speak, of several aspects of the tea question could possibly be touched on; while it may be observed, without any disrespect to the gentlemen present, that the Conference could hardly be considered as sufficiently representative, or commercially or scientifically weighty enough to speak with very great authority. A resolution, however, was passed for the election of "a mixed committee of tea experts, scientific gentlemen, and representatives of the general public, to carry out the foregoing objects, and report fully thereon." If the constitution of this committee be comprehensive and judicious, and sufficient time be expended in considering the various points submitted to it, its report will be anticipated with interest, and some practical good may result from it.

As we can no more fully deal with the whole question of tea in a limited space than the Conference did in a limited time, we must content ourselves with some brief remarks in reference to one or two of the points raised. And first as to adulterated or spurious tea, and the power the present Food and Drugs Act to prevent its importation and to check malpractices in the trade at home. As is usual at conferences, when evils are declaimed against their extent is never made too light of for want of the use of the rhetorical figure of hyperbole. That large quantities of bad tea have found their way into the English market of late years, and that various forms of adulteration and fraudulent manipulation have been practised at home, is well known. At the same time there has been no little exaggeration on the subject. There is every reason, too, to believe that since the passing of the Food and Drugs Act in 1875 the importation of bad tea has very sensibly diminished, as also malpractices in this country after tea has left the bonded warehouses. The Provisions Act, as regards tea, came into operation on the 1st of January, 1876, and at that time there were nearly 107 millions of pounds in the bonded warehouses of the United Kingdom which were not subject to the special Customs inspection under the Act just mentioned. No small quantity of this still remains in bond, and though subject to seizure under the general operation of the Food and Drugs Act, more or less of the bad tea belonging to this old stock goes into consumption. The Conference very reasonably asked that this stock should also be made subject to inspection and the bad tea at once destroyed. If this were done all the tea in bond for the future would, to a certain extent, have the official imprimatur of genuineness on it, though, of course, it must be remembered that unless this inspection is made more thorough than is now the case under the Act some questionable consignments might pass muster. It appears, too, that the demand for the class of tea generally known as "green," and most subject to adulteration in a way injurious to health, is steadily decreasing, and the importation consequently diminishing; while large quantities of it still in bond are from time to time sent to a certain establishment in the suburbs to have the "facing" taken off, such "facing," under the Food and Drugs Act, being held to constitute an "impurity." Our chief danger in this matter probably lies in the tampering with tea after it passes out of the merchant's hand; and unless the Act eventually proves a better protection for the public against the adulterators than it seems to have done against fraudulent milkmen and buttermen, we shall still have to put up with a great deal of questionable tea. But our fears even in this respect are not very serious, for the adulteration of tea in this country is very limited, and really on the decrease. To adulterate or manufacture spurious tea is a fine art not attainable by many. The most reasonable complaint tea drinkers have to make, and probably will have to make for some time to come, is that their tea is poor and flavourless. They are themselves partly to blame for the quantity of poor tea which goes into consumption. They forget that there are almost as many classes of tea as there are of wine, and that if they insist on cheap tea they will get poor tea. Even rich and well-to-do people shrink from giving a high price for their tea; and so few are there who will pay a first-class price for a first-class article, that even when they want it they can hardly get it; the cream of the Chinese tea crop going to Russia, because there is no market for it in this country. It has been said that not one tea-drinker out of a hundred has ever tasted a really first-rate cup of tea in this country. A further ground for complaint is in reference to the retail prices of tea charged by some grocers—a point briefly alluded to at the Conference. As a rule, an ordinary grocer prefers dealing in a low-priced article, and he makes an enormous profit on it, often selling tea at two shillings and sixpence and three shillings per lb. which with the duty did not cost him much above half that money. How to remedy such a state of things is a difficult question. It would almost seem that there is a kind of understanding among dealers in certain articles to keep up retail prices out of all reasonable proportion to their original cost.

Another subject of considerable importance in connection with the treatment of tea—namely, its consolidation or compression—was introduced at the Conference; but here again limited time prevented its receiving the discussion it deserved. What was said was strongly in favour of the principle of consolidation. A sample of consolidated tea was exhibited by the proprietors of the patent machinery used in the process in the Food Section of the Exhibition at South Kensington in 1872, but for some reason or other the matter did not receive the attention which the novelty of the principle and the claims made as to its results might have led one to expect. Perhaps, too, the suspicion at once suggested itself that the consolidation of tea would afford a further opening for the working-up of an adulterated and refuse article. The process consists in applying to loose tea an enormous pressure, every quarter of a pound being subjected to no less a weight than of from seventy to eighty tons, which compresses it to within one-third of its original bulk, forming it into a bar or block, marked by notches or depressions into divisions of half an ounce each. The effect of this pressure is to thoroughly break up the fibre of the leaves, and to open the small cells, which have been closed in the process of drying abroad, and which are not thoroughly opened by the action of boiling water after the ordinary method of infusion. The practical result is that the consolidated or compressed tea will give, after ordinary infusion, a liquor from 40 to 50 per cent. stronger than loose or uncompressed, tea. High-class teas will show even a higher per centage, though it does not seem to be generally known that such teas in their ordinary dried state require a longer time for the extraction of their soluble matter than those of a low price. This result of compression, it is alleged, can be tested by any one, even without the paraphernalia used and exact care exercised by professional tea tasters and testers, and it wil be found that a compressed tea will give, after five minutes' ordinary infusion, as strong a liquor as the same weight of the same tea after boiling for five hours. Here, then, is a claim on behalf of a certain method of dealing with tea which demands special attention, as in its practical aspect it represents a saving of from 40 to 50 per cent. to every tea consumer. But it may be said that any extraction of soluble matter from tea beyond that obtained by ordinary infusion is not desirable, and that the extra quantity of "theine" and aromatic oil obtained from compressed tea causes a deterioration of flavour, and is even injurious as supplying too much of the stimulative element. The alleged practice of the Chinese of only infusing their tea for a few seconds and then pouring off the liquor might also be urged against the use of consolidated tea. In answer to this last objection it may be simply said that the practice alluded to is by no means so common as is supposed, and as the Chinese, generally speaking, only use the leaf in its undried or semi-dried state, it does not follow that the practice of a momentary infusion would be applicable to fully-dried tea. The first-named objection opens the very wide question of the chemistry of tea, and its physiological effects on the human system—too wide a one to discuss here. But as tea is allowed on all hands not to be a "nutriment," but a stimulant, which derives its special properties from the "theine," it seems to follow that the more theine we can extract from it the better in an economic point of view, and the strength of tea can always be regulated by the very simple expedient of "watering down." Moreover, as a matter of taste, most of the best judges of tea in this country do not hold that the shorter the time allowed for infusion the better the flavour of tea; and, as has already been intimated, the higher the class of tea the longer is the time required to extract its soluble matter. Another advantage claimed for consolidated tea is the fact that the process exposes adulteration, or the use of spurious tea, even to unskilled eyes, and infallibly so to experts. The enormous pressure used at once brings "facings," colouring matter, and other soluble impurities to the surface, and reveals at once to the naked eye "filings," grit, and other "foreign substances" which may happen to be on the surface of the compressed blocks, as these will not amalgamate with the tea. Thus the process of consolidation, so far from giving an opportunity for the use of adulterated or spurious tea is said to be practically a protection against it. A still further advantage in consolidated tea consists in the fact that it retains its properties much longer than ordinary tea. The latter even in chests, which are never really air-tight, deteriorates immensely in two years, and at the end of three years has, generally speaking, lost nearly one-half its strength by the evaporation of its essential oils. It stands to reason that consolidated tea must to a great extent obviate this, and a proof that it does so is found in the fact that the consolidated tea which was supplied to the troops in the Ashantee expedition in 1873, though only wrapped in paper, shows, from testing some of the samples which were brought back from Africa, that no practical deterioration has as yet taken place. If wrapped in tin foil it is probable that no material change would take place in consolidated tea for a great number of years. Consolidated tea was supplied to the recent Arctic expedition, and gave the greatest satisfaction; and it is by no means improbable that before long the process will be applied to all tea for the use of the army and navy. Other claims are also advanced on behalf of this method of treating tea; for instance, that of convenience of carriage, recognising which the Canadian Government last year purchased a supply for the use of their mounted police in the western provinces and for the police of the interior. But we have said enough to show that this aspect of the treatment of tea is well deserving of the fullest inquiry; and it is to be hoped that the select committee appointed by the Conference will give special attention to and thoroughly investigate the claims put forward by the advocates of tea consolidation.

Almost numberless other questions in connection with tea require further discussion and elucidation, some of which were not touched on at the Conference—that, for instance, of blending or mixing teas, and the value of Indian teas for this purpose. The importance of Indian teas as a source of national wealth can hardly be over-estimated, while their intrinsic value is every year becoming more fully recognised. In 1863 the money value of Indian tea imported into this country only reached £2,500,000; in three years it had doubled; in 1875 it had reached the immense figure of £25,500,000; while the total for the past year represents something like £28,000,000. But as Indian teas are not suitable to the English palate when used simply, the further question of the propriety of allowing teas to be mixed "in bond" is well worth consideration, as a convenience which might reasonably be conceded to merchants and as a benefit to the consuming public. The subject of tea would also bear much further discussion in its chemical and physiological aspect than it has already received, though no inconsiderable investigation has already been expended in this direction. It has been accepted as a national beverage, even more national now it might almost be said than beer, and therefore it would be simply childish to discuss the abstract question of the propriety of its use. For even if it could be shown scientifically to be injurious, it is not likely that any diminution of its consumption would ensue. It is sufficient to know that tea, though it may be shown to be a "poison," like tobacco, takes a long time in killing any one. There is, however, much we have still to learn of a practical character as to its effects. Again, further definite knowledge as to the best way of keeping tea, and still more as to the best ways of infusing it in the state we now have it, as to the kind of water to be used and how to use it, and as to the kind of teapots, too, best calculated to further the object desired—a good cup of tea, is most desirable; while a variety of other questions of detail require still further elucidation. Though we are a nation of tea drinkers (the imports of last year approximating to 200,000,000 lbs.), there is much prevailing ignorance as to the article we so freely use. Most women would doubtless repudiate this accusation, for as every Englishman credits himself with being a good judge of a horse and a glass of wine, so every Englishwoman prides herself on her judgment as to tea and her knowledge of dealing with it. Still, the fact remains that there is much yet to be learnt as to "Tea and How to Use it."

THE TRADE OF JAPAN.

The Commercial Reports from Her Majesty's Consuls in Japan for the year 1875 have been issued from the Foreign-office. The Reports are summed up by Sir Harry Parkes in a despatch to Lord Derby, dated July 18, 1876, in which the subjoined observations occur:—

I have the honour to place before your Lordship the usual summary of the foreign trade of Japan for the year 1875, compiled from the Consular Returns of Trade for that year which have already been forwarded to your Lordship. The result shows that the imports amounted to $29,467,067, or an increase of nearly 22 per cent. on those of 1874, and the exports to $18,014,890, or a decrease of nearly 10 per cent. on those of 1874. It must not, however, be hastily assumed that the import trade with Japan is increasing to the extent that these figures might be supposed to denote, or that the productive power of the country is on the decline. It is well known that a large proportion of the foreign goods included in these returns has been sold at a loss to the importers, and that although the production of Japanese silk and tea in 1875 exceeded in quantity that of previous years, it was exported at lower values. The following table shows that for four years the total foreign trade of Japan has fluctuated between $44,000,000 and $50,000,000, and that the aggregate of the year 1875 is $3,000,000 less than that of 1872.

	Imports.	Exports.	Total.
1873 ...	... 27,444,068	... 20,660,994	... 48,105,062
1875 ...	... 29,467,067	... 18,014,890	... 47,481,957

The increase in the imports of 1875 is common to all classes of goods, with the exception of a decrease in cotton manufactures of $134,713, and in Eastern produce of $38,513. This increase, however, is only slight in the three classes of mixed cotton and woollen manufactures, metals, and arms and ammunition, but is very marked in those of woollen manufactures and miscellaneous goods, amounting to $2,257,740 in the case of the former, and to $2,802,448 in the case of the latter. The increase in woollen manufactures would have appeared considerably larger, if, as Mr. Annesley has pointed out, the Hiogo Customs had entered mousselines de laine under that head instead of under mixed cotton and woollen goods. The trade in woollens is subject to great fluctuations. In 1872 it amounted to $6,535,014; in 1873 it fell to $4,879,140; and in 1874 to $1,558,896. Again, in 1875 it reached, according to these returns, $3,846,636, which is probably more than half a million below the actual amount, in consequence of the erroneous entry of the Hiogo Customs above referred to.

The trade in cotton manufactures is steadier than that in woollens, but exhibits a tendency to decline. In 1872 it was $10,095,155, in 1873 $9,793,488, in 1874 $9,108,750, and in 1875 $8,974,037. In 1875 the importation of shirtings fell to 47,637,309 yards, valued at $2,626,723, the imports of 1874 having been 65,442,004 yards, valued at $3,736,628. This decrease, however, was nearly compensated for by increased importations of cotton yarn, which rose from 104,904 picuis, valued at $3,575,554 in 1874, to 137,253 piculs, valued at $4,057,840 in 1875, and by a large demand for cambrics, chintzes, imitation satins or Italian cloths, velvets, &c., amounting to more than $300,000 in excess of the value of similar imports in 1874.

The decrease in the value of exports is common to all articles of Japanese produce, with the exception of coal and camphor. But although the two staple articles of silk and tea exhibit a decrease in value—the former of $118,376, and the latter of $876,552—the quantities exported have increased. Thus, according to the returns, 9,809 piculs, or 1,307,945 lbs. of silk were exported in 1874, and 11,813 piculs, or 1,575,081 lbs. in 1875. Of tea 194,481 piculs, or 25,930,800 lbs., were exported in 1874; and 212,870 piculs, or 28,382,666 lbs., in 1875.

YOKOHAMA.

Consul Robertson reports that the value of the trade for 1875 was as follows:—Imports $21,953,909, exports $12,466,730, showing a total of $34,420,639, which is an increase of $5,125,768, upon the value of the trade of the preceding year. In imports:—Cotton manufactures exhibit an increase of $207,351; woollens an increase of $1,656,719; mixed cotton and woollen an increase of $188,171; metals a decrease of $86,631; arms and amunition an increase of $26,178; miscellaneous, foreign, an increase of $2,940,170; miscellaneous, local, an increase of $305,653. In exports:—Silk shows an increase of $129,726; silkworm-egg cards a decrease of $256,354; tea a decrease of $29,899. Consul Robertson supplements the above statistics with the following comments:—

In my summary for 1874 I had to chronicle a diminution in the import trade of this port as compared with 1873 of 2,819,460 dollars, and the above figures show that the trade has quite recovered itself, being 5,237,611 dollars in excess of the import trade of 1874, and 2,418,151 dollars in excess of that of 1873; taking into consideration the fact that the values of most articles of import have ruled very much lower during the past year, it must be acknowledged that so far as the elasticity of the trade is concerned the above figures are by no means discouraging. It does not, however, always follow that a profitable trade results from an increased importation, and I am still induced to believe that the number of merchants here continues to bring about active and very serious competition; moreover, the fact of so many commercial disasters having occurred in the China and Japan trade shows that profits have dwindled down almost to nothing, whilst losses are at times very heavy.

The successively declining rates in the home markets for all classes of textile fabrics during the last year have naturally had their effect here, and when the depreciation in the value of silver, which, of course, affects the remittances made from here, is considered, the fall in goods has been a very serious one. Most of the merchants here endeavour to sell at the best rate obtainable on arrival, but in a limited market like this such a course is, I fear, very difficult, and at times probably impossible. As those interested in the trade know better than I do the large difference in prices ruling at the close of 1874 compared with those in 1875, it would serve no good purpose in a report of this nature to go into detailed particulars. There is no doubt that goods have been bought on a lower basis, but not sufficiently so to come out without loss.

NAGASAKI.

Consul Flowers reports that a comparison of the trade of this Port in 1875 with that of 1874 shows a decrease of $533,572, the total value of imports and exports being $3,684,393 in 1875, against $4,217,965 in 1874. As regards imports, a great decrease in both cotton and woollen goods is apparent, the import of these staples having steadily declined since 1872, and this decrease is very inadequately counterbalanced by a slight increase in the importation of mixed cotton and woollen manufactures. Consul Flowers says:—

The import trade has continued to show very unsatisfactory results. The competition between the Mitsu-bishi Company (native) and the Pacific Mail Company has kept freights very low for the greater part of the year. This has enabled the native merchants to buy their goods in the larger markets, where, it is presumed, a better selection may be obtained, and to bring their purchases down to this part of the country at a nominal expense. Another cause of the dull state of affairs is to be traced to the fact that a number of the smaller Chinese merchants have taken to selling piece goods in very small quantities (of six or ten pieces at a time) to the country people. It is natural to infer that this course has materially interfered with the trade of the native dealers. It has prevented them from buying except in small quantities.

The export trade of the twelve months Mr. Flowers considers on the whole to have been tolerably satisfactory. Though the total values do not show an increase ($2,159,303 in 1875, against $2,342,799 in 1874), the yield of some of the principal articles of produce has manifestly increased.

The report concludes with the observation that no amelioration is likely to take place in trade until the communication with the interior has been improved.

NI-IGATA.

Mr. W. H. Woolley supplies the subjoined statement of the value (in yen) of the Imports into this Port in 1875, which he has compiled from native returns:—

Shirtings	20,487
Cotton yarn and shirtings	6,760
Cotton	17,750
Cotton yarn	25,336
Italian cloth	1,350
Sugar	53,663
Iron	18,272
Wines and spirits	1,148
Dried fish	2,830
Sundries	3,821
Total	151,417

Mr. Woolley sums up his Report as follows:—

The most important foreign imports, it will be seen, are iron, sugar, and cotton yarn. Over $90,000 worth of iron has been imported in the period mentioned. Round iron and nail rod are most largely imported. At Tsubame there is a large nail manufactory, and great skill is shown by the workmen. Round iron is chiefly used in the manufacture of braziers and handles of drawers, &c. Sheet iron is but slightly used, except for stove pipes, and bar iron is not imported at all. Over $50,000 worth of dried fish was imported from Hadokate, and over $40,000 worth of salt from Kamii, near Osaka. Only a trifling quantity of kerosene oil (petroleum lamps being used in the houses and streets) and vegetable wax is imported. The principal export is rice.

The population of Ni-igata is about 34,000, and it contains a floating population of about 10,000. The population of the whole ken in 1874 is put down at 1,388,353, of whom 696,731 are men, and 691,622 women. There are at present thirteen foreigners resident, of whom two are merchants, three missionaries, and the rest are in the employ of the Japanese Government. The people, as in most large towns in Japan, are beginning to adopt foreign inventions. A rice mill, worked by steam, has been put up. A company was formed not long ago to manufacture wine. An Italian was engaged as Superintendent, but the attempt was a failure. Grapes are so plentiful in the province that wine-making may eventually prove a success. Boots and hats are made, and shops where foreign articles are sold are springing up very fast.

HIOGO AND OSAKA.

Consul Annesley reports that the trade of these ports in 1875 was as follows:—

Imports	$5,726,797
Exports	3,092,405
Total	$8,819,202
Against, in 1874—
Total	$12,168,639

The above figures show a decrease in the business of the two ports of $3,349,437, as compared with 1874. This considerable falling-off had been caused by a diminution in both the quantity and value of the goods dealt in. The total result of the trade of the year had proved most disastrous, and the value of property had in consequence greatly depreciated. With reference to the Import trade Mr. Annesley says:—

The total value of goods sold during the year 1875 amounts to $5,726,797, showing a decrease of $1,162,129 as compared with 1874. The falling off has been confined almost exclusively to cotton fabrics. Cotton yarn shows a decrease in value of $200,000, shirtings of $360,000, and raw cotton of $185,000; in fact, the deliveries of all descriptions of cotton imports show a large falling-off when compared with the previous year, while an increase in the deliveries of lustres, cloth, mousselines de laine, china figures, and flannels may be noted, the import of all other woollen manufactures has decreased. It is impossible, however, to ascertain with any correctness, from the sources of information within foreign reach, how far the figures quoted represent the value of the trade at these ports. The numerous steamers now running under the Japanese flag between Osaka and Yedo doubtless bring down quantities of foreign goods, and it is possible, therefore, that the consumption of European fabrics in this district may have equalled, if not exceeded, that of last year, notwithstanding the fact that a smaller quantity has actually passed through the hands of foreign merchants at this port. The falling off in the imports is, in reality, not as large as it would appear.

With regard to the export trade, Mr. Annesley writes as follows:—

The total value of exports for 1875, exclusive of treasure, is estimated at $3,092,405, against $5,751,155 for the previous year, showing the remarkable decrease of $2,658,750, so that the increase in value gained in 1874 has been lost in 1875. This is attributable to a decline in the value of tea, the entire suspension of the export of rice, and a considerable falling off besides in the shipment of all miscellaneous produce. The total export of tea for 1875 was 7,649,020 lbs., against 7,091,165 lbs. in 1874. Although the quantity was slightly in excess of the previous year, the value, in consequence of a decline in price, shows a deficiency of $856,921. Of the above quantity 10,050 lbs. were shipped to London, 16,200 lbs. to Canada, 6,139,030 lbs. to the United States direct, and 1,483,740 lbs. coastwise to Yokohama. It will thus be observed that the total direct foreign export was less than in 1874, but a large proportion of the tea to Yokohama was prepared here for shipment, and is included in the foreign export thence, merely for the convenience of the shippers, who obtain Consular invoices there. In addition to the exports by foreigners, large quantities of tea have been sent forward by native merchants to Yokohama for sale upon that market, no reliable statistics of which can be obtained. The actual product of the district is, therefore, very much larger than is shown by the export figures.

The serious falling off in the value of the foreign export trade of this district is a subject well worth the attention of the native Government, affecting as it does the revenue of the country as well as the prosperity of its inhabitants. The purchasing powers of the latter are already sensibly impaired, and unless some change for the better takes place will speedily be still further diminished. There is no reason why the production of copper, camphor, tobacco, wax, and other articles, for which a ready market exists in Europe, should not, under favourable circumstances, be largely increased, and millions of acres of waste land be thus made to contribute to the wealth of the country.

STUDENT INTERPRETERS.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—Permit me to endorse the remarks which you make in raising a warning voice to the young Scots and others whom "J. S. D." recommends to learn Chinese as a means of obtaining appointments abroad. I am one of a large number now to be found part in China and part at home, who have, at considerable trouble and no little expense, acquired a fair knowledge of Chinese—such, in fact, as with one or two years' study, with the stimulus of a practical object in view, could be turned to useful account; but unfortunately I am only too well aware that the Government here would not think of giving me any appointment, if I wished it, either for Singapore, Hong Kong or China, but prefer to engage men who know nothing of China or Chinese, and to trust to their picking up the requisite knowledge on being sent out as student interpreters. This policy—which I understand is now also followed by the Chinese Imperial Customs—deprives the Government of the services of many good men, who might be secured either here or in China itself, and also withdraws about the only incentive which exists, except in one or two exceptional cases, to the study of what is proverbially the hardest and most uninviting language in the world.—I am, &c., TSU-URH-CHI.

London, Jan. 16.

GERMANY.

HAMBURG, JAN. 23.

The great excitement which for some weeks past has taken possession of all classes of our population, in consequence of the elections for the new Parliament, has now almost entirely disappeared, and public life has again resumed its usual quiet aspect. This, however, is not the case in our neighbouring city of Altona, where the whole election battle will have to be fought over again, as the candidate who was elected there has been also returned for Berlin, and has declared to sit for the latter city. Both parties are once more equally active to secure the victory for their candidate, and it is to be feared that the Socialists having been already victorious, will also carry the second election. Regarding the elections all over Germany, it may be briefly stated that the new Parliament will contain a sufficient majority of Prince Bismark's followers; but at the same time it cannot be denied that the revolutionary parties during the last three years have gained so much ground as to greatly endanger the existence of the present order of things. The leaders of the Socialists in Denmark have laid the foundation of a Socialist colony in the United States, so as to give practical proof of the great blessings of their new doctrine. The State of Kansas, in the centre of the Union, and one of the most wild and least cultivated territories, has been selected to be the scene of this new heaven on earth.

The time for the annual meetings of the several joint-stock establishments existing here, such as steamship companies, banks, breweries, &c., is now approaching, and it may be stated that as far as is known the past year has been far more remunerative and successful than was at one time anticipated—several companies which were expected to pay little or no dividend being able to divide a very respectable sum among their shareholders. On the whole, business seems to be freeing itself from the hazardous and over-speculative tone which had characterised commercial affairs for a long period. The Commerce and Discount Bank declares a dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, and calls its shareholders to meet on the 29th inst.; the Vereinsbank proposes a dividend of 10 per cent. for 1876, and the annual meeting of the shareholders is fixed for the 27th inst.; the Waaren Credit Anshalt intends to distribute 12 per cent. for the past year, and calls its shareholders for the 30th inst.; the Maklerbank declares a dividend of 9½ per cent., and has fixed its meeting for the 23th inst.

The steamer Saxonia, recently reported as stranded on the Island of Heligoland, has not proved a total loss, as was anticipated, but has been got off by the aid of an English salvage steamer, the Enterprise, of Liverpool, and arrived yesterday in the river. This casualty has proved very profitable to the poor islanders, as the sum paid to them by the underwriters for saving the cargo amounts to no less than £4,500, which is to be distributed amongst all the inabitants of the island. This wind-fall will be the more welcome to them, as the last bathing-season at the island was far behind those of former years, notwithstanding the most diligent exertions of the present Governor to keep up the reputation of his small territory up to the same level as when the pharo-bank was existing there.

During the year 1876, 626 vessels, with 209,144 T.R. of merchandise, arrived in Geestemuende, the port of our sister-town Bremen, 197 of which came from Great Britain, 98 from the United States, 57 from Norway, 54 from ports of the province of Hanover, 38 from the Prussian Baltic, and 24 from the East Indies. Of these 636 vessels, 146 were steamers. During the same period a total number of 654 vessels left the harbour, 232 of which were bound for Great Britain, 90 for the United States, 67 for Norway, 48 for ports in the province of Hanover, 46 for Hamburgh, 31 for the Russian, and 24 for the Prussian Baltic, 18 for Sweden, and 16 for the East Indies.

The cattle plague having broken out in Altona the Imperial as well as the local authorities have ordered a thorough inspection to be made of all cattle brought to our market. The export to Great Britain and other places abroad is therefore very much restricted. The plague is also reported to be raging near Breslau, in the province of Silesia, as well as in Berlin, and several hundreds of cattle have already been killed in order to save the rest. In Altona the disease has only been observed in one stable in which were placed some cattle from Silesia, and it therefore appears very probable that the plague has been introduced from that province.

At Berlin a conference has been held for the revision of the rule of the road at sea. The greater part of the new English code of rules has been accepted, but at the same time it has been declared that these rules can only prove of real benefit when made international and obligatory upon all seafaring nations. It is expected therefore that measures to bring this about will soon be taken by our Government.

The Hercules, barque, which was run down a few miles below here by the Alford, s.s., of London, has also been lifted, and arrived here last Sunday in tow of two tugs. The vessel has suffered considerably, but being an iron-one the costs of the repairs will not amount to a very great sum, and the disaster is therefore somewhat less than was at first anticipated.

The city of Berlin, it is said, is to be surrounded by extensive fortifications, three large fortresses being projected. This plan, no doubt, is to be ascribed to the desire which is shown to withdraw the military at Berlin from the pernicious influence of the Socialists, whose agitations have already found their way into the army.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

Our market has shown a quiet tendency during the past week, and transactions have only been entered into for local consumption. Money continues very abundant.

RICE.—Sellers are very firm, but in consequence of the season, the prevailing demand is of small importance.

TEA, quiet. The following first-hand parcels have been sold: 800/16 boxes Canton Imperial, 47/4 boxes Javattice. Arrivals from Foochow per Glaucus, 410/4, 3,639/8, 420/16 boxes Congou, 999/8 boxes Souchong, 231/4 boxes Pecco.

COTTON shows a want of animation, purchasers holding aloof.

SPICES.—Mace is quoted 9 to 10m. per kilo. Nutmegs, 5.60 to 6.20m. per kilo. Cloves have met with more attention; Zanzibar quality 141 to 143m. per 50 kilos. Pepper dull. Singapore quality 42 to 42½m.: Penang ditto 37½ to 38m. per 50 kilos.

SHIPPING.

The arrivals in port although not very numerous during the last week have been satisfactory, as they have comprised a good many vessels from transatlantic ports. The steam trade between here and England is going on as lively as ever, the more so as there is no impediments caused by ice. On the other hand, heavy fogs are prevailing, which make the traffic very difficult, and the pilots are having a very hard time of it. Our communication with the Far East during the last week has been small, as only one departure is to be reported, viz., the barque Batavia, Capt. Haesloop, to Hong Kong, and there have been no arrivals. The China, Fangmeyer, from Rangoon, has arrived at Bremen. On the berth here for the East Indies and China, are the Ferona, s.s., for Penang, Singapore, &c., to leave on the 15th Feb.; Peri, Luehrs, for Penang and Singapore; Johann Friedrich, Kroencke, for Singapore; Vega, Vordvedt, for Hong Kong; and Bernard Carl, Lueders, for Japan.

HOLLAND.

AMSTERDAM, JAN. 24.

The Senate spent only two days in the discussions of the several Budgets, which were carried almost unanimously. The debate brought out nothing of interest, the only arguments being repetitions of those brought forward in the Second Chamber. The Rotterdam Canal to the sea, a miserable failure, which has cost millions of florins, was the principal plat of the Parliamentary menu. Several members urged the necessity that dredging machines be employed to improve the depth of this canal. The Minister promised that all possible means should be adopted, and, indeed, it is necessary that something should be undertaken, as upon the result hangs the "to be or not to be" of Rotterdam. Mr. Heemskerk was less indulgent towards Amsterdam, when some members of the Senate asked that something should be done in order to improve the communication by water between the capital and the Rhine. Upon the Budget of the Naval Department, and that of Finance, nothing was said which needs to be reproduced. Important, however, was the declaration of Mr. Alting Mees, Minister of the Colonial Department, that it was the duty of the State to interfere vigorously and most powerfully regarding the Colony of Surinam, in order to prevent its further decay. The State must in the first place guarantee the interest of a loan, and secondly immigration must be organised, and encouraged. The Minister promised to co-operate as much as possible in any project to improve the condition of the Colony. The Budget of War was carried by a larger majority than for some years past. A good many members, however, protested against the enormously large sums which are expended every year to improve our means of defence, while the results are so small. In his answer the Minister demonstrated that it is the first duty of every patriot to take care for the national defence, and that it is not his fault that so much is spent for this purpose. Only one remark was made about the Colonial Budget. Mr. Duymaer Van Twist observed that it would be prudent to take note of the remarks which were made about the new harbour in the vicinity of Batavia, and that it perhaps would be wise not to continue for the present the construction of this public work. The Minister, however, said that it cannot be stopped, because all the preparatory measures have been taken.

The First Chamber broke up on the 20th inst. It is said that the members of the Second Chamber will return to the Hague on the 15th of next month. Of course the Lower Class Education Bill will then become the topic of public interest, and it seems that the discussion thereon will be so protracted that there is little chance of the Bill being carried before the month of June, when the general elections must take place. Even amongst the Liberals a great diversity of opinion prevails about this question, so that it will be very difficult to come to an agreement.

I am glad to state that the two remaining sons of the prince Zu Wied, who were attacked by bronchitis, have been restored to health. Much fear prevailed that they would succumb.

Trade is very dull. No transactions of any importance in Produce have taken place, and on the Bourse business is checked by the political situation.

Monetary and Commercial.

The following are the latest quotations of Banking and other Companies connected with the Far East :—Agra Bank, 10 to 10½; Chartered Bank of India, 19½ to 20½; Chartered Mercantile Bank, 29 to 30; Comptoir D'Escompte, f.680 to 683¾; Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank, 32 to 34; Oriental Bank, 44 to 45; P. and O. Company, 37 to 39; Messageries Maritimes, f.629; Suez Canal, f.656¼; Japan Loan 9 per cent., 112 to 115; ditto, 7 per cent., 102 to 104.

In the Produce Markets the failure of the Conference to secure a settlement of the Eastern question has increased the suspense regarding the future of the political situation and business continues depressed. Tea and Silk have maintained a very quiet tone. Coffee has undergone a further fall of 2s. to 3s. per cwt. Sugar has been extremely flat, but exhibits signs of improvement at the close. There has been a fairly active inquiry for new crop cargoes of Rice. Black Pepper has been in demand at slightly improved value, but White is very quiet. Gambier has been in steady request. Manila Hemp has sustained a further decline. Tin has been dull, and Straits is 10s. per ton lower. Other articles have undergone no alteration.

The total quantity of tea delivered from the bonded warehouses in London for the week ended the 20th inst. was 3,668,539 lbs., which, compared with 3,734,733 lbs. for the preceding week, shows a reduction of rather more than 1¾ per cent. Of the above total 2,372,544 ibs. was for home consumption, 987,333 lbs. was removed coastwise, 160,606 lbs. was sent coastwise for exportation, 144,981 lbs. was exported, and 3,075. lbs. was for ships' stores. The duty received during the same period amounted to £59,314, showing a fall of 9½ per cent., the total in the previous week being £65,570. The following were the quantities of the other principal dutiable articles withdrawn from the London bonded warehouses for home consumption during the week :—Coffee, 580,204 lbs.; cocoa, 130,081 lbs.; tobacco, 382,985 lbs.; cigars, 21,079 lbs.; wine, 167,644 gallons; brandy, 40,363 gallons; and rum, 35,366 gallons.

The weekly allotment of Council drafts on India shows practically no variation from the prices obtained last week. On Calcutta £136,000, was allotted at an average of 1s. 10-34d.; on Bombay, £150,000 at an average of 1s. 10-34d.; and on Madras, £1,000 at 1s. 10-25d. per rupee. Tenders at 1s. 10¼d. for drafts on all Presidencies will receive in full, while for telegraphic transfers on Bombay applicants at this price will receive about 75 per cent.

The amount of bullion per P. and O. steamer Poonah, from Southampton, on the 25th inst. was :—In gold, to Galle, £603. In silver, to Penang, £48,200; to Hong Kong, £50,250; to Shanghai, £2,100; total in silver, £100,550.

Bar Silver is weaker in price, 58d. to 58⅛d. being the nearest quotation. Mexican Dollars, about £120,000 in value, have been sold at 57¾d. per oz., showing a decline of ⅛d. per oz.

The Great Northern Telegraph Company announce that their London station has been placed in communication by pneumatic tube with the principal post-office telegraph stations in the city, and that the originals of all messages handed in at these stations are forwarded immediately to the company's station for further transmission. It is also announced that in order to expedite the delivery of messages received from China and Japan by the lines of the company arrangements have been made for a direct delivery by the company's own messengers, so that the messages will not, as heretofore, pass through the Post-office.

The coupons of the Six per Cent. Debentures of the Eastern Extension Telegraph Company will be paid on and after the 1st proximo at the Consolidated Bank.

At a meeting of the bondholders of the Amoor River Navigation Company, a lengthy report of a committee appointed on the 31st December, 1874, to consider the position of the company, was adopted, recommending the acceptance of terms by which the bondholders are to receive 2 per cent. per annum for four years, from 1st January last, in lieu of the guaranteed 6 per cent., that the overdue coupons and the difference of dividend between 2 and 6 per cent. for the next four years be capitalised in 6 per cent. bonds to be issued to the bondholders; that all surplus income over 2 per cent. be applied to the redemption of the new bonds; and that a representative of the bondholders be elected to serve on the direction.

Tenders have been received for £100,000 Six per Cent. Debentures of the City of Christchurch, Province of Canterbury, New Zealand. The applications amounted to £400,000, and prices ranged from £98 to £102 3s. 6d. Tenders at £100 1s. receive nearly nine-tenths, and those above that rate in full.

The directors of the London and County Bank have decided to recommend the payment of a dividend of 8 per cent. for the half-year ended the 30th of December last and carry forward £11,167. This, with the June payment of 8 per cent., will make 16 per cent. for the year 1876. For the corresponding period of 1875 the dividend was at the rate of 17 per cent. per annum.

The report of the London and Provincial Bank for the six months ended 31st ult. shows, inclusive of £4,916 brought forward, a net profit of £19,076. A dividend at the rate of 12½ per cent. per annum absorbs £10,937, and to the reserve fund £2,500 is added, increasing it to £66,272.

The report of the English, Scottish, and Australian Chartered Bank for the last six months shows, inclusive of £4,820 brought forward, an available balance of £29,633. A dividend at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum absorbs £24,000.

The Hampshire Banking Company announce a dividend at the rate of 20 per cent. per annum. The North Wilts Bank announce a similar dividend. The business of these banks, as already intimated, is now carried on under the title of the Hampshire and North Wilts Banking Company.

The West of England and South Wales District Bank announce a dividend for the past six months at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum.

The report of the Barcelona Tramways Company for the past year states that the net profit has amounted to £10,002, and the directors propose to declare a dividend of 13s. per share, making, with the previous distribution, 9½ per cent. for the year.

The directors of the New Zealand Trust and Loan Company (Limited) announce a dividend of 5s. per share, being at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum.

The directors of the Imperial Credit Company (Limited) report a net sum of £21,695 to the credit of profit and loss for the past half-year, including £1,779 brought down. Out of this they recommend the usual dividend at the rate of 6 per cent., or 4s. 6d. per share, which will absorb £13,500, leaving £8,195 to be carried forward.

The Southampton Dock Company will pay a dividend for the last six months of £1 10s. per share, or at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum.

The first annual report of the Phospho-Guano Company announces a dividend of 7s. per share, and a bonus of the same amount, making in all 15 per cent. for the year.

In the yearly report of the Danubian Navigation Company (Limited) a dividend of 10 per cent. is proposed, carrying forward £2,247.

In the report of the Merchants' Marine Insurance Company (Limited) the directors state that they cannot recommend any dividend. From the report it appears that the 1874 underwriting account closed with a debit of £9,478 15s. 6d.; and that there remained on the 1875 account £10,472 17s. 3d. out of which to pay claims maturing in 1877. In 1876 the net premiums were £69,856, and the claims paid were £43,381, 80 per cent. of the risks having run off.

The directors of the Universal Marine Insurance Company (Limited) state that an interim dividend of 5s. was paid last July, and a similar sum is proposed to be distributed now, making 10 per cent. for the year.

The report of the directors of the Northern Marine Insurance Company (Limited) states that after reinsuring the outstanding risks of 1875 there remains a net profit of £2,500, out of which a dividend of 10 per cent. is recommended to be paid.

Messrs. Bowdler and Chaffer, the well-known and extensive iron shipbuilders on the Mersey, have suspended payment. The affairs of the firm have been placed in the hands of accountants, and although their liabilities are considerable, it is hoped that some arrangements will be made to carry the business on, as this firm was considered the most successful on the Mersey, employing upwards of 500 men.

SILK.

The feature of the trade during the past week has been the offering in this market of some large parcels of Tsatlees from Lyons, at prices which show a reduction from our current rates of 1s. to 1s. 6d. per lb.; the bulk of these Silks have been taken, but there is no disposition shown among holders to follow the lead thus taken in prices. Some Common Japans have also been sold at easier rates. Cantons remain firm at last quotations. Deliveries the last few days have improved.

COFFEE.—At the opening of the market this week more decided dulness prevailed, and Plantation Ceylon, of which the public sales chiefly consisted, went off flatly, the demand being slow, although prices declined about 2s. 6d. from last week, and part was bought in. Small quantities of pale kinds were sold at a similar reduction. Since then small supplies of Plantation Ceylon at the public sales have met a steady demand, and prices have ruled without further change, Plantation Ceylon having been sold, triage at 79s. 6d. to 95s., grey to good colourv small at 101s. 6d. to 106s. 6d., low middling at 109s. 6d. to 111s., middling at 111s. 6d. to 114s. 6d., good middling at 115s. to 116s. 6d., bold at 119s. to 122s., pea-berry at 113s. 6d. to 119s. No Native Ceylon has been offered. Of 98 bags Singapore offered, 54 bags sold, picked Bally at 75s. 6d. per cwt.

CHINA STRAW PLAIT.—At auction 255 bales were partly sold, chiefly white, ordinary and medium £6 12s. 6d. to £8 10s., good medium to good £8 17s. 6d. to £10 15s., fine £14 5s., and Tuscan at £12 10s. to £13 for black and white, and £11 5s. to £23 for brown and white.

CHINA PRESERVES.—204 cases Ginger partly sold, Chyloong brand at 23s. per case.

COIR GOODS.—Moderate supplies of Yarn at public sale to-day were chiefly sold at very full prices; 60 bales Ceylon sold, good middling reddish to good pale £33 to £38, fine £43, also 43 tons ditto, common coarse £25 to £26, good ordinary to low medium £28 5s. to £30 5s., medium to good medium £30 15s. to £34, good even at £34 15s. to £36 10s., with fine (in ballots) at £40 to £44 10s., all including 1st class sea-damaged. Kitool Fibre.—57 bales 139 ballots Ceylon sold, dark 9¼d., good long 1s. 1½d. to 1s. 1¾d. per lb.

COCOANUT OIL remains steady; Cochin at £41 to £41 5s., Ceylon at £37 10s. to £38, according to packages.

GALLS.—7 cases good China bought in at 65s. per cwt.

DRAGON'S-BLOOD.—11 cases Singapore lump sold, middling at £6 2s. 6d. to £6 10s., rather inferior £6 to £6 2s. 6d.

GAMBIER.—The market is steady, and on the spot 22s. 9d. to 23s. is now required for whole bales. For arrival 300 tons December-February shipment have been sold at 22s. 6d., ex ship, for faults.

GUM DAMAR.—8 cases good Singapore, medium and bold, sold at 71s. 95 cases good unworked Batavian bought in at 80s.

HEMP.—The market is flat, and at the weekly auction of Manila there was not much demand except on lower terms, and only a small part sold at 10s. to 15s. per ton below the previous public sales. Of 1,468 bales offered about 400 bales sold, mixed quality below fair at £28 to £28 10s., good fair at £30, fine at £30 15s., with one lot at £31; the remainder bought in at £28 5s. to £32, and fine white Lupez (17 bales) at £100 per ton.

HIDES.—Of 8,652 China Ox and Cow offered 7,221 sold: Light, average 10⅝ to 10¾ lbs. 7¼d. to 7⅝d.; heavy, average 17⅞ to 18⅞ lbs. 7⅛d. to 7¼d.; extra heavy, average 28 to 30½ lbs. 7¼d. to 7⅝d.; kips, average 6¾ to 7 lbs. 7¼d.; thirds, average 12⅝ to 14 lbs. 4⅜d. per lb.

MUSK.—23 caddies Tonquin sold, pile 1, fair shaped with some rather skinny at 48s. 6d. to 49s.; pile 2, hard and skinny but genuine at 40s.; pile 3, rough skinny, &c., at 17s. 6d. to 19s., damp pickings 29s. Of 25 caddies Yunnan 12 caddies fair sold at 34s. 6d. to 35s. Of 13 tins grain 3 tins rather dark and damp sold at 52s.; the remainder bought in at 50s. to 60s. per oz.

PEPPER.—Black: Privately on the spot sales of about 1,700 bags have been made, chiefly Penang, at 3¾d., and for arrival there has been more demand, closing 1-16d. dearer, 100 tons Singapore, December-January-February shipment having been sold at 4 5-16d., and 25 tons January-February, since, at 4¼d. The public sales have been restricted to Singapore, of which 1,713 bags offered met scarcely any demand, and were bought in at 4⅛d. to 4¼d., excepting about 100 bags, which sold, sound at 4¼d. White: The market is quiet, and at auction 338 bags Singapore were nearly all sold at easy rates at 7¼d. to 7⅝d., chiefly good at 7½d.

PLUMBAGO.—Of 135 barrels Ceylon offered 31 barrels rather earthy small lump sold at 14s. 6d., and 23 barrels fair chips at 11s. per cwt.

RICE.—A quieter tone prevails, and a slightly easier price has been accepted for a cargo of 1,500 tons new Rangoon, February shipment, ship in port, which has been sold at 9s. 8½d. open charter.

SPICES.—Cassia Lignea: 50 cases unworked sold at 57s. 9d., 495 cases, chiefly first-class sea-damaged, were bought in at 58s. Cinnamon Chips: Of 218 bags Ceylon 158 bags sold, middling at 4½d. to 5d. Nutmegs: 104 cases Penang went off flatly, and in the absence of buyers at previous rates the bulk was bought in, average 77's to 74's at 3s. 10d. to 4s., 79's at 3s. 9d., 82's at 3s. 6d., 120 to 102's at 2s. 6d., only 15 cases being sold, 82's at 3s. 5d., mouldy 75's at 3s. 7d., mouldy 127 to 116's at 2s. 1d. to 2s. 2d. Mace: 26 cases Penang went off slowly, and 18 cases sold at about former rates, good bold reddish at 2s. 9d., ordinary and low middling dark at 1s. 9d. to 1s. 11d., pickings at 11d. per lb.

SAGO.—Only 388 bags damaged small pearl were offered by auction and sold at 15s. for first-class. Flour: For arrival 50 tons have been sold at 15s. 4½d.

SOY.—Of 50 casks China, 5 casks sold at 1s. 9d. per gallon.

SUGAR.—There is an improved demand for low brown kinds, and some recovery in value is noticeable. On the spot 100 tons brown Native Penang have been sold at 18s. There is more disposition to buy Manila, but no sales are reported.

TAPIOCA.—628 bags Alma Penang were chiefly bought in, fine bold white at 3d., only 150 bags grey being sold at 2½d. to 2⅝d. 100 bags fine white Singapore partly sold at 2⅝d.

TAPIOCA FLOUR.—40 bags inferior Penang sold at 1½d., 5 cases (containing tins) were bought in at 3½d.

TIN.—Market quiet; the closing quotations are:—Straits, on the spot and afloat, £75; Banca, £77; Billiton, £75 per ton.

MANCHESTER GOODS.

Renewed activity in Liverpool and an advance in the price of Cotton has imparted much firmness to this Market, but producers have not been able to obtain the higher rates asked, and little business has been done. The tone of the Market is firm, although the demand at last quotations is only limited, but considerable operations could be effected at a reduction of 1⅛d. to 3d. on Grey Goods. Yarns are in but poor inquiry.

GENERAL SHIPPING NEWS.

SHIP REPORT.—F. W. C. Foegel, Master of barque Adler, of Elsfleth, 471 tons, from Swatow, July 24, for Queenstown (sugar in bags), reports:—Arrived safely Jan. 5, and, having received orders for Greenock, proceeded from thence on the 12th, at 10 A.M., with Channel pilot on board. Sighted Tuskar and Rock-a-Bill Lights, the latter at 5 P.M. on the 13th, bearing S.W. by W. about 14 miles. Proceeded up Channel, steering principally N.E. On the 14th, at 6.30 A.M., tide half flood, weather thick, with rain, wind S. by E., strong, the ship suddenly struck on the rocks at Kearney Point (County Down), and bumped heavily, and filled as the tide rose. At high water the vessel capsized, broke her masts, and became a total wreck. The cargo melted away completely, and the empty bags washed on shore.—Portaferry, Jan. 15

WITH reference to the remarks made by our Hamburg correspondent in the issue of the 15th inst., with reference to the loss of the steamer Saxonia, we are requested by the London Agents to state that the captain had the printed notice with regard to the Heligoland fog-signal on board, and that what was stated to the contrary was incorrect; and also that if, notwithstanding this, the captain mistook the Heligoland fog signal for the outer light-ship, it was because unfortunately the fog signal on the island is not a fog-horn, and has thus not the distinguishing character which it ought to have; we are also requested to state that the assertion to the effect that not a single cast of the lead had been taken is untrue, and that no just reproach can be made against the captain on this score.

AN action arising out of damage to cargo, brought on behalf of Messrs. Wyllie and Co., of Leadenhall-street, and Messrs. O. Tyne and Co., of Bremen, against Giovanni Dapuelo, of Genoa, the owner of the Pieve Superiore, a barque of 671 tons register, has been tried by the Admiralty Division of the High Court of Justice. On the part of the plaintiffs it was contended that the causes of the mischief to the cargo were, first, insufficient dunnage; and, secondly, that at Rangoon the bags of rice had been cut, and their contents scattered over the ventilators. After hearing the evidence, the Court held that the plaintiffs' case was not proved, and gave judgment for the defendants.

THE NEW STEAMER LOUDOUN CASTLE.—This handsome new screw China clipper sailed from the Clyde on the 15th inst., reached London on the 18th, after a splendid run to the Downs, her average speed being fully 12½ knots against a strong head wind and heavy sea to the Lizard. The Loudoun Castle was recently built by Messrs. J. and G. Thomson for Messrs. Skinner and Co.'s China line. The passage to London fully confirms the result of the trial trip on the 15th inst.

INTELLIGENCE from St. Helena, received via Madeira, announces the arrival there of the Chrysolite, about which some uneasiness was beginning to be felt in consequence of the length of time which had elapsed since leaving Akyab. During last week reinsurances had been effected on her at high rates of premium.

A QUANTITY of wreckage which has been washed ashore in Bigbury Bay, on the coast of South Devon, has been ascertained to be the remains of an American vessel, named the George Green, which foundered during the recent gales, causing, it is believed, the loss of twenty-six lives.

The Amadine, which was destroyed by fire at sea on the 10th ult., whilst on a voyage from London to Penang, was registered in London, and was a barque of 547 tons, built at Sunderland in 1866, and owned by Mr. M. H. Atkinson, of North Shields.

HYDROGRAPHICAL NOTIFICATIONS.

Japan-Kiusiu.—West Coast.—(1.) Rocks off Do Sima.—Information has been received from Captain H. C. St. John, H.M.'s surveying vessel Sylvia, of the existence of three rocks lying about 5 cables eastward of the east point of Do Sima. The outer rock has 6 feet on it at low water spring tides, and bears E. by N. ½N. from the south-east point of Do Sima, distant 5 cables. The other two rocks, which cover at high water, are situated between this sunken rock and the east end of Do Sima. (2.) Sunken Rock between Hirase and Oögawa Sima.—Also, of the existence of a dangerous sunken rock (Oorisé) in the channel between Hirasé and Oögawa Sima. This rock has 3 feet on it at low water spring tides, and 3½ to 5 fathoms close around it, and bears N.W. ½ W. from Square-topped rock, Hirasé, distant 2¼ cables.

Malacca Strait.—Intended light on Pulo-Pisang.—With reference to Notice to Mariners, No. 80, dated 28th June, 1876, on the construction of a lighthouse on Pulo-Pisang, Malacca Strait, information has been received from the Government of the Straits Settlements that the construction of the lighthouse on Pulo-Pisang is for the present delayed.—Hydrographic-office, Admiralty, January, 1877.

Summary of News from the Far East.

CHINA.

PEKING.

A memorial from the Manchu General at Jeh-ho, in the Peking Gazette of the 14th November, refers to the advance of Chinese emigration into Tartary, which has been so often testified to by travellers. The Imperial hunting-grounds have been encroached upon by squatters, whole villages having sprung up in places. It is wisely recognised that "the mischief is now past repairing, for to eject people who have been on the land for some ten years would be an act not compatible with the Imperial benevolence." In fact, as the dynasty is past its hunting days, there is no object in excluding settlers from the land. The squatters, however, have done far worse than settle on the land. The memorialist found hills which were once covered with trees, now stript of timber, and he will be wise if he makes stringent rules for replanting and for the preservation of what remains a rigorous feature in the regulations which he proposes. There is no doubt that the system pursued by the Chinese emigrants is contributing greatly to the dessication and ruin of the country. Thirty years ago, Huc testified to the process and to its results in the following words:—

The Chinese began to penetrate into this country about the middle of the seventeenth century; and at this time the country was still magnificent—the mountains were crowned with fine forests, and Mongol tents were scattered over the valleys among the richest pastures. For a very trifling payment the Chinese obtained leave to cultivate the soil; and by degrees the Tartars were driven out, and forced to seek elsewhere a subsistence for their flocks. The face of the country now soon became entirely changed. The trees were cut down; the prairies burnt; the new cultivation rapidly exhausted the fertility of the soil; and it is to their devastating system, perhaps, that we must attribute the irregularity of seasons that now desolates the country.

The Gazette of the 15th Nov. contains a memorial from Ting Jih-chang, applying again for permission to retire, on the plea of ill-health and the onerous nature of his duties. It is always difficult to know the exact meaning of these applications, which are very often the result of some political intrigue, and it is not at all unlikely that Ting was merely forestalling complaints which his rigorous dealing with the officials in his province are sure to excite against him. It is a very moot point with the Chinese how far Ting's reforming efforts are sincere. He did not bear an immaculate reputation during his early career in this province; but it is possible that he may have "made his pile," and be willing now to assume the role of a puritan. If so, he has an ample field for his exertions; for the same Gazette contains a memorial rigorously denouncing the magistrate of a district in Formosa, who, appointed in the stead of a man dismissed for extortion, has proved more extortionate than his predecessor. Where the latter squeezed $5,000, this man took $10,000, and this sum, as Ting remarks, when it comes to be wrung out of the people, is doubled twice over.

A memorial from the Governor-General of Fuhkien, in the Gazette of the 19th November, describes the means taken to relieve the distress caused in that province by the floods, fires and typhoon which have visited it during the past year. So much remains to be done to repair damages and meet possible claims for relief, that it is begged the contributions from Fuhkien to other provinces (? Kansuh) may cease till the present hard times have been tided over.

A sum of $300 has been contributed by the foreign residents in Peking to save some of the starving poor in Shantung. The subscription paper is still going round. The appeal for help has been made by the Rev. W. N. Hall, of the Methodist New Connexion Mission, Tientsin. The numerous converts of that mission at Laou-ling, in Shantung, are among the sufferers. Many of the people are eating leaves, roots, and the bark of the elm. These have long been known in North-China to possess nutritious qualities, and to form a resource in times of famine.

TIENTSIN.

The correspondent of the North China Daily News writes as follows :—

The last few days have been very cold, and the river is full of floating ice. Unless a change comes in the weather, the river must close very soon. The Millet and Sin Nanzing left Taku on the 10th December; they are thought to be our last steamers. Lovers of the exercise and art of skating are making use of the numerous ponds on the plain, which now present a fine surface for the shining steel. The river was freezing so rapidly at Taku on the 13th December that the Appin had to leave without her papers, to avoid being frozen in.

Three gunboats are now lying abreast the Settlement, viz., the Surprise (French), Curlew (British), Cyclops (German), while further up the river, near the S.E. corner of the city, two Chinese war-vessels have gone into winter quarters. The river is clear of junks, the gunboats are dismasted and "housed in," i.e., covered over with reed mats to shield the upper deck and passage ways from the fierce winter winds; and altogether a spirit of quietude seems to have settled upon our community, as it arranges for its annual hibernation.

It is reported that instructions have been sent to the magistrates of all the cities in Chihli province to supply the destitute in their jurisdiction with food. And we are informed that H.E. the Viceroy is feeding over 1,000 destitute persons daily, who have taken up their quarters at the back of his yamen, in temporary huts, made generally of reed mats.

Soldiers are kept on night duty parading the streets, to guard against burglary and incendiarism. The number said to be thus employed is about 1,000, in the city and suburbs. Of late we have heard of no disturbances.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 22nd December; the French mail from London Nov. 3 was received on the 20th December. The North China Herald contains the following summary of news :—

A special general meeting of the shareholders in the Union Steam Navigation Company has been held, for the purpose of passing the final accounts, and to transact such other business as was necessary for the termination of the Company. The statement of accounts showed that there were Tls. 4,144 to the credit of the Company in the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank. Tls. 2,509 were apportioned for dividend at the rate of Tls. 1.32 per share, to be payable on and after the 19th inst.; and a motion was passed authorising the agents to wind up the Company. An item of Tls. 472 of unclaimed dividends was placed under their control, and any balance remaining on December 3, 1878, they are to retain as compensation for their labours.

The trial of Thomas Henry Brown, charged with the attempted robbery of the Hupeh's treasure, has been held at the U.S. Consulate-General, before Mr. J. C. Myers, and two Associates. The prisoner, being found guilty, was sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment with hard labour. William Edwards, who is also charged with being implicated in the attempted robbery, has been brought before Mr. Mowat at the Police Court. The prisoner received the usual caution, and simply denied the charge. He was committed to take his trial before a jury.

The troubles of the Woosung Railway seem to be interminable. Hardly has the official opposition been allayed, when certain villagers endeavour to wreck a train because they disapprove the apportionment of the work, and a lunatic endeavours to test the force of impact of a train in motion. And now, apparently, the terms of sale to the Chinese are to be made the subject of misrepresentation. The Sinpao publishes a paragraph implying that the Taoutai has been coerced into agreeing to a far larger price for the railway than it was worth; that he has since had it surveyed by a qualified engineer, who estimates it at about half the agreed value; and that he has in consequence refused to pay the first instalment of the purchase money. There is one grain of truth in these statements, namely, that the Taoutai has had the line surveyed by a German gentleman from Japan, and it is possible that the latter may have estimated the value at Tls. 140,000, as the Sinpao states. Of this we have no knowledge, but we can affirm that that estimate is very erroneous, that there was no pressure whatever exercised in fixing the amount of purchase-money, and that, so far from showing any intention to retreat from the agreement, the Taoutai has promised to pay the first instalment in a few days, and the second at a definite period afterwards. The agreement made by Mr. Mayers with the Viceroy provided that the amount to be paid "for the land, permanent way, rolling-stock, machinery, stations, and all other claims whatsoever, should be ascertained by an investigation of accounts in detail: for which purpose Her Britannic Majesty's Consul and the Taoutai of Shanghai should each nominate two merchants of proper standing and responsibility." And though the formal Committee of arbitrament was not appointed, because both sides elected to leave the terms of settlement very much in the hands of Mr. Mayers—delegates from the Taoutai had full access to the books and accounts before the agreement was concluded. After the sum of Tls. 285,000 had been fixed by Mr. Mayers and the two officials who were sent from Peking to assist in the negotiations, the Taoutai further deputed a foreign actuary of high standing, and two Chinese officials, assisted by native interpreters from the C.M.S.N. Co.'s office, to examine the books and verify the statement of accounts on which the agreement was based. The Chinese were perfectly satisfied at the time, and the Foreigner wrote to H.B.M.'s Consul strongly affirming the fairness of the settlement. It is well that these facts should be made public to the Chinese, in contradiction of the unfair statement of the Sinpao.

The Very Rev. Dean Butcher has delivered a lecture before the members of the Young Men's Christian Association, at their room in Nanking-road, on the subject of "The Religious Beliefs of Ancient Greece." There was a large attendance, despite the rainy weather. The Rev. Dr. Nelson presided. It is scarcely necessary to say that the lecturer treated his subject in a very able and instructive manner. He was listened to with undivided attention; and after the lecture short addresses in further elucidation of the subject were delivered by the Revs. Muirhead, Roberts, Thomas, and Mr. Black, each of whom complimented the lecturer upon the way in which he had treated so broad and difficult a subject. At the close the Dean was awarded a hearty vote of thanks.

The Amateur Dramatic Corps have achieved a great success. A performance of Society was given before a full house, and was highly appreciated. The parts were cleverly rendered, and the fact that the audience insisted by their determined applause on the raising of the curtain after each act is the best proof that they thoroughly enjoyed the entertainment.

The Sinpao speaks of the probable opening of coal-mines at Nan-shaou, on the northern border of the Kwang-tung province, and says there is water communication from thence to Canton.

Mr. Davenport set out last week en route for Chinkeang, Soochow, Changchow, and other towns, to see that the proclamations regarding the Chefoo Convention are properly posted.

Messrs. Bisset and Co. report as follows upon the Share Market :—

There has been more business done this week than the previous one. We note a decline in Bank shares, partly in consequence of a fall in exchange on Hong Kong; and an advance in Yangtsze shares. H. and S. Bank: There was a forced sale on the 18th Dec. at 20 per cent. premium and exchange 72. Shares have since changed hands at 22 per cent. premium, and the same exchange, at which the market closes quiet. S. S. N. Co.: A number of shares have been placed at Tls. 67½ for 31st January. There are sellers at Tls. 66 cash, and buyers at Tls. 65. Yangtsze Insurance Association: Shares have been sold at Tls. 615, 617½, and 620. North-China Insurance Co.: Shares are inquired for. Other stocks are quiet.

The Celestial Empire supplies the subjoined items of intelligence :—

Despatches of much importance have been received from Peking. We hear that the German Consul has informed the various hongs of his nationality that, from the beginning of February next, all drawbacks will be cashed by the Customs on presentation, instead of being simply accepted in payment of duties as heretofore; with this reservation, that the time during which they will be valid is fixed at thirty-six months. It is also said that likin taxes on foreign goods are to be entirely abolished. This comes, we believe, from the German Legation.

A brief statement of the present position of the Margary Memorial Fund may be of interest. Subscriptions deposited in the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank amount to about $1,200, besides which there are about $340 in course of collection. Friends in England have been communicated with, both with reference to subscriptions and designs for a suitable memorial. At the Committee meeting on Saturday it was decided to wait until answers could be received before calling a meeting at which the Committee could report progress. The Committee have been favoured with several designs, some of great merit, and beg to express their thanks to those gentlemen who have spent so much time in elaborating them. The plans will be laid before a general meeting of subscribers in due course.

There are fresh rumours afloat in the North respecting the advanced guard of Tso's army. It is said that this detachment, which, as our readers know, consists of Manchus, under a Manchu general, has suffered some reverses—somewhere this side of the Hindoo Koosh; but we cannot verify the spot from this rather vague description by several degrees of latitude and many meridians of longitude; we must wait for fuller information. Something more tangible is sure to leak out before long. The last definite advices which reached us about the Manchu army were to the effect that it had succeeded in recapturing Urumtsi; and that was many weeks ago.

A very successful effort has been made on the part of some Chinese ladies to raise funds for the relief of the starving poor in the north in the way of a fancy bazaar. The net receipts were $182.45, and after all expenses are cleared there will probably be $100 to send north. Such practical sympathy is indeed deserving of all praise.

Our Chefoo correspondent writes:—The Germans are opening a new port up here at Ta-koo-shan, lying midway between Talien-wan and the Korean boundary. This will be the future market for Piece Goods, and as such will militate against the prosperity of Newchwang.

Until the 18th December the import market continued quiet, with importers anxious to realise in order to secure the improved rate of sterling exchange, but on that date a weaker tendency in exchange produced still more desire to sell, and holders submitted to a decline in currency prices for cash, which brought Chinese speculators into the market, and rather extensive settlements have since been reported. Business in tea has been extremely quiet. With regard to silk the following is the latest report:—

Rather more inclination has been shown to do business, but the almost hourly rise and fall in exchange has precluded any important transactions. Nearly 1,000 bales are reported purchased, amongst which are Donkey chop Nos. 3 and 3½, at Tls. 585 and 565; Incense chop Nos. 3 and 3½, at Tls. 575 and 555; Blue Peacock "Zing-ling" and "Tun-ling" at Tls. 550 and 530; Dancing Bear Nos. 1, 2, and 3, at Tls. 535, 520 and 505; Pagoda No. 2, at Tls. 532½; K.F.S. Beautiful Woman No. 2, at Tls. 525; "Say-ling" at Tls. 510; S.S.S. Dollar chop at Tls. 480, and Chin-uen-sing's "Gna-ling" and "Kin-ling" Kahing Taysaams at Tls. 495 and 480 per picul, shows a considerable fluctuation in the proportionate tael price according to the rate at which it was possible to settle exchange. Tsatlees are very firmly held; Koofongsing will not sell his chop thirds under Tls. 610; for Blue Elephant the asking price has risen to Tls. 550 to 555. Market silks are almost exhausted and common Tsatlee is not to be had within Tls. 460; some 150 bales of re-reels have been taken at Tls. 530 to 540 for middling cargo, but coarse silks generally remain quite neglected. Hardly any arrivals are reported during the week, and the unsold stock has decreased to 21,000 bales.

We hear that Feng Taoutai has received additional honours lately, and that from the sixth of the present moon he will be entitled to the decoration of the scarlet button. This mark of favour is said to be in acknowledgment of his valuable services as manager of the Kiang-nan Arsenal.

The Charybdis is towing the Lapwing from the place of her disaster; both vessels may be expected here very shortly, when the Lapwing will refit.

NINGPO.

A correspondent of the Celestial Empire writes as follows:—

The reading-room of the Ningpo Book Club was well filled on the 15th Dec., to hear the second lecture of the Winter series, by Mr. Barchet, M.D., the subject being "Wurtemberg, or Life in South Germany." The Rev. J. Leyenberger was the chairman of the evening, and having made some appropriate remarks on the surprising development of German influence of late years, and paid a tribute to the genius of M. Bismark, he introduced the lecturer of the evening. Dr. Barchet confined himself chiefly to sketches of Swabian life and character, but also dilated in a pleasant and entertaining way upon German matters in general, including the military and school systems, and gave some account of the typical "German student," and other interesting and amusing personages. At the close of the lecture the Rev. Fred. Galpin proposed a vote of thanks to the lecturer, which was carried by acclamation, and Dr. Lord proposed a similar compliment to the chairman.

FOOCHOW.

The Foochow Herald has the following:—

We learn that Ting Futai has ordered the arrest of several men concerned in depredations on the Mamoi Telegraph line. One of the culprits is in custody, but some reluctance is, we understand, shown by the district officials to carry out Ting's commands in regard to the arrest of the others. The man already captured is a blacksmith by trade, and he is charged with having stolen wire with which he manufactured a quantity of nails. It is believed that the high authorities are really determined to take extreme measures in this instance, so as, if possible, to intimidate villagers. But after all, these poor people, are not so deserving of censure as the mandarins and gentry, by whom they were encouraged in the first instance.

The gunboats Alpha and Beta were handed over to the provincial authorities on the 19th December. The English crews were at the same time paid off, and shipped, per steamship Namoa, to Hong Kong. It is reported that the Chinese officials are rather proud of these vessels, and they may well be so. But, a little bird whispers that the twenty-six ton guns are not in high favour with the Imperial artilleryman, although their mechanism is greatly admired. It is probable that in certain quarters the guns are really regarded as an acquisition to the infant navy, though in the hands of their new owners and under present conditions they are not likely to be of any service. The Alpha has arrived, and the Omega of this new-born extravagance is already in our mind's eye.

A recent case of kleptomania has created much excitement and not a little ebullition of feeling in Cantonese circles. A Canton boy, lately in the employ of a foreign resident, "requisitioned" various articles of clothing, the property of his master, and was in consequence handed over to the authorities by H.B.M.'s Consul for punishment. This greatly shocked the preconceived ideas of certain compradores and other "gentry," who regarded the matter as of trivial importance—involving no very great departure from "old custom." These virtuous defenders of Cantonese perquisites and dignity insisted upon the immediate liberation of their countryman, and the Taoutai, bending to their blandishments, actually liberated the thief! We believe that the affair is now a subject of discussion between H.B.M.'s Consul and the Chinese authorities; and we hope that these Cantonese "gentry" will be taught that they are not above the law.

Certainly the City of Foochow may this year be called the City of Desolation. The devastating floods early in June would of themselves have stamped this year as a most unfortunate one, and when added to the wholesale destruction of life and property, not only in the city and suburbs but for many miles round, it really seems, as the natives remark, that the Fung Shui is "too muchee angly." The floods were followed last month by one of the most devastating fires that ever occurred in the suburbs. Aided by strong wind at the time, all efforts to extinguish it were fruitless, as the direction of the flames shifted from time to time. On the 18th inst. another fire broke out on the left bank of the river, which, though smaller in extent than the previous one, yet from its intense fierceness and glare, and happening as it did at night, seemed at one time likely to rival its predecessors. Fortunately, its ravages were confined to the boat-building yards, containing large stacks of timber, and some hundreds of small wooden houses and sheds. The origin of this fire is said to have arisen from the infatuated practice of burning "joss paper," not only out of season but out of place. A boat-building yard, lumbered with chips and shavings, with a strong N.E. wind blowing, is hardly a safe place to allow lighted paper to fly about in. It may be, however, that our native friends partake more of the fatalism of worshippers of Mahomet than of the venerable Buddha. In China, and possibly to a larger extent in Foochow than elsewhere, the tenements burnt and actual property destroyed at any time are comparatively small, and a new suburb speedily arises on the ashes of the old one. Strange as it may seem, several of the houses destroyed are now nearly rebuilt.

Messrs. Westall, Galton and Co.'s Tea Letter of 23rd December says:—

During the past few days buying has very materially decreased, and the total business of the week is considerably under that last reported Congou: The settlements have been composed of the low to preferable common grades, and prices do not show any change on late quotations. The nominal stock is at present 29,350 chests, but the actual quantity on offer is probably much smaller. The market is entirely cleared of all the better descriptions, and the season is fast drawing to a close. Souchong: No transactions to report. Oolong: Three small chops, amounting to 114½ chests, have been taken at Tls. 18 short. Flowery Pekoe: No transactions to report. Scented Teas: No stock. The export to Great Britain and the Continent of Europe amounts to 50,476,607 lbs., against 63,094,100 lbs. To the Colonies, 15,730,202 lbs. against 15,099,603 lbs. To America, 665,141 lbs., against 974,665 lbs. at the same time last year.

The draft of the proposed regulations for the Municipal Council has been published. All land renters and all taxpayers over $5 per annum are to have a vote in the election of the Council, which is to consist of five members. Disputes between ratepayers and others with the Council are to be submitted to a special Court, consisting of three persons annually elected by the Consular body in consultation with the local authorities, whose decision shall be binding.

HONG KONG.

The French mail brings dates from the above port to the 28th December.

The annual regatta took place on the 23rd and 24th December, and is pronounced to have gone on very successfully, though there was "an absence of that enthusiasm which characterised regattas in old days." The P. and O. steamer Malacca was the flagship; and among those present were H.E. the Governor and Miss Kennedy, the latter awarding the Ladies' Purse amidst much cheering.

The Public Gardens continue to improve under the active superintendence of Mr. Ford, the Government gardener. He has recently issued a complete catalogue of the plants in both the gardens.

The Chinese steamer Fu-Yew ran into a junk, when approaching Hong Kong, and cut it completely in two, of course sinking it on the spot. Those who were taken from on board alleged that two of their number had been drowned, but subsequently said that only one had been lost. They also said they had a valuable cargo on board, but this is denied. No doubt the desire of the owners of the junk is to make their claim against the steamer as heavy as possible.

A meeting of the Portuguese community was held on the 27th December, at the Club Lusitano, to consider the best means of receiving the newly-appointed Governor and Bishop of Macao on their arrival (then expected) by the French mail steamer; and a committee, consisting of Messrs. J. J. dos Remedios, J. A. Baretto, D. Noronha, F. A. Gomes, J. A. Remedios, and M. C. do Rozario, was appointed. There has not been a bishop resident in Macao for upwards of twenty years.

The Daily Press contains the following items :—

The United States flag-ship Tennesse left Japan for Hong Kong on the 17th December, and may be expected here at any moment. It is rumoured that Admiral Reynolds will proceed to Siam in the Ashuelot soon after his arrival in this port, presumably on account of the lapses of the late American Consul at Bangkok. The Australian Colonies have been temporarily attached to the cruising ground of the Asiatic Squadron, and it is said that Admiral Reynolds will shortly proceed thither in his flagship, being, we believe, the first visit of an American man-of-war to those waters.

An inquest was held at the Old Civil Hospital, upon the body of J. Samulin, seaman on the Russian ship Vanadis. From the evidence of the captain and carpenter it appears that between two and three A.M. on the 21st Dec. deceased was on watch, and upon the captain coming on deck and calling out for him, he suddenly jumped up and fell down the main hatch. He was sent to the Civil Hospital, where he died on the 24th. Dr. Wharry's evidence went to show that his internal organs were much diseased, and that the shock to the system was the cause death. The jury returned a verdict of "Accidental death."

An entertainment given in the Temperance Hall, Stanley-street, was the nearest approach to a failure of any of the performances yet given in connection with this institution. Generally speaking, these entertainments are very enjoyable, but the bill of fare consisted simply of a rather mediocre magic lantern performance, with a few minutes' amusement at the close, caused by the awarding of the prizes for the best and worst conundrums. The one adjudged the best was "What grounds are there for supposing that Pope Hennessy is a regular Turk? None, except that he is the new boss for us (Bosphorus)." The humourous remarks of the gentleman who had been deputed to present the prizes—each a teapot—were evidently appreciated and enjoyed. The entertainment lasted barely an hour.

The early Military Service at eight A.M. on Christmas Day was fully choral, the choir being composed of about sixty voices, among whom were twenty ladies. The Military Chaplain, Rev. W. H. Baynes, intoned, and the responses were sung throughout. The Te Deum was chanted to three or four different chants and went very steadily, the Benedictus to a double chant (anonymous). The Anthem was the "Hallelujah Chorus," from the Messiah, and considering the difficulty of getting voices to sound with any effect in the Cathedral Chancel, it was very fairly sung. The Kyrie (under initials) was sung at the Ante-Communion Service, the ladies' voices being effective, especially at the 10th response. The hymns were "Adeste Fideles" and "Hark the Herald," the latter being taken in unison. The band of the 28th Regiment accompanied the choir, but was rather too powerful, especially in the "Hallelujah Chorus," otherwise most efficient. It was regretted that the organ could not be used for the occasion, but it was found that the instruments, through some peculiarity, could not be tuned to the organ, although this has to be done in large orchestras in England.

The subscription in aid of the widow and children of the late Inspector O'Brien is progressing satisfactorily. The subscription list at the club is headed by his Excellency the Governor and some of the principal Government officials, and has been signed by nearly all who have seen it. It is hoped that the amount realised will be sufficient to provide a small annuity for the widow.

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

—o—

MANILA.

The Straits Times translates the following items of intelligence from Manila newspapers :—

During the closing week of the month of November, a hurricane prevailed throughout the southern portion of the Philippine Archipelago for several days, with more or less severity. Detailed accounts of the ravages of the hurricane are to be found in the Diario and Comercio, from which it appears that the destruction of houses, domestic animals, standing crops, and trees, from the combined action of the wind, rain, and flood was immense. The loss of human life was also very great, eight or ten persons being drowned in Cebu, and a considerable number in Isla de Negros, and elsewhere.

The Diario of the 16th December announces that Don Jose Paulin has been appointed civil and military Governor of the new settlement of Sulu, and that the paddy and tobacco crops in several of the Philippine provinces were then suffering very greatly from drought.

Several slight shocks of earthquake were felt at Manila during the fortnight ending the 16th December.

SAIGON.

The Saigon Independent, commenting upon an article which appeared in the Saturday Review, says :—

"In this article we are praised for our great efforts in past times to colonise America and India, and on the other hand it criticises our persistency for reproducing in all our colonies our habits and our institutions. It also states that we are possessed of many good qualities for colonising or developing the resources of foreign countries. To this we will say nothing; we will admit voluntarily that we are a little behind the English and Dutch in this respect; but when our contemporary goes on to say, that we follow in Tonquin a policy of jealousy and proscription he is far from the truth. In endeavouring to show this the Saturday Review has removed from this article that impartiality which distinguishes the English publications when treating on foreign politics. We do not deny that the first project of a route into Western China found its birth in the head of an Englishman. The English have for a long time coveted the commerce of the vast country which is included under the name of Western China, perhaps even that of Yunnan, and we admit that our Government has also coveted, on its part, the immense resources and the commerce of this latter province. There is nothing more natural than that it should do so. In that our Government has endeavoured to open a route giving access to Yunnan, that Dupuis was the first to discover this route, which many persons had sought in vain before him, we do not see anything which merits the acrimonious words pronounced on our policy in this article. It is to be desired that our colonial policy may be a little more active than it has been, marching side by side with that of other Powers; we should then see other results than those obtained by our last negotiations with the Court at Hué. The English believed at one time that, following our habitual energy when we entered on an affair, especially one of such importance as that of opening Tonquin, we should endeavour to push it forward vigorously to the end. But the result in this case has shown the contrary, and one has good reason to say that in this matter we have departed from our usual vigour, and in presence of what power? The Annamese Government! which in the face of our late disasters has come to look upon this policy only as a sign of our feebleness. Our policy has never been and never will be that proclaimed by the Saturday Review. The France of the future will always be as the France of the past, great and generous, repudiating all that is selfish or mean. If the English succeed in opening their route by Burmah we will be the first to congratulate them; if we succeed on our side to open the route via Tonquin we are certain that this circumstance will not change one iota the sentiments of the English people generally with respect to us.

Mr. August Bauermeister and Mr. Gustav Nissle have been admitted partners in the firm of Behre and Co., which now consists of Mr. Georg Niederberger, Mr. Emil Saltzkorn, and the aforesaid gentlemen.

Messrs. Behre and Co.'s Market Report is as follows :—

Supplies both of old and new grain Rice are scarce, and prices in consequence have ruled rather firm. Old Rice, although not in much inquiry, has fully maintained its value, and may be quoted at $1.37 = (5/2½ per cwt. f.o.b.). Of new grain extensive purchases have been made on time delivery; we quote to-day $1.51 = (5/8½ per cwt. f.o.b.) for ready grain, $1.50 = 5/8 per cwt. f.o.b.) on two weeks' and $1.47 = (5/7 per cwt. f.o.b) on a month's time. Exports during the last month are : To China 4,974 tons, to Singapore 655 tons, to Java 5,577 tons and to South America 655 tons. The tone of the Piece Goods market is somewhat firmer, but the looked for demand, usual at the beginning of the Rice season, has not set in as yet.

BATAVIA.

General Diemont reports from Atchin on the 6th December that the occupation of Simpang Olim had made such a great impression in the neighbouring country that the Rajahs of Telok Semawe and Klumpang Dua had personally visited a Dutch man-of-war, an occurrence that had not happened previously on the North coast except at Pedir. Matters were quiet at Pedir. Little of importance of a military nature had happened in Atchin. Habib Abdul Rachman having written a letter to Tunku Kadli inviting him to join the war party, the latter refused to do so, and declared that he would not acknowledge Tunku Daud, the new Sultan, and that he did not consider the war as "prang sabil ullah (holy war)," because the Hollanders did not fight against religion, but, on the contrary, respected it in the already submitted districts. The arrival of Chinese coolies from Penang was going on regularly, 128 having arrived at Atchin since General Diemont's previous report. These coolies were chiefly employed in improving the means of communication. Owing to the continuous labouring in the soil the rate of disease was however very high, and sometimes reached 50 per cent. The steamer Blue Ball had been bought for $10,000 for service at Atchin. During the fortnight ending with the 6th December the weather had been less changeable, and there was perceptibly less rain.

Unofficial advices received by the Straits Times from Atchin announce the arrival there of the two British officers sent to take a look at the operations about to commence; they are to be attached to the Staff. A correspondent there states that the N.I. Government had entered into a contract with an architect at Singapore to supply a wooden hospital building to be placed on the hills at Lamnrong (Atchin). It is to be completed within a year, and to cost $100,000.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

The present French mail brings advices from this port to the 4th January; the French mail from London Dec. 1 was received on the 1st January. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times:—

The following is the official report of the proceedings of the Legislative Council at the meeting held on the 29th December:—

The Hon. Mr. Justice Ford, on his appointment as Acting Judge of Penang, is sworn in as a member of the Legislative Council. The minutes of the last meeting are read and confirmed. The Attorney-General, by command of the Governor, lays upon the table the following papers:—Letter of the Hon. W. H. Read respecting the arrangement recently made for the confederation of certain States on the Muar River. Reports of the Chinese interpreter and the superintendent of police on the recent Chinese riots at Singapore.

On the motion of the Attorney-General, the Distress Bill is recommitted, and a further amendment having been made, the Bill is read a third time and passed, on the motion of the Attorney-General, seconded by the Acting Judge of Penang. On the motion of the Attorney-General, the Crown Suits Bill is recommitted, and a further amendment having been made, the Bill is read a third time and passed, on the motion of the Attorney-General, seconded by the Acting Judge of Penang. On the motion of the Attorney-General, seconded by Mr. MacArthur, the surplus supply Ordinances Repeal Bill is read a third time and passed.

The Attorney General introduces a Bill to amend Ordinance No. V. of 1873, and moves that it be read a first time, which is seconded by the Auditor General and agreed to. On the motion of the Attorney-General, seconded by Mr. Read, the standing orders are suspended, and the Bill is read a second time. The Bill is committed, reported with amendments, and on the motion of the Attorney-General second, by the Acting Judge of Penang, is read a third time and passed.

An inquest has been held on the bodies of two Chinese, who were shot by the police at the New Market Station during the riot on the 15th December. From the evidence it appears that at 9.30 A.M. a large number of Chinese attacked the police at the New Market Station. The small body of police there finding themselves in danger at first fired several shots into the air, but this, instead of causing the Chinese to retire, had the opposite effect, and they came as far as the door of the Station, throwing bricks and whatever they could get hold of at the police. One of the bricks that was thrown knocked down a police constable, and the sergeant in charge and the other police constables were also hit with bricks at the same time, thrown by this mob. The sergeant then gave the order to fire direct at them, when two were killed and one wounded. On the arrival of Inspector Richards with more police the mob dispersed. From the evidence of Dr. Anderson the deaths in both cases were caused by gun-shots wounds, and must have been instantaneous. A verdict of "justifiable homicide" was returned. At the conclusion of the inquest the jurors unanimously agreed to the following resolution:—

We, the Jurors, are unanimously of opinion that the police under Sergeant Dadameah, at the New Market Station on the 15th December, 1876, behaved with great circumspection, and also showed great forbearance towards the Chinese rioters in the manner in which they carried out their duties.

A fire, which eventually caused the destruction of twenty-six houses, broke out on the evening of the 29th December in the Malay quarter of Capong Kapore. The flames spread with alarming rapidity, owing to a strong breeze blowing at the time. The police, with the fire-engine, under Major Dunlop, were quickly on the spot, and greatly contributed to the prevention of the extending of the conflagration. The houses burnt were all roofed with attap. Fortunately, no one met with serious injury, although in one or two instances, women and children had only a narrow escape from being burnt.

H.M. steamer Ringdove, Commander Singleton, anchored in the roads on the 27th December, from Hong Kong, en route homewards. The Detached Squadron, under the command of Rear Admiral Rowley Lambert, C.B., took its departure the same day for Plymouth, via the Cape of Good Hope.

The Governor, accompanied by Captain Paton, A.D.C., paid a visit on the 26th Dec. to H. I. C. M.'s screw corvette Yang Woo, Capt. P. Luxmore, R.N., lying in the roads, and was saluted with seventeen guns, which salute was immediately returned from Fort Canning.

The following notifications appear in the Government Gazette:—

The Secretary of State for the Colonies has been pleased to extend, with half salary, for nine months, commencing from the 10th December, the leave of absence granted to Sir Thomas Sidgreaves, Chief Justice, Straits Settlements.

The Governor has received a Warrant under the Royal Sign Manual for the appointment of Mr. James Ramsay MacArthur to be a Member of the Legislative Council.

THE P. AND O. COMPANY.

The annual dinner of the directors, commanders, and other officers of the P. and O. Company, held in terms of the will of the late Mr. Anderson, the founder of the Company's Good Service Fund, took place on the 1st inst., at their offices in Leadenhall-street. The Lord Mayor, Mr. Michie (Agent-General of Victoria), Mr. Campbell (Oriental Bank), and Mr. Purdy (Bank of South Australia) were amongst the guests present. Mr. FANE DE SALIS occupied the chair.

After the usual loyal toasts and the memory of Mr. Anderson had been drunk, the CHAIRMAN, in proposing "Prosperity to the Company," said he would offer a few remarks on its past and present history. Possessing a capital of £3,500,000, with a fleet equal in tonnage to that of the United States, and employing 17,000 men ashore and afloat, it was entitled to rank among the greatest shipping associations of modern times. Its formation dated back as far as thirty-seven years ago, when a union of the steam enterprise of London, Liverpool, and Dublin gave it existence. It soon assumed large proportions, and had responsible functions entrusted to it. Its mission from the first was a high one, for the conveyance of Her Majesty's mails was not the only duty confided to it. Commissioned to open out a highway of nations to the East, the duty devolved on their ships of diminishing the distance between England and India from four months to four weeks. The work allotted to them was to bring millions into closer relations with their rulers, and to become the means of extending our commerce, our empire, and our civilisation throughout the whole East. How these duties had been performed it was not for a director of the company to say. That task would rest with history. Some future Macaulay, in describing the effect of the inauguration of their steam lines, would speak of ancient kingdoms of the earth long isolated from the West, awakened from the trance of ages by the magic touch of steam. He would tell of commerce expanding under its auspices, and of England's rule over her approximated possessions established on surer and firmer foundations than before. But these were not the only services rendered by the company to the country. In the Crimean war their ships did good service to the State, and the flower of their fleet, the Himalaya, ceded at that period to the navy, still constituted one of the finest transports in Her Majesty's service. Then, again, in the Indian mutiny, their steamships, freely placed at the disposal of the Executive, rendered efficient aid in quelling that formidable insurrection. Last, not least, in the Abyssinian expedition they were called on to supply not ships alone, but that most necessary article in modern warfare—coal; and distinguished officers had admitted that the lesson given to King Theodore under the heights of Magdala, a lesson which struck terror into the hearts of the disaffected in India, must have been deferred but for the aid their establishments in the Red Sea were able to afford to Her Majesty's forces. Nor in glancing at the most prominent features in the past history of the company ought another public service to be omitted—a service rendered, not to England, but to an allied State. It would ever form a bright spot in the annals of the company that it had been permitted to them to be among the first to aid in restoring Venice to her past prestige by reopening for her ancient communications with the East, in the hope that this might prove the prelude to her again resuming her high position in the commerce of the world. So far he had spoken of the past history of the company, he would now say a few words as to its present and its future. He asked them to drink prosperity to the company; but some persons asserted there was no prosperity in store for it, and that under the influence of the opening of the Suez Canal this great undertaking had entered on a downward course. Such assertions he met with the strongest denial. It was true the opening of the Canal had been a great trial to them; it had reduced their profits, diminished their dividends, forced rigid economy on them, and it had besides imposed on them the costly obligation of reorganising and in part rebuilding their fleet. That work, however, successfully done, he had yet to learn why a company possessing some of the finest steamships in the mercantile marine of England should not retain the place its enterprise had so hardly won for it, in the carrying trade of the East. That trade, in lieu of diminishing, was fast expanding. If they turned to India, the commerce of that great empire was increasing more rapidly than most persons believed. In proof of this he would state a few facts. Three years ago the export of wheat from India was insignificant; last year it amounted to upwards of 200,000 tons. Ten years ago but 12,000 tons of jute were exported, but last year that quantity had exceeded 50,000 tons. Fifteen years ago the export of tea did not exceed 1,400,000 lb.; last year it amounted to 21,000,000 lb. This was not the time or place for statistics, he would therefore pass on to that other great empire—China, with its 400 millions of inhabitants, with which they had such close relations. Its population were eager for trade with the West; and what would be the proportion of its future commerce with the outer world when the opposition of its official classes had been over-ruled by the voice of the people, and the advancing tide of European enterprise was freely admitted to its shores. As to the South Wales ironmasters, ask the ironmasters of the North what they thought of the future of China in connection with their trade, and they would say they had read with the keenest interest the accounts of the late opening of its first railway; for they knew that when iron roads were well introduced into China, thousands—he might say hundreds of thousands—of tons of English iron must find their way there in European ships, and they would mark that this iron, according to the ordinary course of trade, would not be paid for in coin, but in articles of increased produce, which on its way home would again make freight for British ships. Nor in estimating the future of the commerce of the East, on which the prosperity of their company was based, ought those great colonies of the southern hemisphere — reserved as they were for high destinies—to be forgotten. Connected as he was with the Australian colonies, he claimed to know them well, and it was his conviction that some persons in that room would yet live to see the day when they would stand pre-eminent in the commerce of the East. Three months ago Sir Hercules Robinson, the Governor of New South Wales, delivered an admirable address at Albury, in the course of which he endeavoured to foreshadow the future commerce and population of Australia. He showed that according to the present rate of increase their population would in fifty years equal that of England, while in eighty years it would exceed that of the United States. In making this estimate he said with truth it might prove too low, as no person could exactly gauge the future flow of Australian emigration. At present it was small, but the protective tariff of America, restrictive as it was of intercourse with the rest of the world, was not favourable to emigration, the tide of which, repelled from its shores, would assuredly be diverted to Australia. Last year the emigration from Europe to America had declined 50 per cent., while Australian emigration had increased in a somewhat greater ratio. The direct route to Australia lay through the Canal, which shortened the distance by 3,000 miles, but he would ask M. de Lesseps's attention to the fact that solely owing to the prohibitive character of the tolls, not a single Australian ship had ever yet passed through the Canal. When the tolls were reduced steam-ships with emigrants would willingly use the Canal; and, the voyage being shortened one-half, a large emigration perhaps, equal to that which till lately prevailed between Europe and America, would ensue. In that case even the present generation might see Australia not only taking high rank in the commerce of the East, but admitted to a place in the councils of the world. With these facts before them there could be no doubt as to the future expansive character of Eastern trade, which would secure profitable employment for their ships and assure prosperity with success to the company. With the aid of the gentlemen who sat around him—men bound to the company by the strongest ties, most of whom he had himself seen enter the company's service in their youth, and who had known no other service than its own—they would not only secure success and prosperity for the company; they would do more, for they would deserve it.

The toast having been drunk with all the honours, several other toasts followed, including that of "The Lord Mayor and Corporation of the City of London," suitably acknowledged by his lordship, and the proceedings then terminated.

Naval and Military.

It is stated that the innovation of inviting young engineers trained in private workshops to compete for twenty vacancies in the Navy has ended in all but a total failure, notwithstanding that the ordeal of a preliminary examination had been considerably modified. About 140 commercial engineers sent in their names, of whom 100 presented themselves for examination. Eighty-three of the candidates retired as soon as they saw the examination papers. Seventeen began to work at the problems, but in the afternoon the number was further reduced to seven, who persisted to the end. But how many of these have passed with sufficient éclat to gain appointments as assistant engineers in the service remains to be seen.

A fine iron paddle-wheel tug steamer, for Her Majesty's service, was launched on the 31st ult., from the yard of Messrs. Laird Brothers, at Birkenhead. She was named the Sampson by Miss Jessie Laird. She is 128 ft. logn, 25ft. beam. and 14 ft. deep in hold, and will be fitted with two distinct pairs of diagonal oscillating engines, indicating collectively 860-horse-power, and driving feathering paddle-wheels. She is the third tug steamer built by the firm for the Admiralty during the last three or four years, and is an exact duplicate of the Malta, built in 1875, the success of which has led to this repetition of the order.

By permission of the Lords of the Admiralty a party of German officers and other German subjects, among them being a representative from Herr Krupp's gun manufactory, visited Chatham Dockyard on the 26th ult., and inspected the armour-plated ship Alexandra, over which they were conducted by one of the dockyard officials. The Alexandra was removed out of dock on Wednesday, and will leave Chatham on the 3rd inst. for the Mediterranean.

The iron screw troop ship Adventure, 2, 2,510 tons, 1,227-horse power, last employed on troop service in China, from which country she conveyed home the battalion of Royal Marines, is ordered to be removed from the repairing basin, and placed in one of the vacant docks at Chatham, where she is to be immediately broken up. Her machinery and engines have been removed out of her, and will be utilised for other vessels.

The T pier at the Royal Arsenal, Woolwich, has been damaged to the extent of about £70 by the Bergen steamship St. Olaf, from Colombo, running into it. The chief portion injured is the Royal hatchway, at which many distinguished personages have landed and embarked, and the new stanchions just erected by the Works Department to support the awning.

The commander's naval pension of £65 a year, vacant by the death of Retired Captain John J. Keeling, has been awarded to Retired Captain Frederick H. Stevens. A lieutenant's naval pension of £50 a year, rendered vacant by the demise of Retired Commander Arthur Kennedy, has been awarded to Retired Commander John G. S. Clark.

Commander W. M. Lang is about to leave the Royal Naval College to take temporary command of a Chinese gunboat, one of the two recently purchased in this country. He will take the vessel to China, and hand her over to the naval authorities at Foochow. Leave of absence to proceed on this foreign service is limited to six months.

Major-General Sir T. Pears, K.C.B., has resigned his seat as Military Secretary to the India-office. His successor is Colonel Allen Johnson, of the Bengal Staff Corps, late one of the Military Secretaries to the Indian Government.

WE understand that the Chinese Ambassador will have audience of HER MAJESTY this week, before the opening of Parliament.

ROBISON—On the 14th Dec., at Shanghai, John Springfield Robison.

ASSAULT ON ONE OF THE SERVANTS OF THE CHINESE LEGATION.

We regret to have to record an unprovoked assault upon the servant of one of the Attachés in the Chinese Legation. The complainant was walking down Oxford-street on Wednesday night, when the defendant, one Donovan, an Irish labourer, struck him violently on the back. The prisoner, who was drunk at the time, was sentenced by Mr Knox, the police magistrate, to two months' imprisonment with hard labour. The sentence is generally spoken of with approbation. Dr. Macartney officiated at the Police-court as interpreter, and the oath was administered to the Chinaman by his being called upon to break a saucer, and to declare that if he lied he hoped his soul might be destroyed as completely as the porcelain. This part of the proceeding has been the subject of a considerable amount of learned and antiquarian disquisition. The Telegraph, which upon this occasion has been evidently assisted by someone acquainted with Chinese ways, gives the story in the following rather doubtful "pidgin English:"—Mr. Chang Amaon, a retainer in the service of an Attaché to the Chinese Embassy, must have had last night a fine story to tell his friends. "One-day some-day," he in all probability said, "me leavy China-side; make-comey Fankweiside, longside English debbils, Lan-tun town. Me makey go one piecey walkee, longside um stleet, allo plopa. One piecey Fankwei debbilo hab catchee much dlinkee. He velly much dlinkee. He no can do. He comey longside me; makey one glate bobbely; makey me catchee one glate bang top-side. Me makey one glate bobbely; makey much glate ely. Take um longside one glate Jossman. Jossman he do Mandalin pidgin. Make one glate talkee. He say, 'What for make um poo' china-boy catchee big bang top-side? No can do so fashion!' Fankwei debbilo he go catchee much stick; he catchee velly much stick, galaw. Me much likee dat Fankwei Mandalin. He belongey smart inside, first chop, numpa one. He make dat Fankwei la-li-lung catchee stick. Maskee!"

OFFICIAL APPOINTMENTS.—Sir Brydges Powell Henniker, Bart., has been appointed Private Secretary to the Right Hon. George Sclater-Booth, M.P., President of the Local Government Board, in the room of Mr. Phillip Lutley Sclater, F.R.S., resigned. The Lords of the Admiralty have appointed the Hon. Charles Walters, Judge of the County Court of the County of St. John, New Brunswick, to be Judge of the Vice-Admiralty Court of that Province. Mr. George Earle Welby, now Attaché to the Legation at Buenos Ayres, is appointed a third Secretary in the Diplomatic Service.

FOREIGN CONSULAR APPOINTMENTS.—The subjoined appointments have received the approval of the Queen:—Mr. Benedict Row as consul for Cork and Queenstown for the Emperor of Austria. Mr. Paul Ludwig as consul for Aberdeen, Newburgh, and Stonehaven for the German Empire. Mr. Lewis P. Olds as consul at St. Helena and Mr. Fernando Gonzalez as consul at Gibraltar for the United States, and Mr. Alberto A. de Guerrico as vice-consul in London for Uruguay.

THE receipts on account of revenue from the 1st April 1876, when there was a balance of £5,119,587, to January 27 were £60,543,043, against £60,334,871 in the corresponding period of the preceding financial year, which began with a balance of £6,265,322. The net expenditure was £64,531,160, against £64,015,576 to the same date in the previous year. The Treasury balances on January 27 amounted to £1,329,851, and at the same date in 1875 to £1,753,994.

Mr. David Cazelles, engineer of second-class Marine, formerly of Cochin-China, has been appointed an officer of the Legion of Honour.

THE CHINESE EMBASSY.

THE date for the reception of the Chinese Ambassador by the QUEEN has not as yet been fixed; but the various arrangements connected with the establishment are being rapidly completed, and a Chinese Embassy in the conventional style will ere long become a fait accompli in London. The Ambassador and his suite, although naturally strange to the ways of a European country, are reported generally to fall into foreign customs with much more ease than would be generally imagined; their natural tact and cleverness coming to their aid where knowledge of our habits and etiquette are wanting. The subordinate members are also by degrees becoming sufficiently at home in their new sphere of existence to venture out in the streets of the foreign city which are so strangely different from those they are familiar with in their own country. With the timidity which is a natural instinct among the Chinese, they at first hesitated to go out at all; but they may now be often met with in the neighbourhood of Regent-street, though they find it more convenient to confine their wanderings to the dusk of the evening, when less attention is attracted to them than in broad daylight. The arrangements at the Embassy itself are all of a satisfactory character. On his recent official visit to Lord DERBY, his Excellency was driven to the Foreign-office in a suitable carriage and pair—rather a contrast to the official "chairs" at Peking, —and though a great deal that is Chinese is necessarily retained, the endeavour on the part of the Ambassadors is evidently to fall in, as far as they are able, with foreign customs, and to have as little as possible that is outré in the Embassy itself, or in the manner in which its business, either official or private, is conducted. The reserve with regard to the female portion of the establishment is, we understand, to a great extent retained; and it is evident, as we strongly suspected, that the lively correspondent of the Standard—a portion of whose communication we reproduced in our last—must have drawn very considerably upon his imagination in the description which he gave of "Lady KUO" in his amusing, if not over accurate, account. On the whole, we are afraid that those who look to the ornamental side of the Mission will be somewhat disappointed, and that it will be found to settle down into a comparatively prosaic and business-like establishment, with (as is to be expected) a dash of quaintness, but without any great amount of "Oriental splendour" and "Asian Mystery," such as might be a source of amusement to the dilettanti, or of interest to the antiquarian, though no doubt as the "Season" advances, both these elements will have their attractions.

POINTS OF CONTACT IN CHINA.

MANY of our readers will recollect that at the time when the question was discussed whether, under the Treaty of Tientsin, foreign merchants would be permitted to establish themselves in the interior of the country, Earl RUSSELL, who was then Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, enunciated the principle in one of his despatches that, with a view to preserving satisfactory and peaceful relations with China, it was undesirable that the points of contact should be multiplied. This principle was at the time questioned by many who had had practical experience in China, and who believed that our relations with the Chinese were likely to be improved in precise proportion as opportunity was afforded to the natives of that country to become more familiar with foreigners and their ways and objects. This view, which is proved to be correct by the experience of what has always resulted from the opening of new ports, is now so generally accepted that it is unlikely a similar error to that which was fallen into by Earl RUSSELL will be committed; and it is satisfactory to note that Sir THOMAS WADE, in the address which he made to the residents at Shanghai before leaving, expresses an opinion directly in favour of increasing rather than diminishing the number of the points of contact. "A multiplication of the points of "contact," he says, "by which the revenue of China will be "benefited, while her intercourse with the outer world is en-"larged, has appeared to me, in part at all events, to satisfy "the requirements to which I attach so much value." It is true that Sir THOMAS WADE was speaking only on the question of opening additional ports, while Earl RUSSEL dealt with the more delicate question of residing in the interior of the country. But it is clear that in the main the same principles apply to both questions; and it cannot be doubted that if it were possible to make arrangements by which foreign merchants would become established at some of the large trading centres in the interior of China upon a similar footing to that which they are upon at present at the ports, nothing would tend more to remove the old prejudices and barriers, which still stand in the way of foreign intercourse, and to put an end to the ignorance in which the large bulk of the people in China are plunged, as to all matters relating to foreigners and foreign nations—which want of information has been the real cause of nine-tenths of the difficulties with which, from time to time, we have had to deal.

JAPANESE FINANCE.

THE details which have recently been published with reference to the steps taken by the Japanese Government with a view to finally doing away with the liability which they incurred when some years ago they took steps to put an end to the independent sway of the Daimios, show that there is still great need to impress upon the Japanese the lesson which, with every interest in their progress, we have from time to time endeavoured to inculcate in these columns, namely, that the present Government should be careful to introduce further changes in such a manner that the alterations made will not needlessly clash with the old order of affairs, and will prove to be within the power of the authorities themselves fully to carry out. The measure above noticed is one of so important a character that it may well be feared lest the Japanese have not gone too far in burdening themselves with the responsibility which it involves. In a strictly financial point of view, the step appears to have been a good one; but it is still open to question whether it was wise to inaugurate a change of so much importance as the practical abolition of the Japanese aristocracy, merely with the object of obtaining financial relief from the effects of past extravagance. Stated in financial language, the step which has been taken amounts virtually to "buying out" the Daimios; that is paying them definite pensions for a series of years to represent the value of the revenues they have been receiving since the Japanese Government in 1868 took over their domains relieving them of the responsibility of military service and paying them one-tenth of their annual revenues in compensation. The present measure is thus a compensation of a compensation, and may be taken to be the prelude to the final abolition of the aristocratic system in Japan. No doubt there were grave reasons, so far as they went, to induce the existing Government to take this step. The reforms which have been introduced have been expensive; something was imperatively demanded to improve the state of affairs, and under all these circumstances it was not unnatural that the amounts paid for the support of an apparently useless class should have been grudged by Japanese Finance Ministers. A well-informed correspondent of The Times has, however, justly questioned whether this complete destruction of the aristocratic element in Japan may not prove a dangerous step. There is no doubt that the recent insurrection mainly resulted from this cause, and that such opposition should spring up can scarcely be considered surprising when "an "aristocracy which has existed for a thousand or fifteen "hundred years is swept away to atone for a decade of "extravagance, which ought long ago to have been checked." It appears, however, clear that the Japanese, like many other people, are not alive to the consolidating influence which a sound aristocracy may exert in a State, or aware to how great a degree the preservation of the liberties of the subject may in reality be dependent upon the existence of a class which superficially looked at seem antagonistic to individual freedom. In a purely financial point of view, also, the measure is one calling for very grave consideration. Although, to speak in commercial language, "the transaction is a good one," and is estimated to save the country immediately some £2,000,000 annually, in the meantime the Government incurs a liability of £28,000,000, to be redeemed in thirty years, and it will be a question whether this may not prove a very serious burden, and may not be simply putting off an evil day. It is to be hoped that the Japanese will be able to carry through the measure, but it will certainly prove to be one of some difficulty; and it is natural that the well-wishers of this energetic and enterprising country should look with some apprehension upon it. At the very least, it will not tend to raise the standard of Japanese credit in the Money Markets of the world, and this is a point of very great significance, and one which might, at a given time, be of vital importance.

THE RIOT AT SINGAPORE.

THE accounts which are brought by the mail last in, of the riot which took place in Singapore, in consequence of the establishment of a branch of the Post-office (under the management of a native firm) for the purpose of affording to the Chinese residents an easy means of remitting a portion of their earnings to their relations and friends in China, will, it is to be hoped, put an end to the Utopian ideas entertained by some, who are imperfectly acquainted with the subject, that it would be possible to put down the evil effects of Secret Societies by the introduction of some system of registration, or by other means calculated to bring them under direct government control. The details of the riot, as given in the last London and China Telegraph, show that the disturbance was entirely due to the working of one or more of these dangerous associations. The facts are very simple. Arrangements were made by the Postmaster-General with a Chinese firm to remit money in small sums to China at the same rates that had been paid to private individuals; but, under the impression—whether right or wrong remains to be seen—that they would be "squeezed," great opposition was felt by the Chinese in some directions, and this discontent was fanned by the Secret Societies into an open riot; in the course of which the mob attacked first the sub-post-office, and afterwards some of the police-stations; it becoming ultimately necessary, in order to restore order, for the police first to fire over them and then at them—three of their number being killed, and others wounded. This prompt action put an end to the rising, and no doubt a serious disturbance was prevented by it. Much as it is to be desired that we should rely upon moral rather than physical force in dealing with Asiatics, it is absolutely necessary to take prompt and decisive measures when once a riot has broken out. Hesitation in such a case is at once the most dangerous and the most cruel policy — that is, it is the course most likely to lead to a spread of the outbreak and to cause the loss of a larger number of lives than it is necessary to sacrifice if immediate measures be taken to suppress the rising. In the present instance the prompt action of the police effectually put a stop to what might otherwise have proved a very serious outbreak; and we make no doubt that the lesson will not be lost upon the misguided men who are disposed to be led to the commission of any act, no matter how desperate, by the headmen of the Hoeys. It is very satisfactory that LIM-AH-TYE, the head of the Teo-Chew Branch of the Ghee Hin Secret Society, has been sentenced to deportation; and others connected with these organisations have been bound over to keep the peace. It is needless to say that this affair has alienated from them the best advocates for temporising with these dangerous bodies; and it will probably be very long before anyone will again advise meeting them halfway, either by registration or by any similar act. The absurdity of such a course appears in an absolutely grotesque light, when it is considered that, if such a measure were put into practice, Mr. LIM-AH-TYE, the gentleman who has just been deported, would be one of those upon whom the Government would be mainly dependent for information as to the constitution, objects, and doings of the societies. It remains to be seen how far the Government or the Postmaster-General was wise in making any arrangement with a Chinese firm for the remittance of money. Such a step was very apt to open a door for squeezing, and was certain to lead to its being generally reported that squeezing would take place. The result of the attempt is in itself a good proof of the danger of relying upon Chinese co-operation in any duties which should be performed by the Government. There appears to be reason to believe that the Chinese firm to whom the "sub-post-office" was entrusted issued a threat on their own responsibility, to the effect that persons secretly forwarding letters would be prosecuted, and that this was one of the main causes of the rising. It is to be hoped this point will be carefully inquired into, and that the unsatisfactory outturn of the measure will be a warning to the Singapore Government that there is always great danger in according to natives a quasi official position such as will enable them to induce their fellow-countrymen to believe that they are entitled to exercise authority which they do not in reality possess. If it is not safe to do this with a "sub-post-office" the danger of doing so with Secret Societies may be readily conceived.

HONG KONG readers who may recollect the celebrated KWOK-A-SING Habeas Corpus case in that Colony, in which a suit was brought against the Attorney-General, the Hon. (now Sir) JULIAN PAUNCEFOTE, for wrongful imprisonment of the said KWOK-A-SING, who was placed in gaol to be handed over to the French authorities for piracy on the high seas, will be interested in the report of the proceedings before the Supreme Court of Appeal at Westminster, in which Mr. COBBETT claimed that Sir ROGER TICHBORNE should be brought out of gaol. The Chief Justice stated that there never was a more delusive view than that the legality of the conviction could be gone into on Habeas Corpus—precisely what was done (though the judgment was reversed on appeal) in the KWOK-A-SING case. Apparently following that precedent, Mr. COBBETT expressed his belief that he had a clear right to recover £500 against Lord BEACONSFIELD. It is only reasonable, if an Attorney-General can be "gone for" in this manner in Hong Kong, that a Prime Minister should be aimed at at home. Fortunately, however, the legal merits of the applications were regarded in a somewhat different light at Westminster to that in which they were looked upon in Hong Kong.

WE have much pleasure in stating that Mr. NG-CHOY, formerly Government interpreter at Hong Kong, who has been studying at Lincoln's Inn, has just been called to the Bar, and will take his departure for China to morrow by the American route. Mr. NG-CHOY is the first Chinese gentleman who has been called to the English Bar, and deserves much credit for the industry and perseverance which he has displayed.

THE appointment of Mr. H. KIÆR as Swedish Consul at Hong Kong, which has received the approval of the QUEEN, is officially gazetted. It will be recollected that this news was sent to Hong Kong by telegraph, and on its receipt the Swedish captains and residents there testified their respect to Mr. KIÆR by giving a dinner in his honour.

THE case brought by the Manager of the Agra Bank against Mr. MACCALL, which, as mentioned a short time back, was referred to a referee, is still going on. It is anticipated the proceedings and arguments will be concluded in about a week.

THE PERAK TROUBLES.

(MORNING POST.)

Since the termination of the war in Perak little or nothing has been heard of the condition of affairs in the Malayan Peninsula, and this may be taken as an indication that a season of tranquillity has succeeded the disturbances of 1875, and that good order prevails in the then unsettled districts. Recent news has conveyed the information that the Maharajah Lela and some of his accomplices have been tried and sentenced to death; but it is doubtful whether the sentence will be carried into execution, as the Sultan Abdoollah, under whose commission, it is stated, the trial was held, has been proved to have himself been in some measure implicated in the murder of Mr. Birch, which was the commencement of the outbreak. How this difficulty may eventually be surmounted it is scarcely necessary to speculate, but it seems not improbable that the Government of the Straits Settlements will incline to clemency. With the exception of a local emeute of the Chinese at Singapore, the result of dissatisfaction with some new postal regulations, they appear to have had nothing lately to disturb their serenity, and it might have been expected that they would have been so well pleased with a state of quiescence that they would have avoided any measures likely to lead to future trouble. But unfortunately the love of meddling in the affairs of the native States seems too strong to be resisted, and it has recently been displayed in the arrangement by the Governor of the Colony of a convention between the chiefs of six native States for securing the peace and tranquillity of the countries over which they rule. The States represented by these chiefs form part of the "Negri" "Sumbilan" or the "Nine States" lying to the north and east of Malacca, whose rulers were mixed up with, if they did not actually originate, the late disturbances in that part of the Peninsula. Having found themselves overmatched in the short struggle which then took place, these chiefs, whose territories consist of Sri Menanti, Johole, Moar, Jompole, Terachi, Gunong Passir, and Esnas, now express a desire to live in peace and behave well for the future, and, with that view, to form a Confederation under the supreme authority of the Chief of Sri Menanti, whom they will recognise as "Eam Tuan Besar," i.e., "The Great Ruler." They promise not to molest in any way the remaining States of the "Negri Sumbilan," namely, Rumbowe, Sunjie Ujong, and Jellabu, which hold aloof from the Confederation, and to give full liberty to all peaceful persons, whether Malays, Chinese, or others, to trade in their countries without interference. In another clause of the agreement the six chiefs express their "regret at the late disturbances which have happened in the Nine States," and are so kind as to pledge themselves that "those persons who have been friendly to the British Government during or since those disturbances shall be in no way molested." By the penultimate clause they agree that in case of any dispute or difficulty among their States which they are unable to settle they will refer for advice to the Maharajah of Johore. Such are the engagements contained in a document which the Eam Tuan Besar has signed on behalf of the confederate chiefs, and which was actually drawn up at Government House, Singapore, with the approval of Sir William Jervois. Whether the idea of this Confederation was his own, or whether it emanated from the Colonial-office, we cannot say; but, from whatever source this policy sprang, it is one that may, most probably will, hereafter prove to have been most injudicious by involving us in the squabbles of a number of native princes whose jealousy of each other is certain to lead to contention and all manner of mischief. In the first place, it is a great mistake to have recognised the Confederation at all, as no confidence can be placed in the promises of the chiefs, who will, no doubt, release themselves from their obligations whenever necessity, or rather convenience, urges them to do so. Again, the acknowledgment of the Chief of Sri Meranti as the Great Ruler (Eam Tuan Besar) of the Confederate States is wrong. He is really our own subject, morally unfit for the position in which he has been placed, and has not, in fact, the slightest claim to it. The Government of the "Nine States" was in former days under the control of the Sultans of Johore, of whom there is still a representative, one of the old blue blood, who has a positive right to these States, and should alone have been recognised by our Government as Eam Tuan Besar if they acknowledged anyone as the lawful bearer of that title. It is, moreover, certain that our upholding the man whom the six chiefs have thus delighted to honour will be very unpalatable to the rulers of the three States not included in this alliance, who, having stood firmly by us when the others were troublesome, will scarcely be pleased to see such signs of favour extended to them. The relations between these two groups of States will not be improved by the Confederation policy, which may be expected to arouse a spirit of irritation that must sooner or later lead to open hostility. Passing by the amusing concession contained in the fifth clause of the agreement, that security from molestations shall be extended to all persons in the six States friendly to our Government, we are contrained to draw attention to the sixth clause constituting the Maharajah of Johore the umpire in any dispute that may arise between the signatories of the Convention. This is unquestionably a most impolitic step, and one that should never have been countenanced by the Government of the Straits Settlements.

As a matter of policy the Maharajah should have been kept entirely apart from this Confederation, and have had nothing whatever to do with it. He is a most enlightened chief and a great favourite with the Government, but for that very reason his being made a higher authority than even the Great Ruler would be sure to excite envy and dislike amongst other chiefs, who would not be slow to give those feelings a practical form if opportunity offered. The position of the Maharajah cannot but be an awkward one. It is not to be imagined that his decisions will always meet the views of both parties to any dispute in which he may be called upon to exercise his office; sometimes neither side may be satisfied, and he must be prepared to support his ruling or see it ignored. The chiefs who have allied themselves by this agreement will ever be guided in their acquiescence in his decisions by their own selfish interests rather than by considerations of what will be for the general good, and will very soon repudiate their obligations to abide by the Maharajah's decree if it should not suit them to do so. If his Highness is to compel obedience by force of arms we may look forward to a chronic state of petty warfare on the Peninsula; if not, will the Straits Government take upon themselves the task of obliging the recusant chiefs to keep faith with each other and with them? If the idea is to lay upon the Maharajah the responsibility for any disturbance that may arise in these States subsequently to the ratification of the agreements between their rulers—in fact, to secure the preservation of tranquillity in the Peninsula without trouble or responsibility on our part, we fear it will not answer. The Maharajah of Johore should not have been compromised by being placed in the position of umpire, and the Straits Government would have done well not only to have discouraged, but to have refused to promote in any way, the agreement in question, which is calculated to do infinitely more harm than good.

GERMANY.

HAMBURG, JAN. 30.

Several of our Joint-Stock Companies have published their reports and balance sheets for the year 1876. The first issued have been those of the Commerce and Discount Bank and the Waaren Credit Anstalt. The former shows a net profit of m.1,062,211, after deduction of working expenses and rebates, and the directors propose to declare a dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. The report of the latter Company announces a net profit of m.475,695 for the past year, and the declaration of a dividend at the rate of 12 per cent. The Norddeutsche Bank in Hamburg declares a dividend of 8 per cent., and summons its shareholders to meet on the 24th of February. The Vereins Bank announces a net profit of m.1,132,033, and proposes a dividend of 10 per cent., while the Wechslerbank will distribute a dividend at the rate of 8⅓ per cent. per annum.

The German Transatlantic Steamship Company, now in liquidation has published its report for the year 1876. According to this document, the company has not succeeded in selling its property in New York during the past year, and a complete winding up of the establishment has therefore not yet taken place. The value of the New York property is estimated at $750,000, but as this sum could not be realised just at present, the board has decided to wait for a better opportunity. A distribution of the shares of the Hamburg American Packet Company—now in possession of the German Transatlantic Steamship Company—has therefore been postponed until a remunerative sale of the valuable American property has been effected.

A fearful gale from the westward sweeps over the country at the moment of writing, and everybody, not absolutely forced to be out of doors, keeps inside. About two o'clock this morning a terrible squall, accompanied by thunder and lightning, passed over this city, and the ominous three guns were fired as a signal that an extraordinary high floodtide was to be expected. In consequence of the good organisation and management of the Imperial Meteorological Office the gale did not come unexpected, but had been signalled twelve hours before from the office, the finest weather then prevailing. All vessels thus having been warned of the approaching storm no accident to shipping has hitherto been heard of.

Professor Nordenskjold, the fortunate explorer of the Karian Sea, to the eastward of the island of Nova Semlja, who last summer went up the Jenisey River in his small steamer Ymer, is preparing another expedition for the coming summer. This time the Professor intends to explore the whole Arctic coast of Siberia, and it is not unlikely that the expedition may return to Europe by way of the Suez Canal, thus completing the circuit of the continent of Asia. The benevolent and active merchant, Mr. Dickson, of Gothenburg, again furnishes the greater part of the money required for this new undertaking.

The cattle-plague is spreading more and more, and every morning brings fresh reports of the progress of the fearful disease. Meat has in consequence gone down rapidly in price, as the farmers, being prohibited from exporting their cattle to England, are anxious to sell as quickly as possible every head they can spare, for fear of an outbreak of the disease. All cattle which are killed by order of the Government to prevent the plague from spreading are paid for to their full value.

The Saxonia, s.s., is in dock, and is not so much damaged as was expected, and will soon be repaired. In the proceedings of the owners of the barque Susanne against the Sandringham, s.s., of London, for having run down the barque, a verdict has been given in favour of the barque, but an appeal has been entered, and some time must certainly yet elapse before this case is brought to a final conclusion.

The prospects for next harvest are becoming more and more dubious, owing to the frequent change from frost to thaw, which has not only accumulated a great surplus of wet on many lands, but also bereaves the young plants of their protecting cover of snow. Many fields already display a very unfavourable appearance, and it will require a very exceptional spring to bring about a recovery.

The following are the latest quotations of Banking and other Companies connected with the Far East:—Agra Bank, 10 to 10½; Chartered Bank of India, 19½ to 20½; Chartered Mercantile Bank, 29 to 30; Comptoir D'Escompte, f.696¼; Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank, 32 to 34; Oriental Bank, 44 to 45; P. and O. Company, 37 to 39; Messageries Maritimes, f.625; Suez Canal, f.675; Japan Loan 9 per cent., 108 to 111; ditto, 7 per cent., 102 to 104.

In the Produce Markets there has been a continued lack of animation, and the transactions of the week have been very moderate in extent. Tea is still very quiet. There has been more doing in Silk, but at lower quotations. Coffee has continued to decline, but is firmer at the close. Sugar has slightly improved, and some amount of business has transpired, principally in China. Hemp, Pepper, and Rice are flat, with a declining tendency. Cotton has fluctuated, but a dull tone has predominated, and the recent advance is not upheld. The activity in Gambier exhibited last week has disappeared. Tin continues dull, and Straits has sustained a further fall of 30s. per ton.

The total quantity of tea delivered from the bonded warehouses in London for the week ended the 27th ult. was 3,536,791 lbs., showing a decrease of rather more than 3½ per cent. on the preceding week. Of this total 2,409,437 lbs. was for home consumption, 799,930 lbs. was removed coastwise, 203,070 lbs. was exported, 120,759 lbs. was sent coastwise for exportation, and 3,595 lbs. was for ships' stores. The duty received during the same period was £60,236, which, compared with £59,314 of the previous week, exhibits an increase of something like 1½ per cent. The following were the quantities of the other principal dutiable articles withdrawn from the London bonded warehouses for home consumption during the same period :—Coffee, 466,631 lbs.; cocoa, 206,053 lbs.; tobacco, 388,638 lbs.; cigars 17,634 lbs.; wine, 171,239 gallons; brandy, 34,341 gallons; and rum, 32,967 gallons.

The tenders for £350,000 in bills and telegraphic transfers on India were received on the 31st ult. at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were :—To Calcutta, £41,080, at an average rate of 1s. 10·12d., and to Bombay £88,000, at an average rate of 1s. 10·04d. Tenders on both Presidencies for bills at 1s. 10d., and telegrams at 1s. 10 1-16d., will receive in full; no allotment below these prices respectively. Compared with last week's allotment, there is a fall in the above rates of about ¼d. per rupee.

Next week the India Council will only offer 17½ lacs of rupees (say £175,000), which will be only one-half the weekly amounts tendered for during the past six months. This reduction is a natural consequence of the large amount of bills which have latterly been allotted upon unexpectedly favourable terms, as well as of the heavy famine expenditure now entailed, which will necessitate the raising of a loan in this country. The Council are likely, therefore, to retain a considerable proportion of their means of remittance to India in their own hands.

The price of Bar Silver remained without material alteration until the result of the allotment of the Council Bills was known, when it would have been difficult to find a buyer, had sales been pressed, without submitting to a serious reduction in price; this morning, however, the rate has become firmer, in consequence of the Council having decreased the amount of their drawings next week, and Silver has been sold at 57½d. per oz. standard, being about ½d. below previous quotations. Mexican Dollars to a large amount have been placed at 57½d. per oz., showing a decline of ¼d. per oz.

According to a circular issued by Mr. G. de Quetteville, the total shipments of specie from Southampton by the P. and O. steamers to the East during the year 1876 were £10,997,659 (of which £1,474,908 was in gold and the remainder in silver), against £4,242,531 in 1875, showing an increase of £6,755,128. From the Mediterranean ports they were £1,087,041 (£241,231 gold, and £845,810 silver), showing an increase of £690,895. The export of the Messageries Maritimes during the same period was £2,224,003 (£1,496,502 gold, and £727,501 silver), showing an increase of £1,182,424, as compared with 1875.

We have received a copy of the Almanack for 1877 issued by Mr. John White, shipbroker, of 26, Great St. Helens. It contains a great deal of useful information, and will be of much value to those who desire to obtain particulars of steamers and sailing ships for sale.

The general meeting of the shareholders of the Comptoir d'Escompte was held in Paris on the 31st ult. The report was unanimously voted, and the dividend was fixed at f.40 for the year, f.18 of which were paid last August. Mr. Heutsch was president of the meeting, and there were 1,200 shareholders present, representing 40,000 shares.

The directors of the Spring Valley Coffee Company (Limited) have declared a dividend for the half-year at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum on the share capital of the company.

The directors of the Ouvah Coffee Company (Limited) have declared a dividend on the share capital of the company at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum for the half-year.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

Messrs. Arthur Capel and Co.'s Circular says :—There is no improvement in the tone of our market, business by private contract continues limited, whilst at public sale, though the quantity offered has been rather less, yet it has consisted chiefly of common to fair red and black leaf Congous, which have sold without spirit at the low prices established last week. The better kinds of Congou show no material change in prices, but they are dull of sale except when to meet special requirements. Congous :—Red-leaf kinds: Siftings sold at 6¾d. to 7d. per lb., being previous prices; common to good common from 7½d. to 9½d. per lb., also showing no change. Fair kinds are dull of sale. Some inquiry exists for good to fine Saryune kinds at full prices. Good to fine Kaisow kinds show no change in price, but the demand for them is limited; a few finest have been sold at previous prices. In Pak Lin kinds there have been some sales of good to fine from 1s. 7d. to 1s. 8d. per lb. Black-leaf kinds: Common have sold from 7½d. to 8d., good common 8½d. to 9d. per lb., being the same as before; fair kinds sold lower at public sale; privately they are difficult to move; medium to good and fine sell at about previous prices when inquired for, otherwise the market is dull; finest remain steady at previous rates. New-make kinds show no material alteration; common to fair are in moderate demand, as also fine, but the good kinds are dull of sale. Oolongs: Common to fair have sold from 1s. 1d. to 1s. 3d., being ½d. per lb. lower; other kinds show no alteration. Souchongs are still heavy of sale at the low prices current. Scented Teas :—Canton Capers: Common to fair are saleable under 1s. 2d. per lb., above this price the demand is limited. Orange Pekoes: The Macao kinds have sold rather lower; long-leaf kinds have sold at about former rates. Foochow: Capers show no change. Orange Pekoes :—Common to medium kinds are lower, but fine to finest remain firm at previous prices. Green Teas :—The market is steady. Medium Moyune Gunpowders and fine Young Hyson have realised full prices; Ping Suey kinds also remain firm. The public sales have comprised about 12,500 packages printed and sold without reserve. Deliveries for the week, as compared with last year, are as follows :—

Messrs. De Cordova, Sons and Co.'s Report upon the New York Market, dated 20th January, says :—Our market has been unusually torpid during the past three months. This dulness has been variously ascribed to "political uncertainty as to the Presidential question," to "the large number of operatives throughout the country who are out of employment, and are therefore unable to purchase the necessaries of life; and, more recently, to the heavy snow-fall and the consequent impassable condition of the roads. Green Teas which cost in China about as much as was paid last year, notwithstanding that the quality is poor, and the proportions make lower averages than those of the previous crop, are said to be leaving losses estimated at from 10 to 15 per cent. on the cost of importation. It is believed that prices cannot go much lower here than they now are: but it is also certain that many taels more' per picul than the circumstances of this market would justify have been paid for Green Teas in China this season. The apparent motive for this extravagance has been "a short crop in China." The "short crop" amounts to this: that having had a surplus of stock here on July 1, 1876, of 6,000,000 lbs., China sends us 14,000,000 more; and our apparent consumption of this description of Tea for the present year will amount to about 14,000,000 to 15,000,000 of pounds. Japan Teas would appear to be losing popularity, to the advantage of Oolongs. Good medium may be quoted at 28c. for second crop Teas, equal in grade to Mourilyan, Heimann, and Co.'s standard; 25c. to 26c. for second crop Teas, standards reduced from old gradings. In the meanwhile the Japan market has ruled at very much higher cost, as, indeed, has so frequently been the rule in the East. It scarcely seems possible that quotations here can go much lower, but the supply is ample and the demand is moderate. Oolong Teas have been more in favour, because they have been clean, and especially because they have been cheap. The new Amoys have brought 25c. to 26c. gold, for invoices averaging superior, at which figures they are said to about cover cost. Formosas in fair inquiry, and importers have been free sellers until recently, when more firmness has ruled. Statistics of the actual and prospective position of our market in respect to supply tend to show conclusively that this country is still paying a great deal more money to China and Japan than is at all wise or necessary; and it will be vain to look for a healthy tea business here until prices in the East shall have fallen low enough to cause a great abridgement of production. The figures show that at the end of the present Tea Season—say on the 1st July, 1877—we shall have a surplus of stock in the hands of importers and speculators equal to four or five months' consumption of the United States, including the usual exports to Canada. With so large a supply to begin with, this country can very well afford to leave Green Teas to the fine speculative minds of the operators for the London market, and to let Japan Teas severely alone. With the latter description of the leaf, indeed, the game is entirely in the hands of American importers, and there is no more necessity for them to pay profitable prices in the East, to their own inevitable prejudice, than it would be for them to go severally home one pleasant afternoon and burn up all their clothing. It needs only patience, and an abatement of the too prevalent mania to have tea at any cost that the Chinese and Japanese choose to put upon it, to effect such a reduction in Eastern values as would lead to a diminution of production —the sole remedy for the miserable condition which has prevailed in the New York Tea Market for years past. It seems idle to be constantly repeating this truism to heedless ears; but we do not see that it comes within our duty to be dumb because importers see fit to be deaf.

SILK.

The Market has been more active, the chief feature being the sale of rather a large quantity of Tsatlees from Lyons, at prices fully 1s. 6d. to 2s. under those ruling a fortnight ago. In Cantons a fair business is going on at former rates. Japans are neglected, and prices are lower. The deliveries are upon the whole better than the earlier weeks of last month would have led us to expect, sufficing with the moderate importation to prevent any increase of total stock. The periodical public sales are fixed to commence on the 21st inst. Deliveries, 1st to 30th ult. inclusive :—China, 2,146 bales; Canton, 784; Japan, 603; total, 3,533 bales.

Messrs. B. Richardson and Son's Circular, dated New York, January 20th, says:—The trade during the past year has touched extremes. We have the lowest and highest prices which have been seen for fifteen years. Business has, consequently, been much embarrassed, as calculations and experience were useless. The first part of the year was quiet, and up to June a decline of 5 per cent. from prices of last January was submitted to. Early in July the market became very excited, owing to reports of short crops in Europe and China, and during the month prices of raw silk advanced from 15 to 20 per cent. The excitement continued, and even increased, up to October,—at this time prices ruling in June last were about doubled. At length the heavy exports from China began to tell, and we had first a pause, then a little reaction. Present quotations may be taken generally at 10 per cent. below the highest point. During the excitement the importers were even very cautious in importing silk at high rates, and for some time arrivals were light, so that at one time stocks in this market were reduced to almost nothing; recent arrivals have, however, increased them, but still they are very moderate. Manufacturers have had to complain of the difficulty in getting any reasonable advance on their goods, and an advance adequate to the increased price of raw stock has been impossible. At the present, stocks of all sorts are moderate only, and inadequate to an active state of trade. Political difficulties, domestic and foreign, still cloud our prospects, yet there are some stirrings toward spring trade, and a fair business has been done, so far, during this month.

COFFEE.—Increasing arrivals of Plantation Ceylon have been pressed to auction. The demand has not equalled this constant supply, and the public sales have gone off slowly at continually declining prices, until a further decline has been established, making a total of about 11s. from the highest point. With more demand Thursday, a recovery of nearly 1s. took place, middling new crop, which brought 121s. to 122s. 6d. early in January, has declined to 110s. to 111s. 6d., closing at 111s. to 112s. 6d. Few sales of Native Ceylon have occurred, and 84s. to 85s. has been the nearest quotation until Thursday, when 85s. to 85s. 6d. was obtained for good ordinary. The closing quotations are as follow:—Plantation, chiefly new crop, triage at 80s. to 95s., old grey to fine new small at 99s. to 106s. 6d., low middling at 107s. 6d. to 109s. 6d., middling at 110s. to 112s. 6d., good middling to fine middling bright coloury at 113s. to 116s. 6d., good to choice bold at 117s. to 124s., pea-berry at 112 to 117s. 6d. Native, good ord. at 85s. to 85s. 6d., fine ord., rather bold, at 87s. to 87s. 6d., pea-berry at 91s. 6d.

COIR GOODS.—A total of 82 tons 969 bales Yarn met a steady demand, and the bulk found buyers at about the former value. Fibre, consisting of rejections, was chiefly sold, and Rope was also disposed of at late rates; 36 tons Ceylon Yarn were sold, ordinary to medium at £29 to £32 15s., good medium to good £33 to £36, fine well-made £40 to £48 5s. Of 16 bales 14 tons Fibre the latter sold, cuttings and refuse at £6 to £10, ordinary short red at £15 5s. 438 coils (13 tons Cochin Rope sold, average 6 to 3 inch £18 10s. to £19 10s., 2½ to 1½ inch at £22 10s. to £23 10s. per ton (all the above), including first-class sea-damaged. Kitool Fibre: 734 bundles Ceylon partly at 9d. to 1s. 1½d. Bristles: 22 cases China sold at 1s. 2d. to 2s. 8½d.

RICE.—This market has become decidedly dull, especially for cargoes of the new crop, and Rangoon spring shipment is now obtainable at 9s. 6d. open charter. On the spot, 1,800 bags Bassein, indirect import, have been sold at 10s. 5d. ex ship, and 6,500 bags good Bassein at 10s. 9d. A floating cargo of about 1,100 tons new Rangoon, January sailing, has been sold at 9s. 6d. open charter.

RATTANS.—435 bundles (4 tons), from Boston, sold at £24 10s. to £29 15s. per ton. 54 bales split Rattans partly sold at 1s. 4½d. to 2s. 3½d. per lb.

PEPPER.—Black: The Market has been flat, and with little demand at auction sales could only be effected at easier rates, and the bulk of the small supply was bought in, 57 bags Singapore were withdrawn and 1,843 bags Penang bought in at 4⅛d. White: At auction a total of 891 bags went off flatly, and only a small part sold at a further reduction of ⅛d. to ¼d. per lb; of 708 bags Singapore 120 bags sold, fair at 7d., good fair bold at 7¼d. to 7⅜d.; 183 bags Penang were bought in at 7⅛d.

PLUMBAGO.—At auction 836 barrels Ceylon met a fair demand, and holders being generally free sellers, 600 barrels found buyers at lower prices for lump, but steadily for dust; ordinary dull small lump 13s., chiefly medium to good small bright lump at 13s. 6d. to 14s. 6d., fine bold 17s., fair to fine chips 9s. 3d. to 11s. 9d., dust 8s. 3d. to 8s. 6d., good ditto 9s. per cwt.

SAGO.—At public sale 898 bags small pearl went off slowly, and only 200 bags sold at previous rates, good small at 17s., fine bright at 18s. 6d.

SAGO FLOUR.—On the spot 500 bags have been sold at 15s 6d. cash.

SAPANWOOD.—28 tons Siam bought in at £10 10s. to £11.

SUGAR.—Early in the week the market improved, and sales were effected readily at a recovery of fully 1s. 6d. from the lowest point of last week; but towards the close a quieter tone has prevailed, although the advanced quotations are maintained. The sales for the week are:—For arrival 85 tons Native Penang at 18s. 9d.; 8,000 bags unclayed Taal Manila at 19s.; 100 tons brown China at 26s.; 600 tons China, price not reported, a floating cargo of 800 tons Java No. 14 at 31s. 9d. for the Continent, and 200 tons China, now landing, at 20s. 6d.

STICKLAC.—Of 150 boxes Siam offered, 50 boxes good free sold at 56s. to 57s. 6d.

SPICES.—Cassia Lignea: 270 boxes unworked bought in at 57s. Cloves: 9 cases fine Penang bought in at 2s. 6d. Nutmegs: 7 cases 45 boxes Penang met few offers and were all bought in, chiefly 108's at 2s. 9d.; also 6 casks limed defective Java at 1s. 3d. Mace continues dull of sale, and of 30 cases Penang about 20 cases red, part mouldy, sold at 1s. 9d. to 1s. 10d., the remainder bought in at 2s. 7d. to 2s. 10d., and 3 casks 6 boxes Java at 2s. 1d. to 2s. 2d.

TAPIOCA.—Of 600 bags Singapore 350 bags sold at steady rates, small to fair white at 2⅝d. to 2½d., the remainder bought in, fine at 3d., also 319 bags fine Penang at 2⅞d. Pearl: The good supply of 753 bags, consisting entirely of medium, met few offers, and were all bought in at 19s. 6d. to 20s., but 80 bags good since sold at 19s. 6d. Flour: Of 288 bags Singapore 171 bags sold, sound at 1⅝d.

TIN.—The tone of the market has been dull, and prices have receded. The closing quotations are, Straits on the spot and afloat, £73 10s.; Banca £76, Billiton £74 per ton. The Dutch sale of 19,800 slabs Banca went off at an average of about 44 per 50 kilos., equal to about £75 per ton in London.

VEGETABLE TALLOW.—76 casks good fair Singapore sold at 42s. 6d.

MANCHESTER GOODS.

The position of this market has scarcely altered. Buyers have held back in expectation of lower prices, but though willing to meet them a little, producers are strong enough to decline any material reduction. The transactions have therefore been of limited extent, and consisting mostly of resale lots.

CASUALTIES.

GREAT YARMOUTH.—Jan. 30, the Constantia, barque, of and from Sunderland for Batavia (coal), stuck upon the South Scroby Sand this morning, during a strong west gale, with heavy sea; crew (twelve in all) were rescued by the lifeboat Mark Lane, of this port; the barque is under water, and will become a total wreck.

YARMOUTH (I.W.).—Jan. 31, a collision occurred off here on the 29th inst. between the General Caulfield, barque, of Newcastle, Prentice, from London for Singapore, via Cardiff, and the Norwegian barque Familiens Minde, Jonsen, from Shields for Havana. Both vessels were at anchor, when the latter broke her shear and came into the General Caulfield's port side amidships, carrying away three stanchions, mainrail, and a good deal of bulwarks. The damage to the General Caulfield has been settled by the Familiens Minde.

LISBON.—Jan. 25, the Red Rover, steam yacht, Dundas, from Oporto for Penang, is reported as having put in here damaged.

SUEZ.—Jan. 12, the Ajax (str.), Captain Kidd, from Shanghai, for London, while getting up anchor to enter the Canal, was run into by the British India steamer, Agra. The repairs to the Ajax will detain her five days (has since arrived in London).

ST. HELENA.—Jan. 8, Captain P. Grieves, of the English brig Queen, of Shoreham, arrived here from Singapore and Algoa Bay for Hamburg, reports having experienced a succession of gales from the 10th to the 22nd Dec., off the Cape of Good Hope, in which she lost bulwarks, carried away band of lower maintopsailyard, and ship was considerably strained. A survey has been held, and the surveyors report having found, inside, 17½ inches water in the well, but no increase after waiting an hour; deck seams and waterways slack, combings round mainmast loose, &c.; also, outside, the rudderhead split, the caulking slack in places, and a few small graving pieces required.

Captain Hinterthur, of the Dutch barque G. H. Betts, from Macassar for Amsterdam, reports,—Dec. 2, lat. 33. 42 S., long. 28. 24 E., experienced a very heavy gale with high cross seas breaking over the vessel and washing away several movable artices from off the decks, as well as losing a portion of the ship's name from off the stern. Several sails were blown away and ship thrown on beam ends, and would not righten until the deck ports were cut away and the water let out.

The French barque Univers, from Swatow for London, arrived here on the 3rd ult., experienced a succession of very heavy gales during the passage, was twice thrown on her beam ends when sails and ropes had to be cut away to righten her, lost boat, coop, and many things off deck, also had a large quantity of provisions spoiled. Surveyors recommended certain repairs to topsides and to replace articles lost.

The Mary Edey, barque, of Dublin, Kavanagh, from Samarang for Falmouth, reports:—From Nov. 24 to Dec. 22, between lat. 28. 18 S., long. 46. 30 E., and lat. 35. 2 S., long. 20. 7 E., encountered terrific weather, gales, and tremendous seas, lost lowertopsails, foresail, and several small sails, ship labouring heavily all the time.

BATAVIA.—Jan. 31, Salvors have brought into Muntok the schooner Kronprinz Gustav, from Hong Kong for London (sugar and sundries), which had been abandoned ashore at Karang Hadjee after unsuccessful attempts had been made to get her off. She was eventually got off after making jettison of a portion of her cargo, 60 (?60 tons). Most of the cargo is damaged. All hands safe. The captain has proceeded for Muntok to settle salvors' claims.

The Bury St. Edmunds, Rodsker, from Sunderland, discharging cargo in the roads, came into collision with the Koning der Nederlanden (str.) during a sudden squall on the night of Dec. 19, and suffered some damage.

The A. and W. C., Dutch ship, from Newcastle for Sourabaya, has put into Anjer with loss of rudder and some sails.

MANILA.—Jan. 27, the John o'Gaunt, from Liverpool for this port, totally lost on the Island of Samar, Philippine Group, on the 7th inst.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DEAL.—Jan. 30, the Batavia, German barque, Haesloop, from Hamburg for Hong Kong, has been supplied with an anchor and 50 fathoms chain, in lieu of others reported slipped from in the Downs to avoid collision.

WEST COWES.—Jan. 26, the Desdemona, Olsen, from Akyab for Liverpool, which put in here Dec. 28 with damage to bulwarks, having completed repairs has sailed for her destination.

PLYMOUTH.—Sailed, Jan. 26, Archos, for Anjer, from Sunderland, which put in here, 23rd, with part of crew refractory.

HAVRE.—Jan. 23, the Misti, from Ilo Ilo for New York, before reported as having put into Bermuda with damage, was, according to accounts received from the latter place, dated Dec. 29, discharging her cargo.

GIBRALTAR.—Arrived and proceeded, Jan. 26, Glenfalloch (str.), from Shanghai for New York; Glenlyon (str.), from London for Shanghai.

ST. HELENA.—Arrived and proceeded Jan. 3, G. H. Betz, from Macassar, for Amsterdam; Melbrek, from Zebu; 5, Sarah Watson, from Singapore, both for London; Navigator, Granite City, both from Batavia; Chrysolite, from Bassein, all three for Cork; Stavanger, from Rangoon, for Falmouth; 6, Mary L. Stone, from Manila; 8, Scotia, from Manila; both for New York; Auriga, from Samarang, for Falmouth; passed, 1, Ocean Chief, from Hong Kong, for New York; 5, Faith, from Bezoekie; 6, Huntley Castle, from Japan; Cathaya, from Yokohama, all for Falmouth; 7, Gaucho, from Yokohama, for London; 8, Alice Ritson, from Singapore, for Liverpool.

The following vessels have arrived for repairs, &c.: Jan. 3, Univers, from Swatow, for London; 6, Brescia, from Rangoon, for Havre; 7, Queen, from Singapore, for Hamburg, Mary Edey, from Samarang, for Falmouth.

SIMON'S BAY.—Arrived, Dec. 23, Rapide, from Batavia for Falmouth.

TABLE BAY.—Arrived Dec. 25, Tordenskjold, from Samarang, for Copenhagen.

PORT ALFRED.—Sailed, Nov. 27, Utopia; Dec. 18, Johanna; 19, Bedfordshire, all for Guam.

PORT ELIZABETH.—Dec. 29, the Othello, Gulland, from Akyab for Falmouth, which put in here Dec. 17, in distress, has landed 7,000 bags out of her entire cargo of 13,500 bags; two sales have been held, and about 1,300 bags sold; a survey has been held on the vessel, and she was pronounced unseaworthy, the surveyers recommending that the cargo be forwarded to its destination by other vessels; the vessel cannot be repaired here, and it is probable that the will be abandoned; her agents have advertised for tenders for conveying 1,000 tons of her cargo to its destination.

The Amore, Lavarello, from Singapore for Marseilles, which put in here Dec. 20 in distress, has discharged very little of her cargo; the repairs required by her are slight, and it is expected she will be ready for sea in about ten days.

BATAVIA.—Jan. 31, a bottomry bond for 87,000 guldens was drawn at Rio Janeiro in favour of the French barque Gaule, arrived here from Liverpool and Rio Janeiro. No payment has yet been made, and the ship and cargo have been arrested.

GENERAL SHIPPING NEWS.

THE SUEZ CANAL.—The accounts of the Suez Canal Company for 1876 have not yet been finally adjusted, but at the extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders, held in Paris on the 10th ult., M. Charles de Lesseps gave an interesting forecast of the probable financial results of the year's working. In 1875, he said, a net profit of f.1,061,000 (£42,440) had been earned, which was sufficient for the payment of a dividend of f.1 88c. per share. It is expected, however, that the free revenue of 1876 will amount to f.1,500,000 or f.1,600,000 (£60,000 to £64,000), and this increase of about 50 per cent. in the profits will admit of the payment of a dividend of about f.2 80c. per share, which, added to the f.25 of interest, gives a revenue of about f.28 per share. But the company may be said to have made even greater progress than is shown by these figures. The increase in the traffic receipts for 1876, as compared with those for the previous year, amounted to f.1,100,000 (£44,000), while the working expenses had actually diminished. On the working of the Canal, therefore, there had been an increased profit, not of 50, but of fully 100 per cent.; but, owing to the commercial depression in Egypt, the company had not been able to dispose of its lands so readily as in former years, nor to invest its money on such advantageous terms. M. C. de Lesseps, however, hopes that as the commercial situation improves these last two sources of income will become more prolific, and that, if peace be secured, an immediate and important increase of traffic may be expected. That increase, too, he believes, will not necessitate any augmentation in the working charges.

MISSING SHIP.—The underwriters of the large wooden ship Richard Wright, which sailed from Bassein for Falmouth on the 27th May last, have now given her up as lost. She sailed with a full cargo, and ought to have arrived in the English Channel in about five months. She is now eight months at sea, and has not been spoken or heard of since she left. She was commanded by Captain Cruickshank, and had a crew of at least thirty men on board, and it is feared they have been lost with the ship. The Richard Wright was a vessel of 1,353 tons, built at St. John, N.B., in 1872, and owned by Mr. James Nevins, of that port.

BURNING OF A LIVERPOOL SHIP.—A telegram received from New York, dated Jan. 27, states that the Ada Iredale, Captain Napton, from Ardrossan to San Francisco, has been burned at sea, and that the crew, with the exception of the carpenter, have been saved. It will be remembered that the Ada Iredale was lately included in Lloyd's list of missing vessels. She was a vessel of 997 tons, and owned by Mr. Peter Iredale, Liverpool.

AN arrangement has been made by the Albion Shipping Company of Glasgow to take over a portion of the fleet of Messrs. Shaw, Savill, and Co.'s passenger line of New Zealand packets, and to work the service to the ports of New Zealand from London, in addition to the service from the Clyde to the various ports in that colony. The capital of the Albion Shipping Company has been in consequence increased to £1,000,000.

THE Colonial Line steamship St. Osyth, Captain R. M'Nabb, arrived in the Downs on the 28th ult. She brings eleven days' later advices from Melbourne than those by the usual mail vid Brindisi. The steamship left Plymouth on September 23 last, made her outward passage in 45½ days, and her homeward in fifty-one days; accomplishing the entire voyage in four months and five days, a feat never before recorded.

TANJONG PAGAR DOCK COMPANY

VICTORIA DOCK, SINGAPORE.

This Company's Granite DRY DOCK, 450 feet in length, 65 feet width of entrance, and 20 feet depth of water on the sill, was OPENED on the 17th October, 1868. In the high tides of the North-East Monsoon there is a foot to eighteen inches more water.

In connection with the Dock is a complete range of workshops, fitted with steam machinery, driving all description of engineers' tools required in the construction and repair of vessels and machinery, and a foundry for iron and brass castings.

The Company's extensive Wharves and Godowns for receiving and storing cargo immediately adjoin the Dock.

Having an efficient European staff in each department, the Company is in a position to guarantee the best workmanship, executed with every possible despatch, as well as low rates of charges.

These advantages, and the great facilities which the proximity of the Dock to the town offers for the transport of materials, &c., enable this Company to adopt a very low scale of charges for ships' work of all classes.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

YOKOHAMA.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 27th December, and we have advices by the Pacific Mail Company's steamer Alaska, via San Francisco, one day later, viz., to the 28th December. The French mail from London, November 3, was received on the 23rd December. The Japan Herald supplies the following items of news:—

Perfect stagnation has reigned in the political world, and we are without a single item of importance to relate. We noticed in our last that the principal leaders of the late insurrection had been beheaded, and Oki, the Minister of Justice, who had presided at the trials, has since returned to Tokio, and has been received by the Mikado. No sooner has this abortive effort been stamped out, than other but lesser disturbances arise. Shortly after the departure of last mail the farmers rose in Ibaraki ken, and for some days matters looked serious, but, depressed apparently by the loss of their leaders (who were killed), the rioters have dispersed. The same paper, however, which announces the suppression of this outbreak, states that another has broken out at Miye, which is apparently of a more serious nature, and bodies of policemen have been despatched to the scene of the troubles. Rumours also of a strong feeling of irritation being prevalent in the Satsuma ken are again found in the native papers. In fact, there is, as we have before remarked, a strong feeling of dissatisfaction throughout the country, which sooner or later must break out. The sole reliance of the Government would appear to be on its armed forces, for the samurai are enraged at the sweeping away of their privileges and the confiscation of their incomes, whilst the labouring classes are ground to the dust to pay the cost and expenditures of imitating European manners and customs which gives the present veneer (for it is no more) of civilisation to the Japanese.

During the three months that the German frigate Vineta has been lying in Yokohama harbour the conduct of the men, whenever they have been ashore, has been exemplary; there has been no complaint against them either at police station or at Consulate. But on the very eve of the ship's departure some of the crew got into a drunken brawl, which already has cost one life, and may cost more. It would appear that about a score of the Vineta's men got leave to go ashore, and proceeded to Takashima-cho, where they were drinking in a brothel. As they became noisy and quarrelsome, the proprietor sent for the Japanese police, and the man-of-war's men left the house between five and six P.M.; but in the streets they came in collision with the jinrikisha men, whose vehicles and lanterns they wantonly broke. They proceeded on foot towards Yokohama, over the waste land between the sea and the railway, followed by a mob of coolies, who had armed themselves with clubs and fragments of the broken jinrikisha. Here it would appear that a running fight was kept up. When the European police arrived on the spot they found one sailor lying dead on the ground, with the back of his skull staved in and the right ear almost lopped off; another sailor with a deep hole in his head was fetched from the Takashima-cho police station and sent to the British Naval Hospital, where he now lies in a very precarious condition. Four sailors, more or less grievously wounded, were conveyed last night on board the ship. Several of the Japanese have been badly handled too, and are now in hospital. There is an inquiry now going on in the Kencho, at which the German Consul is present. We understand that there is a faint hope of the recovery of the sailor who lies wounded in the British Naval Hospital.

A meeting of the Asiatic Society of Japan was held on the 13th December at the Grand Hotel, Yokohama. In the absence of the president and vice-presidents Dr. Hepburn occupied the chair. The minutes of the last meeting, held in Tokio on the 22nd November, were read and approved, and the election at the meeting of the council of the Rev. A. L. Amerman as a member of the Society was announced. Mr. Russell Robertson then read a paper on the Caroline Islands. Mr. J. C. Hall made some interesting observations on the two races that are found in the islands of the Pacific, remarking that our knowledge of the Brown or Malay race is far in excess of that which we possess of the Black race; and added some information respecting the languages or dialects spoken. Mr. Cole, a visitor, stated that in consequence of the falling off of the yield in the pearl fisheries off the north of Australia, expeditions to the Caroline Islands were more frequently fitted out from Singapore than had hitherto been the case. He thought that the hostile disposition shown at one of the islands might possibly be considered as an indication that kidnapping had been practised at that particular island. The Chairman then expressed his sense of the value of the paper, and requested Mr. Robertson to convey to its author the thanks of the Society.

The Japanese Government having assumed the sovereignty of the Bonin Islands has despatched a number of officials there to administer the Islands. The British Government not deeming it worth while to hold and occupy the Islands has relinquished them in favour of the Japanese; but as there are some British subjects there, Constable Hodges, from the British Consulate, has been despatched as Envoy Extraordinary, having with him a quantity of clothing and other presents of a utilitarian character, and a proclamation, enjoining the British residents to behave respectfully towards the Japanese officials, but at the same time informing them that as they retain their rights as British subjects they are not amenable to Japanese law, and that the British Consul at Yokohama can always be appealed to by them, and that they are, as heretofore, under his jurisdiction.

We are informed that the Gas Committee intend to canvass the tenants in the settlement for subscriptions towards lighting the streets from the beginning of the New Year. It is proposed to ask for a subscription of two per cent. on the monthly rental as assessed, and when it from the subscriptions promised has become beyond doubt that the required amount, about $470 monthly, can be raised, then a document will be sent round to receive the signatures of the subscribers. We understand that the plan of saving expense by not lighting the lamps during ten moonlight nights every month has been abandoned, and it is proposed that the streets shall be lighted every night.

The Pilotage Service of this port has long been a subject of complaint to all interested in maritime affairs, and following the advice of the foreign newspapers the Government has, at last, issued regulations for licensing pilots. These are not compulsory on Europeans; they are optional for them. There will, in future, be no excuse for taking the first man who presents himself as pilot, as all who are competent can now obtain licenses from the Japanese Government.

A football match—Yokohama v. Yedo and H.M.S. Modeste—has been played, and produced a well-contested game. Yokohama at first laboured under a slight disadvantage as some of her players did not turn up until late; still the game went on, until just before half-time a goal was obtained for the strangers from a good place-kick by Mr. Strange. Ends were then changed, and the ball was kept going, now in the neighbourhood of one goal, now of the other; but when time was called no further success had been obtained on either side, and the Settlement, therefore, remained the losers, and suffered their first defeat of the season.

The launch of the new lightship took place on the 18th Dec. at Benten, and was in every respect most successful. The present vessel is built on the same plan as the older ones. She is 74 feet in length, 18 feet in breadth, and is 96 tons builder's measurement. She has been constructed throughout of kiaki, and appears to be most substantially put together.

The subscription list which was opened at the Herald office, in aid of the sufferers by the late fire at Tokio, is now closed, and the total amount contributed, viz., $2,208.43 has been forwarded to the Tokio Fu for distribution.

Business has been in a very unsettled condition during the fortnight, owing to the fluctuations in exchange, but the advent of the holidays has, at present, caused a temporary lull.

The annual meetings of the Race Club and Athletic Association have been held. The usual paper hunt season has commenced, the opening meet being held on the 16th December.

A pamphlet, advocating the advantages of Meteorological science, has been published by Mr. Joyner, the chief of that department of the Government service.

The U.S. flagship Tennessee left for Hong Kong on the 17th December. The U.S.S. Palos is the only American vessel of war in port.

We take the subjoined items of intelligence from the weekly issues of the Japan Mail of 16th and 23rd December:—

The annual meeting of the Yokohama Race Club was held at the Chamber of Commerce Rooms on the 22nd December, when there were present:—Messrs. Bennett, Braun, Brewer, Buckle, Center, Cope, Cruickshank, D'Iffanger, Dodds, Dunlop, Evers, Fitz-Henry, J. A. Fraser, Francke, Glennie, Haswell, Hay, Heinemann, Johnstone, Keswick, Kirkwood, Middleton, A. Mitchell, Mollison, Pinn, O. Reimers, Strachan, Vouillemont, J. Walter, A. Winstanley, and Wolfs. Mr. J. A. Fraser was voted into the chair, and briefly explained that the object of the meeting was to receive and pass the treasurer's accounts for the past year, and to elect a committee in place of the retiring one. He congratulated the members on the extremely satisfactory state of their finances, which proved that the unfortunate schism which had occurred during the year had not done the club any material harm, as was shown by the balance in hand being somewhat larger than it was at the close of the previous year. The accounts as presented were passed unanimously. The next business was to elect a committee for the ensuing year, and the ballot resulted in the election of the following gentlemen, all of whom, it was understood, were willing to serve:—Messrs. W. J. Cruickshank, C. Braun, A. Evers, E. B. Watson, and F. E. Foster.

The annual general meeting of the Athletic Association has taken place at the Grand Hotel, the following members being present:—Messrs. A. H. Dare, Kilby, Walker, Pinn, Mitchell, Brooke, Dodds, Watson, Smith, Hutchison, Reid, Jeyes, J. J. Dare, Scott, and Henley. Mr. Dodds was voted into the chair. The report was passed unanimously. It was notified that all the retiring committee, with the exception of Mr. Walker, offered themselves for re-election. Mr. C. P. Hall was elected in the place of Mr. Walker, so that the committee for next year consists of Messrs. Hamilton, Kilby, Dodds, Hall and A. H. Dare. Some slight alterations in the rules of the club were next proposed and adopted. Mr. Watson proposed that there should be several champion cups to be run for at three succeeding meetings, and remarked that by reason of the handicapping the really most efficient competitors came in second best in most events. After some discussion this point was finally settled by Mr. Julius Dare promising to present a cup on the terms proposed. Some discussion then ensued with regard to sending invitations to the Kobe, Nagasaki, Shanghai and Hong Kong athletes to visit and take part in the spring meeting. This proposition being adopted, after a vote of thanks to the Chairman the meeting dispersed.

The news from Nagoya concerning the Miye ken is sufficiently alarming. Telegraphic despatches announce that a serious disturbance has broken out among the farmers of Ise, who seem to have given way to uncontrolled riot, the cause being their objection to the new mode of levying the land-tax. The outbreak commenced at Kumodzu, the rioters from which place were quickly joined by some from Uyeno, Kambe, Yokkaichi, and Kuwana in the Miye ken, and others from the neighbouring Aichi ken. As they gained in numbers they seemed to have increased in violence, and it is reported that the important towns of Tsu and Matsuzaka and the smaller ones of Uyeno and Shiroku have been set fire to, and it is also feared that Yokkaichi has not entirely escaped. Traffic along the Tokaido is interrupted. Mr. Kitadai, Gon Daijo of the Naimusho, with other officials and a strong force of police, have been despatched by steamer to the disturbed district, and it is to be presumed that the troops of the Nagoya garrison will be called upon to assist in suppressing the riot.

The riots may, we presume, be traced to two principal causes; first, the obligations of the farmers to pay a fixed tax in money for the produce of their lands, instead of a fluctuating tax depending upon the yield of the year; and, secondly, to certain alterations which have been made in the land-tax. We know too little of the economy of the interior of Japan to write with any certainty on these subjects, but it may be presumed that this obligation to pay the land-tax in money presses severely on the farmer when rice is low, as it is at present. More than this. It is obvious that in order to convert the rice into money he must send it to some neighbouring town for sale, and if this is done by a large number of men at the same time with the same object of early sale the price must be unnaturally depressed.

favour of defendant. The Court found plaintiff's plea that the [illegible] was according to sample velvet to which the suit had ref[illegible] evidence, and, in consequence, defendant was quite justified in refusing to take delivery of the goods, quite contradicted by the and therefore gave a verdict in accordance.

The long-felt want of a system of pilotage regulations has been filled by the issue of a code under the hands of the Prime Minister.

The Japan Mail also supplies the following extracts from native newspapers :—

The Naimusho has given orders for the various ken in the south that enrolled an extra number of police constables during the late troubles that such extra forces can now be disbanded, as tranquillity having been restored the services of the men are no longer required.

The session of the Genrò-In was closed on the 20th December, without any ceremony. The Mikado was not present on the occasion.

The duties taken at the Yokohama Custom-house from the 1st of January to the 20th of December, 1876, amounted to yen 1,476,511.16.

An inspection of proposed harbour limits was made on the 20th December by officials of the Custom-house and Kanagawa Kencho.

An epidemic has broken out among the horses in the capital, to which many of those in the Imperial stable have succumbed.

Some officials of the Bureau of Agriculture are to be sent to America for the purpose of purchasing some eighty head of cattle.

It is reported that severe famine prevails in Korea, and that the people have not enough seed rice left for the next year's crop.

Premises for a Fifth National Bank are to be built in the Tochiuri-bori, Osaka.

YOKOHAMA, DEC. 26.

Since the date of my last the Silk Market has undergone another sudden reaction. Orders have been received direct from home by the houses here to buy, and they have done their best to do so. The cessation of the warlike telegrams which followed each other with such iteration almost daily during about six weeks, and made all the silk-men here wear troubled brows, enters for much into the present state of affairs. Or, perhaps, as no despatches, announcing authentically that all chance of a European war has ceased to exist for the time, have been received, people's fancies have become calmed by familiarity with the apprehensions which circumstances have caused them to entertain, and they have resumed that course of speculation without which their lives are a desert, a treeless, waterless, waste of unenjoyable, and too prolonged existence. So they buy silk now as of yore ; but they are sadly harassed by the Japanese holders, who know as well as they do, or better, as certain official sources of information are open to them and closed to foreigners, what is passing in Europe, and have taken some of the choicest and most inquired-for sorts virtually out of the market, by putting prices on them which are prohibited, even to speculators. However, some business has been done during the past fortnight, which has not witnessed, however, anything like the brisk competition which enlivened the early days of the now fast-closing season.

Serious agrarian riots are reported from nearly all the provinces, and the military have been called out in force to aid the local authorities and the police to suppress them. These riots are nothing like so dangerous as the recently quenched insurrection, but they are more serious, being, as they are, the outcome of a wide-spread disaffection among an ordinarily most peaceable and law-abiding class, feeling itself oppressed by an injudicious measure. The Japanese farmer must have a real solid grievance before he will rise against constituted authority. He asks not to be taxed more than flesh and blood can bear, and that is about all he does ask for. And his Government just now is taxing him to an extent and in a manner which he cannot bear. To alter the land tax at all was bad enough for him, but to attempt to collect it in money instead of in kind pressed so grievously on him that his discontent has found vent in a perfectly futile insurrection. For there can be no manner of doubt that the Government which was strong enough only a few weeks ago to suppress a rising of armed, intrepid, and organised samurai, backed by the powerful, if secret, influence of nobles and gentry, who remained quiet in appearance, while all the moral support they could give was given to the movement, it will find it easy to suppress disquiet among undisciplined and half-armed peasants. It is matter of hope that when the rising is effectually put down the attention of the Government will be directed towards the consideration and enactment of measures of alleviation of existing distress and prevention of future complaints. The proper course to pursue is so simple that I need not take the time to indicate it here. Meanwhile, the peasantry are up in arms in various provinces. Several officials have been killed, telegraph wires have been cut, and more or less successful attempts have been made to set towns and villages on fire. Whole quarters have been burned in Nagoya and Yokkaichi, in which latter place it is said that the offices of the Mitsu Bichi Company were destroyed. A town called Tsu, in Ise, is reported as almost levelled with the ground. In some few instances the revolted farmers are aided by the Shizoku, but for the most part people of the latter class, though they have their own grievances against the existing Government, yet take its part against the despised tillers of the soil. An instance of this occurred at Tsu, where seven armed Shizoku encountered a band of twenty or more peasants and ordered them to disperse. Being disobeyed, they attacked the peasants with fury, killed five of them, and put the rest to flight, after which they cut off the heads of the slain and exposed them in front of the school-house.

As the Bonin Islands have been decided to be worthless to Great Britain, and as America does not care to possess them, it has been generously decided that Japan can keep them and do what she likes with them. So in spite of the copper plate, dated 1827, which announced that Captain Beechey, R.N., of the Beagle, I think, had taken possession of the Bonins in the name of King George, which copper plate was found on the islands by Mr. Consul Robertson last summer, the Japanese Empire may count the Bonins as one of her dependencies. Mr. Obana, an official of the Home-office, who was at the head of an abortive attempt to colonise the islands some fifteen years ago, has been appointed Governor, and has left with some future colonists for the seat of his government. But as there happen to be on the islands some waifs and strays of humanity who are entitled to if they do not claim British protection, a constable from H.B.M.'s Consular Court has gone with Mr. Obana, and taken to the islanders, the modern "Swiss Family Robinson," presents of clothing, and what we should call necessaries as well as the sublime assurance that they are British subjects, and owe Mr. Obana no allegiance. The extra-territoriality clause of the treaty with Japan throws its ægis over the British exiles, who it is to be hoped will not vex the soul of his Japanese Excellency too much ; for if they are cantankerous he will have no jurisdiction over them ; but will have to send them some four or five hundred miles to Yokohama, to be adjudicated upon. There is something to be proud of in being a Britisher in Japan after this ; and I hope the old lady who thought the Bonin Islands a paradise because, as she told Mr. Robertson, "they paid no taxes there" will be duly alive to the sentiment.

Mr. E. Peshine Smith, a lawyer of Rochester, U.S.A., who filled the post of adviser to the Government till August last, wore Japanese clothes, and the swords of a samurai, claimed to be nothing but "a poor, heathen Japanese," disowned his country, and refused to register as an American citizen in the Consulate of his country, went bareheaded in the broiling sun, and did Japan his best piece of service when he left her shores, has been the cause of a quarrel which reflects no credit upon any of the persons concerned in it. The editor of the Japan Weekly Mail, in commenting editorially upon General Van Buren's decision in the case of the Tokio-fu versus Batchelder, took occasion to treat the departed (for America) Mr. Smith to a few choice epithets, such as "demon," "tippler," "crapulous dotard," and by implication "rogue" and "impostor." Now it is not dignified to abuse, in terms such as these, an absent man who has no chance to defend himself, and I must confess to some surprise at the editor of the Mail allowing himself to descend to such scurrility. He did not escape unchallenged, however, for in a letter to the Japan Gazette a gentleman, whose identity is now as well established as if he had signed his own name literatim, under the initials "E. P. S." called Mr. Smith's critic a "liar" and a "coward." He further sent his card to the office of the paper, and the name of a friend to whom all possible communications on the subject, as far as it concerned him, could be sent. The public, anxious for some excitement, thought that blood must surely flow, particularly when it was bruited abroad that the editor of the Mail had answered the letter, and had appointed a friend to consult with the friend of "E. P. S." I feel inclined to blame the two friends for spoiling a pretty quarrel. They prevailed upon "E. P. S." to write a letter withdrawing the offensive terms. This second letter also appeared in the Gazette, and is beautifully Pickwickian. The gist of it is that the editor of the Mail is a l—— and a c—— in his office, while out of it he is "truthful" and "heroic." Strange to say the editor of the Mail did not see the absurdity—he says that he only read the original letter in his office, and insisted upon three words being struck out—and transferred the letter, as though it were a complete apology, into the columns of his Daily Advertiser. Next day he saw the mistake he had made, and waxed more furious than ever. He said that he did not accept the letter as a "sufficient, or indeed as any, apology; and in his last weekly issue has done everything but disclose the name of his antagonist, who, in his turn, in a letter headed No. 3, in this evening's Gazette, accuses the editor of the Mail of breach of faith; and while attempting to vindicate his own character, makes the confusion worse confounded. Whoever he may be, he might well say with Sir Andrew Aguecheek, "Had I known he were valiant and so cunning of fence, I'd have seen him d—d ere I'd have challenged him."

NAGASAKI.

The Cosmopolitan Press says it is a very considerable time since Nagasaki harbour presented its now lively appearance. The influx of shipping has made a great commotion in local compradore circles, and countenances which but a week ago looked sad and depressed now beam with joy and delight. Attempts are being made to establish an athletic club in Nagasaki.

The Rising Sun says a match at football between residents and the officers of H.B.M.'s gun-vessel Thistle resulted in the victory of the latter. The same paper states that the American corvette Yantic and H.B.M.'s gunboat Midge, both homeward bound. have left Nagasaki. On passing the men-of-war in harbour they were greeted with loud cheers, to which the respective crews responded in the most hearty manner.

PEKING.

It will be remembered that a cause célèbr ewas ordered up from the Chekeang province, to be retried before the Board of Punishments at Peking, in the beginning of the year. The appellant was a literary graduate, named Yang Nai-wu, who had been tried and convicted of conspiring with a woman named Koh to poison her husband. It was alleged that he had an intrigue with this lady, and that he bought arsenic and gave it to her, promising to marry her when her husband was removed. A druggist gave evidence that arsenic had been bought by the accused, and the latter was condemned to death. The sentence, however, seems to have been so notoriously unjust that the gentry and literati of the neighbourhood took the matter warmly up. Appeal after appeal was sent to Peking, and the case was three times referred back for re-hearing, but the decision of the local authorities was each time upheld. Still, backed by a Censor named Pien Pao-tsuan, the appellants would not give up, and at last compelled the interference of the Peking Government, who ordered the whole case to be retried before the Board of Punishments at the capital. The accused and all the witnesses were ordered to be sent to Peking ; and a circumstance occurred at the outset which went far to confirm the charge of unfair dealing brought against the officials. The principal witness against Yang Nai-wu had been the druggist, who affirmed he had bought the arsenic. But directly after leaving the Court, this man confessed that he had given false evidence. When the order came for the witnesses to be sent to Peking, this man was of course arrested with the others, but died suddenly after partaking of a meal with the runners on his way to the Yamen! The remainder of those concerned appear to have reached the capital, where the accused was found to have been cruelly tortured, although the officials had strenuously denied in their memorials that any such means had been used. Eventually even the corpse of the murdered man was ordered to be taken to Peking; and a long letter in the Shunpao now affirms that the Board have satisfied themselves that the whole charge was unfounded, although their decision has not yet yet been proclaimed.

The Peking Gazette of the 11th December contains a decree appointing two new members to the Yamen of Foreign Affairs, in the person of Li Hung-tsao, President of the Board of Works, and King-lien, the chief of the Censorate, these two high functionaries being at the same time members of the Grand Council of State, and the only two members of that body who have not hitherto been associated with the Department of Foreign Affairs. Their appointment is presumably made in connection with the vacancies caused by the death of Wen-siang in May last and the recent departure of Kwoh Sung-tao for Europe.

In the same Gazette a decree appears deploring the death of Ch'ung-shih, in the post of Military Governor of Sheng-king ; and announcing that his brother, Ch'ung-how, left Peking on the following day to succeed him at Moukden.

HANKOW.

A correspondent of the Celestial Empire writes, under date 23rd Dec., as follows :—

H.M.S. Kestrel returned to this port on the 20th Dec. She was under orders to proceed at once to Ichang with Mr. W. King, H.B.M.'s Consul at Kiukiang, provided she could do so without danger of running aground. The river is so shallow, however, that it was thought advisable to put off the expedition until next year, when the water begins to rise. It is said that in one place between this and Ichang there is no more than three feet of water.

The Hankow Amateur Dramatic Club have treated us to their first performance this season. The pieces chosen were The Original and Nursery Chickweed. Both were very successful, the result in no small degree of the energy of the manager, who himself took a leading part. Judging from this first effort, our theatrical corps is as strong as ever, in spite of the loss of one or two of our leading actors of last season.

The U.S.S. Monocacy is expected here shortly.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 29th December ; the P. and O. mail from London Nov. 10 was received on the 25th December. The North China Herald contains the following summary of news :—

The week has been kept pretty nearly as a general holiday. The Public Offices closed from Friday to Tuesday, and the intervening days were a blank as regards anything but amusement. A Drag Hunt was had on Saturday, Paper Hunts on Friday and Monday, and a Drag Hunt again on Tuesday. But we have little else to record in the shape of incidents during the week. While more willing perhaps than any other people to seek their fortunes abroad, Englishmen have a marked propensity for transplanting their old customs and old sports to their new home. They play cricket even under the sultry sun of India ; they have horse races alike in Canada or New Zealand, in Hong Kong or Barbadoes. In default of foxes they hunt kangaroos in Australia, and in default of either, they hunt paper in Shanghai, and have even organised an imaginary fox, which the hounds follow with as much zest as if the real animal were before them. But to no custom do they cling more kindly than to that of the Christmas festival. "Christmas comes but once a-year," and that is a good reason for making the most of it, which certainly we in Shanghai show no disposition to overlook. The stores are filled with toys for young folk, and more finished and costly presents for their elders. Business establishments are closed ; and all the world makes holiday. Coolies carrying Christmas (fir) trees are to be seen in every street, and the sale of evergreens assumes the proportion of a distinct industry. The hills around Ningpo are laid under contribution for holly, and our halls and dining-rooms are decorated in a way not unworthy of the old country. Nor do the dinner tables suffer by comparison. Decidedly the national propensity to celebrate every event by a banquet is not weakened by residence in the Far East. Whether in the houseboat up country, or in the dining-room in the Settlements, we may be sure that good cheer abounds, and hearty toasts are drunk to the "old folks at home," whose customs we copy. And it is well that we should perpetuate these celebrations. Kindliness, hospitality, and friendship are promoted by such genial meetings, and memories are awakened and chords struck that are, perhaps, too apt to lie dormant amid the drive and worry of our daily life. It is well that we should cast aside for a brief space the anxieties of business; and we believe no people possess the faculty of doing so, and "going in" for enjoyment while they are about it, more thoroughly than do the foreign residents in Shanghai.

We mentioned last week that Mr. Davenport had gone overland to Chinkeang, with the object of ascertaining that the proclamations announcing the settlement of the Yunnan case were posted in accordance with the stipulation. It is satisfactory to learn that they were found properly exhibited everywhere ; both inside and outside the town, and at conspicuous places in the large thoroughfares in the country. Some were simply posted on the walls, but the greater part were on boards, which are hung up during the day and carried in at night. A copy of the proclamation has been posted up at Wuchang under what Olyphant calls the tunnel, where there are always crowds of people passing, and another near the great book establishment in the city ; but these are insufficient. It is especially at the gates that copies should be placed.

A meeting of the Committee of the Chinese Polytechnic Institution and Reading-Room was held on the 15th December. The year's accounts show a deficiency of about Tls. 1,000, which has been raised by loan on the security of the property. Mr. Medhurst has resigned the chairmanship of the committee in view of his approaching departure from Shanghai, and will be succeeded by Mr. Glover. The committee is to be strengthened by the introduction of more Chinese gentlemen. We are glad to see that an effort is to be made to complete the original intention had in view in founding the institution, and which has been half lost sight of under more pretentious schemes. Mr. Medhurst's original intention was to establish a reading-room, where especially translations of instructive foreign literature should be provided ; and it will be well if this plan is thoroughly carried out. The ambitious project of an iron and glass building for an exhibition does not seem to advance. A report from the promoters of the Amoy Reading-Room shows that good progress has been made at that port on slender funds ; but they do not appear to contemplate an exhibition just yet.

The Consul-General for the United States notifies that, on and after the 13th February next, no Lekin taxes shall be levied upon foreign imports within the limits of the foreign Settlements. This affirms the stipulation in Clause I. of the Trade Section of the Chefoo Convention,—with the difference, however, that it is understood the Ministers now at Peking do not accept the converse principle admitted by Sir Thomas Wade, that Lekin may be levied elsewhere. We only hope they see their way to defeating the levy ; that is where the difficulty comes in. The limitation of the period within which drawback may be claimed, to three years, as stipulated in Clause V. of the Convention, is also agreed to, with the concession, however,—understood to have been gained by Mr. Von Brandt—that drawback certificates shall be payable in cash if the holder wishes, and not only be available for payment of duties as heretofore.

Two very beautiful windows have been placed in the south aisle of the Cathedral, in memory of the late Mr. Robert Reid, M.P. They represent "Joseph making himself known to his brethren," and are executed by Messrs. Lavers, Barrand, and Westlake, of Endell-street, London. In richness of colour and simplicity of design these windows have no rivals in the Cathedral. They have the genuine warm tint of ancient glass, which modern workers so long despaired of attaining, and the expressions of the faces are varied and admirable. The inscription reads as follows:—"To the Glory of God, and in affectionate remembrance of Robert Reid, M.P., late of Shanghai. Deceased 30th March, 1875. This window is erected by his brother David."

An action has been heard at the United States Consulate-General, before Mr. Myers, the Consul-General, and two associates, in which E. G. Goodwin sought to recover $1,000 from Wm. Marshall for defamation of character. Goodwin was formerly third officer of the S.S.N. Co.'s steamer Plymouth Rock, and he alleged that he had been discharged through false representation made against him to Mr. Hitch, a partner in Messrs. Russell and Co., the agents of the company, by defendant, who is an engineer in the same service. The Court decided that there was insufficient evidence to substantiate the claim.

The trial of Thomas Henry Brown, charged with the attempted robbery of the Hupeh's treasure, held at the U.S. Consulate-General, has been concluded. No further evidence was adduced, and the legal gentlemen on each side having addressed the Court, the Consul-General and the two associates retired to consider their decision. They found the prisoner guilty, and he was sentenced to one year's imprisonment, and ordered to pay a fine of one dollar and the costs of the prosecution.

The new stern-wheel steamer Pao-Kong, built by Messrs. Farnham and Co., has had another trial trip. The route taken was up the river, and in an hour and seventeen minutes a point called Saikong was reached, the distance completed being computed at about twenty miles. This, of course, makes her speed about fifteen miles an hour. She was then turned round and made an equally successful return passage.

H.B.M.'s Charybdis has arrived with the Lapwing, having accomplished the passage from the Gulf of Pechili with apparently little difficulty. The hull of the Lapwing is somewhat damaged, and it is expected she will go into dock in a few days.

The German barque Pallas, just arrived from Sydney, grounded in the river at Woosung at 8 A.M. on the 25th Dec., and was unable to get off on the three subsequent tides. She sustained no damage.

On Christmas-day some benevolent Chinese forwarded to the Central Police-station, for distribution, by Mr. Penfold, 2,000 padded cotton jackets. The only restriction accompanying the gift was that jinricksha runners should be first served, and hundreds of these were supplied the same afternoon. The distribution of the surplus was left to Mr. Penfold's discretion.

The military examinations which have been going on during the last month in Wuchang have ended, and the list of successful candidates is published. Forty-one only, out of a list of two thousand, have attained a degree; and of these six are Manchus from the garrison of Kweichow.

Messrs. Bisset and Co. report as follows upon the Share market:—

H. and S. Bank.—Sales are reported at 22 per cent. and 23 per cent. premium, with exchange 72; the market closes firm at the latter rate. S.S.N. Co.—A number of shares were placed last week at Tls. 65 cash, and Tls. 67½ for 31st January; a demand has set in, and buyers now offer Tls. 66 for cash shares, but holders are firm, and no transactions are reported since the holidays. Yangtsze Insurance Association.—A sale at Tls. 620 is reported. Other stocks are quiet.

The offertory on Christmas Day at the Cathedral amounted to Tls. 430.

The weather has been delightful during the week; the thermometer has ranged from 34 to 54.

A good deal of difficulty still crops up from time to time with native couriers, &c., in the interior. Some months ago a courier carrying packages from our office to Szechuan and Kweichow was waylaid, beaten, and robbed, because it was known that he was in possession of foreign papers; and now we hear that between Hankow and Chungking there are perpetual interruptions. These are believed to occur principally at Kwei Fu, where, we are informed, a very anti-foreign individual, noted for his obstructiveness, has been placed in charge of the likin office. There seems to be still great dissatisfaction in Yunnan, all the officials there expressing themselves much mortified at the results of the Chefoo Convention, particularly those clauses which concede the right of establishing commercial intercourse with that province via Burmah. The affair had been left so long in abeyance that they thought themselves safe from molestation, having come to the conclusion that we were evidently unable to enforce our rights. The only regret to our mind is that these "rights" should have been mentioned in any Treaty whatever. They are self-existent and pre-existent, and stand far above all Treaty stipulations; or, rather, they constitute part of the only basis upon which Treaties can be concluded and international relations carried on. This is one of the first elements of the diplomatic gospel, and we shal never tire of preaching it.

A meeting has been held at the house of Rev. J. Lambuth, the occasion being one of an exceptionally interesting character. A very large representation of the missionaries at Shanghai gathered to meet with and welcome Bishop Marvin, of the Methodist Episcopal Church of America, who is on an Episcopal tour of all the Oriental Missions of his Church. He has already visited Japan, and is en route for India, via the mission stations of China. After an unusually full and exhaustive conference upon the topic of the evening, to wit, "The Encouragements and Discouragements of Missionary Work in China," the missionaries, with other friends present, had the pleasure of listening to some forcible and interesting remarks from the Bishop, to the personal part of which a brief and telling response was made, on behalf of the assembled missionaries, by the Rev. William Muirhead.

Our Kwei-chow correspondent writes under date 30th Nov.:—Since my last we have heard of an insurrection in Kwang si, and now we hear of troubles at the Kwei-fuh Customs and Lekin Barrier in Sze-chuan. It was also quietly rum oured last week that H.I. Majesty Kwang-su had died of some dreadful disease, or other cause. It is probable that the report of trouble in Kwang-si is true, but the rest may be only the false reports set afloat by members of secret societies. From Ky-chow, a city about 160 li from here, we learn that the people have seized the Che-chow, or Magistrate, and are bringing him here as a prisoner for having unlawfully levied or imposed an extra amount of Grain tax. The military examinations which commenced on the 19th inst. are nearly ended, and everything is going on very quietly. The local issue of the Peking Gazette not having yet appeared, there is a good demand for the Shunpau, as people are anxious to know the results of the "Chefoo Conference." Mining operations are again at a standstill for the want of capital and genuine enterprise.

The special services appropriate to the season of Christmas were ushered in at Trinity Cathedral on Christmas-eve, which, this year, fell upon Sunday evening. The decorations of the Cathedral show a marked improvement upon those of previous years, in that the colours are warmer and brighter than has been the case heretofore. The pulpit and the reredos are panelled with bright crimson, emblazoned with white letters framed in dark glistening leaves; the choir stalls are also hung with crimson, while the pillars of the nave are entwined, as usual, with thick ropes of evergreen. The altar is draped in warm-white satin, edged with crimson picked out with amber; on this rests a small super-altar, inscribed with the word "Emmanuel," which, in its turn, is surmounted by a large cross made with admirable skill to represent icicles. The first object which strikes the eye, however, in entering the church from the main door is a huge white cross floating in mid air, under the chancel arch—a most effective and ingenious device. The font, however, is perhaps the chef d'œuvre of the whole, and reflects the highest credit upon the lady who claims this department as her specialité. Our Catholic friends observed the festival of Christmas in the same way as heretofore. It is hardly necessary to give a description of the services, as they differed in no essential point from those we described last year. The church is decorated with the falling banners of coloured silk, while the Bambino, brightly lighted up, occupies its usual place in front of the high altar.

A party of a dozen friends met this Christmas in Shanghai, who, being mostly old residents in China, had the curiosity to reckon up their several terms of sojourn in the country, and the aggregate was found to amount to no less than 266 years, giving to each an average of over twenty-two years. Seven of the party averaged thirty-one years each, six thirty-three years, and five thirty-four years; and we are happy to be able to add that the veterans are all enjoying the best of health.

The Shen-pao contains a sensible article about the likin taxation. It urges that the Government has now an opportunity to do away with the impost altogether, but expresses no hope that this will ever come to pass, the great stumbling-block being the interest of the mandarins in preserving its existence.

We are informed that his Excellency Ch'ung How, of Tientsin massacre celebrity, has recently been appointed to the Governorship of Moukden, vice his brother, who, hitherto, has held that post. The appointment is, however, we believe, a temporary one.

We notice that a series of papers on Chess—the English game—is about to appear in the Shen-pao. The writer is a Chinese, who has recently learnt to play, and is now most enthusiastic upon the subject.

FOOCHOW.

The subjoined items of intelligence are from the Foochow Herald:—

The tail cutting mania has reached the upper prefectures of this province, and the people are in a state of great agitation over it. It is affirmed at Yen-ping and the neighbouring places that many persons have had their tails cut off by some invisible agency. A missionary of the American Methodist Episcopal Mission, on his way up the river recently, noticed that the boatmen who were coming down from Yen-ping were unusually impudent, not only in calling out to him, with opprobrious epithets, but in exclaiming, "You ought to be killed." "If you go to the upper prefectures you will get your head cut off," &c. When he came into the neighbourhood of Yen-ping he was met by a messenger who informed him that the magistrate wished him to delay his entrance a little while, so that he might first inform the people, and quiet their minds. He entered the city last Saturday, towards night, and stayed over Sunday, holding the usual services in the lately restored chapel. The services were not interrupted in any way, but the whole city was greatly stirred by the widespread rumours of mysterious hair cutting. Two girls, members of a family residing in the same house with one of the Christians, have had their hair cut off, and affirm solemnly that they have no knowledge of when, where, or how it was done. Intelligent persons believe it to be the work of people who wish to foment a rebellion.

The new Viceroy is not expected before the middle of next month. Immediately after the arrival of his Excellency, Ting Futai will, we hear, leave for Formosa, on an official tour of inspection. It is understood that the coal and petroleum districts of the island will engage the special attention of the Futai.

The Prefect and the local magistrates have within the last few days issued a stringent proclamation against the practice of female infanticide. It provides that all parents guilty of destroying a child shall be punished according to the law against the destruction of descendants, which it seems provides sixty blows and a year's imprisonment as the proper punishment.

HONG KONG.

Our advices by this mail extend to the 4th January; the French mail from London, Nov. 17, arrived out on the 29th December, and the following P. and O. mail of Nov. 24 was received on the 2nd January. The following items of news are from the China Mail:—

Mr. Philippo, the new Attorney-General, arrived on the 2nd from Singapore.

By the M.M. steamer Meikong on the 29th the new Governor of Macao, his Excellency Carlos Eugenio Correa da Silva, and family, and Dr. Ennes, the new Bishop of Macao, and nine priests, arrived here, en route for Macao. The Government launch Victoria was placed at the disposal of the illustrious visitors by the Colonial Government, and the Bishop landed shortly after three o'clock in her, whence he proceeded to the Hotel de l'Univers, where he is now staying. Immediately on the arrival of the Meikong, the Portuguese Reception Committee proceeded on board in the launch Blanche, to wait on his Excellency the Governor, and his Lordship the new Bishop. Shortly before four o'clock, the Governor landed in the barge of the Portuguese gunboat Tejo at Peddar's Wharf, where a Company of the 28th Regiment was formed as a guard of honour. As his Excellency landed, the band of the 28th struck up the National Anthem; and assembled at the wharf, to greet the new Governor, were a number of members of the Portuguese community. After a few salutations with some of the leading residents of Hong Kong and Macao, he proceeded on foot to the Hong Kong Hotel, where he is now staying. The shore battery fired a salute of seventeen guns as the Governor stepped on the wharf, and the Tejo manned yards when the barge passed her.

His Excellency Senhor Carlos Correia da Silva, the new Governor of Macao, was presented with an address from the Portuguese at their Club on the evening of the 29th of January. Shortly after nine o'clock his Excellency, accompanied by his aide-de-camp and the Colonial Secretary of Macao, arrived at the Club, where he was received by a large number of the most prominent Portuguese residents in the island, and conducted to the spacious ball-room. Here, after a few words from Mr. J. J. Remedios, the address to his Excellency, which was on satin, was read by Mr. Noronha, senior. It congratulated his Excellency on his safe arrival and that of his wife; wished him hearty success in his new sphere of duties, and trusted he would do his best to ameliorate the condition of Macao. His Excellency replied to the address in a speech which, although brief, was exceedingly vigorous. He said he was glad to have the opportunity of meeting such a large number of Portuguese here; that he regarded everyone of them and all Portuguese, whether resident here, at Macao, of elsewhere, as his countrymen, and would do his best for their interests, and he pledged his word of honour that everything he could do to improve the condition of Macao should be done. He thanked the community for the manner in which they had received him, and wished them and the colony all prosperity. Mr. Remedios proposed three cheers—one for his Excellency, another for the welfare of Macao, and a third for the Portuguese in China, and these having been energetically responded to the Governor in return proposed cheers for the King of Portugal and for the Hong Kong community. Wine was handed round in the course of the proceedings, and some selections were played on the piano. His Excellency took his departure for Macao in the Portuguese gunboat Tejo. It was also intended to present an address to the new bishop, but owing to his lordship being unwell this part of the proceedings was postponed.

Amongst the list of articles presented to the City Hall Museum during the past ten days will be noted a model steam laundry, which, as might be expected, attracts unusual attention from the native visitors—especially those to whose tender mercies our shirt buttons are every week consigned. The model is beautifully made in brass. At the extreme end is a highly-finished steam engine, working a long shaft whence belts communicate motion to the machines which perform the various processes. First comes the "stamper," which takes the place of the barbarous "stone beating" in vogue in Hong Kong. Next comes the "rinser," then the "wringer," and finally the "mangler." A slight touch with the hand-iron renders the clothes requiring this finish fit for use, starching of course being provided for at one stage of the operations. At present the model is only a mournful monument of what might be done in Hong Kong if anybody with capital and perseverance enough took the subject in hand. It seems strange that no one has as yet come forward to emancipate the foreign residents from the thraldom of native dhobies. We shall note the results of this exhibition of the model with some interest.

To another department two or three things of considerable interest have been added. Most of our readers have read of Chinese "fighting irons," but very few have ever seen one. A formidable iron flail, hanging up in the large hall, and which was recently captured from a piratical junk, will show visitors what a business-like weapon it is. In the hands of an unskilled user it is probably as dangerous to the user as to his enemies, but wielded by a practised hand it is certainly a terrific weapon. Some aboriginal Australian letters, consisting of pieces of wood carved and notched in fantastic design, are also curious. Their interpretation is placed beside them. The type-writing machine still continues to attract visitors, and we hope that its spirited inventors will find some market in Hong Kong.

We noted some days ago the rapid passage of the O. and O. Steamer Oceanic from this port to Yokohama, and it now appears that this fine vessel has kept up her speed during the passage over to California. She is reported by telegraph as having made the run from Yokohama to San Francisco in fourteen days and fifteen hours. Leaving Hong Kong on Dec. 4 at 3 P.M. she reached Yokohama at 5.40 A.M. on the 10th, and after remaining two days at that port, resumed her voyage on the 12th. She must have arrived at San Francisco on last Christmas-day, thus, with the allowance for the difference of time crossing the meridian, making the trip from Hong Kong to her destination in twenty steaming days, and twenty-two days from port to port. It is not every day that a passenger can leave Hong Kong on Dec. 4 and eat his Christmas dinner at San Francisco three weeks afterwards; but this is what has been done in this instance. Some idea may be formed of the distance run by the Oceanic when we state that the shortest route she could possibly have taken by following the "great circle" is about 6,200 miles.

Two sentences have within the last week or two been passed on prisoners at the police-court by the magistrates, which at the first blush doubtless appeared to many people as somewhat harsh, but we venture to think that to those who have carefully considered the cases, and are, so to speak, a little behind the scenes, the decisions will appear not only justifiable but deserving of hearty commendation. We refer to the case in which a Chinese constable was fined $200 for a breach of the police regulations, and to another, which was heard the other day, where a woman, the second wife of a Chinese merchant, was sentenced to twenty-one days' imprisonment, and to find security for good behaviour for six months, for cruelly ill-using a little servant-girl. With regard to the first case we have very little to say. The circumstances as stated in the Court seemed to throw considerable suspicion upon the constable, that he had attempted to "squeeze" a prisoner to the extent of $90 on the prospect of evading the police-court; the constable himself admitted that he had taken the prisoner to his house in the first instance, and that he had neglected to report the case. The suspicion, however, could not be proved against him, and the magistrate did all he could to vindicate the probity of the native police force here, and administer a severe caution to the constable by mulcting him in the heavy fine in question. The practice of Chinese officers to turn any little authority that may be vested in them to their own advantage by the process of "squeezing" is so notorious that when anything of this kind occurs within the island one cannot help indulging in reflections not altogether complimentary to our native guardians of the peace. The second case is one which we fear is indicative of a crying abuse of native life in this Colony. We believe we are not going beyond the truth, and not expressing ourselves too strongly, when we say that these servant girls, who are found in almost every Chinese family in Hong-Kong, are in the majority of cases nothing more or less than slaves, and by no means well-used ones. A short time ago we had a case in which a woman was shown to have strung up her servant-girl and to have branded her, and in this case, if we recollect rightly, the inhuman mistress was let off with a fine that was totally inadequate to meet the requirements of the case. In the case under consideration we are told that the unfortunate girl, a child seven years of age, was suffering from a contused wound on the head, had her eyes blackened from a blow across the nose; her legs black and very much swollen, in fact almost bursting from distension; and she is also said to have been dirty and hungry when brought to the station. It is quite time that a check was put upon proceedings of this kind, and we are inclined to hail the sentence as a step in the right direction. The community may be congratulated on the fact that the magisterial bench has been strengthened by the appointment of one who, although conversant with the Chinese language and customs, is nevertheless free from all bias in their favour when gross abuses become apparent.

We understand that a testimonial of the value of $200 has been presented to Dr. Dennys, by the merchants of Hong Kong, "As a Slight Recognition of the Service rendered by him to the cause of Truth in the publication of his Short Rejoinder to an article in Macmillan's Magazine by Sir Charles Dilke upon English Influence in China."

CANTON.

The China Mail correspondent writes:—

A fire of a somewhat serious nature occurred in Canton on the night of the 30th December last. The scene of the conflagration was one of the wealthiest in the Western suburb. The origin of the fire was supposed to be incendiarism, occurring as it did in a shop which had been just vacated as an opium-smoking divan. More than ten houses were consumed, and among them were three well-known eating-houses. No lives were lost, but the families of the respectable Chinese living in the neighbourhood were much alarmed. In the case of one aristocratic house, there happened to be a coffin containing the remains of a deceased relative; and on the alarm being given, those in the house were placed in a most anxious state of mind for the safety of the coffin, which was removed before any other property was looked after.

The flower boats at Kuk Fow, Canton, have again been the cause of a serious disturbance. It may be remembered that some time last year these pleasure-boats were all turned away from this anchorage on the complaint of Dr. Kerr, but since that gentleman's departure the boat-owners have gradually returned to the spot. Some vagabonds in the neighbourhood endeavoured to levy a black-mail on them. This was not complied with, and the rowdies sought a chance to create a riot and to throw the blame on the boat-owners, so that the authorities would drive away the boats and be thus made the tools of vengeance. In the same neighbourhood there has been recently established an eating-house somewhat similar to the Hang-fa-low here, wherein sing-song parties could be given. No better opportunity could have occurred to carry out the wishes of the rowdies, and they accordingly got up, a few days ago, a riot on some pretext or other, smashing up everything in the house, which they made a complete wreck. The prime mover of the rowdy party, a tailor in the same street, then got up a petition, which he headed with his own name, charging the boat-owners and the proprietor of the eating-house with keeping immoral establishments and with being the cause of the disturbance. The petition also charged the Namhoi magistrate with receiving bribes, and other military officials and yamen runners with being owners of some of these establishments. The Viceroy ordered the provincial judge, in conjunction with other officials, to make a searching inquiry into these allegations; meantime all the flower boats must "wylo" from Kuk Fow. The tailor, Tam Wai Kee, is at present in custody, for it is generally believed that the charge against the Namhoi magistrate is false.

COCHIN CHINA.

SAIGON.

Dr. Harmand has written a letter to the Saigon Independent, in which he says he was greatly surprised to read the paragraph concerning himself which we recently reproduced from that paper, and adds, "Without entering into the numberless errors in this article, I beg you to insert the present letter, and to abstain in future from entertaining the public with facts and action concerning me."

The Independent of the 1st January says:—"At the close of the year Saigon may make her account and add to its liquidation of capital the houses of business, large and small, which have closed or disappeared during the year. Two large houses—one of the first rank, and a third, a foreign house, are no longer numbered in Saigon; while as to shops, these close up and nothing is heard of them; and what will soon remain to us of the prosperity which we had from 1868 to 1872, which marked the apogy of the colony? One of the causes of this is the disappearance of sailing vessels from the port, and a second cause is said to be the sale of stores by the employés of the Messageries Maritimes, the vessels of which company are said to be transformed into a regular fair, where one can buy freely from the stewards, linen shirts, hats, boots, umbrellas, perfumery, &c. The above paper says that the company denies the truth of these statements being a loser of some f.2,000 per voyage, but still always informed by those in its employ that nothing of the kind takes place. It urges that the matter should be seriously looked into."

JAVA.

—o—

BATAVIA.

The Straits Times translates from the Batavia newspapers the subjoined items of news:—

On the 20th December the following telegram, dated the 16th, from the military and civil Commander at Atkin, was published at Batavia:—"Rajah of Simpang Olim has fled and has been deposed, and a reward has been offered for his apprehension. Tunku Muda Angkasa has been murdered by hirelings of the Rajah of Simpang Olim. The head men and people of Simpang Olim are well disposed. News from the north coast satisfactory." The murdered Tonku Muda Angkasa was Rajah of Passi, and had been co-operating with the Dutch in the reduction of Simpang Olim. An additional company of troops was, by last accounts, to be despatched to Simpang Olim.

According to official returns the Java coffee crop for last year was recently estimated at 1,286,255 piculs, of which quantity 1,263,359 piculs, had been delivered into the coffee storehouse there up to the end of November last.

On the 23rd Dec., three judicial officers and Mr. Groeneveldt, a Chinese interpreter, were to leave Batavia for Delhi, to inquire into the differences arising there between planters and coolies, and into the complaints mutually made by them.

On the 17th December a Javanese at Batavia, when in a state of delirium from fever, ran an amok, killing one Bantamese coolie and wounding six others, two of whom were not expected to recover. Afterwards he inflicted nine wounds on himself so that his life was despaired of.

The Java Bode of the 18th December states that cholera was then prevailing greatly at Anjer, the population of several campongs there having suffered much from it.

The Governor-General has ordered four native schools to be established in the Aru Islands.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

—o—

SINGAPORE.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 11th January; the P. and O. mail from London Dec. 8 was received on the 11th January. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times:—

There has been no attempt at a repetition of the Chinese riots in regard to the establishment of a sub-post-office here, and business has been proceeding as if nothing of the kind had taken place. The determined action of the authorities in dealing with the rioters has given general satisfaction, and the only regret attendant upon the affair is, that more stern measures could not have been adopted towards the leaders and instigators of the mob. One incident, however, which has arisen within the last few days will serve to remind the daring agents of the secret societies that the late emeute has not been forgotten. The Hokien Chinamen applied in the usual way to the police for permission to hold a monster procession and meeting for the purpose of returning thanks for the goods which the gods have given them during the last three years, but as it is known that some of the leading members of that Society were concerned in the instigation of the riots, permission was not granted to the holding of the public meeting, and the refusal seems to have taken the Chinese by surprise. Secret societies, religious processions, and mass meetings are looked upon, and are treated, as criminal offences in China, and though, naturally, we have no wish to advocate stringent measures for the suppression of what are ordinarily harmless superstitious observances, it is not unwise to hold a firm hand over the Chinese on occasion, and thus let them understand that though perfect freedom may be theirs, if they conduct themselves loyally, it can under circumstances be shorn of some of its luxuries. The lesson which the riots has taught is a simple one; secret societies are capable of causing the most serious mischief in the community, and measures should be taken either to limit their sphere of action or to suppress them altogether.

Another Chinaman has fallen a victim to the riots. This man was shot in the instep, his foot being completely smashed. When conveyed to the hospital, we understand, he persistently refused to have his leg amputated. At last, however, he consented to the operation, but it was then too late, his system having been exhausted from the profuse discharge from the wound. He died five days after the amputation and twenty-six after receiving the wound. This makes the fourth victim to the folly of the Chinese. It will be remembered in reference to the riots that Government having obtained information to the effect that one of the leaders of a secret society, Lim Ah Tye, was beyond doubt concerned in the instigation of the disturbances, had him placed on board the M.M. steamer Meikong for conveyance to China, care being taken, the Governor assured the Legislative Council, that he should not be allowed to land at Saigon or Hong Kong. So far satisfaction was given, but we now learn that the Chinaman in question has been arrested in Hong Kong.

It will be remembered that the chiefs Maharajah Lela, Datu Sagor, Pandak Indut, and four others, were found guilty by a Malay Court of having been concerned in the murder of Mr. Birch and three other persons, and were sentenced to death. The Secretary of State for the Colonies having been consulted on the subject, has decided that the Government should advise the Raja Muda to exercise his prerogative of mercy towards four of the convicts, on the ground that they were used simply as the agents of others in a superior position; and as no advice has been tendered on behalf of the three chiefs named, they will be executed. The four prisoners whose sentences have been commuted will suffer imprisonment for life. The Government still maintains a strict reserve regarding the future of Sultan Abdullah, who also is accused of complicity in the same crime, and it is now rumoured that he will not be put upon his trial, and that a kind of compromise is being effected regarding his position in Perak. The action of Government in refusing information on the subject to the public or their representatives is very reprehensible, and creates a principle which is dangerous and impolitic.

The Legislative Council has been adjourned sine die, and its last meeting was signalised by passing through, without previous notice and without much discussion, an extraordinary measure in the shape of amendments to the Courts Ordinance Bill of 1873. For some time past the manner in which the business of our Law Courts has been conducted has been most unsatisfactory, owing, in many instances, to the want of, and the absence of judges, and this last has given the coup de grace to any hope which was left of raising the legal Courts from the slough of mistrust into which they had gradually but surely been sinking in the minds of all classes. The measure was condemned by the unofficial members, and it found evidently only an unwilling advocate in the person of the Attorney-General.

The treaty, if it might be so termed, entered into by the Chiefs of the Nine States agreeing to refer any disputes among themselves to the Maharajah of Johore has formed the subject matter of an able letter from the pen of Mr. Read to the Governor, in which a comprehensive review of the history of the past of those States has been entered into. Mr. Read justly condemns the arrangement, which has given general dissatisfaction, and shows clearly the false and anomalous position in which the Maharajah of Johore may be placed in being made an arbitrator without power, and an adviser without being able to command respect.

Inspector Strugnell made a raid on a party of gamblers, in a hut near the Outram-road, on the 9th January. About a dozen Chinese were busily engaged in card-playing, with some thirty dollars in cash before them. On the entrance of the police there was a general retreat, but five were captured, with the gambling implements and money. This capture may have the effect of breaking up a gambling confraternity which has been carrying on its little game for some time past. We have no doubt of the activity of the police in their endeavours to put down gambling, but this is the first instance we have heard of for some time past, of their success in capturing offenders red-handed.

The Malacca Land Act which was lately passed through the Legislative Council has given, as we anticipated it would at the time, much dissatisfaction to the landed proprietors of Malacca. It is a radical measure interfering with the prescriptive right of landowners, and its introduction in the statute-book will create endless litigation.

The French ironclad frigate La Galinissgonere, Captain Conte, bearing the flag of Rear-Admiral Perigot, late Commander-in-Chief of the French Squadron in the Pacific, anchored in the roads on the 6th Jan. from China and Saigon, and saluted Fort Canning. She is on her way home, and proceeds via the Suez Canal.

The official statement of the note circulation of the local Banks for the month of December is as follows: Oriental Bank $178,175; Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China, $387,275; Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China, $466,650.

The subjoined notification appears in the Government Gazette:—

The temporary appointments of Mr. Baumgarten at Singapore, and Mr. Logan at Penang, as judges of the Supreme Court, ceased to have effect from the 1st January. As a temporary arrangement Captain Walshe and Mr. D. F. A. Hervey will act as Commissioners of the Court of Requests at Singapore, and Captain Hatchell and Mr. C. W. S. Kynnersley at Penang.

Market Reports.

IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—The advance in exchange had caused holders to be quite ready to accept current offers, and sales of Yarns, Indigo Shirtings, Prints and Velvets had been made at low prices. Some few transactions in Shirtings are reported at weaker rates, but there had been no general improvement in the demand. Turkey Reds were quite neglected. In Woollens, Moussellines had found buyers at reduced prices, and Italian Cloth and Blankets had been fairly saleable at about previous quotations. There had been rather more inquiry for Bar and Nail Rod Iron, but the low offers made by dealers had not led to any important operations.

HIOGO AND OSAKA.—The Chamber of Commerce Circular says:—The past month has been a period of almost unexampled depression throughout, and goods have been difficult of sale even at a reduction. Cottons—Grey Shirtings: The dealers are still heavily supplied, and cannot be tempted as yet to add to their stocks even at lower prices. The same remarks may be said to apply to Turkey Red Cambrics, Black Velvets, and most Cotton goods. Black Sateens continue saleable at a decline. Worsteds and Woollens: With the exception of Thibets and Italian Cloth, Woollens are likewise neglected. Forced sales of Plain Mousselines are reported at even lower rates than those last quoted. Cloth is quite unsaleable, except at ruinous prices. There has been a limited inquiry for particular assortments of Blankets and Flannels. Iron: The market remains quiet.

CHINKIANG.—Messrs. Spencer and Wolff write, on the 20th December:—Scarcely any business has been done in Piece Goods since the date of our last, the 13th instant. Indeed, the market has been almost at a standstill, no sales of any importance having been reported, and the few bales that have changed hands not sufficing to establish quotations. The future prospects of trade as regard Manchester Goods are dependent entirely upon advices that may be received from Shanghai, for so long as that market remains in its present unsettled state dealers here will be reluctant to operate, fearing a further decline in prices there.

HANKOW.—There had been very little demand for foreign manufactures during the fortnight, and quotations were quite nominal, the only business reported having been the sale of 500 pieces Gray Jeans at Tls. 1.46. Metals—Lead: L.B. quoted Tls. 6.25 to 6.30 per picul but there was very little enquiry. Quicksilver: The quotation of Tls. 57.00 to 58.00 per picul was quite nominal, there being no buyers even at the lower figure.

SHANGHAI.—There had been a good speculative demand for medium and better qualities of Grey Shirtings and notwithstanding the Christmas holidays intervening about 90,000 pieces had changed hands during the week, principally for cash, at the following rates:—8-4lbs. good common at Tls. 1.60 to 1.65; favourite medium at Tls. 1.70 to 1.75, and best chops for Tls. 1.80 to 1.85 per piece. More inquiry had also been shown for "respectable" makes of 7 lbs. weights which were saleable from Tls. 1.22 to 1.30 per piece. In Heavy Cloths there was also more inclination among buyers to operate in guaranteed qualities at about Tls. 2.25 to 2.35 per piece. T-Cloths were attracting more attention at the close and there were buyers of every description of Cloth at an advance of fully 5 candareens all round on last quotations, but the ideas of most holders favoured still higher prices, and transactions had been small. Drills were wanted at previous rates, but there were few sellers since the decline in exchange without an adequate advance in currency prices. Fancy Cottons exhibited no change in value with very little business doing in this branch. Camlets values had improved in auction, prices averaging at Tls. 13.09½ per piece for CPH: Spanish Stripes realised at Tls 0.53½ per yard. Long Ells: Scarlet were quoted from Tls. 6.60 to Tls. 6.89 per piece according to quality and chop. There had been scarcely anything doing in Metals.

HONG KONG.—Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular says:—Business has been checked during the past fortnight by the usual Christmas holidays, and but little of interest has transpired. Cotton Yarns: Bombay Yarns are a shade weaker, but Nos. 16 to 24 English are unchanged in value; Nos. 28 to 32 and 38 to 42 have not been dealt in. Piece Goods: Settlements have been of a most trifling nature, and the few small sales made are no guide to the state of the market. Previous quotations are generally repeated. Woollens: Other than a sale of 250 pieces Camlets nothing of importance has been done; purchases of most articles could doubtless be made at somewhat easier rates. Metals: Some small parcels of Lead have changed hands upon former terms. Quicksilver has advanced $2 to 3 per picul. Importers have made further concessions in the price of Yellow Metal to effect sales. Tin is lower. Coals: The arrivals have been 4,740 tons, comprising 3,790 tons of Australian and 950 tons of Formosa. The sales have been 1,100 tons of Australian (New Lambton) at $9.50 per ton. Soft Australian kinds are still wanted.

CANTON.—A moderate business had been done during the fortnight in most descriptions of produce at prices showing little change from previous values. Lead had suffered a decline, but holders were firm for the small stock held, and the sales effected had been trifling, not over 200 piculs. W.B. was quoted $8.75 to $8.85, and inferior brands at $8.60 to 8.70 per picul; stock 1,200 piculs. Quicksilver was worth $73 to 74 per picul.

MANILA.—Little or no business had been transacted in the market, owing to the intervention of the Christmas holidays. Values in most cases were unchanged.

PENANG.—The demand generally had continued small. Sales had consequently been limited, and quotations were unchanged.

SINGAPORE.—Business during the fortnight had been very quiet, holders of Cotton Goods were mostly asking higher prices, owing to firmer values telegraphed from home. Dealers were mostly buying very sparingly as is customary before the Chinese holidays, which were approaching; stocks of many of the principal imports were very light.

EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—Business had continued on the same moderate scale as previously reported, settlements only reaching 3,000 piculs, comprised almost entirely of low grades. Teas above good medium were difficult to meet with, and quotations for these were quite nominal. The total export to date had been 13,434,462 lbs., against 15,549,190 lbs. for corresponding period last season.

HIOGO AND OSAKA.—Notwithstanding that the market had been very quiet during the month and settlements of 1,600 piculs only are returned, prices, in the absence of more important transactions, were quoted much as last given. Purchases for the season to date were 50,600 piculs, against 51,500 piculs at the same period last year. Stocks, 5,000 piculs.

SHANGHAI.—Black: Dnring the earlier portion of the fortnight there was rather more disposition to buy, and several parcels of common Oonam were settled at prices ranging from Tls. 10½ to 12; very few transactions had since taken place, as the' usual Christmas Holidays had put a stop to business. The unsold stock was rather heavy for the time of the year, but further arrivals were likely to be on a small scale. Settlements :—1,500 chests Ooonam at Tls. 10.50 to 12.00, 905 chests Oopack at Tls. 12.50 to 15.25, 503 chests Hohow at Tls. 14.00 to 21.00. Stock 28,780 chests. Green —There is very little of interest to report regarding this market, the few chops settled during the interval showing no change in rates. Holders were very strong, and were not pressing their teas for sale, being as yet disinclined to grant any concession in prices. Additional receipts from the country would probably not exceed 10,000 half-chests, which would make the total supply for the season about 400,000 half-chests. Settlements:—1,125 half-chests Moyune, fine to finest, at Tls. 30.00 to 32.50; 368 half-chests Moyune, medium to fine, at Tls. 29,00; 350 Fychow, medium at Tls. 24.00; 373 Pingsuey at Tls. 18.00 to 34.50. The stock consisted of 78,200 half-chests country tea, 4,076 half-chests Pingsuey, and 2,000 half-chests local packed.

FOOCHOW.—Messrs. Westall, Galton, and Co.'s Weekly Letter says:—Notwithstanding the limited number of operators a large business has been transacted on this market for the time of year. Settlements for the week are—Congou 12,338 chests, Souchong 103 chests. Congou: Great activity has been displayed in the common to preferable common descriptions. The declining state of exchange at the commencement of the week has tended slightly to strengthen prices, and an advance of nearly half a tael per picul may be quoted. Souchong: One chop has been taken, reducing the stock to 565 chests. Oolong: No transactions to report. Flowery Pekoe: No transactions to report. Scented Teas: No stock. The export to Great Britain and the Continent of Europe amount to 51,541,452 lbs., against 63,094,100 lbs. To the Colonies 15,730,202 lbs., against 15,099,603 lbs. To America 665,141 lbs., against 974,665 lbs. at the same time last year.

AMOY AND TAMSUI.—Formosa Ooloong: Letters report arrivals as having ceased, and season nearly closed, and give the total export to Amoy at 7,884,014 lbs. against 5,382,326 lbs. at same time last year. Further settlements had been reported at Amoy comprising nearly all grades, at the following rates:—Good cargo, $28 to $29; superior, $31 to $32; fine, $35 to $37; finest to choice, $40 to $50 per picul. The stock stood at 27,152 half-chests. Amoy Ooloong: The season was nearly finished, and only a few hundred packages more were expected from the country.

CANTON.—Messrs. Deacon and Co.'s Report says:—Our market has been quiet, and only moderate transactions have taken place. Congous: A settlement is reported of 700 boxes at Tls. 17 per picul, but beyond this there has been no business done. Scented Teas: Buyers have been favoured by a fall in sterling rates, and purchases have been on rather an increased scale; the business of the fortnight has, however, not been large. Scented Capers have been bought at the decline quoted in our last report; common grades have been inquired for and a few settlements made at Tls. 15 to 16 per picul, the stock however is now very limited; fair teas have found buyers at Tls. 18 to 20 per picul. In fine and finest parcels no business is reported, and the quantity of these offering is very small. Quotations for Pekoes are unaltered; "new-make" kinds have been taken at Tls. 15 to 17, and "long leaf" Tls. 24 per picul. Canton Greens: A few trifling settlements have been made, but particulars are not reported. The following is a summary of the fortnight's business:—Congou, 700 boxes at Tls. 18 per picul; Scented Caper, 10,000 boxes at Tls. 15 to 20 per picul; Scented Orange Pekoe, 2,300 boxes at Tls. 15 to 24 per picul.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—News from the European markets having been somewhat better, a good demand sprung up, and a large business had been done, especially for Hanks, which led to a further rise of nearly $80 on last quotations. The market had, however, been less animated since the departure of the French mail, owing chiefly to the unforeseen fluctuations of exchange. The total settlements for the season had been 18,200 bales, against 9,600 bales for the corresponding period last season. Stock 2,500 bales. Silk-worm Eggs: A few thousand cards had been bought during the interval at from $0.50 to 0.75; but the stock left in the hands of the Japanese Bank, estimated at about 200,000 cards, had been withdrawn from the market. The total export since the beginning of the season was 1,085,000 cards, against 727,000 at the same date of 1875.

CANTON.—Transactions in Tsatlee reel had been very unimportant, purchases to extent of 200 bales were made for the French mail, and there had been no subsequent dealings; prices had ruled very irregularly, and it was impossible to give reliable quotations. Holders were asking from $470 to $520 per picul for No. 4 of good quality. In Long-reels no business reported. Re-reels had been in good request, and all grades of Cumchuck and Lucklow had been taken at an advance on previous rates; settlements under contract were put at 730 boxes. Stock estimated at 1,200 bales Tsatlee, 100 bales Kowkong, 100 bales Cumchuck and Lucklow, and 200 to 300 bales of inferior descriptions.

SHANGHAI.—The North China Herald report says:—For the French mail of the 22nd Dec. business was rather more general than it has been for the past two months, and purchases were reported of nearly 1,000 bales. Tael prices were very irregular in consequence of the uncertain state of the exchange market, prices paid being for Donkey chop Nos. 3 and 3½, Tls. 580 and 560; Incense chop Nos. 3 and 3½, Tls. 530 and 550; Blue Peacock "Zin-ling" and "Tun-ling," Tls. 550 and 530; Dancing Bear Nos. 1, 2 and 3, Tls. 540, 520, and 500; Pagoda No. 2, Tls. 532½; K.F.S. Beautiful Woman No. 2, Tls. 525; "Saling," Tls. 510; S.S.S. Dollar chop, Tls. 480; C.Y.S. "Gna-ling" and "Kin-ling" Kabing Taysaams, Tls. 495 and 480, and some 150 bales of re-reels were taken at Tls. 530 to 540 for medium cargo. The closing of the Banks during the Christmas holidays has probably had some effect in curtailing business for this steamer. but about 600 bales have found buyers (including 250 bales of re-reels) making total settlements to date 60,400 bales against 56,000 at the same date last year. Amongst the purchases are—Clouded Dragon Nos. 3, 3½, and 4, at Tls. 560, 545, and 530; Buffalo Nos. 1, 2, and 3, at Tls. 570, 550, and 530; Chuntai's Beautiful Woman No. 2 at Tls. 545; market Tsatlees at Tls. 490 and 510; and re-reels (the principal portion very common silk) from Tls. 500 to 540 per picul. Market Tsatlees are nearly exhausted, and with best chops included, are only 5,000 bales in stock; coarse Silks are in no demand, and a good deal of the yellow silks on the market six weeks ago have been returned inland, and are re-appearing to a small extent in the shape of re-reels. Arrivals are insignificant, and the total unsold stock has decreased to 21,000 bales. From the comparative table of stocks in the London warehouses on the 1st November last the position of Tsatlees should be favourable if figures are worth anything, the total stock of this class being 7,000 bales, against 11,000 at the same time in 1875, of which the grades classified Nos. 4 and 5 are only 5,700 bales, against 9,200.

THE FAMINE IN THE NORTH OF CHINA.

(NORTH CHINA HERALD.)

The memorial from the Governor of Shantung, in the Peking Gazette of the 24th November, gives a faint idea of the terrible scarcity which is prevailing in that province. Our Chefoo correspondent has called attention from time to time during the summer to the failure of the crops through the prevailing drought, and to the inevitable distress that would follow as the winter approached. Letters from the interior of the province have since painted in harrowing colours the sufferings of the famine-stricken inhabitants; and now the case is being pressed upon our notice in a practical form by the arrival of thousands of the destitute poor into our own neighbourhood. Driven by imminent starvation, they are said to be crossing the Yangtsze daily in a continuous stream, and flocking to all the great cities in this province, begging for the food which has failed them at home. At Soochow many thousands are being provided with shelter and rice gruel sufficient to keep body and soul from parting; and every great city has its share of immigrants. At Shanghai they are arriving by hundreds, and the same slender accommodation is provided for them which the efforts of the officials and the charity of individuals have extended elsewhere. Men, women, and children, babies even a few days old, are swarming over the country, begging their way from place to place, and pursuing their journey southward, impelled onward as it were by the constant pressure of new arrivals. Hitherto they have shown themselves peaceably disposed, as it is the nature of Chinamen to be unless driven wild by the cravings of hunger; and if sufficient food to keep life in them is furnished, we have no fear of trouble ensuing. What danger there is lies rather in the insufficient organisation of the Government than in any lack of good-will on the part of the officials or the people. The latter are charitably disposed within moderate limits, and are sufficiently well-to-do in this province to contribute their mite without inconvenience, while the richer merchants can afford to give great sums without feeling the drain. The officials have the double motive of vindicating their character and of maintaining the peace of their districts. Famine has been a fruitful source of rebellion in China, and there is nothing the Government or its subordinates dread so much as popular disturbance. They will make every effort to allay the sufferings of the new comers, for the sake of public order as well as of charity; and we give them all credit for having the will to do the best they know how to do. There is no such organisation in China as enables the burden of relief to be distributed over the whole country, as is done in the case of scarcity in India. Each province, each district, each town has to look after itself, and contribute to the support of those who throw themselves upon it for help. The people of Kiangpeh appear to have selected Kiangsu as the principal object of their migration, and the cities and towns of Kiangsu will have to bear the burden of their support. If they press inwards into Chekeang, the districts of Chekeang which they invade will be called on to contribute to their relief. There is no such organisation as enabled the Indian Government to lay the whole Empire under contribution for the support of famine-stricken Orissa. Neither is the wise principle of affording relief in the shape of payment for work here recognised. But what the officials know how to do we believe they are very willing to do; and the people are well disposed to contribute within bounds to the relief of their suffering countrymen.

THE CHINESE EMBASSY.

(THE TIMES.)

The Court Circular contains an announcement of dramatic interest. The "Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the Emperor of China" was introduced to the Queen by the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and presented his credentials in due form. Every formality exacted by the etiquette of diplomacy was precisely observed, and the Chinese Envoys have at least no reason to complain of being slighted. Let us hope that they will not forget the obligations of reciprocity, and that the Foreign-office will no longer be troubled with the ingenious efforts of the Tsung-li-Yamen at Peking to treat the representatives of the European Powers as the humble petitioners of contemptible foreign States. The events of the past generation have compelled the Chinese Government, and possibly to some extent the people of China, to recognise the outer barbarians as persons not subject either in fact or in theory to the "Dragon Throne." But all the craft of the mandarins, and it is well-nigh inexhaustible in expedients, has been exercised to prevent the masses of the Chinese from arriving at a knowledge of the truth, or from suspecting that the Government at Peking has ever condescended to treat on a footing of equality with the "foreign devils." These efforts have hitherto been wonderfully successful. The repeated concessions of the Peking Government under pressure of defeat or menaces have been carefully disguised, and presented to the Chinese people as free motions of Imperial grace. The missions of Pin and Mr. Burlingame, which were used to throw dust in the eyes of the Western Powers, were exhibited in China as evidences of the vast chasm in dignity between the Lord of the Dragon Throne and the insignificant princelings of the barbarian world. It is certain that few among the many millions of Chinese have been allowed to know that twice within the last seven years the Imperial Government has been compelled to make formal reparation for murderous outrages. The embassy which was sent to France a few years ago, bearing an apology for the Tientsin massacres, was understood by the vast majority of Chinamen, so far as they heard of it or comprehended it at all, to be a favour conferred for certain inscrutable, but doubtless excellent, reasons of policy upon the barbarian West. Chinese subtlety of intelligence was flattered by the thought that the foreigners had been again and again deceived, and had welcomed inferior personages as high official representatives of the Imperial Power. Even now, when the "Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the Emperor of China" is a statesman of recognised rank, it is to be noted that the pretence of an offensive distinction is kept up. A Chinese newspaper, lately started as the organ of Li-Hung-Chang himself, the all-powerful Viceroy of Chihli, speaks habitually, we are told, of Sir Thomas Wade and his colleagues of the diplomatic body at Peking as "Foreign Messengers," while it gives the high-sounding equivalent of "Ambassadors" to Pin and Chung Horn, as well as to his Excellency Kwoh, who was introduced on Wednesday to the Royal presence, and who yesterday witnessed the opening of Parliament, in company with Mr. Pierpont and Count Munster.

The grounds of our confidence that ultimately our relations with China will improve are simple enough. We know that the Chinese are a shrewd people, and that, entrenched as they are in prejudices and superstitions, their isolation has already been broken down at many points by the influx of knowledge and the contagion of commerce. As soon as the people of China come to perceive the real aims of European civilisation they will rid themselves of their fears, and will open their arms to the trade and the capital of the West. The lower classes have even now little antipathy to intercourse with Christian communities. In the Pacific States of the American Union, in our Australian Colonies, in the South American Republics, and in the Straits Settlements the Chinese coolies are flowing in with a steady stream of immigration, are making money, developing special forms of commerce, and bringing back to the "Flowery Land" a certain fragment of Western ideas. But hitherto the official class have been untouched by this current of innovating and enterprising restlessness, and so vast is the extent of the Celestial Empire that the jealous conservatism of the mandarins is always fortified by ponderous masses of uncompromising and unaltered bigotry. If China is ever to be opened to the ambitions and the ideas and the commercial intercourse of the West, the official class must be persuaded that the change—an immense change, undoubtedly—is expedient or inevitable. The mission of which his Excellency Kwoh is the head has at least the merit of bringing the official power in China into direct contact with Europe. The negotiations which Sir Thomas Wade has conducted with great ability at Peking serve the same purpose. However the ingenuity of the mandarins may disguise the course of events, acts and arguments leave their impression upon the most unwilling mind; nor is utter secrecy possible even in the shadow of the Dragon Throne. The Chinese must come to know that their rulers are carrying on diplomatic intercourse with us on terms of at least nominal equality, and they will soon ask why other intercourse should be restricted. The officials themselves cannot fail to perceive that when troubles arise—as they are likely often to do when an old and a new civilisation are brought into contact—it is better to deal with acquaintances than with strangers, or with those whose friendly advances had been repulsed with disdain.

We are not sure how far the Chinese Envoy and his suite have received lasting impressions from the courtly ceremonial of Wednesday, or the pageantry and the political bustle of Thursday. Courts are in essentials the same all the world over, and they offer to an Oriental observer few, if any, of the distinctive characteristics of Western society. The opening of Parliament by the Queen in person, which the Chinese Embassy were privileged to see on the following day, ought to have had greater interest for the statesman of a great Eastern Autocracy. A Government in which the sovereign, though enthroned in the affections of her subjects, exercises hardly any appreciable share of direct power; in which courtiers and their arts are utterly impotent; in which the aristocracy is strong because it knows when to bow to the popular will; in which the official classes are the servants, not the masters, of the people;—such a Government would be a curious study for a keen-witted Oriental. In the last century the critics of European institutions were accustomed to put their satire and their invective, their praise and their advice, into the mouth of some imaginary sage from the East, a Persian or a Brahmin, or, most favoured of all, a Chinese. But Montesquieu, Voltaire, Goldsmith, and the rest knew nothing of the Persians, Indians, and Chinese of their fictitious criticisms. It would be unfair to expect our Chinese visitors to survey English institutions and social life in England from the point of view of a "Citizen of the World." But we may hope that his Excellency Kwoh was able to see something more yesterday than the Queen's escort, the Royal State carriage, and the Peers and Peeresses in the brilliant Chamber at Westminster. The strength, the elasticity, the abounding vitality of the English character and of English institutions cannot be quickly measured even by experienced political observers, but only a very dull man could fail to perceive the evidence of them in the aggregate of yesterday's mingled incidents. It is not unreasonable to expect that our Chinese visitors may have been able to draw some conclusions from what they saw, and if they can impart their impressions to their countrymen the cause of peace and goodwill in the countries of the Far East will doubtless be advanced a little way. In our relations with an Empire like China we must be content with a slow progress, and we shall be well satisfied if it be only steady. The Embassy of Kwoh-Sung-tao marks an advance beyond the point touched by Mr. Burlingame, as that, with all its defects and deceptions, carried us further than the farcical mission of Pin.

TEA CULTIVATION IN INDIA.

At a meeting of the Indian Section of the Society of Arts on the 2nd inst. a paper was read by Mr. A. Burrell on the subject of "Indian Tea Cultivation, its Origin, Progress, and Prospects." Dr. Forbes Watson, who was announced to take the chair, was unfortunately absent through indisposition, his place being occupied by Colonel Yule, who briefly introduced Mr. Burrell to the meeting. That gentleman then proceeded to read his paper, which proved to be a fairly exhaustive review of the subject represented by its title. It was urged that the soil and climate of India were in every way admirably adapted for the culture of the tea plant, the produce sent out by the Indian tea-growers being in no way inferior, and in many instances much superior to the teas of China, to which, however, the preference was often unduly given by English consumers who were perhaps occasionally apt to be led by something akin to prejudice in such matters. The history of the propagation and growth of both the indigenous Indian plant and of the variety imported from China, from the earliest period at which public attention had been drawn to the matter until the present time, was carefully followed, circumstantial reference being made to the principal promoters of the Indian tea-growing movement through the various stages of its development. The efforts of Sir Joseph Banks were particularly alluded to as having exerted a most important influence in the matter, and attention was also directed to the papers read and discussions held from time to time in the Society of Arts itself on Indian tea-culture. To convey an idea of the steadily increasing consumption of Indian tea in our own country, it was mentioned that the imports of this article during 1876 had amounted to 27,000,000 lb., or 19 per cent. of the total consumption of the year; while it was anticipated that the imports of the present year would amount to at least 32,000,000 lb. or 25 per cent. of the probable total consumption of the year in the United Kingdom. On the conclusion of the paper a discussion arose, in which Sir Douglas Forsyth, Mr. Maitland, Mr. Clark, Mr. Ward, and others took part, the general expression of opinion being in favour of the superiority of Indian tea over that of the Chinese production.

EGYPT AND THE SLAVE TRADE.—We hear that the Egyptian Government is about to despatch a squadron to cruise in the Red Sea, and to visit the ports suspected of being concerned in the slave trade, and to inquire into the matter with the view of devising means for its suppression.

THE CHINESE EMBASSY.

ON Wednesday a scene which was novel in the streets of London presented itself to those who were in the thoroughfares leading from Portland-place to Buckingham Palace. The Chinese Envoys proceeded from their residence in the above street to their audience with Her MAJESTY. The carriage in which they were conducted was characteristic of their nationality, being mounted with a great deal of yellow—the Chinese national colour—and having behind, instead of footmen, two Chinese military officers, who, with their plumes waving in the air, made up a very imposing sight, and the whole having a most picturesque effect. Inside the carriage were the two Envoys, KUO-TAH-JEN and LIU-TAH-JEN, Dr. MACARTNEY, English Secretary of Legation, and TEH-MING, the Chinese interpreter. On arriving at Buckingham Palace the carriage drove in under the archway to the grand entrance, where the party were received by Sir FRANCIS SEYMOUR, Master of the Ceremonies, and other high officers of Her MAJESTY'S Household. A quarter-past three was the hour appointed for the audience, and the Envoys having arrived shortly before that time, they were ushered into the grand saloon, where they waited for some time, when they were conducted into the presence of Her MAJESTY, to whom they were introduced by the Earl of DERBY, the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. The Imperial letter, rolled up in the form of a scroll, was then handed to the "Chef de Mission," who, holding it up before him with both hands, proceeded to read in Chinese the apology which he was deputed to make with regard to the MARGARY difficulty. When he had concluded, Dr. MACARTNEY read the English translation, and Her MAJESTY gave a reply, which was interpreted into Chinese by Mr. HEWLETT, of the Consular Service. The Envoys must have been much impressed with the reception at the Palace as well as by the demonstration made by the crowd as they proceeded along the streets to their destination. Although they themselves looked imposing in their magnificently embroidered Court dresses, their costumes paled before the blaze of gold presented to their view in the uniforms of the officials of Her MAJESTY'S household, and the other high personages who were present. On their way to the Palace they were loudly cheered by the by-standers, who raised their hats as they passed, and manifested the best feeling.

The following is the official account of the reception as given in the Court Circular :—

Kuo-Tah-Jên, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the Emperor of China, was conducted to Her Majesty's presence by Lieutenant-General Sir Francis Seymour, K.C.B., Master of the Ceremonies, and introduced by the Earl of Derby to Her Majesty, and presented his credentials.

Liu-Tah-Jên was presented at the same time.

Sir Thomas Wade, K.C.B., Her Majesty's Minister in China, was present, and afterwards presented to the Queen Dr. Macartney (English Secretary to the Chinese Mission), Mr. Teh-Ming (Chinese interpreter), Mr. Hewlett (Assistant Chinese Secretary to the English Envoy), and Mr. Hillier (Consular assistant).

On Thursday a second scene of a similar character was presented to the public, when the Envoys proceeded to Westminster to witness the ceremony of the opening of Parliament by the QUEEN. The sight must have done a great deal to revolutionise their ideas of foreigners and foreign institutions. On this occasion, as on the former, the greatest good feeling was manifested; so much so that some of the subordinate members of the Embassy who were not admitted to the House were taken into the balconies of houses of noblemen and others, where they were treated with the utmost courtesy. We are glad to notice that the Envoys have abstained from any parade and spectacle, and have not followed the example of the SHAH in putting themselves forward to be inspected as a kind of curious show. They have simply come forward and taken up their position as the diplomatic agents for China at the Court of St. James's with the same quietness as is observed by the Ambassadors from any other countries; and we think this absence of needless display does much credit to their tact and discretion.

CHINESE LABOUR IN ENGLAND.

FROM time to time the alarm is sounded in various forms that Chinese labourers will be employed in this country; and there can be little doubt that the possibility of this contingency arising is one which is at the present time worthy of consideration. The opening of the Suez Canal, which has shortened the direct voyage to China considerably more than half, and has been the means of bringing many Celestials to these shores as servants and sailors on board steamers, has had the effect of familiarising the minds of many Chinamen with this country; while the repeated strikes among the working classes here has made capitalists more and more inclined to look abroad for new hands. These two influences combined are likely to bring about their natural result, of the supply finding its way to the place of demand; and it is by no means impossible that Chinese may be employed in our mines and factories. Indeed, it is reported that at the present moment the proprietors of one of the largest collieries in the United Kingdom intend to make the experiment of Chinese labour; but this statement must be taken with some hesitation, as the threat has been so frequently made before, and has not been followed by action. At the same time, it would be well for the working classes here, to take warning in time of the competition which they may bring down upon themselves by persistent strikes and constant disagreements with their employers. If Chinese labour were once introduced here it would rapidly become so firmly rooted that it would be impossible to displace it—and the British working man has every interest in endeavouring by acting reasonably with his employers to prevent this point being reached. One further point is naturally suggested by the increase of the Chinese labourers in different foreign countries, namely, that the time will come when this fact will form a sufficient basis on which to demand reciprocity of privileges in China. If Chinese are allowed the full privileges of citizenship in other countries, it is unreasonable that the subjects and citizens of all foreign nations should continue to be excluded from competing in China in the same class of work which the natives of that country do abroad.

JUDICIAL ADMINISTRATION IN CHINA.

A VIEW which was put forward in a pamphlet written over the signature of "Justum," (to which we recently called attention), demands more than a passing notice. It forms one among the many instances which have to be regretted, of the injury which is likely to be done to the Chinese cause by the over-zeal of persons imperfectly informed as to the merits of the questions upon which they undertake to enlighten the public. In the pamphlet in question an apparent miscarriage of justice through a technical difficulty is made the ground for making it appear that justice is badly administered in China, in cases where Chinese have a claim against British subjects—a view which is entirely contrary to the fact, and which does very great injustice to the judges of the Supreme Court and all who have been charged with the task of putting the law into effect in that country. Exterritoriality is an absolute necessity in countries where law is so defectively administered as in China; and in which it would be simply an impossibility to place the subjects of foreign nations at the mercy of the native tribunals—where, to say nothing of bribery, torture is still resorted to as an appropriate means of eliciting evidence. It is extremely unfortunate at a time when the Chinese are willing to come forward to a great extent and to endeavour to establish relations upon a more friendly footing than they have existed on hitherto, for over-zealous advocates to rush in and, by raising difficulties which it is impossible to surmount, make it appear hopeless even to deal with them upon a fair and equitable basis. The most unfortunate element connected with this is, that these advocates generally go very much further than the Chinese themselves; who are sensible enough to recognise the necessity of some difficulties in dealing with foreign nations. At all events, in the matter of exterritoriality, it is known by those who are likely to be good authorities on the subject, that the Chinese officials, though they would of course prefer that the jurisdiction of their countrymen in China should extend, as in other countries, over aliens as well as natives resident in it, are aware that as matters at present stand this is simply an impossibility; and such being the case, it is worse than useless for foreign advocates of Chinese rights to raise the question. The Supreme Court for China and Japan, established under special order in Council with a view to carrying out the exterritorial administration of justice in those countries, has afforded substantial justice to Chinese suitors in all cases which have been brought before it; and this we believe the Chinese are themselves perfectly ready to acknowledge. Even if in some few cases justice has failed, it is not a matter for very great surprise when the "glorious uncertainty of the law" anywhere, and more necessarily under the exceptional circumstances existing in China, is taken into account; and it is therefore extremely unjust as well as extremely unwise to take any one instance where there has been an apparent failure, and to speak of the exception as if it were the rule. We believe that more harm has been done to our relations with China by the intemperate zeal of her advocates than by any other cause; and in such cases as the present those who have the true interests of China at heart must strongly feel the force of the proverb, "Save me from my friends." A discussion of the extraterritorial question would only be the opening up of a very sore point, which it is impossible to enter upon without going counter to the national dignity of the Chinese; and such a discussion is entirely unnecessary, seeing that the Chinese Government have expressed their acquiescence in the existing state of affairs by specially recognising the Supreme Court.

DUPLICATE TELEGRAPH LINES.

THE cable by which the Eastern Extension Australasia and China Telegraph Company are about to duplicate the first section of their line by laying one of about 870 nautical miles between Rangoon and Penang has been shipped on board the steamers Kangaroo and Hibernia, belonging to the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company. The effect of this extension will be to establish upon a completely reliable footing the telegraphic communication between India and the Far East, the interruptions in which have caused so much inconvenience to the mercantile communities both here and abroad—one interruption having lasted six months and necessitated the conveyance of telegrams part of the way by steamers. It is to be hoped that as opportunity offers this system will be further extended, as experience has demonstrated beyond question that single lines cannot be relied upon, and are a source of considerable loss, not only to the merchants dependent upon their working, but also to the companies themselves. The Eastern Telegraph Company, the duplication of whose lines is now being rapidly completed, lost as much as £30,000 by the above-mentioned interruption, and something like £40,000 by breakdowns on their own lines during the visit of the Prince of WALES to India; all of which loss would have been avoided had the lines been duplicated. So fully have the shareholders of the Eastern Company recognised the desirability of following this policy that they have come forward willingly to subscribe the requisite capital on preference shares. It is to be hoped that ere long similar steps may be taken by the Great Northern Company to duplicate the line between Hong Kong and Shanghai, the interruptions upon which have been so frequent and troublesome. We make no doubt that the time is not far distant when all telegraph cables will be duplicated, and constant communication with all parts of the world be thus secured.

WE are informed that Dr. J. DUDGEON, of the Medical Missionary Staff, will take his departure for China about the middle of March. Since he has been home he has done much service in calling attention to matters connected with that country. On the 2nd inst. he read an elaborate paper before the Medical-Chirurgical Society of Glasgow, in the Faculty Hall, on the "Diseases of China, their causes and "conditions, contrasted with those of Europe, with remarks "on the Induced and Preventible Diseases of Modern Euro-"pean life." The contrast was of course remarkably favourable to the Chinese, their general sobriety, temperate habits, and carefulness in diet, clothing, exposure, &c., even in spite of the utter want of anything like sanitary science, giving them great immunity from a list of diseases to which we are here subject. The absence of shock and of acute inflammatory diseases of the internal organs was pointed out. Special reference was also made to the absence of various diseases, such as heat apoplexy, aneurism, heart disease, and of the mild character of most Chinese complaints. Last month a paper was read by the same gentleman at the Glasgow Southern Medical Society, similar to the one read at the Social Science Congress at Liverpool, on Opium, in relation to health, disease, alcohol and population. Dr. DUDGEON is to deliver a lecture this evening on the "Early History of China."

The Times of the 8th inst. contains a very good account of Colonel GORDON'S exploits in China, in connection with the suppression of the Taiping Rebellion. The matter, it is needless to say, is far from new, but the story of GORDON'S campaign is told in a truthful and straightforward manner. Speaking of the treacherous decapitation of the four Wangs by LI-HUNG-CHANG, after the taking of Soochow, notwithstanding a distinct stipulation, before the capture of the city with GORDON, and in consequence with them, that their lives should be spared, the writer says:—

> This act of treachery disgusted Gordon so much that he resolved on quitting the Chinese service * * * The Chinese Government apparently saw no guilt in the act, and rewarded the Governor with the highest honours, while they offered Gordon 10,000 taels (£3,000) for his services. The money he indignantly refused, but accepted the dignity of Kungpaon, a rank of Chinese nobility the same as that given to Li-Hung-chang.

It is perhaps rather difficult to see how acceptance of the money would have been less dignified than the acceptance of a similar honour to that conferred upon LI-HUNG-CHANG for such an act.

Literature.

Waifs and Strays from the Far East. By FREDERIC H. BALFOUR. London: Trübner and Co.—We are agreeably surprised with the above work. From its unpretending title and too modest preface we expected to find it too much in the character of those works which might be properly designated "China made easy," consisting of a mass of curious, amusing, and funny information designed to give people at home some idea—however superficial—of the great Celestial Empire. Mr. Balfour states that his little work is intended for English readers whose knowledge of Chinese matters bears an inverse ratio to the interest they take in the subject, and that no claim is made by him to originality or profound research. The work, however, bears throughout the stamp of thoughtfulness, its tone is temperate without being weak, its style easy and amusing without being superficial or flippant. To home readers desirous of obtaining a good idea of China matters we can confidently recommend the present work; and to China readers it will also be of value as putting many things already known to them in a new and interesting light.

The Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society for October 1876. London: Trubner and Co., Ludgate-hill. The above volume though not containing any matter specially referring to China and the Far East, has some valuable papers on Asiatic subjects which, as germain to them, will be perused by many of our readers with interest. The annual report reproduces some remarks made at the general meeting by Sir Rutherford Alcock, who observed among other things that if the Society could draw to this country some of the literati who gave so much trouble in China, and were our sworn foes, and get them imbued with European ideas, customs and literature, it would be one of the best possible means of removing a great obstacle in the way of a better understanding with that country.

The Friend of China (Organ of the Anglo-Oriental Society for the Suppression of the Opium Trade) for February contains several very interesting articles. It notes that Mr. Mark Stewart is again to call attention to China affairs in the House, during the present Session. Among other matter, it gives a review of the last China Blue-book, containing the Margary correspondence; translations of recent Anti-Opium Tracts, and an article, by an old Canton resident, upon Opium as affecting the wealthy and intellectual classes in China.

Macmillan's Magazine for February has a valuable article on British and foreign ships of war, by G. Shaw Lefevre, M.P.; a note on the Oxford University Bill by Goldwin Smith, and other articles of interest. It contains also a very beautiful little poem, "Hæmony," by Miss Ellice Hopkins, the sentiment in which is truthful and natural, and the diction at once simple and effective.

We have been requested to state that Sir Charles Dilke is not, as was asserted, the author of the pamphlet with reference to the Woosung Railway signed "Justum," which was reviewed in a recent issue.

The Geographical Review for the current month contains, among other interesting matter, a further notice of Abbé David's valuable travels in China.

Captain Hamber has been elected editor of the Morning Advertiser by the committee of the Incorporated Society of Licensed Victuallers.

MEETINGS OF SOCIETIES.

At the Society of Antiquaries on January 18, F. Ouvry, Esq., President, in the chair, the Society of Past Overseers of the Parishes of St Margaret and St. John the Evangelist, Westminster, exhibited the very curious parish tobacco-box, which was given to the Society by one of its members in the year 1713. The box was at that time a common oval tobacco-box, which the owner and donor had purchased, it is said, at Horn Fair, for the sum of fourpence. A full account of the vicissitudes, or, as we should rather say, the aggrandisements, through which it passed in the hands of successive overseers, who vied with each other in adding case over case, and a silver plate upon silver plate, up to its present gorgeous state, will be found partly in Hone's "Year Book," p. 1570, and partly in the handsome descriptive quarto volume published by subscription in 1824, in illustration of the box and its succession. Among other cases of which this was the prolific parent was a case in Chancery, for an attempt on the part of one of the overseers to retain it in his custody gave rise to a lawsuit at the close of the last century, which lasted three years, and cost over £300. The issue of that suit is duly and exultingly commemorated on the box. It must not be forgotten that one of the silver plates inserted in the box itself was designed and engraved by Hogarth.

At the British Archæological Association on Jan. 17, Mr. T. Morgan in the chair, Mr. Roach Smith reported that a large portion of the walls of Britford Church, Wilts, were those of a Roman building. Mr. Way exhibited a series of relics from Pompeii. Mr. W. Money sent a collection of small wig-curling implements found at Newbury, near the head-quarters of Charles the First during the civil wars. Mr. L. Brock exhibited a large series of paving-tiles, of mediæval date, from the site of the demolished church of St. Antholin, City; and Captain Joseph two more from the same place, one bearing the date 1591, on a white ground. Mr. W. de Grey Birch exhibited and described two interesting historical rolls on parchment belonging to Mr. Halsey, M.P., of Great Gaddesden. One, which was fully twenty-five feet long, was written in the time of Edward the Third; but its records, which commenced with Adam, and which were principally in similar terms to those of Geoffrey of Monmouth, Wace, and other old chroniclers, ended with a record of the children of Henry the Third.

At the Asiatic Society on Jan. 15, Sir E. Colebrooke, Bart., M.P., President in the chair, a paper was read, contributed by Mr. H. H. Howorth, "On the Northern Frontagers of China, the Kin or Golden Tatars," in which the writer gave a very full and interesting account of the gradual rise and progress of this tribe, the Yuchis, and of the circumstances which led to their successful conquest and occupation of the northern part of China (during the eleventh century A.D.), which was then under the feeble rule of the Khitan or Liau dynasty. Sketches of the lives of many of the Yuchi chiefs were given, with a more enlarged biography of Aguta, who raised his people from being a petty kingdom in Manchuria to an important position among the northern Asiatic Powers. Aguta died A.D. 1123, at the age of fifty-five years, leaving, as the result of his prowess, an empire, the capital of which was, shortly afterwards, the present Peking.

At the Statistical Society on Jan. 30, J. Heywood, Esq., President, in the chair, the paper read was "On the Recent Economic Progress of New Zealand," by Mr. A. Hamilton. A discussion followed, in which Sir J. Vogel, Dr. Guy, Sir J. Ferguson, Bart., &c., took part. One of the interesting points of discussion was as to the value of an adult male immigrant. Mr. Hamilton, in his paper, states that "The value of an immigrant in the community has been estimated in the United States at £166 13s. 4d." Sir J. Vogel stated that it had been estimated by a German authority that immigrants—such as those encouraged to go to New Zealand—were worth £200 each to the colony; but he himself thought they were worth more, and doubted the possibility of arriving at anything like a satisfactory estimate.

At the Numismatic Society on Jan. 18, J. Evans, Esq., President, in the chair. Mr. Evans exhibited an aureus of the Emperor Trajan, with, on the reverse, DIVVS PATER TRAIANVS and a portrait of the father of the Emperor. Mr. Pearson exhibited a third brass coin of Constantius II.: obv., his bust to the left in paludamentum; rev., CONSTANTIVS CÆSAR SMNE.—Mr. B. V. Head read a paper, by M. J. P. Six, of Amsterdam, "On the Series of Silver Staters having on the obv. the Great King as a kneeling Archer, and on the rev. a Persian Satrap on Horseback, galloping to the Right." These M. Six attributed to the district of Caria. The writer was further of opinion that the majority of them were issued in the reigns of the dynasts Pixodarus and Othontopates.

At the Society of Antiquaries on Jan. 25, J. Evans, Esq., V.P., in the chair, Mr. D. Mocatta exhibited and presented some drawings of the wall-decorations of Pompeii, which had been executed by himself and Mr. S. Burchell in 1829. What made them particularly valuable was the circumstance that Mr. Mocatta and his companion stole a march upon the custodi during their siesta, by clambering over the walls and copying the decorations at the most lately discovered and excavated part of that interesting city.

HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE.—COMMON PLEAS DIVISION.

MARINE INSURANCE.—THE ADMIRAL PROTET.—KALTENBACK V. MACKENZIE.

This was an action arising out of a policy of insurance tried on the 1st inst., before Lord Chief Justice Coleridge and a special jury. The counsel for the plaintiff, the owner of the insured ship, were Sir H. James, Q.C., M.P., Mr. Watkin Williams, Q.C., and Mr. J. C. Mathew; for the defendant, the underwriter, was Mr. Butt, Q.C., Mr. A. Cohen, Q.C., and Mr. Hollams.

From the opening statement of Sir H. James, it appeared that the case for the plaintiff was in effect as follows:—The action was on a police of insurance on a ship named the Admiral Protet, and the principal question for the jury was whether the ship had received such injuries as amounted to a constructive total loss. The vessel was built in 1864, and traded between Europe and Singapore. When she became the property of the plaintiff's firm she was worth £4,500. The plaintiff was the Paris member of his firm, which was a French firm, with branches at Singapore and other places. Towards the end of 1870 the policy now sued upon was effected. At that time the vessel was in the Eastern Seas, and, owing to the stoppage of business in Paris by reason of the Franco-German war, the policy was effected in London It was a time policy, dating from Oct. 4, 1870, to April 4, 1871, and carried with it the legal incident of a time policy effected under such circumstances—viz., that there was no warranty of seaworthiness. On Dec. 17 the vessel left Hong Kong for Saigon, one of the French Eastern possessions. A charter-party was effected between the captain of the vessel and a firm of merchants to carry a cargo of rice to Hong Kong. On Jan. 22, in going down the river near Saigon, the ship struck on a bank called St. Britt's Shoal, and remained there for four hours. The damage sustained then by the vessel was, according to the case of the plaintiff, irretrievable, but with great difficulty she was got off the bank and taken down to a point called Cape St. James, not far from Saigon. The vessel, having been conveyed to Saigon, it became, said the learned counsel for the plaintiff, the duty of the plaintiff to do what, under the same circumstances, a prudent uninsured owner would have done. The course taken was this:—At the request of the member of the plaintiff's firm resident at Saigon, Mr. Caswell, the British Consul, and Lloyds' agent, nominated two surveyors—Mr. Waterson and Captain Bailey. There were great difficulties in the way of making repairs to a vessel at Saigon. The only dock was a Government floating dock, and any vessel while being repaired in that dock was liable to be turned out to make way for a Government vessel. No skilled labour was to be had at Saigon, and importing it from Singapore, a distance of 600 miles, would have added greatly to the expense. The state of the vessel made it impossible to have her taken to Singapore for repairs. Three surveys were held, and the final recommendation of the surveyors was that the ship should be sold, as the cost of repairing her would, in their opinion, have exceeded the value of the vessel. Granting that it would have been possible to repair her as a coasting vessel, the case of the plaintiff was that he was entitled to have her repaired as a thorough sea-going vessel. The surveyors having given it as their opinion that the vessel would cost more to repair than her value when repaired, the plaintiff's firm at Saigon decided to have her sold. On the 28th of February the vessel was sold for $1,600 to a Chinese shipchandler, named Jau Say Ho. This Chinese purchaser put some copper and canvas over the leaks in the ship, and obtained a captain and Chinese crew, who, for high pay, were willing to dodge the weather and take the vessel along the coast to Singapore. It took four times the usual time of the voyage before the vessel reached Singapore. At Singapore a Chinaman, named Ah Chung, bought her for $2,500. He repaired her, and she has since been engaged in a coasting trade in those seas. The main question for the jury on these facts was whether the shipowners were justified in selling the vessel and treating the injuries she had sustained as a total loss.

With regard to the defence, it was, as far as it was disclosed during the progress of the plaintiff's case, twofold, resting on law and on the merits. The defence on the law of the case was no notice of abandonment given to the underwriters, and no sufficient excuse for such want of notice. The defence on the merits was that the state of the vessel and other circumstances did not justify the plaintiff's firm in the course they adopted, but, as it turned out, the case went off on the point of law. The counsel for the plaintiff contended that if the, jury found that the sale of the ship was necessary, and one which acting as prudent uninsured owners would act, the plaintiff was justified in directing, no notice of abandonment was necessary.

After hearing counsel on this point the Lord Chief Justice said that, in his opinion, whatever verdict the jury might give upon the evidence respecting the sale of the ship, the want of notice of abandonment was fatal. Some discussion then arose between his Lordship and the counsel on both sides respecting the form in which judgment should be entered. In the result, judgment was entered for the defendant on the question of constructive total loss, so that the parties might carry the point direct to the Court of Appeal.

THE DEPRECIATION OF SILVER.

Under the auspices of the East India Association, an organisation established in London for the promotion of the public interests of India, a meeting of gentlemen interested in the trade and government of the British possessions in the East was held on the 7th inst. at the Society's rooms, Great George-street, Westminster. The subject for the consideration of the conference was the depreciation of silver. In introducing this topic Colonel A. B. Rathbone gave an elaborate and exhaustive résumé of the circumstances which had contributed to the recent fall in the value of silver, tracing it mainly to the course of trade and the heavy drawings of the India Council, rather than to any causes likely to permanently affect the comparative value of the metal. One thing, he thonght, was quite clear, that it was not owing to any real excess of silver that the recent depreciation was due, nor, if the production of silver be largely increased, was there any good reason to fear, for the result of the immense discoveries of gold had been to greatly stimulate labour and enterprise of every kind, and wherever silver is the standard of value a similar effect would probably follow. There seemed no reason to believe that any probable supply of silver would so greatly outstrip the supply of gold as to materially disturb their relative values, although as mining progressed both metals would doubtless be subjected to a certain diminution of purchasing power. Colonel Rathbone concluded a long address by urging the expediency of introducing a gold currency in India in conjunction with the present silver currency, as in the Emperor Akbar's time. The new gold currency would be largely used in payments to the Indian Treasuries, as well as among the people generally, and would so enable the Secretary of State to draw bills on India, payable in gold instead of in silver, or to order consignments of gold to meet the home requirements if necessary. After some general discussion upon the various points raised in the opening address the proceedings terminated with a vote of thanks to Colonel Rathbone.

GERMANY.

HAMBURG, FEB. 6.

With regard to the quarrel which recently occurred at Smyrna (Asia Minor) between some of the crew of the French man-of-war Chateau Renard and the German gunboat Meteor, correct and detailed accounts have now been received. It appears that some of the French crew had been on board of the French despatch boat Bouvet, at the time when this vessel was captured by the Meteor, in 1870, at the port of Havana, and in consequence the French had observed a very hostile attitude towards the German crew. On Sunday, Jan. 14, both from the Meteor and from the German ironclad Friedrich Carl, twelve men were permitted to go ashore. In the evening about thirty of the French sailors, armed with sticks, &c., penetrated into a dancing-room where the Germans were present, and at once attacked them. A lively battle ensued, as the Germans, although far inferior in numbers, gallantly defended themselves, and even succeeded in ejecting their assailants. But the affair was not allowed to end without bloodshed. The gunner's mate, Rosenstein, a very promising and well-educated young man, was stabbed by a Frenchman in the temple, and fell dead. The French sailor who committed the murder was detected, and his punishment no doubt will follow in due course.

By order of the naval authorities, a squadron, consisting of the ironclad frigates Kaiser, Deutschland, and Preussen, with the despatch boat Falke, is to assemble on May 7 for an exercising cruise. About the same time the Niobe sailing frigate, training ship for midshipmen (cadets), the steam corvette Medusa, the Rover, and Mosquito, sailing brigs, all three as training ships for boys, will be put in commission. The steam corvette Arrona, and the despatch boat, Preussischer Adler, will hoist the ensign on the 15th of March. The gunboats Drache and Delphin will be sent out on an exploring and surveying expedition, and the yacht Grille, as well as the two torpedo-vessels, Zieten and Ulan, will also be brought into actual service. The steam corvettes Leipzig and Freya will leave on the 1st October for Eastern Asia, the steam corvette Ariadne, for the Pacific Ocean, the gunboat Albatros, for Eastern Asia, and the Hertha, steam corvette, for the West Indies, in case of the Gazelle corvette being forced to stay in the Mediterranean. Several ironclads are under construction, and some of them will be finished during the coming summer.

Christine Nilsson, the famous prima donna, whom your London readers have heard so often during the season, has made two appearances at Hamburg. The first time she performed Margaret, and the second time Valentina, in the "Huguenots." The theatre was crowded on both evenings, and at the second performance the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg Schwerin was present; such applause as was heard on these occasions was never heard before. The director of the theatre, Mr. Pallim, had raised the price of admission to the first places from m.6 to m.15, and for other places in proportion. Madame Nilsson received a total sum of about m.15,000.

The devastation caused by the fearful gale of Jan. 30 has proved far more serious than was at first anticipated. The western part of Hanover, including the towns of Emden, Leer, and others, has especially suffered very much. In the vicinity of the latter place a breach of the dyke took place, and the waters of the Dollart with fearful fury dashed into the adjacent lands, sweeping away houses with all their contents, and making one enormous lake of what was before a well cultivated and flourishing agricultural district. Many lives have been lost, and hundreds of families, hitherto comparatively well-to-do, will have to be supported by public charity for a long time to come.

The board of the Anglo-Deutsche Bank in Hamburg announces for the past year a net profit of m.598,807, while on the other hand the losses of those industrial establishments in which the Bank has had to participate are so considerable that this sum is fully absorbed. The re-fore the directors propose a reduction of the paid up capital to the amount of 25 per cent., as well as a purchase of 2,500 shares for amortisation. A number of shareholders will propose the winding-up of the establishment, and the matter will be decided at the annual meeting, summoned for the 26th of this month.

The cattle plague has attained fearful dimensions, and whole districts have been surrounded by a military cordon in order to prevent its further spread. It has been found that the infectious character of this disease is so subtle that even the lightest air is sufficient to transport the plague from one stable to the other, without any actual communication being made. The authorities are most active in their endeavours to localise the epidemic, but it is feared that their efforts will be fruitless, as the plague springs up here and there without the slightest indications being given how it was brought there.

The steeple of our famous church of St. Nicholas, designed, as your readers will remember, by an English architect, Mr. Scott, has now been furnished with two large bells, which were cast at Dresden by Mr. Grosse. The largest of these two bells has a weight of 127½ cwt., the second weighs 64½ cwt. The Emperor presented one of the guns captured in 1870-71, to be made use of in casting the first mentioned bell, which has been named the Concordia.

The authorities have published statistics concerning the emigration from Hamburg to transatlantic ports. The total number of persons who left our town, in steam and sailing vessels, amounted in the year 1876 to 28,733; 1875, 31,810; 1874, 43,443; 1873, 69,176; 1872, 74,400. The interesting fact shown by these figures is the continuous decrease of emigration since the year 1872.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

Continued flatness has been the prevailing characteristic of our Produce Markets during the past week, and transactions of any importance have only been effected in a very few articles. The Money Market has remained very well supplied.

RICE has been in steady demand, and sales have reached an average extent.

TEA is quiet. The following first-hand parcels have changed owners: 1137/8 boxes Congou, 164/8 boxes Souchong.

COTTON has been neglected, and no transactions of importance have transpired.

SPICES.—Mace is quoted m.5 to 5.50; Nutmegs m.4.60 to 6.20 per kilo. Pepper is flat: Singapore quality m.41 to 42, Penang m.37 to 38 per 50 kilo.

SHIPPING.

Since the gale of the 30th ult. the weather in general has been favourable to shipping, the air being clear, and only few fogs prevailing. Still we cannot boast of a very satisfactory trade, both arrivals and departures being few in number, and a good many vessels are in port, anxious to get employment. Of arrivals from East India and China not a single one is to be registered; and of departures I have only to report the Peri Luerks, for Penang. Freights are still low, as outward cargo is wanting, and most vessels are obliged to leave in ballast. In the number of vessels on the berth for the Far East no alteration has taken place.

HOLLAND.

AMSTERDAM, FEB. 6.

The members of the Second Chamber met yesterday for the despatch of business. It is most probable that the Session will be a very exciting one; as not only will the Lower-class Instruction Bill be brought forward, but the Minister has also laid before the members a Reform Bill, by which the number of representatives is fixed at eighty-four. Mr. Kuyper has made his reappearance in Parliament, after an absence of about two years, during which he has resided in Italy and Switzerland to restore his health. As the leader of the anti-Revolutionary party he was complimented on his reappearance with all the honours due to his talents. It has been much remarked that the four principal members of the Liberal party have been elected presidents of the sections, viz., Messrs. De Vries, De Roo, Kappeyne, and Van de Putte. Nevertheless, I think that it is hardly too much to say that there is for the moment no effective antagonism of Conservatives and Liberals, though a sort of climacterie has set in, by which Governments are made and unmade. A tolerable unanimity prevails amongst the Liberals, at least as far as concerns past events; but another question is now brought into the Parliamentary arena, and it seems that this is likely to cause a new division in the Liberal ranks. Some of the party—strange to say—protest, because, not the King, but the Parliamentary majority governs. They demonstrate that this principle is by no means in accordance with the fundamental prescriptions of our Constitution. Now this law says—the King appoints his Ministers according to his wish, but they and not he is answerable. These few words show how to decide.

From almost every part of the country most distressing news is published about the damage caused by the recent storm and flood. Many dykes have been broken, and whole tracts of country are inundated, while the number of shipwrecks along our coasts has been enormous. The loss of property is tremendous, whilst at the same time many lives have been sacrificed. The water in this century has only twice reached such a high point on the scale. A great part of Rotterdam and other towns on the banks of the Maese have been inundated, and general distress prevails throughout the country. Happily no damage was done to the works of the new waterway from here to the North Sea, and I am glad to state the fact that last Sunday the first mail steamer arrived from Batavia, before this town, along the new canal with a draught of water of fifty-two decimetres. This steamer was the Stad Amsterdam, belonging to the Royal Steamship Company. I need not add that this is a most important fact for the future of this town.

Amongst the other Bills which are laid before the members is one to reorganise the system of instruction pursued at the Military Academy at Breda, which greatly requires reform: another is to grant to the Dutch Colonies the right to introduce a gold standard of coinage, together with the existing silver one, the gold, of course, to consist of ten-florin pieces; a third is to enable the Government to replace our copper coins by those of bronze. Last, but not least, rumours are in circulation that the first step will be taken to make dry land of a part of the Zuyderzee.

The Society for the Welfare of the Javanese has been dissolved. This measure has become necessary because the principal aim of the institution has been reached, and there are not sufficient members to continue the society on a new basis; but a fund will be collected to establish schools, &c. A Commission has been appointed for this purpose, and large contributions have already been subscribed.

The enrolments for the East India army at Harderwyk have not been extensive during the last few weeks. A large number of foreigners have presented themselves, but they were for a very great part provided with false papers. Instead of 200, only 150 soldiers have been forwarded to reinforce the army by the steamer Celebes.

The King of the Belgians appointed some months ago an International Commission to promote the abolition of the slave-trade in Africa. I hear that Prince Frederick of the Netherlands has been elected president of this commission, and that great efforts will be made in order to secure the success of its objects.

The February number of the leading periodical, de Gids, contains another article by Mr. W. A. Van Rees, in which the author protests against the manner in which Mr. Fransen Van de Putte endeavoured to defend his policy and that of General Van Swieten as regards Atchin.

A large number of civil engineers was appointed some days ago to take part in the construction of the harbour works in the vicinity of Batavia.

According to the Recueil Militaire the medical service of the army has been reorganised, so that there is more chance of promotion.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

Rather a lull has prevailed since my last report in the markets for Colonial Produce. The transactions have been almost entirely limited to direct wants. The Money Market remains well provided.

COFFEE.—The business has been a very healthy one, but at the same time small in extent. Prices are much lower, viz., from 4 to 5 cents for good ordinary. These low quotations, however, have induced speculative buying. To-day the February sale of the Trading Company will be advertised; when this has taken place, a revival in the trade is expected.

TEA dull: the nominal quotations of China Congou is 75 to 80c. ditto Java, 65 to 70c.

RAW SUGAR.—The market has been very fluctuating, but closed dull. The refiners are not inclined to operate, it being very difficult to sell their refined sugar. Holders of raw decline to sell at the current quotation, which is f.3½ under the highest price of late.

RICE.—Uncleaned meets with a good demand, but the transactions have been anything but considerable. The stock is rather small. Japan sells slowly at well maintained prices.

SPICES firm but quiet. Pepper has been offered in large quantities. The statistics are very favourable for these articles.

JAVA TOBACCO.—The business is promising. About 9,000 bales were sold both by public sale and tender, and several parcels have realised high prices. Of Manila were brought into the market 205 bales 4A Cagayon, ex Aurora; only 20 bales were sold. The stock includes 2,676 bales Java, 78 bales Sumatra, 3,000 bales East India, and 205 bales Manila.

COTTON dull; holders are pressing to sell.

JAVA VANILLA.—The Netherlands India Trading Bank sold 900 kilos. from f.15½ to f.6, according to quality; and a second lot of 115 kilos. obtained f.15½ to f.14¾.

JAVA INDIGO.—The trade is by no means animated. About 100 chests have changed hands.

DIVI-DIVI has met with a good demand, but the stock is nearly exhausted.

BANCA TIN.—The Trading Company sold in public auction 19,760 slabs at an average price of f.43⅞. Since this sale Banca has been sold at f.43½, and Billiton at f.43.

HIDES.—The lot of 14,198 East India Reindeer and 6,320 Buffalo ere sold at high prices.

Monetary and Commercial.

In the Produce Markets business generally has been dull, there being a marked absence of speculative inquiry. Tea continues quiet, and prices of all kinds, except finest Greens, show a slight decline. Silk exhibits a tendency towards improvement. Coffee and Sugar have also improved. China Galls are lower. Hemp, Pepper, and Spices, are very dull. No business has been done in Cutch or Gambier. Other articles are without alteration.

The total quantity of tea delivered from the bonded warehouses in London for the week ended the 3rd inst. was 3,471,627 lbs., which, compared with 3,536,791 lbs. of the preceding week, shows a falling-off about 1½ per cent. Of the above total, 2,266,312 lbs. was for home consumption, 704,752 lbs. was removed coastwise, 278,440 lbs. was sent coastwise for exportation, 219,535 lbs. was exported, and 2,588 lbs. was for ships' stores. The duty received during the same period amounted to £56,838, which, on comparison with £60,236 for the previous week, exhibits a decline of something like 5⅝ per cent. The following were the quantities of the other principal dutiable articles withdrawn from the London bonded warehouses for home consumption during the week ended the 3rd inst.:—Coffee, 456,396 lbs.; cocoa, 121,247 lbs.; tobacco, 378,808 lbs.; cigars, 22,966 lbs.; wine, 151,226 gallons; brandy, 34,159 gallons; and rum, 34,920 gallons.

At an extraordinary general meeting of the Tiphook Tea Company (Limited), to be held on the 15th instant, an interim dividend of 7 per cent. on account of 1876 will be declared.

Bar Silver has been placed at 57d. per oz., standard, the market being very quiet. The market is cleared of Mexican Dollars, and the quotation is therefore nominal at 57½d. per oz.

The amount of bullion per P. and O. steamer Nepaul, from Southampton, on the 8th inst., was:—In Gold, to Galle, £1,530; in Silver, to Penang, £91,650; to Hong Kong, £3,400; total in silver £95,050.

The Great Northern Telegraph Company's traffic receipts for the month of January were this year f.316,565, last year f.275,252

Tenders were received on the 7th inst. at the Bank of England for £175,000 bills on India, but bills to the extent of £39,381 only were allotted—viz., £37,381 on Calcutta, and £2,000 on Madras. Tenders at 1s. 10d. per rupee for bills and 1s. 10 1-16d. for telegraphic transfers will receive in full, no allotment being made below that figure. The minimum rates accepted are the same as last week.

The directors of Hooper's Telegraph Works (Limited) have issued a circular in which they state that owing to the pressing nature of various heavy claims upon the company, which, on account of the continued stagnation of business, they are unable to meet, decisive steps towards winding up the company have in their opinion become unavoidable. The directors therefore call a meeting of the shareholders for the 16th inst. to consider the question of voluntary liquidation under the supervision of the High Court of Justice. It is proposed to bring forward some scheme for the reconstruction of the company.

At a meeting of the Direct United States Cable Company (Limited) the result of the ballot on the question of altering the articles of association so as to allow of an arrangement with the Anglo-American Company for joint working or amalgamation was decided in favour of the amendment, or, in other words, to decline any arrangement, and continue as an independent company.

The directors of the Credit Company (Limited), hitherto known as the Credit Foncier of England, have issued their report and balance-sheet for the half-year ended the 31st of December last. It may be remembered that the capital of the Company was divided, when the name was changed, into income-bearing assets entitled A, and those on which no return is now made entitled B. After allowing for rebate and expenses, the net profit on the A shares was £26,109. From this a dividend of one shilling per share, or at the rate of £6 13s. 4d. per annum, is recommended, which absorbs £15,000, to a reserve fund £7,000 is placed, and the balance carried forward. On the B shares no dividend is paid. During the half-year debentures of the issues of 1871 and 1873 to the amount of £67,695, including bonus, have been paid off. On the other hand, debentures of the issue of 1875 to the amount of £19,200 have been placed. The net reduction of debenture capital has thus been £48,495.

The directors of the York Union Banking Company report a net profit for the past half-year of £28,605, exclusive of £2,857 of interest on the guarantee fund. An interim dividend of 5 per cent. was paid in August last, and it is now proposed to pay a further 10 per cent., with a bonus of 2 per cent., which will make 17 per cent. for the year. This leaves £555 to be carried, along with the above-mentioned interest, to the guarantee fund which will then stand at £69,582.

The directors of Lloyd's Banking Company (Limited) report for the past year a profit of £94,288, including the balance brought down, and after deducting rebate and all expenses. Out of this a dividend, at the rate of 20 per cent., was paid last July, and it is now proposed to make a similar distribution. Altogether this dividend absorbs £80,000, and £10,000 is to be added to reserve, raising it to £220,000, leaving £4,288 to be carried to the new account.

The directors of the Home and Colonial Marine Insurance Company (Limited) state in their annual report, just issued, that the underwriting account for 1874 has been finally closed at a loss of £15,364, exclusive of charges; while the amount to the credit of the underwriting account of 1875 is £29,053, also exclusive of charges. The net premiums for 1876 were £101,471, covering a risk of £13,779,826, of which 85 per cent. had run off by the end of the year, the amount paid on account of the claims under this account being £55,549.

The Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company notify that, subject to the audit of the accounts, the directors propose paying a dividend of 15 per cent. (£1 16s. per share), in addition to the ad interim dividend of 5 per cent. already paid, making 20 per cent. for the year. For 1875 the dividend was 15 per cent.

At the meeting of the Clydesdale Bank, held in Glasgow, it was stated that the profits had been £140,000, and the amount brought forward from last year £8,000. A dividend was declared of 14 per cent., free of income-tax, and a balance carried forward of £6,000. The capital is £1,000,000, the reserve £500,000, the deposits £6,500,000.

The Bradford Commercial Joint-Stock Bank will pay a dividend of 18 per cent., or £4 10s. per share, for the year 1876.

The report of the Australian Agricultural Company states that the funds in London at this date enable the directors to recommend the appropriation of £40,000 to the payment of an interim dividend of £2 per share, free of income tax.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

Messrs. W. J. and H. Thompson's Circular says:—The market has been in a most unsatisfactory state; in fact, for many days there has been an utter absence of demand, and sales have been impossible at any fair rates. At public auction prices have been very irregular, and lower for all common to fair grades. The last day or two there has been rather a better inquiry. Foochow Congous: Siftings still command 7d. to 7½d.; common to fair, 7¾d. to 11d., but prices are most irregular; the general decline is ½d. per lb., but in some cases at auction 1d. to 2d. would scarcely cover the drop; medium to fine, when wanted, command 1s. 3d. to 1s. 6d. per lb. Black Leaf Congous: Common 7½d. to 7¾d.; good common, 8¼d. to 8½d.; fair, 9d. to 1s., showing very irregular and lower rates at auction. Medium to fine are firm, with little enquiry at 1s. 3d. to 1s. 7d. per lb. Tayshan Congous, unaltered. Oolongs have sold lower, from 1s. 1d. to 1s. 4d. per lb. Souchong: Common, 10d.; fair, 11d. to 1s. 3d.; fine, 1s. 6d. to 1s. 8d., all at lower rates. Scented Teas: Canton Capers, common still sells at 1s. 1d. to 1s. 1½d., fair 1s. 2d.; but above this price there is still little demand. Scented Orange Pekoes.—Canton kinds: Common 1s. 2d., good to fine 1s. 3d. to 1s. 6d.; Foochow: Common 1s. 1d., fair 1s. 3d. to 1s. 4d. Green Teas: Fine Gunpowders, Young Hysons, and Imperials show an advance; common grades of all kinds are unaltered.

SILK.

Messrs. Waithman and Co.'s Circular says:—A reduction of about 2s. per lb. in China Silk has been effected by considerable quantities of Tsatlees being pressed for sale from Lyons during the last fortnight; the Silk thus offered has been, and is still being, bought by the trade, and the present tendency appears to be towards a slight hardening in rates. English holders and importers, apparently feeling confidence in the statistical position of the article, have shown no disposition to meet the market. In the absence of any demand for Japans, prices are about 1s. 6d. to 2s. per lb. lower than at the beginning of the year. In Cantons and Bengals there is no feature calling for remark.

COFFEE.—Early in the week a good demand prevailed for Plantation Ceylon at the public sales, and moderate supplies were quickly disposed of at a further recovery of 6d. to 1s. The improvement in the demand has not since been sustained, and the public sales, consisting almost entirely of Plantation, have gone off irregularly, and the advance has been lost. Closing prices are triage 86s. 6d. to 91s., grey to fine small 101s. to 107s., low middling 107s. to 109s. 6d., middling 110s. to 112s., good middling to fine middling coloury 113s. to 115s., bold 116s. 6d. to 120s. 6d., pea-berry 112s. 6d. to 117s. 6d. Early in the week 174 bags Native Ceylon sold, triage at 77s., real good ordinary at 85s. 6d., bold at 87s. 6d., pea-berry at 91s. Of 595 bags Singapore offered 63 bags Pari Pari sold at 78s., the remainder, mixed pale kinds, being bought in at 82s., but was afterwards sold at about 78s. per cwt.

CANTHARIDES.—Of 5 cases China 3 cases ordinary sold at 1s. 2d., mouldy 1s., the remainder bought in at 2s. 8d.

COIR YARN.—Moderate supplies brought forward in public sale consisted largely of damaged, and the bulk was disposed of at about the former value. 40 tons Ceylon sold, roping £23 15s., low coarse and ordinary £26 5s. to £28, good ordinary to medium £28 15s. to £31 5s., good middling to good £32 5s. to £35, fine pale even qualities £37 to £43, one lot £46 5s.

CHINA STRAW PLAIT.—At auction 96 bales chiefly sold, white medium wide to good medium £9 15s., to £11 10s., good £13 to £15, dull coarse brown and white £9 5s. to £11 15s., black and white £11 5s. to £13 10s. per bale.

COCOA-NUT OIL continues quiet; Cochin £41 5s. to £41 10s., Ceylon in pipes £37 10s.

CUTCH AND GAMBIER.—No business done during the week.

GALLS.—Prices of China have further declined, in auction 246 cases being partly sold at 58s. to 59s. per cwt. For arrival 350 cases China have been sold at 58s.

GUM BENJAMIN.—Of 17 cases offered 8 cases Sumatra seconds mixed with dark sold at £6 2s. 6d. to £7, the remainder bought in, brown thirds at £5 15s.

HEMP.—The market for Manila remains depressed, and with little demand even at the recent decline business is quite unimportant. The trifling supply at the periodical auctions attracted scarcely any attention, and was mostly bought in.

HIDES.—At yesterday's sales there were no Singapore and Penang and Rangoon Ox and Cow Hides of any importance brought forward. China were in large supply; the extreme light and heavy weights were in good demand for export, and realised full previous prices; but the medium averages (10 to 20 lbs.) were only partly sold at from last sales' rates to ¼d. per lb. decline. Of 20,792 China offered 10,577 sold: Light, average 10 to 11 lbs., 7d. to 7¼d.; heavy, average 18⅛ lbs., 7d. to 7⅛d.; extra heavy, average 26 to 28⅜ lbs., 7¼d. to 7⅝d.; kips, average 5⅜ to 7⅜ lbs., 7½d. to 8d.; Calf, average 4 to 4⅞ lbs., 7½d. to 7⅞d.; thirds, average 12½ to 17¾ lbs., 4¾d. to 5d. per lb. Buffalo: The few Batavia offered call for no remark. A small supply of Singapore, &c., barely supported previous value. Of 2,154 offered 1,435 sold: Light, average 12½ to 14⅛ lbs., 5⅝d. to 5⅞d.; first heavy, average 37 to 37⅜ lbs., 5d. to 5¼d.; second heavy, average 33⅝ lbs., 4¾d.; thirds, 4⅛d. per lb.

JAPAN TALLOW.—200 cases sold, brownish clean 40s., dark, rather dregged, 39s. 6d.

PEPPER.—Black: The market remains dull, but prices are unchanged. At auction 1,131 bags went off flatly and were chiefly bought in. 663 bags Singapore bought in at 4¼d., except 23 bags fine, which sold at 4½d. 339 bags Penang chiefly sold, first-class damaged at 3⅞d. to 3⅝d. White: Of 403 bags at auction the bulk was offered without reserve, and sold at a further reduction of ¼d. per lb. Of 318 bags Singapore 298 bags sold without reserve, import 1873 at 6⅝d. landing weights, import 1875, at 6⅞d. to 6¾d. reweights, 85 bags Penang, import 1876, sold at 6⅝d., one lot at 6½d., landing weights.

RICE.—The market for new crop cargoes is less depressed, and prices are steadier. A cargo of a steamer, 1,800 tons new Rangoon, has been sold at 10s. 4½d., or at 10s. 6d. with options. The floating cargo per Albatross, 1,210 tons Necransie, off coast, has been sold at 10s. 5¼d. ex quay Liverpool; and the cargo per N. J. Hill, 1,800 tons Rangoon, Ngakyouk, January sailing, at 8s. 9d. ex ship London direct.

RATTANS.—At auction 178 tons Singapore chiefly sold at £17 to £17 5s., one lot £21 10s. per ton.

SUGAR.—The market has exhibited a continued steady demand, and at the public sales limited quantities of refining kinds have been sold at fully previous rates, and low brown kinds have been in demand at 6d. above last week. Subjoined are the transactions in East Indian sorts in detail. On the 3rd inst. on the spot 100 tons Native Penang sold at 19s. 6d., 50 tons ditto at 20s., and 100 tons China (Swatow) at 20s. 6d. For arrival 85 tons Penang sold at 19s. 9d. On the 5th inst. on the spot 100 tons low China sold at 19s. 6d., and 200 tons Native Penang at 20s. On the 6th inst. 1,549 mats China (Swatow) sold in auction at 21s., with low at 20s. Privately 4,460 bags unclayed Ilo Ilo sold at 21s. On the 7th inst. privately 300 tons good brown Native Penang sold at 21s., and at auction 100 tons brown China (Swatow) sold at 21s. On the 8th inst. for arrival 100 tons Native Penang sold at 20s., and about 300 tons brown China, also for arrival, at 20s. per cwt.

SPICES.—Cassia Lignea continues dull, and prices are again 2s. lower; in auction 266 boxes unworked were bought in at 57s. to 58s., but 186 boxes since sold at 55s. Cassia: 135 mats Japan bought in at 30s. to 35s. Mace: Of 5 cases Penang 3 cases sold, middling red at 2s., pickings at 9d. Cloves and Nutmegs: No sales.

SAGO.—In auction of 752 bags only 250 bags sold, good fair small at 16s. 6d. to 17s., being steady, but large at 18s. 3d., or slightly cheaper.

TAPIOCA.—Of 460 bags Singapore 150 bags sold, good small white at 2⅞d. to 2½d. Pearl: 235 bags medium sold at fully 6d. lower, good of fresh import at 18s. 6d., middling to good old import at 18s. to 18s. 6d. Flour: 56 bags Penang bought in at 1⅞d., 6 bags Singapore at 1¾d.

TIN has been quiet, but steady. Quotations:—Straits on the spot £73 to £73 10s., afloat £73; Banca £76; Billiton £74 per ton.

TOBACCO.—346 bales Japan leaf sold at 7d. to 9d., 168 bales Japan damaged 4d. to 8d., inferior 1⅞d. to 2½d., 2 bales Japan repacked damaged 2d., 12 bales Japan scraps 1⅞d. to 2d., part of 333 bales China 6¼d. to 7¾d., 1 bale inferior 2½d., 95 bales China damaged 4½d. to 5¾d., 2 bales China repacked damaged 1d. to 1⅞d., 201 bales Java 4d. to 6½d., inferior 1¾d., 10 bales Sumatra 10d. to 4s. 10d., 1 case Manila cheroots sea damaged 5s. 3d. per lb.

QUICKSILVER.—In bottles of 75 lbs. each, £7 15s.

MANCHESTER GOODS.

Business in the Manchester Market has continued inanimate, and the offers put forward diminish daily. The transactions in both Yarns and Goods have been on a very limited scale, and at prices showing some decline on last week's quotations, but there has not been sufficient business to afford an accurate test of the reductions that might be accepted.

GENERAL SHIPPING NEWS.

SHIP REPORT.—The Master, Wieck, of the barque Constantia, 464 tons, of and from Sunderland Jan. 27, for Anjer (715 tons of coal), reports:—On the 30th, at four A.M., tide being low water slack, weather stormy, wind W.S.W., blowing a gale, with a high cross sea, the barque being then near the Galloper, deponent, finding the glass falling rapidly and the wind increasing, with every appearance of very bad weather, bore up for Yarmouth Roads. At about 10.45 same morning, as the barque was reaching in through Saint Nicholas Gat, and shortly after passing the lightship, the wind blowing a heavy gale and squalls, suddenly veered to the W.N.W., which caused the barque to veer off with her head about north, and, finding that she could not weather the South Scroby Sand, he endeavoured to stay her, but not being able to carry sufficient canvas on account of the violence of the wind, the ship missed stays, and came to the ground on the South Scroby Sand. Immediately after missing stays he let go his anchor, but the chain parted at thirty fathoms, there being a tremendous sea running. The ship remained fast, and the sea made a complete breach over her, and, as she filled with water, deponent and his crew took to the rigging. The lifeboat came off to her, and also two steam-tugs came out, but could not get near the ship on account of the violence of the sea. The lifeboat anchored to windward of the ship, and then veered down upon the ship until she was near enough to throw two lines, which were caught by deponent and his crew and made fast round their waists, and they then jumped into the sea, were hauled on board the lifeboat and brought on shore, and landed at Yarmouth same day.

THE MAIL SERVICE TO JAVA.—The subjoined official notification has been issued from the Post-office:—Notice has been received that the mail service by Dutch packet from Naples to the Dutch East Indies has been increased in frequency from once in four weeks to once in three weeks. HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT

Mr. J. T. COOPER,

In his celebrated TRAVELS IN CHINA, published in 1871, says:—

"I had with me in my travels a quantity of "Holloway's Ointment. I gave some to the people, "and nothing could exceed their gratitude: and, in "consequence—milk, fowls, butter, and horse-feed "poured in upon us, until at last a teaspoonful of "Ointment was worth a fowl and any quantity of "peas, and the demand became so great that I was "obliged to lock up the small remaining stock."

This fine OINTMENT is invaluable in the cure of BAD LEGS, BAD BREASTS, OLD SORES, wounds, ulcers, gout, rheumatism, and all skin diseases.

JAPAN.

YOKOHAMA.

The present French mail brings advices from this port to the 2nd January. The P. and O. mail from London, November 10, was received on the 29th December. The Hochi Shimbun publishes the following items concerning the agrarian riots in the Aichi and Mie-ken :—

On the 20th December a number of excited farmers held meetings in the Mie-ken, and their example was followed by the farmers of the Aichi-ken. Most of them assembled at the town of Yokkaichi. On the following day they threatened to attack the Mitsui Bank in Nagoya, which, in consequence, had to be guarded by a number of the local officials. In Yokkaichi an official was killed by the insurgents, who cut all the telegraph wires which connect the eastern and south-western provinces with the town. According to a private telegram received from Nagoya on the 23rd the insurgents set Yokkaichi on fire, and an extensive portion of the town was burned down. But the branch offices of the Mitsu Bishi and Kaisokuwaish Companies and the telegraph office were fortunately protected from injury. Nearly the whole town of Tsu, Ise, was destroyed, including many public buildings, and a large number of noisy people assembled at Inuyama, Owari, and Imao, Mino. A telegram, which was despatched from the Aichi Kencho the same day, says about one hundred farmers of the Mie-ken attacked six district offices in various villages and burned them to the ground. A force of the garrison troops, as well as a number of police, was sent against them. Four of the principal leaders of the mob were arrested during the night of the 22nd December, and all the rest repaired towards the Gifu-ken to join their companions. Measures are now about to be taken for the suppression of the disturbances in the Aichi-ken.

All the farmers of the village of Toyohara, Isarago-kori, Mie-ken, held meetings on the night of the 18th Dec., beating drums in order to excite their courage. The farmers in twenty-four other villages followed their example immediately, in spite of prohibitions by the Kencho. Early on the morning of the 20th the insurgents, each of whom were armed with various kinds of weapons, attacked the local offices at Tsu. Half a battalion of infantry was sent against them from Nagoya. A steamship company's office in Kuwana was destroyed during the night of the 20th. At the request of the Governor of the Aichi-ken the towns of Miya and Saga were strictly guarded, each by half a battalion of troops. Half a battalion was sent to the Gifuken on the 21st. On the following day half a battalion of infantry stationed at the branch barracks in Otsu, was ordered to start for the Mie-ken.

The Japan Gazette contains the following items of intelligence :—

On the 28th Dec. the Russian Minister attended at the Imperial palace of Akasaka, where he was presented by the Mikado with the decoration of the first class of the new Japanese Order of Merit. About one hour afterwards the English Minister, accompanied by Captain Buller of the Modeste and two other officers, was received by His Majesty.

The Choya Shimbun says that the inhabitants of the province of Dewa are much excited;' and that Mr. Sakai, ex-Daimio of that province, is said to have left Tokio a few days ago, with a certain Ishikawa, ex-retainer of Aidzu, without reporting his departure to the local government.

An Italian in the employ of the Shi-hei-rio of the Okurasho has sent one hundred yen to the police station as a subscription towards alleviating the distress of the families of the policemen who were burned to death in the recent terrible fire in Tokio.

Mr. Jones, of the Kangio-rio, and two Japanese officials of that section, namely, Oku and Wasegawa, have been ordered to proceed to Philadelphia to make large purchases of various articles necessary for pastoral purposes.

Owing to the capitalisation of the shizokus' income and the alteration in the land tax, much excitement prevails amongst the inhabitants of the Kochi-ken, where many of the local officials have resigned their posts.

On the 24th Dec. about 500 farmers of the Chibaken invaded the Government offices at Sawara, Shimosa, and compelled the officials to receive a petition they had prepared on the subject of the land-tax.

A silver mine has been discovered in the mountains of Asama, Settsu. Mr. Ito, Vice-Governor of the Hiogo-ken, is appointed superintendent.

NAGASAKI.

The Rising Sun supplies the subjoined items of intelligence from this port :—

Telegrams announce fires having broken out on the 29th Dec in the villages of Okumatsa and Amakita. Thirty-seven houses were burnt.

On the 25th Dec., a resident of the concession, of a scientific turn of mind, examined with the microscope a small quantity of the red matter which has been observed lately floating about the harbour, and finds it is formed from millions of minute globules of a perfectly colourless matter many of which appear to have life. He has not yet been able, however, to decide as to which branch of the finny tribe they belong, but we anticipate the solving of the riddle before our next issue.

On the 26th Dec. an accident happened to Mr. A. E. Olarovsky, the Russian Consul, which might have proved very serious, but for the skilful horsemanship of that gentleman. It appears when out riding, his pony, a spirited animal, took fright at the antics of some jinricksha men, who were idling about near the premises of Messrs. Holme, Ringer, and Co., and rearing up lost its balance, falling on Mr. Olarovsky, severely injuring his side and right wrist. We are happy to say that he is progressing favourably under the skilful medical attendance of Dr. Painter.

During a gale on the night of the 26th Dec. most of the vessels in the harbour dragged their anchors, the Thistle having having got unpleasantly convenient to the mud in shore rendering it necessary to get up steam in order to get out of the difficulty. It appears that the anchors supplied to the gunboats are much too light, but we believe that it is intended to supply them with others as soon as they can be got out from home. The Mary Fraser was at the time lying at the mouth of the slip, and was blown over on to the north side, nearly disposing of the little schooner which had been lying there the last few months fitting out, but beyond some trifling damage to her upper works the small craft did not sustain any injury.

PEKING.

The Peking Gazette of the 27th November contains a series of memorials relating to the despatch of a tribute-bearing mission from Annam to Peking. The Governor of Kwangsi reports the passage of the Mission across the frontier, and indulges in the usual platitudes. A translation is also given of the memorial from the King, announcing the despatch of the Mission, and which is concluded in terms but a trifle less adulatory than the similar one from the King of Burmah, which was published last year.

The correspondent of the North China Daily Herald writes:—

The present Taoutai at Hankow is promoted to be Judicial Commissioner at Foochow. General Kin Shun is named Military Governor of the Ili region (i.e., the whole of Sungaria and Chinese Turkestan), vice Yung-ts'uan, who is recalled to Peking, and Ying Han, the late Governor-General of the Two Kwang, who was removed and degraded last year in consequence of the gambling licenses' scandal, is appointed to succeed Kin Shun as Lieutenant-General of Urumtsi.

The weather here is bright and cold, but not unseasonably so. The city and adjacent districts are largely placarded with the Yunnan proclamation. Accounts of sad distress among the districts affected by the late deficient harvest continue to be received;but up to the present time there has been no news of disturbances in consequence of this state of affairs.

TIENTSIN.

The correspondent of the North China Daily News writes as follows :—

The river closed opposite the settlement on the night of the 10th December, and on the 11th the Chinese were crossing the ice on their sledges. The Viceroy left for the provincial capital on the 12th, escorted for the first few miles of his journey by the U.S. Vice-Consul, as well as by Chinese officials and retainers. The last two or three days have been very cold.

Collections for the poor and suffering Chinese are being made here, among foreigners, and this is well. While, however, there is, and will be, a great deal of suffering, I do not think our famine will compare with those of India and Turkey, often reported, where men perished by hundreds, if not by thousands, almost daily. There will be much suffering, and doubtless many deaths in the aggregate, but from the most careful inquiry I can make, I am satisfied that the great majority will sustain life. In view of moneys already received by some of the missionaries at Tientsin in aid of sufferers in consequence of the famine, and of other contributions offered, or which may be given for the same purpose, a meeting of the resident missionaries has been held, to take into consideration the best method of using whatever funds may be placed at their disposal. Two of the missionaries from Peking, Messrs. Much and Owen, were also present, and brought $670, contributed by the foreign residents of Peking to aid the sufferers. After listening to statements setting forth the destitution and suffering in certain districts, especially in Lauling and Shantung, and discussing ways and methods, a committee, consisting of one member of each of the missionary societies represented at Tientsin, was appointed to receive and distribute the fund. The committee is composed of the following gentlemen :—Revs. C. A. Stanley, W. N. Hall, J. Lees, and J. H. Pyke.

Yun Ching Liang, who was appointed to the general management of the soup kitchens at Tientsin, has been found guilty of putting large quantities of alum into the soup, whereby quite a number of persons are said to have died. He is now in prison awaiting his sentence and punishment. This man figured prominently in connection with the demonstrations last summer, when Governor Li was about to go to Chefoo ; he was also among the leaders at the time of the Tientsin Massacre.

HANKOW.

A correspondent of the Celestial Empire writes, under date 27th Dec., as follows :—

Another fire occurred in Hankow on the 24th Dec. It began at seven o'clock, and continued about an hour and a-half, when the flames were subdued. Owing to the fact that there was no wind at the time the fire was mastered quite easily, but at one time it gave promise of being a good blaze.

We are having delightful weather, and as Hare and Paper Hunts are the order of the day, the participants could not have a more suitable season for this most exhilirating sport.

Christmas was passed in this out-of-the-way port in a quiet manner. With the exception of a dinner-party, or the gathering of a few friends around the breakfast-table, nothing out of the ordinary took place.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 5th January ; the French mail from London Nov. 17 was received on the 3rd January. The North China Herald contains the following summary of news :—

The past week has again been devoted chiefly to holiday making, and we have very little but amusements to record. Many people are away on shooting expenditions, and those who remain have been intent on paper and drag hunting, theatricals, and New Year festivities of the usual substantial kind. The children at the Eurasian School were given an excellent dinner, and a well laden Christmas tree, by some friends of the Institution, on the 29th Dec.; and several ladies and gentlemen who visited the school were most favourably impressed with the progress of the children. The Club Concordia Amateurs gave a theatrical and musical performance on the 30th Dec.

A special service for children was held at the Cathedral on the 28th Dec. About forty little people collected and seemed to enjoy the service, which consisted of appropriate lessons, the history of the call of Samuel, and the gospel from the baptismal service, and three favourite hymns. The Dean preached from the eightieth verse of the first chapter of Luke.

A Paper Hunt was had on the 29th Dec., the start being near Trefancha, and the finish near Mr. Schmidt's house, on the Bubbling-Well-road. An extra hunt took place on New-Year's-day, when the start was at the Rifle Butts, and the finish near the Stone Bridge Drag Hunts also were had on the 30th and 31st.

On the 29th December, at the Mixed Court, the case of assault by throwing stones, &c., preferred by Mr. Love against some inhabitants of the village of Chang-kia-pang, on the Pootung shore, again came on for hearing. It had been adjourned for the production of the real offenders, none of whom were forthcoming at the previous hearing. The tepao now produced seven boys, ranging from seven to eleven years of age, and from a statement elicited by the magistrate from one of the eldest, the charge of throwing was clearly proved against them. Mr. Davenport caused the magistrate to be informed that it was not vengeance that was sought, but simply protection from such offences. The three eldest boys were sentenced to received ten strokes each on the hand, which were then inflicted. They were also, with the lesser ones, warned that if they threw stones at foreigners again they would be imprisoned. The tepao, who had not only told falsehoods regarding the matter to the Chehsien, but had also signed a false bond relating thereto in that official's office, was sent into the city to be dealt with by him.

The adjourned hearing of the case arising out of the late disturbances on the Woosung Railroad has also taken place at the Mixed Court. In addition to the three primarily accused, who have remained in prison ever since, four others, the tepaos of three districts, and the man who was alleged to have originated the squeezing of the $21 from the native workmen employed on the line, were produced. The Taoutai had deputed Ch'ai, the Chehsien's assistant, to act for him, and he took his seat on the Bench, and appeared to direct the whole hearing. He spent much time in a useless endeavour to induce Chu Fêng-feng, the ringleader of the mob, to confess all he knew; and after reading over the evidence previously given, and hearing Mr. Eddowes, the station-master at the Bar and Creek Stations, and the Ningpo man who was carried off, give their reasons for identifying four of the accused (the tepaos being merely held responsible for the disorder in their districts), the Court adjourned for consultation. The result was that Fêng-fêng was sentenced to two months' imprisonment, and his two chief associates to one month each; the three tepaos and the man charged with squeezing, being cautioned and bound over to keep the peace in future. Mr. Davenport said the reason why short terms of imprisonment were inflicted was because it was believed that none of the accused intended injury to life, and that they merely put the obstructions on the line to stop the work. For such an offence the Chinese law provided the infliction of eighty blows, but it was thought that the infliction of short terms of imprisonment would have a stronger deterrent effect.

The Shunpao contains rather an amusing account of steps that are being taken to bring an outlying island of the Chusan Archipelago within the pale of civilisation. This island, called Tseaou-shan, or some like name, has apparently been a terra incognita to the mandarins, whose knowledge of the coast was probably very limited before the advent of steamers. Happening, however, lately to become aware of its existence, the Chusan officials one day caused it to be explored, and finding a considerable area of ploughed land, concluded that it ought to be taxed. They accordingly memorialised Peking to that effect, representing no doubt the anxiety of the inhabitants to be brought more directly under the paternal rule. The Imperial assent was of course given; but the islanders themselves demurred. They had got on so long by themselves that they could probably continue to do so. Their elders settled their disputes to their satisfaction, and what for were they to pay taxes? However, they were willing to agree on two conditions; one that they should have a resident mandarin, the other that some watercourses should be deepened at the Government expense If they had to pay, they would have a quid pro quo. It had been proposed, apparently, only to send an officer occasionally to collect taxes, but if they were to be taxed, they would have a mandarin all to themselves. We have not yet learned whether the Government have accepted these conditions; but the incident as it stands is rather a curious one.

A fire broke out about half-past nine o'clock on the night of the 1st January, in the block of Chinese houses through which run the passages Yang-king-pang and Rue du Consulat, and for some time threatened to assume serious dimensions. The alarm was speedily passed to the different police-stations, and very quickly after the summons was heard from the fire-bells the fire brigades and hook and ladder companies were hastening to the scene of the disaster. The French steam-power engines, with the manual belong to the French Gas Company, were, of course, first on the spot, and got ready to work as soon as water could be obtained; but it was not long before those from the English Settlement and Hongkew also put in an appearance. Before any of the engines, however, commenced playing the flames had got firm hold, and owing to the narrowness of the passage, and the houses being built of wood, both sides were blazing fiercely. Fortunately the wind, which, up to about the time of the outbreak had been blowing half-a-gale, suddenly dropped almost calm, but the flames nevertheless travelled with great rapidity through the entire block in which the fire began, when its progress either way was stopped by brick party walls. Owing to the long absence of rain, everything was very dry, and the copious streams of water poured upon the flames seemed for more than an hour to have no perceptible effect in checking their advance, and attention was therefore given to preserving the surrounding buildings, from which the occupants had from the commencement been busily engaged in removing their furniture and other property.

Throughout this winter, up to New Year's-day, we had experienced little or no cold weather; but on January 1st a decided change set in, with a strong N.W., gale, and at night the thermometer fell to 23.5°, afloat. Signs of severe weather were apparent in the first week of November, and a thin coating of ice appeared as early as the 7th of that month—a most unusual occurrence; but save on that day the glass never once fell below freezing point. Since then, up to the 31st December, the mercury indicated freezing point but four times, and the lowest fall was to 31° Fahrenheit. As an example of the past ten years, we give the lowest range for the month of December:—1867, 29°; '68. 19°; '69, 33°; '70, 22°; '71, 19°; '72, 27°; '73, 32°; '74, 23°; '75, 19°. Hitherto, we generally have had snow towards the end of December, but this year we have had none; and, altogether, we think we may say this has been one of the mildest seasons ever experienced by the oldest resident in Shanghai.

The migration of destitute persons from the north into these districts still continues. The arrivals in Shanghai seem to be increasing, no fewer than 180 of both sexes having been counted entering this settlement on the 28th December, whilst lesser numbers are met with daily. In spite of the efforts of the police to hurry these unfortunates to the native depôt at the South-gate, where they seem sure of some amount of food and shelter, numbers lag behind; and parties of men and women are to be seen begging at the Chinese shops, or congregating in clusters round the doors of well-known charitable Chinese, soliciting relief.

While a number of natives were engaged removing a boiler, at the foundry of Messrs. Boyd and Co., at Pootung, the tackle by which it was suspended gave way. Three of the men were seriously injured, and were removed to the hospital on the French Bund. One of the three died shortly after his admission to the institution, and the life of one of the others is despaired of, he having sustained a dangerous fracture of the skull. The third man was injured on the back, and is expected to recover.

The Lapwing is likely to be repaired in Shanghai by Messrs. Boyd and Co. It is said that an examination of her hull shows her to be of magnificent workmanship throughout to have withstood the strain she has done without serious injury. She is of course very much damaged about the keel, showing what a severe hammering she has resisted, but the upper part of her hull is not strained or injured.

Eleven gentlemen have been nominated to serve as Municipal Councillors for the ensuing year, so that there will be a contested election, which is always a good thing, as it evokes more interest in municipal matters. We observe from the municipal minutes, that the project of diverting the road between "The Hovel" and Alpha Farm, to the back of the intervening houses, is again under consideration.

A Chefoo correspondent says the question of the gold-fields of Shantung, especially in the neighbourhood of Chefoo, is again attracting attention, owing to a native digger having quite recently found a nugget of gold weighing nine catties and a half, at Chi-hia. A few more finds of this sort would go a long way to prove that the auriferous character of the soil of Shantung is really what has been contended for by the progressist element in China and that if liberty were allowed to dig for gold, abundant riches would flow in to gladden the hearts of the famine-stricken population of the north of China.

A correspondent recently returned from the country informs us that in Fu-yang, a district city on the Dzien-dang river, some tens of miles above Hangchow, he saw a copy of the Yunnan proclamation; it was put up on the wall outside of the yamen. He was told that there were others up in the city and neighbourhood, but saw only the one.

The Hiroshima Maru experienced rough weather on the 27th Dec., the day after leaving Nagasaki, and had to slacken speed, which was the cause of her late arrival. A portion of her bulwarks was somewhat damaged, and a ladder and some small deck articles were swept away,

During the last fortnight the water at Hankow and Kiukiang has fallen rapidly, and only steamers drawing less than ten feet can proceed higher than Olyphant Island.

We hear that the chief prize, $60,000, in the December draw of the Manila lottery, has fallen to a resident at Kiukiang.

Messrs. Bisset and Co. report as follows upon the Share Market:—

H. and S. Bank.—Since our last report sales are reported at 22 per cent., ex. 73, and 23 per cent., ex. 73. There are inquiries for shares. S.S.N. Co.—The market has been much excited since the issue of our last report. A large number of shares have changed hands at rapidly advancing rates, on the 29th Dec., 70; 30th, 70 and 71; 3rd Jan., 72½ to 75; and 4th, 76 to 82. There are now buyers at this latter rate, with no shares offering. Yangtsze Insurance Association.—Sales are reported at Tls. 620 and 625. China Fire Insurance shares have been placed at 165, ex. 74; more are wanted. An Imperial Chinese Government Loan Bond was sold at £104 cum December interest.

The Celestial Empire supplies the following items of intelligence :—

We have important intelligence from Peking. Senor d'Espana, the Spanish Minister, has broken off diplomatic relations with the Chinese Government, and left the capital, and the frigate Carmen, whose impending visit we have already announced, is to be accompanied by the entire fleet from the Sulu Archipelago, consisting, we believe, of fourteen men-of-war. The cause of the rupture is understood to be the unsettled claims of the Spanish Government respecting the case of the Sovrana, which was wrecked, we believe, in 1864 upon the Formosan coast; but it is whispered that the Cuban difficulty is at the bottom of the affair. There is another rumour, for the authenticity of which we do not vouch, that M. de Prat has left the Government service. We also hear that the Russians have succeeded in opening the navigation of the Chinese part of the Amoor river.

We learn that the native Christians of Shanghai have subscribed several hundreds of dollars for the relief of their famine-stricken countrymen in Shantung. The Rev. T. Richard, of Chefoo, has just started for Ching-chow—one of the most suffering districts,—there to distribute the sums of money forwarded to him for this purpose. We may well exclaim, "What is this among so many?" Even were the amount at his command thousands instead of hundreds of dollars it would be very little for such a purpose: yet we trust that his mission of mercy may bring relief to some few at least, and that he himself may escape all personal violence at the hands of people made desperate by famine. On the first day of the eleventh month—Saturday, 16th December—the Taoutai of Chefoo commenced to distribute millet to the starving people who had made their way to that port. It is said that five thousand tickets are distributed daily, which entitle their holders to one bowl of millet a day, the value of which is estimated at about four cash. The winter has been ushered in with frost and snow and strong winds, so that the sufferings of those poor people must be very great.

On the 1st January the Taoutai, accompanied by Shen (Hai-fung T'ing), Mo (Che-hsien), P'an (Tsang-fu), and Ch'en Fuch'ing (the Mixed Court Magistrate), paid a round of ceremonial visits upon the various Consular representatives in Shanghai. The mandarins and their secretaries, lictors, apparitors, &c., formed an enormous procession, which paraded the streets of the settlement during the best part of the day. From a distance the forest of scarlet tablets emblazoned in gold, carried by small boys also in scarlet shirts and extinguishers, really looked rather quaint and pretty; but as we all know, Chinese processions will not bear looking into. One rather unusual feature in the day's proceedings was the invasion of the Shanghai Club by these civil, military and naval dignitaries. The Acting Consul-General for Italy is at present residing there.

It is on the cards that certain changes may take place in the immediate programme of the British Consular service. We hear that Mr. Mongan, instead of coming to Shanghai, proposes to go home, if possible, on a two years' furlough; that Mr. Sinclair has unexpectedly telegraphed out his determination to remain at home six months longer than had been previously intended, that Mr. Davenport may have to go as Acting-Consul to Tientsin, and that Mr. Alabaster may in the interim come here.

The rinderpest is raging in Urga and the Mongolian steppes to a very alarming extent. The Mongols pay no heed to it, although cattle, horses, camels and sheep are all seriously affected; indeed, the depraved creatures even eat mutton that has died of the disease. Unless the plague is stopped, it is feared that serious difficulties will be felt in the tea-trade, as there are no means of transport during winter except camels, and tea-caravans will be stopped at Tuniau and Kalgan for want of beasts.

A Chinese correspondent draws our attention to the prevalence of native gambling-houses in the settlement, and urges that the foreign police should put them down. Chinese lotteries, he says, have been in full swing for three weeks past, and are much frequented by servants in foreign employ, to the detriment of their private exchequers. We hear that the other night, towards the small hours of the morning, a Chinaman was assaulted and robbed in the Ningpo-road. He subsequently discovered that his assailant was an unlucky gambler in a neighbouring lottery-house, where he had lost every cash he had in the world.

It has for some time been understood that the American Post-office would be discontinued on the 1st January, in consequence of the withdrawal of the Pacific Mail Co.'s steamers and their transfer to the Mitsu Bishi Co. We have now received semi-official information that the power of attorney authorising the transfers in question has been revoked, and that the Post-office will be continued as heretofore.

A very handsomely bound family Bible, containing a number of fine steel engravings and maps, has been presented by the Good Templars of Yokohama, to their Shanghai brethren. The following, beutifully printed in colours, forms the first page :—"I.O.G.T. presented by the Members of the Alpha Lodge, No. 1, Independent Order of Good Templars, Yokohama, Japan, to their brethren of the Shanghai Lodge No. 4, with fraternal greeting. God Prosper you! Yokohama, December 18th 1876."

The week's settlements of tea are very trifling. There is as yet no sign of business in green teas being resumed. The heavy shipments by steam to America will prevent the effect of the now certain short crop being felt there still late in the Spring and consequently a rise in values before that time is very unlikely; teamen are holding firmly for former rates, which they have succeeded in obtaining for the few chops settled, but the cost of the teas is too far above home prices for buying to become general. With the exception of some rather large purchases of re-reels, there has been little or nothing doing in Silk. Tsatlees are firmly held, but Taysaams continue weak and declining.

Private transactions in imports have been on a more limited scale, the required "Sycee" not being so easily obtained from native buyers, while on the other hand consequent upon a lower rate of exchange, and stronger advices from Manchester, holders as a rule are demanding higher currency prices for suitable descriptions of cotton fabrics, which dealers have hitherto been able to resist.

In spite of the cheery, genial atmosphere which we are now enjoying, certain weather-wise Chinese predict a winter of unexampled severity. About the first or second week in February, we are told, a bitter frost will set in, such as has not been known for many a long year. We are also to look forward to weeks of snow, snow that will lie deep and long—a compensation for the inconvenience of the accompanying frost, which is regarded by the Chinese as a special favour from Heaven. Now we do not know how far we are justified in placing any reliance upon these vaticinations, but there is no harm in bearing them in mind.

We are informed that on the 28th Dec. the Taoutai paid the first instalment of the sum agreed upon for the Woosung Railway, amounting to Tls 95,000.

We notice the arrival of Mr. C. W. Goodwin from Yokohama, to assume the duties of Chief Judge of the Supreme Court of China and Japan.

We are informed that the Taoutai of Shanghai has received another three years' lease of office.

HONG KONG.

The present mail brings dates from the above colony to the 11th January. Since the departure of the previous mail nothing of political importance has occurred, if we except a rumour to the effect that Sir Brooke Robertson, H.B.M. Consul at Canton, had been selected to act as Consular Member of a commission to discuss the long-vexed blockade question. A correspondent of the Daily Press enters a protest against this course in the subjoined very sensible and pertinent letter, signed "T. S. W. R." :—

SIR,—If, as I am assured, your recent suggestion that Sir Brooke Robertson has been selected as the Consular official to discuss the Blockade Question is founded on fact, it seems to me high time that some steps were taken by those interested in this Colony to protest against such a selection. Sir Brooke was, as is well known, the principal originator of the measures which have so disastrously throttled the trade of Hong Kong, and to appoint him to a position which virtually makes him arbitrator between the Colonial and Chinese officials is something very like an insult to ourselves. It is to be hoped that, if the rumour be true, self-respect will lead so old, and generally able, an official, to decline the proffered honour. Should he, however, fail to see the matter in this light, but one course is open to both the Government and the community—that of making the strongest possible protest to his selection.

The official chosen for so important a duty as that which will devolve upon the Consular officer at the coming conference, should be totally unbiassed either for or against the Colony. He should possess a knowledge of Chinese, and should if possible be in a position independent of both Governments. I can think of but one Consular official who at this moment fulfils these requirements—Mr. W. H. Medhurst, who is about to retire from Shanghai, and to whom official favour will therefore henceforward be of but slight importance. Others, however, might perhaps be found; at all events, some one more suitable than a Consul against whose mistakes and misrepresentations on this very question the Chamber of Commerce, and even the Government, has found it necessary to emphatically protest. No one doubts Sir Brooke Robertson's personal good faith. But he has all along viewed the Blockade question from a certain standpoint, and he could not possibly recommend any concession to the Colonial point of view without to some extent stultifying his past utterances.

It lies with the Government in the first instance to object to such a selection. Failing action on its part, the mercantile community should take the matter up. The annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce must shortly be held, and its committee ought to have something to say on the subject. Indifferent as the members are, as a rule, to questions not touching their pockets, they will surely recognise in the selection adverted to a very serious danger to the trade of Hong Kong. Nor should the local press be dumb if its representatives would be true to their policy of supporting local interests.

The only degree to which the attempt to introduce the Saturday half-holiday—into Hong Kong has succeeded is of a negative character, the Postmaster-General having announced that the Money Order Department will close at one o'clock on that day.

An ordination has taken place at the Cathedral. On Sunday, January 7, the Bishop of Victoria conferred priest's orders upon the Rev. J. H. Sedgwick, at the eleven o'clock service. His lordship preached a sermon from the words "Woe is unto me if I preach not the Gospel." He spoke of the duty resting upon Christians to do all in their power to evangelise the world, and the responsibility of the Church of England with regard to missions. He gave a brief account of the work of the Church Missionary Society in the North of China, but said that south of Foochow but little had yet been done. It was now proposed to establish a mission on the mainland, and in this work he who was that morning to be ordained would have much to do. His lordship then spoke of the work being done in connection with St. Paul's College, where six English and several native students are being trained for the mission he had referred to, and made an appeal on behalf of that institution, to which the offertory was to be devoted. The Litany was said by the Rev. E. Davys, and the communion read by the Bishop, the Colonial Chaplain reading the Epistle. There was a good congregation present.

Hong Kong proposes to do its washing by steam, a project having been mooted for the establishment of a steam laundry in the Colony. The Daily Press, which advocates the scheme with some vigour, says:—"This is a want which has long been felt, and which has been repeatedly noticed in these columns." A prospectus has been issued, in which the outlay is estimated at not more than $16,000, and the annual profit at $9,000. This profit is expected to be earned on 250,000 pieces per month, at a charge of $1.50 per hundred pieces. The Chinese charge is from $2 to $2.50 per 100 pieces. Supposing that only 150,000 pieces could be obtained, the monthly profit is estimated at $347. The above paper says there can be little doubt that the speculation would be a safe one. The shipping alone would furnish a considerable quantity of work, especially the mail companies, whose support may be confidently looked for.

The value of registration tickets for servants has again been shown at the Police-court, where a certain Cheung Afuk, a chair coolie, was charged by Mr. Charles Osmond, clerk in the Registration-office, with unlawfully making use of a registration ticket not duly obtained by him. The enterprising prisoner came to Mr. Osmond's office with a note from the Rev. Mr. Hutcheson, requesting that he should be registered as a chair coolie, and produced an old registration ticket, and a character from the United States Consul. The paper represented that the bearer had been in the employ of a no less august person than the Chief Justice, but it turned out that the ticket belonged to a clansman, who gave it to him. The prisoner was severely punished, the sentence upon him being no less than a month's imprisonment, with hard labour. It has, however, been abundantly proved that no punishment will ever check the habit among the Chinese of accommodating one another with their characters.

The following rather noteworthy letter, which has appeared in a Brisbane paper, the Cooktown Herald, deserves attention at the Colonial Office:—

Having been a resident of Hong Kong for years past, and having witnessed the departure of thousands of immigrants from China to Australia, I beg to inform you that the way the Health Officer in Hong Kong examines them is by stripping all their breasts and thoroughly searching each for any signs of that dreadful disease, and any who have the slightest symptoms of small-pox are not allowed to embark. The examination is very searching before leaving Hong Kong, and great care is taken not to permit any emigrant to leave for Australia that is at all ailing—so there is little fear of any small-pox being introduced into Cooktown. But how different matters are managed in Australia—the Chinese passengers are marched past the official at the double quick, and about every tenth man's eyelids are raised by the official, for the purpose, I presume, of observing if there is any "green in it."

The Choral Society is still flourishing, and was to give a concert in the City Hall the evening the mail left.

In accordance with the general custom at home and elsewhere, the New Year's week was set apart for special services, thanksgiving, and prayer.

According to a notification in the Hong Kong Government Gazette the total rainfall for the year 1876 was 104·02 inches. Of this no less than 32·43 inches fell in the month of August. February was the driest month in the year, only 0·45 inch falling in that month. The average rainfall in Hong Kong is 71 inches, from which it will be seen that the past year was an exceptionally wet one.

The following account, duly cettified, of the average amount of bank notes in circulation in Hong Kong during the month ending 31st December is published in the Gazette:—

	Average Amount.
Oriental Bank Corporation	$303,127
Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London and China	520,774
Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China	439,424
Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation	1,238,700

CANTON.

A sad accident is reported as having taken place at a review of the native troops by the Viceroy and Lieut.-Governor, on the northern Parade Ground. A large number of spectators had climbed up a high tree in order to get a better view of the proceedings, and it suddenly gave way under their weight, crushing several to death and wounding many others severely. Another case of brigandage is reported from Hiangshan. The robbers plundered a chandler's shop, and carried off the shopkeeper, for whose ransom they demand $1,000. No arrests have been made.

COCHIN CHINA.

SAIGON.

The Courier de Saigon announces that the elections for the Chamber of Commerce will take place on Sunday, Feb. 4, at the Town-hall. The Director of the Interior is charged with the management of this election, the result of which will be published in due course. Arrangements are made for signalling ships which arrive off Cape St. James at night.

SIAM.

BANGKOK.

The Siam Weekly Advertiser of the 21st December has the following:—

A short time since the Consul-General of H.B.M. in Siam sent a letter to the Prime Minister informing him that the Governor of Singapore had forwarded from the Commissioner of Burmah a gun and a field glass, the gun to be given to the Governor of Takuapa and the glass to the Governor of Panga, as rewards for having assisted the English vessel Utiban, wrecked on their coast. These Governors being in Bangkok, the Consul asked that the presents might be sent for at the Consulate and duly presented, which was accordingly done.

The U.S. Consul, of whose arrival at his post of duty we gave notice in a former issue of our paper, received his exequatur from the King of Siam on the 8th inst. after an audience with his Majesty at the Royal palace. The Government Gazette contains a full account of all the proceedings. In visiting the palace Mr. Sickels was accompanied by Rev. N. A. McDonald and Mr. De Sa, the private Secretary of his Excellency the Minister of Foreign Affairs. From the landing at the wharf of the International Court-house, the Consul was conveyed in a carriage provided for the purpose by the King, and escorted to the palace by a retinue of prominent dignitaries of the Government. On reaching the Reception-hall an artillery salute was fired by the soldiers of the Royal guard in honour of his arrival, and the usual formalities were strictly observed. The Consul was presented to his Majesty by Mr. De Sa and addressed him in a dignified manner, conveying the assurance of the President of the United States that he desired that the most amicable relations might continue to exist between the two Governments during his Majesty's reign. The King received the Consul with a gracious bow, and with a pleasant smile on his face that gave evidence of a cordial welcome. He then delivered an address to the Consul, which was afterwards presented to him with his exequatur, in which he expressed great pleasure in acknowledging the action of the President in appointing him as the diplomatic representative of the United States at the Court of Siam and the hope that all important affairs relating to the interests of both countries might be adjusted in a friendly manner, and in accordance with the principles of justice and equity. After the audience was concluded the Consul was presented to the princes of the Royal household, and to several nobles of the realm. The whole affair was conducted in a manner highly gratifying to all concerned, and the large assemblage of distinguished officers of the Government of Siam in the Audience-chamber was evidence of the interest which was felt in the event by the Siamese authorities.

GUNBOATS FOR THE CHINESE GOVERNMENT.

Kuo-Tah-Jen, the Chinese Envoy, left London on Saturday for Portsmouth, to inspect the Gamma and Delta, the gunboats which have just been completed for the Chinese Government.

These vessels were built by Messrs. Mitchell, at their works on the Tyne, from the design of Mr. Rendell, and are what may be described as an enlarged and improved copy of the "Staunch" class of gunboat. They are each of 400 tons burthen, and only draw seven feet of water aft. They have tripod masts, and are fitted throughout with all the most modern improvements. Each vessel will carry a 38-ton gun in the bow, similar to those in the turrets of the Thunderer, and will also be provided with two 20-pounder Armstrong guns and two Gatling guns. Sir William Armstrong's hydraulic machinery has been introduced for working the heavy guns, and by an improved method which has been introduced one of these ponderous weapons may be managed by two men. The propulsion of the vessels is by twin-screws, worked by horizontal engines of 40 nominal horse power, but which can be worked up to 310. In this department there are also engines for working the air-pump, circulating pump, and bilge-pump, and the feed-pump for the main engines. The Gamma is commanded by Commander Lang, and the Lieutenants are Messrs. Powell and Young. Commander Ching has charge of the Delta, with Messrs. Hopkins and Hext as lieutenants.

His Excellency and suite travelled by special train on the direct line, reaching Portsmouth shortly before one. Proceeding to the harbour station, they embarked in a Government launch, and went on board the Fire Queen yacht, in which they left the harbour for Spithead, where the gunboats were lying. The vessels were minutely inspected, and the party then returned to harbour, and shortly afterwards left for London.

The vessels will proceed at once to Plymouth to take in their powder, and complete for their voyage to the Far East.

(TIMES TELEGRAM.)

A telegram from Japan announces another insurrection. This time it is in the turbulent Satsuma clan that the rising has occurred. It cannot, however, be regarded as serious, for the reason that neither Shimadzou Labouro, nor Sags, nor Murata (the great Satsuma leaders), have taken part in it. On the contrary, they seem to disapprove it altogether. The Government can now absolutely rely upon the army, which has become purely national, and which has been well drilled and instructed by the French Military Mission.

CHINESE ABROAD.

(MORNING POST.)

Almost simultaneously with the arrival of the first Chinese Ambassador in England we hear that a Mr. Crawford, connected with the English Legation at Peking, has reached Wellington, New Zealand, on a special mission to investigate the question of Chinese immigration into the Australasian colonies, and to report thereon to the Imperial Government. The question is one that will have to be seriously dealt with, as it is of constantly growing importance; and year by year its gravity is becoming more and more felt in countries inhabited by white races liable to the introduction of a large number of immigrants from the Celestial Empire. Although it has not yet assumed the same aspect in Australia that it has in California and the adjoining United States territory, where, alongside a European population not much exceeding a million, there are located one hundred and fifty thousand Chinese, of whom nearly one-third are to be found in San Francisco alone, still the Antipodean communities feel very strongly on the subject. Until within the last three or four years the chief influx was into Victoria and New South Wales, and in both those colonies, in the heyday of Chinese immigration, Acts were passed levying a poll-tax on the race, and these continued in force for some years, but eventually were repealed when they had served their purpose in checking the inundation. But although antagonistic legislation was thus done away with, the Chinese have not been an acceptable people in any of the Australian colonies, and in the mining districts particularly their presence has been specially objected to by European diggers. Both in New South Wales and Victoria riotous proceedings have more than once been witnessed, in manifestation of this feeling. During the last two or three years, however, it is Queensland that has been chiefly favoured by the advent of Chinese, and as they have been attracted almost entirely by the discovery of the rich alluvial diggings on the Palmer in the northern part of the country, again they conflict with the mining population, always the most hostile to them. Perhaps one reason why of late years there have been few disputes between European and Chinese miners in the two leading Australian colonies is that the Chinese generally restrict their operations to alluvial diggings, whereas the quartz reefs now are the principal attractions to Europeans. In Northern Queensland, therefore, where the diggings on the Palmer were at the outset almost entirely alluvial, though quartz reefs now are being worked, the Chinese and European diggers necessarily came in contact and collision; and the Legislature, in compliance with the demand of those of our own race, resolved to place a restriction upon the coming of the others. Their attempted exclusion was not, however, carried out in the undisguised manner that it had been in the other colonies, but it was sought to accomplish the same end in a different way. Instead of levying a poll-tax, the Legislature passed an Act which would not affect the Chinese until after they were located in the colony, and Chinese were not even mentioned by name. The Act obliged all "Asiatics" to pay for their mining license £6 per annum more than the sum paid by Europeans. As no other Asiatics than Chinese went to Queensland to follow mining pursuits, and nine out of ten Chinamen at least proceeded thither for that purpose, the object would have been equally attained, and in addition the Colonial Legislature was shrewd enough to substitute for a single payment in the shape of a poll-tax of £10 an annual license fee of £6. It was not likely that the Chinese, accustomed though there are to being ridden rough-shod over, would tamely submit to this. Amongst them were men who knew the terms of our treaty with China, and the privileges it granted for free intercourse between the two countries. The Governor of Queensland was at once memorialised by them, and information sent to Hong Kong resulted in remonstrances being made to the Chinese Government, as well as to our own authorities at Hong Kong, which was the principal port of departure for the emigrants. It was alleged that the new law being enacted in Queensland was an infraction of treaty rights, and Mr. Cairns, the Governor of the colony, took the best course open to him, in withholding his assent to the measure and reserving it for Her Majesty's sanction. A few years back there would have been a great outcry on the part of the diggers at this proceeding, but we are glad to see that now it has been generally acquiesced in.

At the same time, although it certainly does seem an anomaly to restrict or even discountenance the advent into any part of the British dominions of a people into whose country, it may be said, we ourselves have forced an entrance at the point of the sword, it is impossible for those having any practical acquaintance with the subject to look with satisfaction at the rapid increase of Chinese immigration in any land inhabited by people of European descent. No white race has had the same experience of the evils of the presence of a large Chinese population as have the inhabitants of California. Enlightened persons do not deny the many advantages that Chinese immigration has conferred upon that State. The Transcontinental Railway west of Omaha was largely made by Chinese labourers. They are industrious, and pursue many callings in which there has been a dearth of white workmen. In Californian households they frequently supply the place of domestics otherwise unobtainable. But there are drawbacks, and last year these took such a hold of the public mind in the Golden State that all classes of the white population united to prevent further Chinese immigration. Mass meetings were held at San Francisco, and at Antioch the unfortunate Celestials had convincing proof in injuries inflicted upon themselves and their property of the antipathy felt towards them. The United States Supreme Court, however, desired that in the face of the Treaty with China no exceptional legislation could be enacted to prevent their coming, and a serious difficulty seemed imminent. It was temporarily settled by a compromise, the six Chinese companies which regulate the introduction of their countrymen resolving to moderate or stop it for a time in view of the prevailing excitement; and the immigration has since received a further check in consequence of a superabundance of white labour. The final settlement of the question has nevertheless only been postponed in California, and it appears that it is also a matter of concern to our own colonists on the American shores of the Pacific. British Columbia, with a small white population, sees danger in the Chinese element within its borders; and not very long ago the Legislature passed a resolution declaring it expedient for the Government to take steps to prevent the province being overrun by Chinese. It will thus be seen that both in North America and in Australia the question is of importance, and will have to be carefully considered. Mr. Crawford's mission, it is to be hoped, will result in such information being furnished to the Home Government as will enable it, without any legal restrictions being placed upon the landing of Chinese in British colonies, to impress, by the use of well-grounded arguments, upon the Government of China the necessity of accommodating itself to the views of our colonies by placing the emigration of its subjects under satisfactory regulations. It stands to reason, however much we may in favour of unrestricted intercourse with China, that we cannot desire the introduction into our colonies of an element which they are warmly opposed to. The means of communication between China and Australia are very different to what they were a few years back, when the voyage to Melbourne or Sydney in sailing ships occupied a couple of months. Now, from Hong Kong to Northern Queensland passengers are conveyed at low fares by quick steamers in sixteen or seventeen days, so that access is easy and offers every facility for the introduction of Chinese. If we are to credit the report of a Californian committee of inquiry, which stated that one-fourth of all the criminals in the State were Chinamen, and that it had been ascertained that of the people of that race then in the country at least ten thousand were known criminals before they left China, whom their own Government were glad to get rid of, we can well understand that British colonies are averse to their presence, and are rather alarmed at the prospect of their increasing in numbers. We can only imagine what Englishmen would think of the advent of half-a-dozen millions of Mongolians into the United Kingdom to comprehend what opinion our colonies have upon the subject and the necessity of the question being speedily dealt with.

Naval and Military.

Consequent upon there being no ships of their class available as reliefs, the Charybdis and the Modeste are to be paid off and recommissioned on the China station, a fresh captain for the former ship, with other officers, and crews proceeding thither in H.M.'s troopship Tamar, now refitting at Devonport. Captain Charles F. Hotham (1871) has been nominated to the command of the Charybdis, and the subjoined appointments are also gazetted. Lieutenants Reginald B. Fulford and J. O. Thomas to the Hart; Arthur W. Moore, Francis H. Harvey, H. Warren and R. M. Bunbury to the Charybdis; Francis D. Scott, additional, to the Audacious; Jno. D. Nicholls, Harry S. F. Niblett, and John F. Pipon to the Modeste. Navigating Lieutenants: Richard G. Roe and John G. Scott to the Audacious; Sub-Lieutenants Edward J. Bain and Francis A. A. G. Tate to the Modeste; Arthur R. M. Creagh and Frederick H. T. W. Freeman to the Charybdis. Paymasters: Norcott D'E. Roberts and Edmund Hickson to the Audacious, and David J. Thompson, assistant in charge, to the Hart. Midshipmen: Charles T. Gimlett, Houston S. J. Phillips, and Richard H. Pearse to the Charybdis.

Lieutenant Richmond Powell, who has been studying at the Royal Naval College, has received permission to accept temporary employment under the Chinese Government, and will navigate a gunboat out to China.

The appointments of Lieutenant Arthur Havergne, and Sub-Lieutenants Arthur J. Loane and Francis M. Keary, to the Audacious, for service in the Sylvia on the China station, are gazetted.

The troopship Himalaya, which left Queenstown on the 16th December with Naval and Military reliefs for Ceylon and the China Station, arrived at Hong Kong on the 14th inst.

The changes to be effected in the department supervision of Devonport and Keyham dockyards will be of a more extensive nature than was at first anticipated. The whole of the metal work that appertains to, or is in connection with, the hulks of the vessels will be made and repaired by the shipwright's department. The engines and boilers and their connections only will in future be under the management of the steam branch, to enable the voluminous so-called mill-wrighting works for a float surface to be carried on entirely in the dockyard, a large amount of which is at present done at Keyham. A quantity of new machinery has been ordered and will be erected as soon as possible. It is expected that Mr. Richards, the officer who for twenty years past has superintended the engineers and millwrights in Devonport dockyard, will be appointed in charge of the millwrights' stationary work at Keyham, vice Mr. Cooper, the present foreman of that shop, who has become totally blind through serious illness, although the chief engineer is understood to desire that Mr. Richards should be retained at the dockyard to superintend the large amount of work which will still be performed there by the factory workmen.

At Portsmouth, the Tees, another of the iron twin screw gunboats built or being built by Messrs. Palmer and Co., of Jarrow, has been tried on the measured mile in Stokes Bay. The whole series consists of twelve boats, all being of the same size and construction, and built from designs by Mr. Henry Morgan, one of the Chief Constructors at the Admiralty. Six—viz., the Medina, Medway, Sabrina, Tees, Spey, and Tay (the first three engined by Messrs. Hawthorne and Co., of Newcastle, and the others by Messrs. John Penn and Co., Greenwich)—have been received from the contractors, and are now being completed for sea at Portsmouth, while the others, which are respectively named the Dee, Don, Esk, Slaney, Trent, and Tweed, all of which are engined by Messrs. Hawthorne, are still in course of construction on the Tyne. They are light and handy craft, intended, as their names imply, for river service, and were laid down at a time when our relations with China threatened to assume an unpleasantly unfriendly character. They are 110 ft. long by 34 ft. broad.

The Princess of Wales has intimated her intention of presenting a full-length portrait of herself to be hung in the ward-room of the armour-clad ship Alexandra, flag-ship of Vice-Admiral Hornby, now fitting at Chatham for the Mediterranean, in commemoration of her launching that vessel at Chatham dockyard, on the 7th April, 1875. It is expected that the presentation of the portrait to the officers of the ship will be made by her Royal Highness, in person, on board the Alexandra, the Prince and Princess of Wales having expressed their desire to inspect that vessel before she takes her departure for the Mediterranean. Mr. Ward Hunt, First Lord of the Admiralty, accompanied by other members of the Board, and several naval officers, have inspected the Alexandra, which left Chatham for Portsmouth on the 14th inst.

Lieutenant J. H. Barnard, C.M.G., 19th Regiment, has been appointed private secretary and aide-de-camp to Sir John Glover, G.C.M.G., R.N., Governor of Newfoundland. Lieutenant Barnard served with the 19th Regiment in the Hazara campaign of 1868, including the expedition against the tribes on the Black Mountain (medal with clasp). Also as a volunteer under Sir John Glover in the Ashantee War of 1873-74, led the advanced guard at the capture of Abogoo, commanded for five days a detached force of 650 men, which captured Jaashi, and commanded a detachment of 150 men which drove the enemy out of their camps on the north bank of the Anoom (mentioned in despatches for great discretion and judgment, and on two occasions for gallant conduct, C.M.G., medal with clasp).

The Heavy Gun Committee, having taken into consideration the result of the late trial of the 80-ton gun at Shoeburyness, have given directions to have the gun brought back to Woolwich in order that th powder chamber may be enlarged at the Royal Gun Factories. The defective tube will not be at present replaced, although the increased charge which will follow on the enlargement of the chamber will necessarily subject it to a heavier strain; but one round will probably be fired at the Woolwich butts to ascertain the velocity and pressures under the new conditions, and the great weapon will then be taken once more to Shoeburyness for a second trial against the 32-inch iron target.

Captain Radulphus Bryce Oldfield, R.N., C.B., aide-de-camp to the Queen, died last week. in his fiftieth year. He entered the navy in 1840, and served successively in the East Indies, the Pacific, the Mediterranean, the Cape, and a second time in the Pacific. In 1869 he obtained six months' leave from the Admiralty, and went to Penang, on behalf of the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company, for the purpose of exploring certain routes, with a view to establish a telegraphic communication from Burmah, the Tenasserim provinces, and Siam, with Penang. Captain Oldfield was appointed naval aide-de-camp to the Queen in 1874, and was nominated a C.B. in 1875.

Mr. E. J. Reed, M.P., delivered an address on "Naval Architecture" at the South Kensington Museum on the 10th inst. The main point of the hon. gentleman's observations was that ships were now being built much too long in proportion to their depth and breadth, the dangers of which he exhibited, and this evil was especially observable in merchant shipping. He contended that shape was not nearly so detrimental to speed as was popularly supposed, and expressed an opinion that when the "solid of least resistance" was discovered, the majority of the problems connected with this subject would be solved.

The Boxer, which was commissioned at Chatham two months ago for service on the West Coast of Africa, and which has been at Devonport for the past month patching her machinery, has at length broken down altogether, both crank shafts being so seriously cracked that they will have to be replaced. This will detain the Boxer for another month. Meanwhile the Seagull, which has been in commission at Devonport a month, and which is also destined for the West Coast, is detained at Devonport by machinery troubles.

It is proposed to raise a memorial over the graves of the sufferers from the Thunderer explosion at Haslar Cemetery. Upwards of £120 has been raised by subscriptions at Portsmouth, Messrs. Humphrys and Tennant giving £25, and Admiral Elliot, Rear-Admiral M'Clintock, and Captain Waddilove, who was in command of the ship at the time, also subscribing liberally. The form of the memorial has not yet been determined upon, the ultimate shape which it will take being dependent upon the amount contributed.

It is reported that further important changes in the formation of the commissariat and transport branches of the army are contemplated by the War-office. It is understood that henceforth examinations for the control will cease, and that all newly appointed officers in the supply and transport departments of the army will be taken from the line. According to the same authority, an amended guard-room order is likely to be issued, in consequence of the recent murder by a drunken guardsman.

Some trials are being made in the Channel Squadron to test the value of gun-cotton charges for fog signalling purposes. Some time since the flagship was supplied with howitzers as fog signal guns, and they proved so useful that Admiral Seymour recommended that 24-pounder howitzers should be fitted to ships for this purpose, but we understand gun-cotton is now to be tried. Its use has lately engaged the attention of the Trinity Board.

Major-General Lysons represented the Duke of Cambridge at the inspection of the cadets of the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich. The reports read were very satisfactory. Of the thirty-eight gentlemen who had presented themselves to be examined for commissions, twenty-six passed, seven of whom will be recommended to Her Majesty for commissions in the Royal Engineers, and the remainder in the Royal Artillery.

An order has been received at Portsmouth for the Osborne, Royal yacht, to be completed for sea by March 1, and a number of men have been taken from other work to get her ready. It is supposed that the Osborne will proceed to Malta to embark the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh and family for passage to England.

The Dreadnought, double-screw turret-ship, at Portsmouth, is to be completed for the pendant forthwith. Captain Richard Wells (1866), late flag-captain to Admiral Wellesley, C.B., on the North American and West Indian stations, will, in all probability, commission the Dreadnought.

The Emerald, composite screw corvette, of 1,864 tons displacement, and engines working up to 2,100-horse power, is about to be moved from Pembroke to Devonport, to be prepared for commission. She was launched in August last, and has thus far cost about £80,000.

No reduction is to be made in the personnel of the Fleet to be borne during the financial year 1877-78. The strength of the Royal Marines will also be maintained as during the present year, 7,000 being detailed for service afloat and 7,000 for head-quarters.

The Queen has presented to the Royal Horse Artillery a handsome black charger to carry the drummer at the head of the mounted band. The horse, which has arrived at Woolwich from the Royal mews, is undergoing a course of training for its new duties.

The designs of a new vessel, to be classed as a "torpedo ram," have been prepared in the construction department at the Admiralty, and provision will be made in the navy estimates for her construction at Portsmouth.

The Decoy, 4, composite gun vessel, Lieut. Hayes, after four years' commission on the North American and West Indies station, has arrived in Plymouth Sound, and will pay off after inspection.

The Vulture, 3, double screw gun vessel, Commander Washington left Plymouth Sound on the 11th inst. for the East Indies, vid the Suez Canal.

SHEPHERD AND OTHERS V. KOTTGEN AND OTHERS.

This case raised a question of considerable mercantile importance, as to whether the loss of a mast under the circumstances disclosed was a general average loss or not. The plaintiffs were the owners of the Rollo, a bark of 586 tons register, and the defendants were the owners of part of the cargo. The parties really interested in the result of the action were the underwriters of the ship on the one hand, and the underwriters of the cargo on the other. The Rollo left London on the 8th of December, 1874, for Hong Kong, with a general cargo. After she had passed Scilly the weather became rough, and on the 17th it blew a hurricane, and part of the main chain plates on the starboard side gave way, and the strain on the back stay being thus increased, it also gave way. At the time the vessel was hove to on the starboard tack. In order to shift the strain, the captain wore the ship and put her on the port tack. This was done with a view of saving the mast, if possible. In the log the sea was described as frightful at this time. It was impossible to secure the starboard rigging. The main-mast at this time was lurching violently, and the captain, fearing that it would tear up the decks, cut the port rigging, and the main-mast fell over the starboard side of the vessel, taking with it the mizen-mast. The vessel was afterwards overhauled by a steamer from Liverpool and towed into Lisbon. The contention of the plaintiffs was that cutting away the mast was a sacrifice for the benefit of the general venture, and, being such, was a proper subject for general average contribution. The contention on behalf of the defendants was, that at the time when the mast was cut it was a lost mast, and therefore that cutting it away was no sacrifice, and the loss of the mast was not a matter for general average contribution.

The Judge (Mr. Justice Manisty) left it to the jury to say whether the mast was virtually a wreck and gone at the time when it was cut away. The jury found that the mast when it was cut away was a wreck and hopelessly lost. Upon this finding his Lordship directed judgment to be entered for the defendants.

HOLLAND.

AMSTERDAM, FEB. 14.

The members of the Second Chamber have been going through the Education Bill in Committee, contrary to the general opinion that the Bill would pass almost without discussion. It is hoped, however, that the details will be settled sufficiently to enable Mr. Moen's Bill to be laid upon the table of the Second Chamber before the general elections in the month of June.

Several proprietors and managers of ironworks have forwarded to the Ministers of the Departments of the Colonies and Foreign Affairs an address stating their adhesion to the demand for concession to build and fit railways in India,—either for account of a company or for that of the State. This demand is made by the English firm, Messrs. Meiggs and Church, which is recommended as thoroughly sound, and as being an authority in railway matters. These adhesions have been given by the proprietors in question because the contractors in spe have engaged themselves to protect as much as possible the Dutch iron industry, if prices and quality can compete. The contractors flatter themselves that if such an engagement is made the languishing ironworks will flourish, and our country will enjoy a revival in this important branch of industry. Great fear is felt that the rinderpest, which has attacked the cattle, in several German states, will also be imported into this country. Our trade in this branch with England already suffers enormously by the preventive measures which are taken by the Board of Trade. The export to your country, which, as a rule, is very large, has nearly come to a standstill.

An official statistical report has been published with reference to the strength of our navy. We have at our disposal 21 ironclads, monitors, &c.; 18 steam gunboats, 3 torpedo vessels, 2 rams, 19 screw steamers, 8 auxiliary vessels, 13 ships for training, 33 ships for the Indian Navy. They are armed with 68 Armstrong guns of 23 and 23 centimetres, and 425 guns of smaller dimensions. The number of men amount to 5,804.

Yesterday the members of the Second Chamber met and discussed the Reform Bill, which is now before them. The principal alterations proposed are that the electoral districts shall be henceforth simple, instead of mixed, and that the taxes—on which the right of voting is based—shall be generally diminished, whilst the maximum for the country will be fixed at f.28.

On the 12th of April an International Agricultural Exhibition will be opened on a very large scale. The members of the Royal Family will present many golden and silver awards to the exhibitors, besides considerable sums of money.

It is rumoured that Mr. Kramer will be appointed Secretary-General for the Department of War, whilst Mr. Wintgens will be installed as Judicial Adviser. These appointments are very popular in some quarters.

We are anxiously awaiting some indications of the new political programme. The differences between the Liberal members are by no means solved, and it is still uncertain what course will be decided upon.

An immense sensation has been caused here by the arrest of the secretary of the Amsterdam Canal Company, who has embezzled a considerable capital belonging to the company.

Business on Change is very dull. There is plenty of money, but, by a general want of confidence, by which both trade and speculation are checked.

Transactions in the several articles of Colonial Produce have been very satisfactory, though demand has prevailed only for immediate wants and export. The public sales have shown a good result, and trade in general looks very healthy. Prices, however, remained unaltered.

Literature.

A Visit to Japan, China, and India, by R. N. FOWLER, M.A., F.S.A. London: Sampson Low and Co.—The best we can say of this little book is, that it does not contain more blunders than must of necessity be made by any one who undertakes to write about such countries as China, Japan, and India, after a visit of a few weeks. The contents would make a very good series of letters to private friends; but, as Auguste Comte would say of them, Mr. Fowler's truths require verification. There is a pleasing naïveté about many of his statements which, if it provoke a smile at the author's simplicity, at least renders the book comparatively amusing. To take a few instances at random, we may mention that he informs us in one place, while describing his voyage from Shanghai to Hong Kong, that "the North Saddle light is seen on the other bow from that on which it is visible coming from Nagasaki;" in another place, that "the French Municipal Council is elected by the nominees of the French Consul;" and in a third, he expresses his opinion, that "the natives of Canton and Swatow would suffer from the cold winter in New England and New York." Mr. Fowler was apparently not informed by the "leading" merchant (whose name, by the way, he gives sans cérémonie) that the "Boys" who waited upon him at Shanghai, where the winter is ordinarily as severe as in America, came up from Canton, and that thousands of Cantonese live permanently in the northern ports.

The Barton Experiment, by the Author of "Helen's Babies." London: Sampson Low and Co.—The above work will be perused with interest. It is written in a telling and earnest manner, not, as the authoress says in the preface, as a finished romance, or even an attempt at one; but because it has seemed to the writer that if American people could behold some of the men who have astonished themselves and others, by their success as reformers, individual effort would not be so rare in communities where organisation is not easily effected. The moral of the story is against drinking, gambling, and the like vices; and we make no doubt that it will be productive of much good, by calling attention to many errors committed by reformers, whose zeal often outruns their discretion.

Street Life in London. By J. Thomson, F.R.G.S., and Adolphe Smith. London: Sampson Low and Co.—This book promises to afford a most valuable insight into a class of persons constantly around us, but of whom, though we move in their midst, we know but very little. If it is true that one half of the world does not know how the other half lives, this book, bringing before us not only in the excellent photographs which form its substratum, but also in its admirable and lifelike sketches, both the appearance and the ways of those described, will do much to make us acquainted with many classes of whom we now know but little. The subjects embraced in the first part (under notice) are London nomades, London cabmen, and Covent-garden flower women.

Notes on the Colony of Victoria. By H. H. Hayter, Government Statist. London: Trübner and Co.—We have received a copy of the above-named valuable statistical work, which contains the best and most reliable information on the subject treated. The Government of Victoria decided that with a view to giving as much publicity as possible to the contents of the Victorian Year-book for 1874 it should be reprinted and sold at a reduced rate, and Mr. Hayter has taken the opportunity to make some alterations in the text, and to change the name to that of the present volume.

Cassell's Household Guide. London: Cassell, Petter and Galpin.—A new edition in parts of the above valuable work is at present being issued. It is excellently got up, and contains much valuable matter. It is justly observed in the preface that the lesson above all others which is required to be learnt in the present day is that wealth is not necessarily found in the possession of a large income but rather a surplus after the income has been made to meet the necessary demands upon it. This book will aid greatly in attaining this desirable end.

A paragraph appears in this week's World stating that "the Standard is about to change hands;" that "the ostensible purchaser" is "an architect, well known in City circles;" that this well-known architect is "acting on behalf of a Conservative M.P.;" and that "the price paid" is "understood" to be "about £150,000." The Standard gives a direct contradiction to these assertions.

We have received a copy of the Bulletin Trimestrall de la Societé Khediviale de Geographie at Cairo, which contains some very valuable papers and maps, as well as an account of the proceedings of the Society. Among the charts is one of the course of the Nile in the region of the Great Lakes.

voted to the exposition of the qualities of certain forage plants and shrubs calculated to prove of much service to home, colonial, and foreign cultivators. It contains some valuable drawings of the plants referred to.

The Emperor of Austria has conferred on Mr. Trübner, the well-known publisher of Ludgate-hill, the Cross of the Order of Francis Joseph.

MEETINGS OF SOCIETIES.

At the Statistical Society on Jan. 30, J. Heywood, Esq., President, in the chair, the paper read was "On the Recent Economic Progress of New Zealand," by Mr. A. Hamilton. A discussion followed, in which Sir J. Vogel, Dr. Guy, Sir J. Ferguson, Bart., &c., took part. One of the interesting points of discussion was as to the value of an adult male immigrant. Mr. Hamilton, in his paper, states that "The value of an immigrant in the community has been estimated in the United States at £166 13s. 4d." Sir J. Vogel stated that it had been estimated by a German authority that immigrants—such as those encouraged to go to New Zealand—were worth £200 each to the colony; but he himself thought they were worth more, and doubted the possibility of arriving at anything like a satisfactory estimate.

At the Society of Antiquaries on Jan. 25, J. Evans, Esq., V.P., in the chair, Mr. D. Mocatta exhibited and presented some drawings of the wall-decorations of Pompeii, which had been executed by himself and Mr. S. Burchell in 1829. What made them particularly valuable was the circumstance that Mr. Mocatta and his companion stole a march upon the custodi during their siestâ, by clambering over the walls and copying the decorations at the most lately discovered and excavated part of that interesting city.

At the Royal Society on Feb. 1, Dr. Hooker, President, in the chair, papers were read "On the Mean Directions and Distribution of the Lines of Equal Barometric Pressure, and their Relations to the Mean Direction and Force of the Wind over the British Isles," by Mr. J. A. Broun, and "On the Meteorology of the Bombay Presidency," by Mr. C. Chambers.

At the Geological Society on Jan. 24, Professor P. M. Duncan, President, in the chair, communications were read "On the Question of the Glacial or Volcanic Origin of the Talchír Boulder-Bed of India, and the Karoo Boulder-Bed of South Africa," by Mr. H. F. Blanford, "On British Cretaceous Patelloid Gasteropoda," by Mr. J. S. Gardner, and "Observations on Remains of the Mammoth and other Mammals from Northern Spain," by Mr. A. L. Adams.

At the Society of Antiquaries on Feb. 1, F. Ouvry, Esq., President, in the chair, Mr. G. W. Marshall exhibited and presented three rubbings of the coffin-plates of Lords Kilmarnock, Balmarino, and Lovat, taken by the late Sir H. Nicolas. Dr. Marshall also exhibited a chalice—the bowl of silver, the stem and foot copper gilt—of Italian work of the fifteenth century.

At the Archæological Institute on Feb. 2, C. T. Fortnum, Esq., V.P., in the chair, allusion was made to the loss sustained by the Society, and the archæological world in general, by the death of Mr. J. Burtt, the late hon. secretary. A paper was read by Mr. C. Davey, "On the Roman Villa recently Discovered at Wantage." Its resemblance to similar structures at Silchester and Wheatley was remarked. No Mosaic tiles were found, but a rare gold coin rewarded the exertions of the explorer.

At the Linnean Society on Jan. 18, Prof. Allman, President, in the chair, a memento of the Polaris Expedition was exhibited by Mr. R. I. Lynch. This consisted of a pot of growing wheat, which had been sown and raised from the grain left in Polaris Bay, 81° 38′ N., by the American Expedition. Captain (Sir G.) Nares, in a letter to Dr. Hooker, states that the grain had been exposed to the winters' frost, 1872-6; but, notwithstanding the intense cold it had been subjected to, the above sample, grown at Kew, gave sixty-four per cent. as capable of germination. A grain of maize among the wheat, which also sprouted, possessed even greater interest, inasmuch as being a truly tropical plant. The amphibious and migratory fishes of India formed the subject of a paper by Dr. F. Day. He first instanced many forms which respire air direct, can live for long periods after their removal from water, and are but little affected by a bandage being placed round their gills, preventing the use of these organs. He alluded again to those fishes that bury themselves in the mud; to the so-called showers of fish, some of which have descended putrid; and other singular phenomena.

Miscellaneous.

THE GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.

At the meeting of the Royal Geographical Society, in the Hall of the University of London, Sir Rutherford Alcock in the chair, Lieutenant General R. Strachey delivered a lecture on "Scientific Geography," the paper read by him being an introduction to a course of such lectures to be given by the Society. He remarked that not merely the elements, but a very fair knowledge of scientific geography might be obtained by students who would devote their energies if they had not the time to enter fully into the subject. He asked them not, because the subject was believed to be one entailing devoted application, to entertain objections to a teaching of scientific geography in an ordinary education. It was a fair privilege of the Royal Geographical Society to remove, or endeavour to remove, such objections. Scientific geography taught man his proper place in the world, what he was, when he was descended. Lieutenant-General Strachey then, dividing his lecture into subjects, proceeded to show the progress of geographical science from its discovery, which, he thought, might be left with Babylonia and Egypt, to the latest contributions to that science by the Arctic Explorations of Sir George Nares. He dealt with the contributions to that science afforded by instruments and maps, the latter having, it is believed, been first prepared by Anaximander, the Milesian. The magnetism of the earth—the extent of the earth having been, it was said, first determined in the first century B.C.—was known to have been discovered by Gilbert, and in these days of iron ships the scientific determination of its attracting power was of the highest importance. Dealing with the ocean, its depths, circulation, &c., Lieutenant-General Strachey said that science led to the computation that the highest points of the earth from the sea level was less than the depth of the sea from its level, and the earth could be submerged up to its highest point without any appreciable difference in the level of the ocean. Meteorology was the most backward of all sciences, and the causes were not far to seek. There was nothing apparent, the changes were numerous, and ever continuous, and what was believed might be said to be nearly empirical. Touching on the discovery of continents, islands, and land in its geographical relation; on the mineral constituents of the earth; on the volcanic action and interior of the globe, which, if liquid, as some believed, must, General Strachey thought, be at least enclosed by 100 miles of earth crust; on the atmosphere and the distribution of heat on the earth, in respect of which it had been suggested that actual displacement of the earth's axis must explain the many variations of the temperature to which we were subject; the winds and fall of rain, the regions of ice and glaciers, the distribution of vegetable life and animal life in the present and past; the lecturer concluded by detailing the value of scientific geography in ascertaining what were the races of men, the regions they had inhabited, &c. Their descent was like that of the rest of the animal world—from a common ancestor of their kind—and the monuments of Egypt, which took us back perhaps 7,000 years from this time, marked but a brief stage in that journey through which our race had come down from our "four-handed progenitors." Lieutenant-General Strachey said we were greatly indebted to Professor Darwin for his valuable discoveries and explanation of the different forms of our life, and every fresh discovery seemed to tend to indicate the truth of Professor Darwin's theory. The lecture closed with a cordial vote of thanks, proposed by the President, to Lieutenant-General Strachey.

Prior to the lecture there was a discussion on a motion which had been brought forward at a previous meeting, and a minute of the Council of the Royal Geographical Society was read, pledging them to make full investigation into the complaint which had been made as to the non-admission of visitors, &c., on a special occasion.

THE WOOSUNG RAILWAY.

The Engineer has the following with reference to the Woosung Railway:—Even if we omit to consider the possible mercantile importance to England of the successful introduction of railways into China, the fact of the introduction and now unmolested working of a Western innovation of such wide-spreading sequence, into a country so opposed to anything not originating with itself, is a matter of much interest. It has not been altogether plain or easy sailing on the part of those who have secured this result, nor has it been possible to obtain it without taking an ell in some cases where an inch was given. The line connecting Shanghai and Woosung, a distance of ten miles, on a gauge of 2ft. 6in., has now been for nearly four months in continuous and successful operation. The Chinese Government has now, after purchasing the line and rolling-stock, issued a proclamation to which is appended some rules, to be "strictly observed by foreigners and Chinese," by which it is officially made known that the first instalment of purchase-money became due on October 31, 1876, and the second instalment a year after. Having thus become owners of the railway, the Government in the proclamation say, "The payments being thus left outstanding, it was considered only fair that during the interval the company should be left the option of running the trains." The Chinese Government have thus acted fairly towards the English company, at the same time that they have secured the line to themselves, and time not only to test its working, but to allay any native prejudice. The promoters of this, the first Celestial railway, could not, of course, have wished for anything more propitious than this purchase of their line, for even without the knowledge which subsequent experience of its working has given them, they might most reasonably hope that, when once in Government hands, the line would be looked upon as favourably by the governing classes as it has always been by the people, and that a fair trial would ensure its permanency and early extension. Recent experience has proved the correctness of this view, a regular passenger service having been organised with trains running both ways between Shanghai and Woosung every second hour, and calling at two intermediate stations. The rolling-stock at present in use is constructed to carry about 150 passengers, but travellers are so plentiful that there is often a large crowd awaiting the departure of the train, and as many as 210 passengers are often carried by each train.

CLEOPATRA'S NEEDLE.

The public are to be congratulated that, owing to the munificence of a private individual, the splendid obelisk presented to the British nation by Mehemet Ali will before long ornament the Victoria Embankment. It was something of a national disgrace that parsimonious considerations so long operated to prevent the conveyance of Cleopatra's Needle to England, and those who have now obliterated this stigma merit the thanks of the public. Mr. John Dixon has been labouring in the good cause for many years, with disinterested exertions. One by one he triumphed over every difficulty—their name was legion —except the financial, and this he now surmounts by the liberality of Mr. Erasmus Wilson. That eminent surgeon has, we are informed, promised to pay the entire cost, estimated at £10,000, of removing the obelisk to England, on completion of the work, Mr. Dixon in the meanwhile accepting all the responsibility and risk. As the Khedive has given permission for the removal of the huge monolith, contingent on the willingness of the English Government to accept its custody, we may expect the work to be taken in hand without delay.

In 1852 the obelisk was examined by Mr. Scott Tucker, and a small fragment was brought to England and presented by him to the British Museum. In 1867 the subject of its removal was again brought under the notice of the Government, in consequence of a notification from the Khedive, who had let the land on which it stood to a Greek merchant; and as he found that the obelisk was a tenant that paid no rent, he desired its absence, and in default of that buried it under the earth. But the question of its removal was again brought forward in 1876 by General Sir J. E. Alexander, and there is now every prospect of its being removed and being placed on an appropriate site on the Thames Embankment. The removal is to be undertaken by Mr. John Dixon, civil engineer, who, assisted by his brother, Mr. Waynman Dixon, proposes the following means of transporting this shaft of granite:—The sand is to be cleared away and the obelisk set square parallel with the existing sea-wall. An iron cylinder, finished off to a chisel edge, with sufficient diaphragm to give it strength, is to be constructed round the obelisk, which is to lie in the long axis of the cylinder and to be wedged and calked where it passes through the diaphragms so as to divide the cylinder into water tight compartments. The cylinder is to be 95 ft. long by 15 ft. diameter, and will have a draught of 9 ft. of water when afloat. All being riveted water tight, it will be rolled into the sea and across the sandy bed of the water till it floats. It will then be turned over and the man-holes at the top opened and about thirty-tons of ballast to keep the ends vertical, so as to act like stem and stern. It will then have two bilge keels, a rudder, light spar deck, mast, and lug sails attached, and be provided with an anchor and good chain cables, and, if necessary, a pump in case of leakage. The cylinder ship will then be fit to go to any port of the world with its freight, and in any weather. The cost of this operation will amount to about £3,000. The obelisk in its case will be towed over during the summer months and laid aside the Thames Embankment on a platform properly prepared for the purpose and lifted high enough to clear the parapet, and the bilge keels and other additions being stripped off, the cylinder will be rolled to the proposed site and then stripped off the obelisk, which will lie ready to be elevated to its pedestal, an operation which will be simply effected by means of a few balks of timber and two small hydraulic rams. The whole cost is not to exceed £10,000, and that of the obelisk at Paris is said to have been £80,000.

Such are the means proposed by Mr. Dixon for the transport of this obelisk to England. The entire height from the base to the apex is about 68ft. 5in.; it is 6ft. 11in. at the base and 4ft. 9in. under the pyramidion. Four notches are in the corners of the base to hold tenants or cramps by which it was supported on its pedestal, or on some objects which stood on the pedestal, but what they were is quite uncertain. They have been observed by different persons who have described the obelisk. The obelisk of Alexandria is the ninth in height of those known, and, although two of the faces have suffered by exposure to the sea, the hieroglyphic inscriptions are distinctly visible, and will, no doubt, be more so when the monolith is set upright, when there will be more shadow to throw them out. The mode proposed by Mr. Dixon for effecting its elevation on its pedestal is much more simple than that of Fontana, who transported and set up in its present position in Rome the obelisk which had been removed from Egypt by Caligula. Fontana effected the transfer by a complex system of 100 capstans, 800 men, and 80 horses, and this was considered at its time, A.D. 1588, a marvellous feat of engineering. The erection of the obelisk of Luxor in the Place de la Concorde at Paris was accomplished by the architect Le Bas in 1833 by means closely resembling those employed by Fontana. English engineering proposes to effect the same object with a less cumbrous apparatus, and all the more powerful and simpler appliances of the 19th century.

THE TREASURES OF MYCENÆ.

Dr. Schliemann, writing under date Athens, February 1, reports to us some new discoveries at Mycenæ. He says:—"My Engineer, Lieutenant Vasilios Drosinos, of Nauplia, having returned on Sunday, the 21st of January, to Mycenæ, in company of a painter who had to make for me a painting of the five sepulchres, he (Drosinos), in verifying the plans he had made for me, thought he recognised immediately outside the southern part of the double parallel row of large slanting slabs, another tomb, bordered to the north by the cyclopean wall which supports the said double row, to the west by the large cyclopean house so often mentioned in my letters to The Times, and to the east by the natural rock, which is here only 3ft. high and vertically cut. I had excavated this place to a depth of 26ft., without noticing that there was a tomb, because its north side is cut hardly 1ft. deep into the rock, and on the south and west sides it is not rock-cut at all. But since my departure from Mycenæ the heavy rains had brought to light the edge of the rock-cut north side, and my engineer, having noticed this at once suspected that another sepulchre was hidden there. The first blow of the pickaxe brought to light the bottom of the tomb, for the depth of the rubbish left in it did not exceed eight inches. With the second blow a golden vessel came to light, and in less than half an hour the following objects were gathered:—1. Four large golden goblets with two handles—the one being 7 2-10in., the other 6 4-10in. in height; each of the eight handles is ornamented with a dog's head. The four goblets probably weigh about 4lb. 2. A small golden vessel only 2in. high. 3. A golden sealing-ring of the same form and size as those I have discovered in the fourth sepulchre; the seal represents in magnificent intaglio the following objects:—To the left from the spectator s a palmtree, under which is sitting a splendidly dressed woman, tretching out her left hand, and holding her right on the knees. Before her stands another woman, who extends both hands towards her. Behind the standing woman stand two much taller women in magnificent dresses, of whom the one offers three poppies to the seated woman; the other tall woman holds similar poppies in her hand. Beyond the two tall women stands another woman, and a sixth woman stands behind the palm-tree, and extends both hands towards the sitting woman. Just above the seated woman, and the tall woman who offers her the poppies, is some curious emblem resembling the double shield of the warriors on one of the gold rings of the fourth tomb. To the right of the palm-tree appears the sea, from which rises the sun in full splendour, the rays being represented with infinite art. Near the sun rises the crescent of the moon. On seeing this marvellous ring, we involuntarily exclaimed,—'This ring must have been seen by our friend Homer, before he described all the wonders which Hephæstos wrought on Achilles's shield.' 4. Another golden ring of the same shape, but smaller; it has apparently been much used, and of the six objects which are engraved on the seal, only three cow-heads can be distinctly seen; the other three objects cannot be distinguished. 5. Five golden rings without seals. 6. A similar one of silver. 7. A small golden wire, on which sits a golden lion. 8. Seven objects of round gold wire of spiral form. 9. Four objects of quadrangular gold wire, of spiral form. 10. Fourteen round golden beads of a necklace. Later researches have proved that the sepulchre, too, contained bones and ashes. The Mycenæan antiquities can leave no doubt in the mind of any one that the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone was perfectly right in maintaining that Homer was an Achaian."

THE ANTHROPOLOGICAL INSTITUTE.

At a meeting of the Anthropological Institute, among other interesting papers some very remarkable flint implements from Honduras were exhibited and described by Lord Rosehill, F.S.A. The series consists of some thirty specimens, chiefly spear-heads of unusual size and beauty of workmanship; but others merit especial notice from their strange shapes and skilful chipping, whilst some may be considered as unique. One of these, seemingly a rude model of the human form, is 12½in. in length by nearly 6in. in breadth at the foot, and in perfect preservation. Another is a snake-like weapon with two pointed ends and alternate indented and serrated edges on the sides, and is 14½in. inches in length by 3½in. in its central and extreme breadth. A third resembles a huge horseshoe with dentated disc; and several other rare or unique types are represented in this little batch of newly arrived flint treasures. Their interest in the eyes of antiquaries is enhanced by their identity of material and workmanship, as also in general idea and place of discovery, with those belonging to the original find of Captain Stott about eighty years ago, in a cavern near the Bay of Honduras. These latter are in the British and Blackmore Museums, and a few other specimens in private collections; but the selection of implements exhibited by Lord Rosehill are fully worthy of their predecessors, and will form a valuable addition to the material records of prehistoric art from this interesting locality. Messrs. Evans, Franks, and Blackmore, Colonel Lane Fox and Professor Boyd Dawkins, with other gentlemen interested in the subject gave their views regarding the age, object, and peculiarities of these remarkable flints.

THE Alexandria correspondent of the Daily News gives an account of the discovery of a new cotton plant, which he thinks is destined in a very few years to create quite a revolution in the cotton agriculture and business of Egypt. It was discovered on the cultivated property of a Copt in the Menutia district about two years ago. The new plant bears on an average from 45 to 50 pods, whereas the usual cotton plant averages from 25 to 35. The yield of the former has been from 9 to 15 cantars per feddan; the yield of the latter is usually from 4 to 9 cantars. The crop is thus doubled. For sowing, too, a smaller quantity of the new seed is required. The only drawback to the new plant is that it requires more water, and that the soil is thereby impoverished.

FOREIGN CONSULAR APPOINTMENTS.—The Gazette signifies the Queen's approval of the appointments of Mr. Paul Koop as Consul at Akyab for the Emperor of Austria; Mr. Victor Robcis Borghers as Consul at Gibraltar for the French Republic; Mr. Ambrogio Povah Ambrose as Consul at Port Louis, with jurisdiction in the island of Mauritius for the King of Italy; and Mr. James H. Williams as Consul at Sydney for the United States of America.

THE FRENCH COMMERCIAL TREATY.—The subject of the renewal of the French Treaty is now engaging the attention of the Foreign-office, and we learn that a series of interviews or conferences on the subject have lately taken place between M. Gavard, a representative of the French Government, and deputations from various Chambers of Commerce. M. Gavard has promised to put his Government in possession of the views of these bodies.

THE TREASURY.—Mr. Harvey, of the Paymaster-General's-office, has been appointed Assistant-Accountant to the Treasury, in the place of Mr. Skinner, who has been promoted to the Accountantship, in succession to Mr. Turner, now Accountant-General of Inland Revenue.

THE Peruvian Congress has approved the Bill for bringing to Peru 100,000 immigrants from Europe to colonise the country lying near the principal Peruvian tributaries to the Amazon, but has thrown out by unanimous approval the proposal for bringing Chinese labour to Peru.

MR. HORATIO JAMES HUGGINS has been appointed Chief Justice at Sierra Leone. The chief previous appointment held by Mr. Huggins has been that of Acting Attorney-General at St. Vincent.

FROM the 1st of April, 1876, to the 10th inst. the Exchequer receipts amounted to £65,534,552, as compared with £65,096,568 in the corresponding period of the previous financial year. The expenditure has been £67,034,861. On the 10th inst. the balance in the Bank of England was £2,282,738.

THE Chinese Envoys and their suite visited the Queen's Theatre on Friday night to see the new opera "Biorn," accompanied by Dr. Macartney, the interpreters, and principal attachés.

JAMES WEST, PUBLISHER,

The London & China Telegraph.

LONDON: MONDAY, FEB. 19, 1877.

A JAPANESE student has written the subjoined characteristic letter in reply to some severe expressions which appeared recently in a paragraph in the Daily News. The writer of the letter is, at all events, the master of pretty vigorous English, and quite able to defend his own and his country's good name, so long as he avoids erring on the side of a little "too much zeal:"—

It is my desire to reply in a few words to an article which appeared in the Daily News of 8th ult. on Japan. It was with the greatest surprise and grief that I read it—surprised that such an unfair and uncalled-for attack on the Japanese nation should have found a place in your paper (generally so liberal and just in its dealings with foreign questions), and grief that any Englishman should be capable of such wilful misrepresentation and illiberality. The very commencement of the article shows that the writer either has some secret grudge against the country, or is one of those ultra-Conservatives who feels that a reformation in any other country than his own is a thing to be avoided on political grounds. It is surely the height of injustice to judge of a nation by six of its dethroned princes, and to predict for thirty-six millions of people a fatal future by the acts of six. As well might England be accused of all the atrocities of the police columns of its daily papers; perhaps with even more justice, since the Japanese papers are the only means by which Englishmen can get at the life of the nation, and these are few. Europeans who have resided in Japan, one and all, give favourable reports both of the progress of the new Government and of the tractability of the nation. I was not aware before I read this article that civilisation was an art peculiarly adapted to one nation rather than to another, and I think it is the first time that I have seen openly advised a retrograde rather than a progressive development at the pain of utter annihilation. Surely the writer must be the grossest pessimist. I feel it unnecessary to reply to the individual and malicious charges made against my nation. I can only repeat that they are unworthy of an Englishman—the comparison of the Japanese reaction to the Turkish reform is ineffably weak; but is so far of value to us to show the extent to which the writer grasps his subject.—I am, &c., LEIZOR TAKATSGU INOUYE.

To this the Editor replies as follows:—

Our correspondent has misunderstood the drift of our article. We looked on the six princes, not as samples of their highly-civilised race, but as exceptions to it.

It is evident, therefore, that the Daily News contributor meant what he said only in the Pickwickian sense of the words; so it is to be hoped that all parties are satisfied.

THE Shanghai correspondent of The Times gives a piece of information which would appear to raise a serious difficulty with respect to the proposed revision of the Treaty, as regards Lekin dues. He states that the other "foreign" ministers at Peking refuse to recognise the right of the Chinese to levy Lekin on foreign goods at all, and that "the "American Minister has led the way in notifying that on "and after Feb. 13, as stipulated in the Convention, lekin "shall not be levied on foreign imports within the limits of "the foreign settlement; but his notification is understood "to be accompanied by a protest against the contrary posi-"tion." The precaution may possibly be wise; but it is probably superfluous; seeing that, as we explained in our issue of Jan. 26, "the right to levy Lekin in defiance of "the transit pass regulations is not in reality recognised by "the Convention." It seems to be overlooked that there are a large number of goods in the foreign settlements designed to be sent into the interior, not under transit pass, upon which the levy of Lekin or other tax outside the settlements would be perfectly legal, and the words which have caused so much trouble can clearly only imply an admission of the right to levy Lekin dues upon such goods, and not upon those which are already exempt according to the Treaty.

THE Messageries Company have made arrangements that the alternate steamers of their line—i.e., those not in connection with the branch steamer to Calcutta—will call, during the north-east monsoon, at Colombo, in addition to Point de Galle. The steamer which left Marseilles on the 11th inst. will call at Colombo, as also that leaving on the 11th March; and those on the return voyage, leaving Shanghai on the 16th February and 16th March, will also call at the above-named port. It is not anticipated that the change will materially lengthen the voyage. The present step is to some extent experimental; but the service to Colombo by the alternate steamers will, if it proves succesful, be resumed on the change of the monsoon in October.

IT is certainly very significant as to the value of the outcry made by those who are prepared to see lions in the way of every improvement in China; that, while pamphlets are being issued here to show the incalculable injustice which is being inflicted upon the Chinese by the Woosung Railway, the latest news from China is to the effect that the line is being worked satisfactorily, carrying large numbers of passengers, and being likely to pay a good dividend.

WE understand upon good authority that Sir THOMAS WADE is engaged in preparing a memorandum explanatory of the various points in the Chefoo Convention; and that these explanations will in all likelihood be published in Blue-book form in due course. Up to the present no intimation has been given as to whether the Government will formally ratify that document.

KUO-TAH JEN, the Chinese Envoy, his associate LIU, and a large portion of the junior members of the Embassy, accompanied by Dr. MACARTNEY, the English Secretary of Legation, visited Madame TUSSAUD'S Exhibition on Wednesday, and expressed much admiration of the life-like effigies. We trust that figures of the Envoys may ere long find their way among the numerous celebrities at this popular exhibition.

AT a levée held Thursday at St. James's Palace by H.R.H. the Prince of WALES, on behalf of Her MAJESTY, LI SHU-CH'ANG, secretary, and FUNG-YIH, LIU-FOO-YE, and CHANG-SSU-HSUN, Attachés, were presented. Sir THOMAS WADE and Sir RUTHERFORD ALCOCK were among those who were present at the levée.

THE entrance of Ceylon, the Straits Settlements, and Labuan into the Postal Union will take effect from the 1st April.

THE JAPAN INSURRECTION.

THE accounts of the recent insurrection contained in the papers received from Japan by the last mails are sufficiently alarming, but we have good reason to believe that the fears which are expressed by the Yokohama papers, and which to a certain extent are shared by our correspondent there, are not warranted by the facts of the case. The impression among the foreign communities is that the outbreaks which have taken place among the farmers are in themselves a new insurrection, and have no connection whatever with the recent rising among the adherents of the native gentry, which was fortunately so speedily put down. This view, however, we have very good grounds for stating is founded upon a misconception, those best conversant with the facts being of opinion that in reality the recent disturbances in the agricultural districts were nothing more than an after-wave of the original and larger outbreak. Up to the present time no telegrams of any importance regarding the agricultural risings have been received either in official or other well-informed quarters; and there is, therefore, good reason to conclude that nothing of a serious character has as yet occurred. A telegram received on the 14th in Paris speaks of a rising among the Satzuma clan; but it is not regarded as important; and, as the Yokohama correspondent of the London and China Telegraph points out, there can be no doubt whatever that "the Government which "was strong enough a few weeks previously to sup-"press a rising of armed, intrepid and organised samurai,

Digitized by Google

"backed by the powerful if secret influence of nobles and "gentry, who remained quiet in appearance while all the "moral support they could give was given to the movement, "will find it easy to suppress disquiet among undisciplined "and half-armed peasants." This would no doubt account for there being no further intelligence of moment on the subject; and it is probable that the Japanese Government have found means to make short work of the recent disturbances. There is, however, good reason to believe that, though the land-tax is made the excuse for rising, the revolt of the peasantry has been in reality excited by the ancient gentry and the other adherents of the old régime in Japan, who look with disfavour upon the new order of affairs, and are willing to resort to any, even the most desperate, measures to oppose it. The traditional ground for popular opposition in Japan as in China, and, indeed, in all countries, is the cry of over-taxation; and this has naturally been raised upon the present occasion; but that the real cause of the difficulty is the antagonism among the old nobles and gentry there can be little question; and though a civil outbreak upon any grounds is to be deplored, the recent insurrections assume a very different aspect in reference to the future prospects of maintaining order in the country when this fact is borne in mind Were it true, as it would appear upon a superficial view of recent events, that there was a wide spread feeling of discontent with the present Government in consequence of oppressive taxation, grave fears might with justice be felt for the future, as a cause such as this would be of a permanent nature and of a character difficult to deal with. But however strong the antagonism of the nobles and gentry may be, it is quite certain that the Government is in a position to meet any opposition that may arise from that source, and the feeling itself is one which is certain to diminish in intensity as time goes on. It is satisfactory, therefore, to be able to believe that there are no very strong grounds for apprehending lengthened difficulty in Japan; but while this is a subject for congratulation, we would still urge upon those in authority the necessity of exerting the great powers which they possess with moderation. No doubt every attempt will be made by the discontented gentry to get the masses of the people on their side, and it is the obvious policy of the governing party to prevent their doing so.

TAXATION IN CEYLON.

ATTENTION has been drawn in the House by Mr. POTTER, M.P., to the question of taxation in Ceylon. The hon. member, being evidently under the impression that it was an abuse that any tax should be placed upon rice, asked the Under-Secretary for the Colonies whether any steps were being taken to abolish the duty upon the imports of that article into the Colony. The reply was that a Commission had been appointed by the local Government in Ceylon to inquire into the question, and that no action could be taken by the Government until the report of that Commission was obtained. The subject is also being considered in Ceylon in its general bearing, an invitation having been made by the Government there, by means of a notice in the Ceylon Observer, for opinions respecting the collection of the grain-taxes. The nature of the financial resources of Ceylon make it a matter simply of impossibility to give up the rice-tax, which constitutes something like a half of the entire revenue of the island. No doubt it is to be regretted that a prime necessary of life such as this should have to be taxed both as an import and by tythes levied upon that grown in Ceylon, and we should gladly see some reduction on the present somewhat heavy tax of 7d. per bushel. At the same time it is to be remembered that the large mass of the population of Ceylon are of such a class that it is impossible to get at them in any other way than taxing their food—their dress, habitations and real and personal property put all together consisting of little more than Adam and Eve wore in Paradise. The taxes existing are not considered grievously burdensome; and until the natives are more advanced in civilisation than they are at present, it will be impossible to obtain the revenue in any other way than that in which it is at present levied. It has been proposed to substitute a land-tax for that on rice; but, apart from the fact, that indirectly, a land-tax is as much an impost on the food of the people as one directly levied upon it, before such a tax could be raised it would be necessary that a general survey should be made, which would be a work of considerable time. The probability also is that the natives would object much more to a new form of tax than to one with which they are familiar, even if the latter were somewhat more burdensome. We shall look with interest for the report of the Commission on this subject. We may take this opportunity of calling attention to the very heavy tax upon plumbago, upon which the Government levy the export duty without reference to quality, thereby pressing severely upon the lower kinds.

NOTICE OF ABANDONMENT.

IN our last issue we gave the report of a case of special interest to readers in Singapore, Saigon, and Hong Kong, as the facts which gave rise to it arose in those places, but also of much importance to mercantile communities, as containing a warning with reference to the sale of vessels on account of the underwriters, which it is very necessary should be borne in mind. The case in question, KALTENBACH v. MACKENZIE, arose in consequence of the ship Admiral Protet having struck in 1871 near Saigon, and having been sold there, on behalf of the underwriters, by the representatives of the plaintiff's firm. There appears to be little ground to doubt that, taking into account the difficulties of repairing such a vessel there, the agent was justified in selling her, the surveyors having given it as their opinion that the vessel would cost more to repair than her value when the repairs were finished. The lucky Chinaman, however, who purchased her for $1,600, managed to get her slipped along the coast to Singapore, where another enterprising son of Ham bought her for $2,500; and having had her repaired, has since had her engaged in the coasting trade. Upon these facts the underwriters resisted the claim for the amount of the insurance, the grounds of resistance being first that the facts did not justify the abandonment of the ship to them; and secondly that they were not liable, as no notice of abandonment had been given. As already observed, the circumstances seem fairly to justify the abandonment, but the fact that no notice was given to the underwriters is, according to the Chief Justice, fatal. Notice of an appeal has been put in; but upon general grounds, as well as on that of the authority attaching to so definitely expressed an opinion as that given by the Chief Justice, we make little doubt that the judgment already given will be upheld. The two elements necessary to make the underwriters responsible for constructive total loss are that it will not pay to repair the injured vessel, and that notice of abandonment be given to the underwriters. The latter is obviously only a reasonable provision of law to secure bona fides in such cases; and, although the point is of a technical character, we must admit the underwriters in this case were justified in making it; and trust that the prominence with which it brings forward the necessity of giving notice of abandonment in cases of constructive total loss will form a useful warning generally to avoid so serious an error.

THE CHINESE IN CUBA.

THE report of the Cuba Commission to inquire into the condition of Chinese coolies on the plantations there, which was originally made over two years ago and was reproduced about a year back, has again been dragged before the public in an article in the Saturday Review, where the obvious exaggerations and misstatements in it are treated as "Gospel." In reviewing the second report, issued as far back as July last year, we pointed out that the Commissioners were only six weeks in Cuba, and that the report purports to give the gist of an amount of evidence which it would be completely impossible to take in that space of time. The depositions were avowedly taken in lumps, such as the evidence of CHIEN and 170 others, and of HSU-LU-SHENG and ninety-eight others—and consequently could not have been sifted in any way. This fact is, however, now completely lost sight of, and the article in the Saturday is followed up by a letter in the Globe from Mr. HENRY STUART FAGAN, who, pointing out the severe ill-treatment to which the coolies are subjected, and adding that,

"in spite of great obstruction from the Cuban planters "the Commissioners succeeded in taking 1,176 depositions "and received eighty-five petitions signed by 1,660 coolies "(all in six weeks, be it remembered!), urges Mr. GLAD- "STONE to take up this sad case in Parliament." We are not disposed to deny that the unlucky Chinese coolies in Cuba suffer many wrongs upon the plantations; but if anything is calculated to prevent those wrongs ever being redressed it is the grossly and palpably exaggerated account of them given in this report. The sum and substance of this question can be stated in a few words, and we cannot but reiterate what we said when treating the subject on receipt of the official report, that is in July last, namely, that the Macao emigration being swept away, the next stage of reform clearly rests with the Chinese themselves and their authorities, and that "all attempts that may be made abroad will as- "suredly prove useless unless the Chinese devise some means "of preventing men from being deceived into making con- "tracts to serve in countries where they cannot feel sure of "receiving fair treatment and adequate protection."

THE PROLONGED WAR IN ATCHIN.

IT really seems incredible that the Atchin War should have been dragging its slow length along for four years; incredible because the appliances of modern artillery give to the trained forces of a European State an overwhelming advantage in a contest with a petty semi-civilised native race. "If 'twere done then 'twere well when 'tis done "'twere done quickly" is a maxim which the GARNET WOLSELEYS, the COLBORNES, the NAPIERS, and all the leaders of our own "little" wars in recent years have kept well in view; but not so the torpid Hollander. To them "the bitter end" in Sumatra is still far off; the Panglimas, Tankus, and Rajahs hold out in their mountain passes; disease strikes down the soldiers in the Dutch camps; blood and treasure are wasted, and trade is sacrificed to the love of inaction. While at the Hague a party political strife rages over the origin, causes, and conduct of the Atcheen difficulty, Messrs. Van de PUTTE and Van SWIETEN being attacked and defended by rival pamphleteers with an energy which affords a singular contrast to the indolence displayed at the actual seat of the war. The news made public in Batavia informs us that "the Raja of SIMPANG OLIM has fled and has been "deposed, and a reward has been offered for his apprehen- "sion. TUNKU MUDA ANGKASA has been murdered by "hirelings of the Raja of SIMPANG OLIM. The headmen "and people of Simpang Olim are well-disposed. News "from the North Coast satisfactory." An additional company and troops was to be despatched to Simpang Olim. The foregoing, of course, is the Dutch official version; and little as we know of the actual state of affairs, of the interior geography of the Atchinese dominions, or of the precise extent to which the Dutch have obtained a footing in the country, we see at any rate that some provinces are still holding out, some chiefs are resisting. Warfare is going on, the fighting party have—as we know—appointed a new Sultan, and the Dutch are not strong enough to protect even their own professed allies among the Malay rulers from being put to death for having co-operated with the Hollanders. It is a very cruel thing to see this misery, chaos, anarchy, and confusion prevailing when two months' effective action on the part of the Dutch commanders might at least restore order, peace, and commerce. Cultivation must be very much at a standstill; and permanent habits of predatory warfare are being formed among the Malay hill-men, habits from which it may be difficult to wean that labour-despising race when peace is at last re-established.

What correspondence may have passed between our Foreign-office and the authorities at the Hague, on this Atcheen question, since the Conservatives came into power, we cannot tell; possibly, if we knew the true history of events, we should find that the Straits Government has made some report or representation on the matter. At any rate, we do not forget the warmth with which Lord BEACONSFIELD and the Earl of DERBY took up the subject and discussed it in the very heat of the last general election, so that it would be strange indeed if they have ignored it altogether since they have guided the reins of our policy abroad. We certainly think that—considering how we abrogated our treaty with the SULTAN of ATCHIN (a treaty under which we had secured his independence, and bound the Dutch to let him alone)—and how we did this without a word of previous notice to the SULTAN, and indeed without having consulted him in the matter, or relieved ourselves from our obligations—some member of the House of Commons would do good service by moving for copies of all recent despatches and reports relating to the affairs of Sumatra, which our Administration may be able to furnish, and by the light of these documents it might become clear that the direct interference of Lord DERBY, in insisting that Holland should summarily grant the Atchinese people terms of peace, and allow commerce and cultivation to be carried on as before, would be not merely a desirable step, but a step which gave promise of success. A petition to Parliament from the British mercantile community in the Straits would be of use in getting something done.

THE INDIA AND CHINA BANKS.

THE telegraphic summary of the result of the half-year's working of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, which we give in another column, will be perused by many of our readers with great satisfaction. Although, as we predicted in our issue of October 5th, 1875, when commenting upon the report which was issued after Mr. MACLEAN had gone out on his tour of inspection, the heavier difficulties against which the Bank has had to labour were known for some time past to have been surmounted, few can have anticipated so good an outturn for the working of the last half-year, as is shown by the report under notice. The figures indicate that the total earnings have approximated to 20 per cent. on the capital; and another important feature telegraphed is that the directory has been strengthened by the Hon. W. KESWICK, of Messrs. JARDINE, MATHESON, and Co., and Mr. E. TOBIN, of Messrs. GILMAN and Co. While congratulating the shareholders upon these facts we think we may take some credit to ourselves for having at the time (namely, in March, 1875), when we considered the Bank to be in danger, stated our opinions in an unmistakable manner, and urged the necessity of a thorough reorganisation of the institution. The energetic manner in which its affairs were taken in hand was however, later on fully recognised in these columns; and after the publication of Mr. MACLEAN'S Report, above alluded to, we expressed our opinion that there had been no hesitation in thoroughly sifting the affairs and putting them upon a sound footing. We said:—"The task of "righting matters was not an easy one, and any hesitation "in placing the worst before the shareholders would have "been fatal to its success, and would, in fact, have been only "a repetition of the mistake previously made. Fortunately, "the requisite moral courage has been displayed, and we make "little doubt that the shareholders will ere long have "reason to congratulate themselves upon the firm position "which has been adopted." This result is now fully realised, and we are also glad that the course which we thought it necessary to recommend, of having a total change in the direction and management, has been followed. Part of the satisfactory results above noticed are no doubt attributable to the success which has attended India and China banking generally. If we glance at the quotations of shares of the leading English institutions, the Agra, the Chartered Bank, the Mercantile, the Hong Kong and Shanghai, and the Oriental, we find we have a satisfactory rise to note in all. Comparing the quotations in July last with the present, a rise is found varying from 25 to 50 per cent.; even the old established and steady Oriental showing the former advance. The general nature of the improvement in the shares in India and China banks points to a common cause, and one that may be fairly presumed to be a cause of a permanent character. Although the present advance is due in part to the unusual fluctuations in Eastern exchanges, which afforded opportunities for very good operations to many of the banks, there is no doubt, that the position of Eastern banking generally has improved; that the India and China banks may, thanks to the telegraph, be congratulated upon being no longer subject to the heavy losses which in former years so often occurred, but may now be reckoned as almost a thing of the past, and that there is now every probability that financial business with the East will continue upon a sound and paying basis.

THE FRENCH MERCANTILE MARINE.

Some valuable statistics on the above subject have been given in the Economiste Francais, by M. Clapier, late Deputy for Marseilles. He says that, taking the steam shipping into consideration, France occupies the second position in Europe as to her mercantile navy, and the reason for her being so much inferior to Great Britain is her being too backward in adopting the improvements of modern science. The steam fleet numbers 350 vessels, of 307,841 tons, strongly built and well provided. The necessity for substituting steamers for sailing vessels consequent on the opening of the Suez Canal is dwelt upon, and passing to the traffic with the Far East, he says there remains, as a field for the extension of French trade, the extreme East—India, China, and Japan—and it is in the commerce with those countries that the inferiority of France is most apparent. England imports from India alone for a value of 775 millions of francs, from Ceylon 89 millions, from Hong Kong 20 millions, besides her trade with Australia, the Mauritius, and the Cape of Good Hope The United States have very extensive relations, and Russia carries on important exchanges. Even France, under the old monarchy, imported to the amount of 35 millions, and exported for 17 millions. At present her trade with China amounts only to 88 millions of imports, of which 83 are for silk, and 8 millions of exports; with Japan to 16 millions of imports, of which 13 are for silk; and with India to 130 millions of imports, of which 40 millions are for cotton and 32 for oil seeds; and the exports amount to only 8 millions. The Suez Canal, although a French work, is only made an insignificant use of by French navigation. In 1874 only 87 French vessels passed through it, and of those 25 were Government vessels and 52 subventioned steamers, leaving 10 vessels only for free Merchant Shipping. It is, therefore, towards the extreme East that the movement of expansion, which is the vital condition of the regeneration of French Shipping, must be directed. The situation of French Commerce in India M. Clapier describes as deplorable. At Bombay, a city of 600,000 inhabitants, the head of most of the lines of railway, there is not a single French house, no regular line of French steamers touches there, not a single French ship entered the port in 1875, and the trade with it, which does not exceed 60,000 tons annually, is entirely carried on by English steamers touching at Marseilles. At Calcutta there are only two or three French houses; in 1875 only three French vessels visited that port, while 25 foreign vessels, measuring 26,000 tons, came into French ports from Calcutta, besides 15 foreign vessels, and not one French, from Kurrachee. At Shanghai an English town has grown up as if by enchantment, while the French quarter is deserted, and two vessels only arrived in France from that port. The countries of the extreme East are, therefore, those to which all efforts to develop French Commerce should be directed. To attain that end, association is first necessary. Steamers cannot go about, like sailing vessels of old, seeking for freight from port to port; they must have a fixed destination; a freight must be ready for them, so that no time is lost; there must be fuel provided for them on the spot, and an establishment to receive their cargo. For steamers, regularity is as necessary a condition as rapidity, and that can only be attained with a powerful organisation and permanent agencies. Such agencies, in their turn, are only possible with large fleets and great companies, for which capital, and, in a larger degree, credit, are indispensable. To obtain the credit required M. Clapier proposes the foundation of a great establishment lending on mortgage to Shipping at 7 or 7½ per cent., but of which interest the Government would take to its charge the difference, above 4 per cent., for all vessels navigating beyond the Suez Canal or the Cape of Good Hope.

THE EGYPT OF TO-DAY.

Egypt of the present day (the high road to the East) possesses the most interesting combination of the ancient and modern. Whilst the Nile and the cities of the days of Pharaoh remain, we have at Alexandria and Cairo the introduction of modern streets, houses, hotels, and gardens similar to quarters in the Champs Elysée and Pall-mall. This forms a contrast at once striking and novel, not to be witnessed in other parts. We cannot help thinking that passengers to and from India and China make a mistake in "passing by" these places on their route. At the new quarter of Cairo we have in the Esbekeeah the gardens of fashionable promenade, with bands of music daily, while around are the modern palaces, the opera, as large as Covent Garden, theatres, music saloons, hotels, cafés, and arcades, and wide boulevards well lighted with gas. Besides "Shepheard's Hotel," known to travellers in the old times of caravan across the desert, there are the "New Hotel," a spacious building of some 700 feet in length, the "Hotel de Nile," and the "Oriental Hotel," all affording very satisfactory accommodation. The Cairo of to-day has museums, libraries, geographical, and kindred societies, clubs, carriages for fashionable drives, in addition to the inevitable donkey-boy and Baksheesh institutions of Egypt, forming an agreeable pastime. As to the donkeys, they are the best educated animals in the world, quite unlike the species in England; they afford the most convenient means of getting about in a climate which, from October to March, is perhaps the most perfect in the world, bright and clear, tempered with a cool breeze and about three days' rain in the whole season. This alone is a sufficient inducement to spend a while in Egypt. The railway system, in addition to the lines between Alexandria, Cairo and Suez, includes many other sections in Lower and Upper Egypt. A line of about fifteen miles long just now open to the sulphur baths of Helouan, where there is a capital hotel and a rising town, which, in a few years, will become quite a large and fashionable watering-place. The sulphur spring has been found a very effectual agent in the cure of pulmonary and other diseases.

Other lines are now under consideration, and when the finances of Egypt admit they will be completed. We may mention that General Marriott, who held an important post on our Indian railways, has lately been engaged by the Khedive to assume the post of Chief Director of Egyptian Railways. Steamers for expeditions up the Nile start once a week under the charter of Messrs. Thomas Cook and Son, and the travellers by them give a very satisfactory account of the conduct of these trips. They are for a fixed sum, about £50, carried over the most interesting parts of the Nile Valley, furnished with good food and accommodation, dragomans, donkeys, and all appliances, without any sort of trouble or expense beyond the stipulated sum, and what is very important, tourists are brought back in the prescribed number of days. Cairo has been described by a traveller as follows :—

> The city lies before you like the thousand little turrets of a Gothic edifice, at the foot of a steep whitish mountain, flanked by a citadel of towers and white domes, in the Turkish taste. On one side, towards the mountain, is the desert, in all its aridity and desolation—its loneliness increased by the City of the Tombs, with its streets, and houses, and quarters, and palaces, but no living inhabitants except reptiles and solitary birds—immense vultures perching on the minarets like the vedettes of this melancholy population. On the other side, towards the Nile, are fields covered with brilliant verdure, and at certain periods with charming pieces of water, the remains of the annual inundation, sparkling like mirrors in the midst of the greenness. Between these two contrasting scenes stands the city, perfectly in harmony with this singular landscape, an immense assemblage of edifices with flat untiled roofs, blackened by smoke and covered with dust; here and there a new edifice, white and sparkling, upsprings amidst the mass of grey houses and narrow dark streets, where the dirty, though brilliant and many-hued crowd are ceaselessly stirring. From the dust and blue smoke a thousand minarets rise into the free air, like the palm trees from the gardens, covered with airy Arabic ornaments, and encircled by their three galleries. It is a fine spectacle, that may well excite a painter's enthusiasm.

Cairo, like most parts of the world, has its English and American churches, schools for natives supported by the philanthropy of English and American people, conducted by self-denying persons from those countries. The most notable institution under English control is that of Miss Whately, which ha about 200 pupils, taught in well-constructed school-rooms, and capable of extension if the subscriptions increase. Any well-disposed person can make a donation to the bankers, Messrs. Barclay, Bevan, and Co., Lombard-street. The chief American schools are under the superintendence of the Rev. Dr. Lansing, assisted by Mrs. Lansing and a staff, which includes operation in many other parts of Egypt. It is under the Board of Foreign Missions in Philadelphia. One branch, under the care of Miss Smith, for girls, sadly requires a better school-room, and we can heartily recommend contributions for that purpose, which may be forwarded to the Rev. Dr. Lansing, Cairo. All these establishments are doing a good work.

Homeward bound passengers who have not passed through the Suez Canal should land at Ismalia, on the Canal, instead of Suez, from thence take the rail to Cairo, and afterwards on to Alexandria. All steamers change pilots at Ismalia, and a small steamer comes off, in which passengers can land. Passengers in a feeble state of health will do well to stay a while at Suez, the salubrity of the climate being very efficacious, and the Suez Hotel is a well conducted and comfortable house.

Owing to the late crisis in the monetary affairs of Egypt, the Khedive has at the suggestion of Mr. Goschen, the representative of the bond-holders in England, increased the number of English officials in the administration of affairs; and a correspondent of The Times writing from Cairo a description of a reception by the Khedive gives the following interesting particulars:—

What most struck an English eye at the Levée was not, however, the variety of dress and colour. The number of English faces was more interesting than any picturesque effect. The increase of the English element in the public administrations of the country in the past year has been remarkable, and England is now as much in the ascendant as last Spring she was out of favour. We have, too, a good character in the country. The French, our rivals here since the days of the first Napoleon and the battles of the Nile and Aboukir Bay, are individually more popular. Their language is the language of the Court and of society, and they do not suffer from that angularity of character which gives to most Englishmen abroad an appearance of stiffness and unsociability. But the French, as a nation, invariably insist on a recognition of their greatness wherever they go; their motto is "Il faut se faire valoir;" and this affectation of superiority jars on the pride of an Oriental, who likes to be treated as a gentleman and an equal. An Englishman, on the other hand, does his work quietly, as well as he can, and, as a matter of course, not much caring what people think of it; and, although the Frenchman has a quicker and more logical mind, and does what he has to do with superior neatness and rapidity, the Englishman makes up by his strong common sense for his want of logic, and for his slowness of thought by the thoroughness of his work.

The number of our countrymen in the Egyptian public services cannot, therefore, be a matter of surprise. The Army is the only service where our nationality does not appear. The superior officers are mostly Americans, Southerners, who sought service abroad when the North carried the day. In the Admiralty administration there are an English Post-captain (Admiral M'Killop Pacha), a Commander (Morice Bey), and at least a dozen smaller officials. At the Treasury there is Mr. Romaine, ex-Secretary of the Admiralty, and ex-Judge Advocate-General in India, now English Controller-General of Taxation in Egypt. He is soon to have a colleague in the English Commissioner of Public Debt, and the two offices will require many minor appointments. At the Public Works there are engineers whose name is legion, and of varying capacity, from Mr. Fowler, the Khedive's consulting engineer, and Mr. Anderson, the manager of his sugar factories, down to the drivers on the railway between Cairo and Alexandria, and the engineers on the big steamers that run to the ports on the Red Sea and between Alexandria and Constantinople. In the Education Department we have now Mr. Rogers, whose knowledge of the language of the country, its customs, and its people will make him invaluable as a fellow-worker with M. Dor, who has worked long and ably in the establishment of a European system of education throughout the country in connection with that already at work in the two capitals. The railway system of the country is to be placed by the Goschen arrangement under an administration of which General Marriott, an Engineer officer well known to Indian officials, is president. An English colleague remains to be appointed, and our two countrymen, with a Frenchman and two natives, are to have complete control of every railway in the country. In the telegraphs we have two English superintendents—Mr. George, and Mr. Gisborne, both names well known to telegraphists. At the Post-office we have Mr. Caillard, who a year ago was a clerk at St. Martin's-le-Grand, and is now our Postmaster-General, and one of the most esteemed of the Khedive's officials. In the new judicial system we have an Appeal Judge and a Judge of First Instance, and their strength has recently been increased by the promotion of a countryman to the Judicial Bench at Ismailia.

It will be seen by this that English influence in Egypt is making very decided progress, and in the event of a war between Russia and Turkey the Egyptians are prepared and expect an English occupation to protect our interests in the Suez Canal. It will not only be necessary to protect what we now hold in the Canal, but we must look to the improvement and more efficient working of the Canal. The large increase in the number of vessels now passing through causes detentions inflicting a serious loss on the owners. While the passage ordinarily occupies the daylight of two days it is often prolonged to double that time, owing to the insufficient means and appliances for "passing." This delay is increased by vessels grounding, or colliding, and remaining fast in the fair way, causing the stoppage and deadlock of all other steamers, which on some days during the past month numbered twenty-seven. The portions of the Canal between the sidings, too narrow for passing, must be increased and embanked with stone facings. The French pilots do not perform their work in a satisfactory manner, and many of the accidents are attributable to this cause. There are many vexatious hindrances in the observance of the rules and regulations of the directors of the Canal Company, which, we believe, would be obviated, or considerably reduced, if the administration was more in the hands of Englishmen, whose traffic amounts to three-fourths of the whole. One of the most vexatious delays is the stoppage for re-measurement of vessels that have passed through the Canal for years, and should be well known to the Canal officials. With the convention entered into by Colonel Stokes on behalf of our Government, by virtue of their holding 178,000 shares, out of a total of 400,000—for the abolition of the surcharge on vessels passing through the Canal of f.3 per ton, we may expect further steps in the way of control of the Canal. We may also look to the retirement of Monsieur de Lesseps as offering a convenient opportunity in this direction There is some evidence that our Government is not vigilant in the exercise of its responsibilities by the fact that the shares lately drawn in accordance with Arts. 66, 67, 68, have not been announced.

In a late number we noticed that a dividend of f.28 per share would probably be paid on the capital, on account of the working of 1876. The total number is 400,000, of f.500 each, but the 178,000, bought by the English Government from the Khedive are not entitled to interest, according to this contract with the Company, until 1894. The traffic receipts of the Company from shipping during the month of December and for the entire year of 1876, compared with 1875 and 1874, is as follows:—

As an illustration of what may be done in the way of tours by the Egyptian railways, we extract the following from Cook's "Tourist in Egypt:"—

Leaving Cairo the train is entered at Boulák-Dakrour station, on the other side of the Nile. Ghizeh is first passed. Then amongst the wheat fields and palm groves the train speeds on, the Pyramids of Sakkárah and Dashóor are seen and left behind, and occasional views of the Nile and Arabian hills are enjoyed. Passing Bedreshayn, Kafr-el-Jyat, and a few other places of little importance, where, at each halt, children cluster round (in spite of savage demonstrations from the officials), and offer for sale water, or bunches of beans, &c.; in about three hours El Wasta is reached. This town (fifty-five miles from Cairo) is the junction for Medeeneh, the chief town in the Fyoóm. Here the train from Upper Egypt must be waited for for some three hours; on its arrival the branch train is defpatched. There is a fine view from near the station of the False Pyramid.

The plain of the Nile is crossed nearly at right angles to the previous course, towards the gap seen in the Libyan Hills towards the West. For a time cultivated land is crossed; villages are seen with their palm-groves. One curious village, with innumerable pointed turrets for pigeon-houses, lies near the railway. After a time the cultivated land, influenced by the Nile, is left behind, and a few miles of desert crossed. "In scarcely more time," says a recent traveller, "than is required to write these words, we found ourselves in a bare yellow waste, and all the rich land of life lying in a diminishing belt behind us. Some low ridges soon hid it wholly from our view; a vast plain of gravel dotted with stony hummocks, and pools of sand where in living regions one would look for water, stretched to the sky on all sides. The air took on a sudden freshness and purity; the life within me beat more joyously from its contrast with the external lifelessness; it was the perfect atmosphere of the desert at last! But to inhale it, thus, from the open windows of a railway car, to see the yellow ridges appear, speed past and recede, while remembering the camel's pace, and the distant well, was to me something strange and unreal." As the train proceeds on its way, the blunt Pryamid of Illahoon, and the Pyramid of Hawárah rise in view. After a time stunted trees and grass in tufts are again reached, and at the borders of the cultivated land the train stops at El Edwa. Here in the proper season the sportsman may pitch his tent, and bag innumerable geese, ducks, snipe and quail.

From El Edwa a five-mile run along a level plain, amongst cultivated fields and gardens and villages, brings the traveller to Medeeneh, otherwise called Medeenet-el-Fyoon, or Medeenet-el-Fáres (City of the Knight). This town of about 8,000 inhabitants is situated on a branch of the Bahr Yoosef (Joseph's river), so-called from a tradition (alluded to by Josephus), that it was constructed by order of the patriarch Joseph. But it was really a thousand years old at his time, though possibly some enlargement, or reconstruction under his viziership, may have originated the tradition. This canal, looking like a natural river, washes the walls of Medeeneh, and winds along under the palms and acacias, bearing numerous laden barges and wherries on its bosom.

"Medeeneh is not Cairo," writes the French artist, Paul Tenoir, "with its incalculable variety of buildings and costumes: it is a large provincial town, where there are few loungers, but where there is plenty of animation in the streets among the buyers and sellers of the cereals, and grasses of the country. An interminable bazaar, almost parallel with the canal, extends throughout the whole length of the town, and in it we recognise the crowding and the variety of the shops of Cairo on a reduced scale. But both the inhabitants and the traders have a remarkable simplicity about them; soldiers in uniform mingle with the crowd and rather spoil the picturesque effect produced by the fellahs, each clad in a long single robe of blue material, gathered at the waist by a girdle, and wearing a white turban, and a simple cap of brown or white felt. The women of Medeeneh are more pretty and less uncouth than those in other parts of the province. Many of them dispense with the traditional veil, which ought to leave only their eyes visible, and dress their hair tastefully and coquettishly, besides adding to their customary blue robe, silken scarves of various brilliant shades, and ornaments in gold and silver of the finest workmanship."

The inhabitants of Medeeneh and, indeed, of the towns in the Fyoon generally, are, to a large extent, Copts. There is a school here in connection with the American Mission at Senoris.

The shapeless mounds which show the site of Arsinoë, or Crocodilo-polis, are to the north of the town. Here dwell the worshippers of the sacred crocodiles of Lake Mœnis, in perpetual feud with the people of the neighbouring city of Heracleopolis, where dwell the worshippers of Ichneumon. Of the famous Labyrinth little but the site now remains. To visit this object of interest (over six miles) a guide is requisite. Broken columns and fragments of granite sculpture whisper of the former glory of this renowned pile. The buildings formerly extended 1,150 feet by 850 feet, surrounding an open area 600 feet by 500 feet. "Its primary conception," says F. B. Zincke, "had been that of a place of assembly for the Parliaments of Old Egypt. At that time one of the courts, to which were attached 250 chambers—half being above ground and half below ground—appears to have been assigned to each of the twenty-seven departments of the Kingdom. Each of these chambers was roofed with a single slab. No material but stone had been used throughout the structure. The pillars were monoliths of red granite, and of a limestone so white as to have been mistaken for Parian marble, and of so compact a texture as to have received a good polish. The sculptures of the courts and chambers were singularly bold and good. Those of each court and the connected chambers had reference to the history, the peculiarities, and the religion of the department to which it had been assigned. Beside the chambers were numerous halls' porticoes, and passages. The area of the roof, composed of the enormous slabs just mentioned, may have formed the actual place of assembly for the collected deputies of the departments. On the north side stood the pyramid in which was buried Amenemha III., who, if he had not orignally designed the Labyrinth, had at all events been its chief constructor, for his escutcheon is frequently found in the existing remains."

The Pyramid was cased in the white limestone used in the Labyrinth itself. When Herodotus saw this edifice it had been partially restored by the Dodecarchs, after a decay of some twenty centuries. It was once the grandest existing building in the world, the glory of the old monarchy, and the province which had been artificially created by the Bahr Yoosef, as Egypt itself is naturally created by the Nile.

Lake Mœris was a vast reservoir of dammed-up waters, thirty miles in extent, which also awoke the astonishment of Herodotus. The site only is to be found. In this lake dwelt the sacred crocodiles. It also abounded in fish, from the pickling and salting of which a considerable revenue was derived, and assigned as pin-money to the Queens of Egypt.

The following is an example of the sight-seeing on the Nile excursions :—

THEBES.

At the village of Lazor is the anchoring-place where the steamer remains while tourists explore the glories of Thebes. The temple of Lazor is close at hand, and under its portico is the office of Mustapha Aga, the Consul for England and America.

Ancient Thebes occupied the whole plain now seen on each side of the Nile, but it was on the east bank that the chief portion of the city was situated, the western side being principally occupied by temples and palaces and the tombs of the dead. The city was never enclosed by walls, and Homer's "hundred gates" is suggested to have meant the portals of the palaces and temples, if it meant anything. But it is more consistent with the context to accept it simply as poetical imagery.

Thebes has always marvellously impressed the mind and imagination of travellers by its extent and the vastness of its monuments. There are temples whose front elevation was nearly a mile in length ; fragments of colossal statues of dimensions truly enormous ; colonnades that rose to over seventy feet in height. Not only do these ruins extend over the whole breadth of the Nile Valley, but on the sides of the surrounding mountains ancient remains lie in heaps, whilst tombs, still in good preservation, cover the western plain, and stretch far out nto the desert. "It appeared to me," said Belzoni, "like entering a city of the giants, who after a long conflict had been all destroyed, leaving the ruins of their vast temples as the only proofs of their existence."

The plain of Thebes is thus described by Heeren :—"The whole valley of the Nile in Upper Egypt offers no spot so fit for the foundation of a large capital. The mountain chains—the Libyan on the western, and the other, usually called the Arabian, on the eastern side —retire here to such a distance on either side of the river that they leave a spacious plain on both banks, the whole breadth from west to east amounts to about three leagues and a-half, and the length from north to south is about the same. Towards the north this plain is again closed in by the near approach of the mountain chain to the river ; towards the south, on the contrary, where the western chain continues distant from the river, it remains open. The plain, therefore, on which Thebes was built, though limited in extent, was yet sufficient to contain one of the largest cities of the earth. According to Strabo, there is no doubt but that the ancient city covered the whole plain. Thebes, therefore, was built on the two banks of the Nile, without being connected, so far as we know, by means of a bridge."

FIRE ASSURANCE IN JAPAN.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—The cause of the disastrous fire at Yedo, which was lately reported in your paper, should be very carefully scrutinised. While houses and property in Japan in the occupation of foreigners are a fair risk for our home insurance-offices, I am of opinion that property assured by natives is a very bad risk, and should not be taken except under some exceptional circumstances. It is a risky business for our insurance-offices to give authority to their agents in Japan to accept them. The ordinary daily routine of Japanese life is such that fire is the normal condition, and to be indemnified, or possibly make "a good thing" of it, is a strong temptation.—Yours truly,

Liverpool, Feb. 11, 1877. FIRE.

THE CHINA CONVENTION.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—Two questions of importance to all interested in China are now being asked—Will the Convention lately concluded between Sir Thomas Wade and Li-Hung-Chang be ratified by our Government, and will Sir Thomas Wade return to Peking ? It is rumoured that Sir Thomas will retire on his pension, and the selection of a successor is now engaging the attention of Lord Derby. It is very important that the selection should fall on a man possessing the power of resisting the tergiversation and procrastination of the Chinese. He must clearly define his demands, founded on an equitable basis, and once made they must be firmly insisted on. I am of opinion that the best man for Minister at Peking is one who has not had any previous career in China ; his mind should be clear from all entanglements, and having a single eye to the rights and interests of British trade.—I am, &c., A CHINA MERCHANT.

London, Feb. 14, 1877.

Monetary and Commercial.

The London manager of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation has received a telegram from the head office Kong Kong, announcing that at the half-yearly meeting, held on the 15th inst., a dividend was declared of £1 per share and $300,000 added to the reserve fund, which now stands at $500,000. It is also notified that Mr. W. Keswick, of the firm of Jardine, Matheson, and Co., and Mr. E. Tobin, of Gilman and Co., have joined the board of directors. The dividend to the London shareholders is to be paid immediately.

At a general meeting of shareholders of the Singapore Tanning and Currying Company (Limited), held on the 5th ult., it was resolved that the company shall be wound up voluntarily, and that Mr. R. O. Bryce be appointed sole liquidator.

It is notified that the interest and responsibility of Mr. James Greig in the firms of Syme and Co., of Singapore, and Pitcairn, Syme and Co., of Batavia and Sourabaya, ceased on the 31st of December last.

In the Produce Markets most of the principal articles have remained in a dull, if not depressed, state, the demand for actual consumption being limited, whilst there has been an absence of speculative inquiry, and in many instances prices are lower. Tea has sold readily in auction at the reduced quotations recently established. Silk is very dull, and exhibits a declining tendency. Coffee is firmer, owing to a favourable result of the Dutch sale. Sugar is less active at the close. Cutch has improved. Rice is flat, and cargoes of new crop Burmah have been sold at reduced quotations. China Galls have sustained a further decline. Gambier is also lower.

Mr. De Quetteville's Circular gives the subjoined as the current rates for documentary and private bills :—

On the 14th inst. 17½ lacs (£175,000) of India Council Drafts were placed by the Bank of England, but only at a reduction of ⅛d. per rupee in the minimum. The amounts allotted were £137,000 to Calcutta, £36,000 to Bombay, and £2,000 to Madras, and tenders for bills on all Presidencies at 1s. 9⅞d., and for telegraphic transfers at 1s. 9 15-16d., receive about 93 per cent.

The market for Bar Silver has been inactive at 57d., but at the close is firmer. Mexican Dollars have been sold at 57½d. per oz.

During the month of January duty was paid in the United Kingdom on 14,016,318 lbs. of tea, and the sum realised was £350,407 19s. The lion's share of this was paid in London, the quantity on which duty was charged in the metropolis having been 11,029,731 lbs. Glasgow came next to London with 604,051 lbs., then Dublin with 48,2050 lbs., Belfast with 392,335 lbs., Leith with 294,484 lbs., and Liverpool with 224,372 lbs. Nearly all the tea exported from the United Kingdom last month also went from London, where this branch of trade appears to be mainly concentrated.

The following were the quantities of the principal dutiable articles withdrawn from the London bonded warehouses for home consumption during the week ending the 10th inst. :—Coffee, 544,241 lbs. ; cocoa, 133,477 lbs. ; tobacco, 844,948 lbs. ; cigars, 19,922 lbs. ; tea, 2,293,628 lbs. ; wine, 167,952 gallons ; brandy, 37,252 gallons ; and rum, 36,188 gallons.

During the year 1876 the Pacific Mail Company carried the following quantities of merchandise from San Francisco to the ports specified, viz. :—To Hong Kong, 7,867 tons ; Shanghai, 685 tons ; Yokomama, 1,310 tons ; Hiogo, 195 tons ; Nagasaki, 133 tons—total, 10,190 tons. The amounts of treasure forwarded were : To Hong Kong, $4,290,527 ; Yokohama, $185,773 ; and Hiogo, $118,233—total, $4,589,533. During the same year the steamers of the O. and O.S.S. Company took away 12,562 tons of freight to Hong Kong, 590 to Shanghai, 827 to Yokohama, 149 to Hiogo, and 43 to Nagasaki—total 14,171 tons.

The treasure exports by this line were $4,627,287 to Hong Kong, $245,362 to Shanghai, $731,377 to Yokohama, and $205,722 to Hiogo—total, $5,809,818. Total merchandise exports by both lines, 24,361 tons. Total treasure by both lines, $10,399,351.

The half-yearly dividend due on the 1st of March on the Chilian Government Five per Cent. Loan of 1873, together with £26,400 bonds of the loan, and £70,000 bonds of the Five per Cent. Loan of 1875, also drawn for redemption, will be paid on and after that date by the Oriental Bank Corporation.

The report of the London and Hanseatic Bank (Limited) shows a net profit of £23,031 10s. 7d. A dividend of 3s. 6d. per share has already been paid, and a further 5s. 6d. per share is announced, making 6½ per cent. for the year, while the reserve is increased to £27,000 by the addition of £6,956, and £1,090 is carried forward.

The report of the West Riding Union Banking Company for the past year states the net profits at £42,120. An interim dividend of 10s. per share absorbed £10,000 of this last August, and it is now proposed to pay a further dividend of 20s. on the old shares, which will take £20,000. In addition, £3,349 is to be devoted to interest on the instalments of the new shares paid, and £8,070 added to reserve, the balance going to pay income-tax.

The Leipsic Tramways Company announce the payment of a dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum.

The report of the English and Australian Copper Company states that the profit and loss account for the year ending 30th June, 1876, shows a balance at the credit of £1,975, to which has to be added £16,838, the balance of profit on 1st July, 1875, making together the sum of £18,813. Out of this amount the twenty-fifth dividend of 2s. per share, and the twenty sixth dividend of 2s. per share, have been paid; and the directors now recommend a further dividend of 1s. per share, free of income-tax. The reserve fund remains at the amount at which it stood on 30th June, 1875, viz., £11,010, with the addition of a year's interest, £440.

A telegram has been received by the Fiscal Inspector in Europe of the Government of Peru, from the Finance Minister, announcing the confirmation by Congress of the supplemental memorandum, dated June 10, 1876, stating the manner in which the service of the external debt of Peru shall be provided for under the guano contract concluded on June 7 with Messrs. Raphael.

THE BOARD OF TRADE RETURNS.

The Board of Trade Returns for January have been issued, and are no more favourable than those of many months past. The imports still maintain their ascendency, showing an increase upon January, 1876, of more than 7 per cent., and that month in its turn showed an increase of 5 per cent. over January, 1875, so that this increase is a progressive one. On the other hand, the movement of the exports has been as steadily downward, the present return giving a decrease of more than 4 per cent. on that of last year, which was less by 2 per cent. than that of 1875, and by 14 per cent. than that of 1874. The value of the imports of foreign and colonial merchandise for the month amounted to £32,899,380, against £30,673,747 in the corresponding month of 1876, and £32,375,675 in 1875. The principal increase has been in butter, coffee, cotton, and wool; the principal decrease in corn and wheat. The value of the exports of British and Irish produce for the month amounted to £15,946,080, against £16,654,512 in January, 1876, and £16,986,760 in 1875.

As regards exports cotton yarn shows an increase in quantity of about 12 per cent., and 2½ per cent. in value; cotton piece goods show an increase of 5 per cent. in quantity, but a decrease of 1¾ per cent. in value; linen yarn shows a decrease of 29 per cent. in quantity and value; linen piece goods show only a nominal increase in quantity, but there is a decrease of 7¾ per cent. in value; woollen yarn shows a decrease of 18 per cent. in quantity and 25 per cent. in value; woollen cloths show no change in quantity, but have decreased 11½ per cent. in value; worsted stuffs decreased 21¾ per cent. in quantity, and 26 per cent. in value; coal, coke, &c., decreased 16 per cent. in quantity, but increased 11¾ per cent. in value; iron and steel decreased 1 per cent. in quantity, and as much as 11¼ per cent. in value. Among the imports raw cotton shows an increase of 37¼ per cent. in quantity, and 21¼ per cent. in value; raw silk has decreased 21¾ per cent. in quantity, but increased 13 per cent. in value; wool increased 52¼ per cent. in quantity, and 48¾ per cent. in value; sugar increased 22 per cent. in quantity, but as much as 57 per cent. in value; tea increased 3¾ per cent. in quantity, and 5¾ per cent. in value; coffee increased 16½ per cent. in quantity, and 23 per cent. in value; cocoa increased 34¾ per cent. in quantity, but as much as 93½ per cent. in value; rice decreased 47 per cent. in quantity, and 38 per cent. in value; wine increased 16½ per cent. in quantity, and 15¾ per cent. in value; tobacco increased 41½ per cent. in quantity, and 29 per cent. in value; and wood and timber decreased 29 per cent. in quantity, and 49½ per cent. in value.

The movements of bullion show an import of gold of £614,000 during the month, which is about half that of January, 1876, and rather more than a fourth of that of January, 1875, and an export of £3,470,000, which is more than double that of the previous year. Of silver we imported £1,746,000 and exported £1,460,000, both figures much in excess of the previous two years. The tonnage of vessels entered and cleared maintains its bulk pretty well, but the number and tonnage of foreign vessels is considerably less than for either of the two previous years, so that it is the aggregate of British ships' tonnage which maintains the total. As it is, the total tonnage from all quarters entered is 37,600 tons less than last year's, and the tonnage cleared 16,000 tons more.

The following is an extract from these Returns of the figures which refer to our export trade with China and the Far East:—

TEA.

The supplies, both at auction, without reserve, and for private sale, appear practically unlimited, and offer a varied and desirable selection, including a large quantity of fine and finest black-leaf held since last August, and it will take distributors all their time to relieve importers of holdings before the new season comes round. Preparations for this are already being made by elaborate limits which, when the time comes round for buying in China, are invariably ignored and exceeded by at least 3d. to 4d. per lb. The range of prices ruling it would seem are satisfactory to buyers and consumers; home consumption increases, though chiefly for Indian leaf, and this fact goes a great way to explain the heavy stocks of China growth still held by importers, and not saleable, except at a heavy loss on cost. The red-leaf crop is showing especially unsatisfactory results, prices being 3d. to 4d. lower than during October and November, an evidence of the rapid falling off in quality and the poor keeping properties in the leaf as now cured, to say nothing of the high prices paid the Chinese during these times of over production. The quotation to-day for good sound clean common is 8d. per lb.; but the best value offering is on tea at 10d. to 1s. per lb.; fine, at 1s. 7d. to 1s. 10d. per lb. Fancy Teas, Scented and Oolong have declined in value since the new year 1d. to 3d. per lb., the supply of Oolong of late being largely in excess of present wants, the consumption being a mere bagatelle, say about 1½ per cent. of the total of tea used in this country, the crop this season being exceptionally good, but it has attracted special attention of late, competing with Canton Scenteds, and also Green Tea. Latest prices are 1s. 1½d. to 1s. 4d. for good to medium, 1s. 5d. to 1s. 7d. for fine, and 1s. 8d. to 2s per lb. for finest quality. Green: The use of this tea is undoubtedly gradually decreasing, and all grades but fine and finest Gunpowder and Young Hyson selling at extremely low prices, the difference between Nos. 1 and 2 Gunpowder ranging as much as 1s. to 2s. per lb.; Nos. 3 and 4 grades of the different classes do not sell for more than 7d. to 11d. per lb., affording the best proof that Indian Tea has interfered with Green. Indian Tea commands the market, the almost daily auctions being invariably well attended, and the offerings secured at prices that must make tea planting a splendid enterprise.

SILK.

The Market has been very dull during the last few days, and in the absence of demand it is difficult to effect sales even at a further marked reduction in prices. The deliveries show a slight falling off, being from 1st to 14th inst. inclusive. China 964 bales, Canton 233, Japan 157. Total 1,354 bales.

Messrs. Arles, Dufour, and Co.'s Lyons Circular, dated 10th instant, says:—We confirm our advices of the 13th January. At that time it was expected that a settlement of Turkish affairs would lead to a general revival in business, but after the failure of the Conference such hopes were given up. In silk goods sales have been rather freer than in December, but prices obtained being comparatively much under those of raw materials manufacturers effected a further considerable reduction in the number of their looms. The consequence of this measure being a material saving of Silk, holders began to show more disposition to sell, and business done establishes now a reduction of f.3 to f.6, both on European and Asiatic sorts. As regards the latter, it must be remarked that throwsters, who, for some time past, have sold but scanty quantities of their produce, have kept entirely off the market; the chief business done consists in several thousand bales, particularly of Tsatlee, sold by small speculators and shipped to London. The reduction of the Continental stock, coupled with the moderate range of prices arrived at, gives now a firmer tone to the market.

COFFEE.—The market has exhibited a fluctuating condition during the week although variations in value have not been extensive, and closing quotations do not vary importantly from those of last mail. Supplies having consisted chiefly of new crop Plantation Ceylon, interest has mostly attached to that description, which after selling readily at a further recovery of 1s. became flat and declined, owing to large steamer shipments from Ceylon, and increase of stock. Further fluctuations have since taken place, but a good demand has prevailed towards the close, partly attributable to the result of the Dutch sale of the 14th inst., which was more favourable than expected (good ordinary Java selling at about 53c., equal to about 88s. per cwt.), and prices are nearly 1s. higher for the fortnight. Native and pale kinds have been slow of sale at about previous rates. Closing prices are as follow. Plantation Ceylon, triage 84s. to 96s., common to fine coloury small 100s. to 107s. 6d., low middling 108s. to 110s. 6d., middling 111s. to 113s. 6s., good middling to fine middling colory 114s. to 116s. 6d., good to fine bold 117s. to 123s., pea-berry 114s. to 118s., Native small 77s. 6d. to 78s. 6d., good ordinary 85s. 6d., fine bold 90s. to 92s. There has been no business in East Indian kinds other than Ceylon.

CHINA STRAW PLAIT.—At public sale 338 bales were partly sold at previous rates, chiefly White coarse to medium £7 to £8 15s., good medium to good £9 to £16, fine and superior qualities £17 15s. to £24 5s., one lot £34 per bale.

CHINA MATTING.—430 rolls new offered by auction were sold, White 20s. to 29s. 6d., Red check 24s. 6d. to 27s., Fancy 28s. 6d. to 36s., a few 40s. to 43s.; Mats, Fancy 31s. to 34s. 6d., White 26s. 6d. to 30s. per roll.

CHINA PRESERVES.—200 cases Ginger, were bought in, Chyloong at 24s. per case, other brands at 6d. per lb.

CUTCH.—At auction early in the week, of 697 boxes Pegu, 150 boxes Elephant, Howdah and Flag BB, sold at 27s. 6d. At a subsequent auction 291 boxes Pegu (Engine over Bullock Bros.) met a good demand, and sold at advanced rates, commencing at 28s. and rising to 30s. 6d. for one lot, chiefly at 30s. per cwt.

CANTHARIDES.—Ten cases China were bought in, slightly mouldy to sound at 2s. 5d. to 2s. 9d.

COCOANUT OIL is quoted £41 10s. to £42 for Cochin, and at £37 5s. to £37 10s. for Ceylon in pipes; 15 hogsheads Ceylon offered by auction were withdrawn, but 45 puncheons sold at £37 15s. to £37 10s.

COTTON.—A flat tone has prevailed, business has been on a much smaller scale, and prices have shown a downward tendency. In East India only small sales have been made, prices closing only 1-16d. lower, good fair Tinnivelly on the spot 6d., and afloat 6⅛d. American has fluctuated, closing ⅛d. lower.

DRAGON'S-BLOOD.—Of 25 cases lump 3 cases good sold at £14 5s. to £14 7s. 6d., the remainder, consisting of lower qualities, was chiefly bought in at £5 10s. to £8; 5 cases reed sold, fair at £9 15s., sea damaged £7.

GAMBIER continues dull, and at auction of 535 bales block 200 bales sold before the sales, the remainder withdrawn. For arrival business has been done in distant shipment at 21s. 3d. ex ship.

GUM COPAL.—Of 635 cases and 21 bags Manila, chiefly ex Kate Carnie, from Singapore, 150 cases and all the bags were sold, rather mixed hard at 25s. 6d. to 26s., soft yellow 18s., dark block 14s. 6d.

GALLS.—China are again lower, 60 cases having been sold at 58s., and 80 cases at 57s. per cwt.

GUM BENJAMIN.—Of 120 cases Sumatra offered 18 cases seconds mixed with dark sold at £6 15s., 1 lot £6 17s. 6d.; the remainder bought in at £7 10s.; thirds, 70s. to 75s.; fourths, 60s.; and 3 cases Siam block at £28.

HEMP continues dull; about 500 bales Manila have been sold, fair roping at £28 to £28 10s.

ISINGLASS.—At the periodical auctions Penang sold at previous rates for tongue, 2d. to 8d. lower for cake, but 3d. to 6d. higher for leaf. 37 cases 12 bags were sold, good tongue at 4s. 6d. to 4s. 8d., small pale at 4s. 3d., ordinary at 3s. 6d. to 3s. 11d., middling to good pale leaf at 4s. 9d. to 5s. 3d., low and ordinary at 3s. 4d. to 3s. 9d., cake at 2s. to 2s. 3d.; 5 bales manufactured Japan were withdrawn.

JAPAN TALLOW.—Of 99 casks offered 64 casks sold, fine rather dregged 40s. 3d., rather dark 39s. 6d., dark rather watery and partly rather dregged 39s., inferior 37s. 3d.

JAPAN WAX.—272 cases, chiefly squares, were held for full rates, and bought in at 40s. to 46s.

MYRABOLANES.—243 bags Ceylon sold at 13s. 9d. to 14s. 6d.

ORCHELLA.—42 bags good flat Ceylon sold at 46s.

PEPPER.—Black: At auction a total of 1,691 bags went off flatly, and with little demand, except on easier terms, the bulk was bought in; 849 bags Singapore bought in at 4d. to 4⅛d., except 150 bags which sold, fine sifted at 4 3-16d., first-class damaged at 3⅞d.; 538 bags Penang bought in at 3⅞d. to 3⅞d., except 165 bags damaged, which sold at 3⅞d. White: In auction 470 bags Singapore met a better demand, and 300 bags sold, including 120 bags offered without reserve, at full rates, fair to good fair at 6⅜d. to 6⅞d., good bold at 7⅛d. Privately for arrival 50 tons Singapore, January-February-March shipment, have been sold at 6⅜d. to 6⅞d.

PLUMBAGO.—At public sale 461 barrels Ceylon were mostly offered freely, and 370 barrels found buyers at about the former value, common dull lump 13s. 6d., middling dull and mixed small to good bright bold ditto 15s. to 17s., dull chips 9s. 9d., middling to fine bright chips 10s. to 11s. 6d., low dust 7s. 3d., ordinary to good bright ditto 8s. to 9s. 9d. per cwt.

RATTANS.—At auction, 68 tons Sarawak were bought in at £18 to £20.

RICE.—A further decline having been accepted for new crop cargoes, sales to the extent of about 9,200 tons have resulted at 8s. 3d. to 9s. 12,000 bags Necransie, indirect shipment from the Continent, sold to arrive at 9s. 9d. ex ship London.

SPICES.—Cinnamon: 20 cases China have been sold at 9½d. per lb. MANCHESTER GOODS.

On the 10th inst. an improvement occurred in the market, which has since been fully confirmed, more offers being put forward, and at increased limits, the market being very firm, with a good demand, principally for 8¼ Shirtings, and a good business has been done, in some instances at slightly advanced prices, Yarns have been in better request, but the higher quotations asked have prevented business. At the close the market is quieter, there is less inquiry, and neither manufacturers nor spinners are so firm in their demands.

CASUALTY.

SAIGON.—Feb. 15, the Kalaja (Russian barque) and the Carrisbrooke (British steamer) have put in here after collision in this river; former badly, latter slightly, damaged; extent of injuries not yet known.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DEAL.—Feb. 12, the Orion, barque, Scott, of and from Sunderland, for Bangkok, which put back to the Downs with the outward-bound fleet, while at anchor off Walmer, on the 11th inst., slightly touched the ground; a survey has been held on board, and the surveyors report that the vessel has not sustained any damage.

LIVERPOOL.—Feb. 9, the Ullock, from Cardiff, for Anjer, which was ashore at Tacumshin, has been towed off, and arrived here.

MALTA.—Passed, Feb. 7, Elgin (str.), from Manila, for Rotterdam.

TABLE BAY.—Jan. 16, arrived 14, Lota, from Batavia; Glenlyon, from Rangoon; both for Falmouth. On the 5th inst., sundry timbers and a lifebuoy marked "Aurora, Amsterdam," were washed up at Zitzikamma. The Aurora is a Dutch ship, 1,312 tons, Captain Visser, and left Batavia Oct. 26, for Holland.

PORT ELIZABETH.—Jan. 12, the Amore, from Singapore, for Marseilles, which put in here in distress Dec. 20, has taken rather longer to repair than was anticipated, but will leave in about seven days.

BATAVIA.—Jan. 4, according to advices from Samarang, the Belle of Southesk, which arrived there from Bangkok after being ashore, had been much delayed in her discharging by bad weather, but as soon as she could complete the same and take in her ballast she would sail for Singapore. The total amount of damage to the Bury St. Edmunds and the steamer Koning der Nederlanden, caused by collision with one another Dec. 19, will not be £200.

ILO ILO.—Dec. 18, the Monarchy, for New York, put back here for repairs; had part of bulwarks, stanchions, and sails carried away, and decks and waterways badly strained; also had main combings started and stern post stove, and much water had apparently gone below. In the fore and after hold five tiers sugar damaged; has been surveyed and recommended that after the discharge of the damaged bags the vessel should be horsed and calked from copper to gunwale, including waterways, &c. The Coldstream, for London, is discharging hemp, part of which is damaged; the master is at Manila, endeavouring to raise money for repairs.

GENERAL SHIPPING NEWS.

A SHORT ROUTE.—The latest international canal scheme is to construct a ship canal across France, from the English Channel to Lyons, so that vessels between India and England, instead of passing around the Spanish Peninsula by Gibraltar, may go through this canal into the Mediterranean and thence to India, via the Suez Canal. The proposition is that the English and French Governments share the expense between them. France, however, could well afford to build it alone, and then impose a tonnage tax on all vessels equally.

LONG VOYAGES.—The British Crown, which arrived at London on the 11th inst., was 231 days on the passage, having left Hong Kong on the 25th June last. The Celestial Queen, which arrived on the same day, has also made a long voyage; she left Manila on the 23rd Aug., and was 172 days from port to port.

MR. MELISSICH brought an action some time since against Lloyd's, for libel contained in a pamphlet report of a trial at Falmouth, and recovered a thousand pounds as damages. The case was taken on appeal to the Common Pleas Division, on the ground that the report of a criminal trial was privileged. The Common Pleas sustained the verdict because the report was incomplete, and the Lords Justices have upheld the decision of the Court below.

STEAM navigation between the Australian colonies and the Netherlands India by the Netherlands India Steam Navigation Company has been resumed. The Adelaide Government has guaranteed a subsidy of £8,000 per annum, its object being to open up communication with the Northern Australian settlements. The contract is for five years, the steamers to make five trips per year.

THE Board of Trade have requested their solicitor to take the necessary steps for holding an official inquiry into the circumstances connected with the stranding of the barque Ullock, of Liverpool, from Cardiff, for Anjer, at Tacumshin, County Wexford, on the 7th inst.

THE Pardo (str.), Captain Trotman, which left Saigon for Hong Kong on the 25th November last, is reported missing.

MESSRS. SCOTT AND CO., Greenock, have contracted to build two steamers of about 1,000 tons each for a Shanghai firm.

ON the 7th inst. the new paddle steam tug Menam, built for the Borneo Company, left Port Glasgow for Bangkok.

LAUNCHES.

On the 10th inst. Messrs. A. M'Millan and Son launched from their dockyard at Dumbarton the Yarra Yarra, a beautifully-modelled iron sailing-ship of 1,340 tons B.M. This vessel has been built to the order of Messrs. William Cracie and Co., of Liverpool, and is intended for the Australian and Eastern trades. The christening ceremony was performed by Miss Porteous, of Ravenspark, Irvine. Under the able command of Captain Robert Kerr, long and favourably known in these trades, the Yarra Yarra is expected to prove herself a fast sailer.

On the 13th inst. a splendid iron barque named Lady Kinnaird was launched from the shipbuilding yard of Messrs. Brown and Simpson, Dundee. The ceremony took place in the presence of a large number of spectators, among whom were Lord and Lady Kinnaird. As the vessel left the ways she was named by Mrs. Julius Weinberg, wife of one of the owners, amid the cheers of those present. The Lady Kinnaird, which is a sister ship to the Lord Kinnaird, launched from the same yard about twelve months ago, is 180ft. in length, 30ft. in breadth, and 18ft. in depth. She is fitted up with patent windlass, steam winches, and is classed 100 A1 at Lloyd's. The vessel will be commanded by Captain Laws, and will be engaged in the general East India trade.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

YOKOHAMA.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 9th January, and we have advices by the Occidental and Oriental Company's steamer Belgic, via San Francisco, two days later, viz., to the 11th January. The P. and O. mail from London, November 10, arrived out on the 28th December, and the following French mail of November 17 on the 6th January.

The latest reports concerning the Agrarian riots is to the effect that, although they are not serious, they appear to be almost universal throughout the country. The Government have adopted the wise measure of reducing the land-tax from 3 to 2½ per cent., and this may possibly have a pacifying effect. The native newspapers, however, deny that this step has been taken with the view of restoring peace, though the time at which this course has been adopted certainly suggests that such is the case. The Japan Herald states that rumours of trouble in the Kogoshima ken were prevalent, and it is was asserted that Shimadzu Saburo and the elder Saigo were about to visit Tokio, some reports saying they were to be accompanied by a large number of troops. This would appear to be the prelude to the rising of which telegraphic news was received a few days back.

The long pending "shooting regulations" question has at last been settled, and licences for the season will in future be issued by the Japanese Government at a fee of $10. These licenses are to be accompanied by covenants, the infringement of which will render the holder liable to pay a fine. Transgressors have also been made amenable to punishment before the tribunals of their country, but Englishmen are again placed at a disadvantage, for while the other Foreign Ministers are content to abide by the punishments inflicted by the ordinary laws of their country, the English Minister, not satisfied with the severity of the English game-laws, has thought fit to promulgate a new edict for the punishment of his nationals. The Japan Mail in a sprightly and optimist article on the subject commends the regulations on the whole, and rejoices that the sportsman can now go a-field with a belt of cartridges and a good conscience, void of all fear that he will be the cause of a war. It adds :—"The regulations will be accepted, we think, with satisfaction by all sportsmen. It is obvious that penalties must be affixed to the violation of agreements, but after all the protests recently made here against an excessively severe interpretation of laws, we doubt whether the Law-Secretary, even in his sternest and most conscientious humour, would dare to inflict a penalty of a month's imprisonment with hard labour on a delinquent arraigned under Sir Harry Parkes's notification." On the other hand, the Herald condemns the notification very strongly as another excess over his authority on the part of Sir Harry Parkes, similar to his notification with regard to newspapers published by British subjects in the Japanese language. It says :—

In the words of the 85th section of the Order in Council, such regulations only are contemplated as may be necessary for the "peace, order, and good government of British subjects." Considering that for upwards of fifteen years, ever since the opening of the ports, the general conduct of British subjects has not been otherwise than law-abiding, how can any special urgency for the issue of the ukase have arisen? Under the sanction of the foreign Ministers the Japanese Government could effectually prevent sporting being indulged in without a license, and those who take them out are required to enter into a covenant to observe their provisions, under a forfeiture of $10, and the cancellation of their licenses should they commit any infraction. These regulations, plus British law, are restraints enough, it might be supposed, to satisfy the most despotically-minded of Ministers; but no—peccant Englishmen are to be made to suffer, in addition, the special pains and penalties of fine and imprisonment, which their own Consular authorities, by the grace of Sir Harry Parkes, have in store for them, should they heinously shoot, without being duly licensed in that behalf, say a sparrow, a rat, or a crow. To us the Minister's notification appears to be entirely unnecessary; the conduct of British subjects in the past has not been such as to provoke it; and it not being called for by any special circumstances of gravity, this gratuitous piece of superfluous legislation cannot be too much condemned as an unwarrantable abuse of Ministerial power.

The matter, as is natural among communities so fond of sport as those in the Far East, has attracted considerable interest and discussion. It would, however, hardly seem that the Japanese farmers are particularly ill-natured or likely to harass sportsmen very severely, seeing that in the report of the "usual New Year's day paper hunt" we read that "after a short canter along the road a turn was made into the paddy-fields." The hunt, it is added, "was a very enjoyable one, and appeared to give satisfaction to all concerned," the farmers, it is to be presumed, included.

The Report of the Japanese Postmaster-General recording the work in his department from 1st July, 1875, to 30th June, 1876, has been issued. The revenue of the department, from all sources, amounted to yen 595,201, while the total expenditure amounted to yen 713,244—an excess of about 20 per cent., a fraction of which, however, is due to the fact that the salaries of officers and other expenses of the Marine Board, which is under the direction of the Postal Department, and of other sections whose duties are not connected with the Post-office proper, are included for convenience in the accounts. It is satisfactory to observe that the actual revenue of the department exceeded the estimated revenue by yen 25,201, while the actual disbursements fell short by yen 1,000 of the estimated disbursements. Compared with the revenues of the previous year, those for the period under review show an increase of yen 146,674, or 32·7 per cent.; and, compared with the year ending 30th June, 1874, an increase of yen 302,875, or 103·6 per cent. The increase of expenditure, on the other hand, is only 20 per cent. over that of 1875, and 101·6 over that of 1874, showing that the increased work which brings augmented revenue is done at a decreasing ratio of expense. The estimated revenue for the year ending 30th June, 1877, is yen 654,517, or 10 per cent. of increase over that of last year; the estimated expenditure for the same period is yen 786,096, also showing an increase of about 10 per cent. It will be satisfactory to find hereafter that, as in the case of the past year, the actual revenue exceeds the estimated revenue, and the actual disbursements fall below the estimated disbursements.

At midnight between Saturday and Sunday, the 8th and 9th Jan., a fire broke out in a provision store kept by Mr. Antonio, on Lot 51, and was not subdued until the store with all its contents had been destroyed. Mr. Antonio, who resided on the premises, had, with his wife and children, gone to Yokoska at four o'clock on the Saturday afternoon, and shut up the house, which, during his absence, was uninhabited. The origin of the fire is as yet a mystery. The goods were insured for $5,000.

A decoration of the First Class has been conferred by the Mikado on Mons. De Struve, the Russian Minister here.

General Saigo and the other members of the Japanese Commission to the Centennial Exhibition returned to Japan by the P.M.S. City of Tokio on the 26th ult.

On the 2nd Jan. an inquest was held by H.B.M.'s Consul as coroner, and Messrs. A. Jaffray, E. Powys, and Thomas Rose, jurors, on the body of the late Mr. Thomas Baker, formerly chief officer of the Taihei Maru, who shot himself in a Japanese house. A verdict to the effect that the deceased shot himself while in a state of insanity was returned.

YOKOHAMA, JAN. 11.

A new rise of about $30 has taken place in silk since the date of my last, and has been well sustained to the present, in spite of the anxiety prevailing as to the state of affairs in Europe, and the expectation which people affect, if they do not feel, of a warlike solution of pending questions to involve a power nearer home than Turkey or Russia. I am happy to say that so far there has been but little serious loss known to have been sustained in the silk market this season, if I except one house in the Continental trade, which is known to have suffered severely; but there is reason to believe that there are some minor sufferers, while unquestionably some firms have made tremendous profits.

As a piece of intelligence which is not current here, but is perfectly true, and will have an interest for many of your readers, I may mention that Mr. W. G. Howell, who has so long and with such great talent, if not always the nicest tact, conducted the Japan Weekly Mail, has sold the property of that paper to Mr. G. C. Pearson, by whom it will be managed. Mr. Pearson is talented and accomplished, and will be a worthy successor to Mr. Howell.

Mr. E. H. House's new paper, the Tokio Times, has appeared. The first number was issued on the 6th January, and contains much matter of interest. He sounds two key-notes, probably indicating the policy which will be advocated, and a result which will be striven for, the first being the adoption of protection by the Japanese Government, and the second the abolition of extra-territorial jurisdiction in Japan. I, for one, fail to see how protection can at present benefit the country, or what industries it has now, or is likely to have for some years to come at least, which need protection. Mr. House attaches great weight to the development of the iron industry in America, as testified to by Captain Galton and other English experts, visitors to the Centennial Exhibition; but as yet, even granting that protection has done all its advocates claim for it in America, there is no scope for it in Japan. Why, the Government, or rather the Mitsu Bishi Company, which is much the same thing, are sending two of their largest steamers under sail to England, there to be refitted with new engines and boilers, on the ground that after making the expensive voyage round, the cost of refitting will be less there than it would be if the work were done here! As for the other question of ex-territoriality, Mr. House may do the Japanese good service in working towards its abolition, if he will induce the Government to adopt and guarantee the just administration of such a code of laws as would be judged equitable by one of the Western Powers. For this, however, we must wait, and probably, while we are waiting, the nearest approach which can be hoped for to a national jurisdiction will be the appointment of mixed Courts; something like those which, after all, do not work so badly in the open ports of China.

HIOGO.

The Niphon Standard is informed by a native correspondent that the opening of the ports of Shimonoseki, in the inland sea, and Tsuruga, on the north-east coast, next year to foreign trade and residence is now under the consideration of the Government. It stated that it is proposed to have no distinct foreign settlements, though certain localities will be defined for foreign premises, and conventions to contain certain trade observances, hithirto inapplicable as between foreigners and Japanese in Japan, to be stipulated; also specified municipal rules and regulations, to be observed by foreigners resorting to, and taking up their quarters in those ports, to be maintained and enforced by the consular and other foreign Courts.

The Hiogo News says :—The Saigo party in Kagoshima is reported to be about 15,000 strong. It is said that they are tilling the land in peculiar dresses and practising the use of the spear and sword. They also visit Shinto temples, where they learn things and where Saigo occasionally teaches them.

OSAKA.

The Hiogo News correspondent gives the following items :—

A circular emanating from H.B.M.'s Consulate went the rounds of the British community yesterday. I had no time to read it through, but gathered that it was based on an official notification of the Osaka Fu, the purport of which was, that if foreigners do not wish to have their dogs killed by the police they must either keep them from straying off the Concession or affix to their necks a ticket, which is to be obtained through the Consulate, and register the same at some office in Osaka. For all this a small fee will have to be paid, amounting probably to 75 sen per annum, that being the amount of the new local poll-tax on native dogs. Now I do not suppose there are many dog-keeping foreigners who will be disposed to raise objections to this tax, if thereby they can save their canine favourites from the murderous bludgeons of the new blue-coated canicides, for 75 sen a year is not much after all to pay for a four-footed monban, which, as a rule, is worth any three bipeds bearing that oft-misleading designation. But the ticket—there's the rub! Who that has seen a squab fluffy Japanese puppy wearing a piece of timber half as big as itself would consent to see his "toy terrier," or even his pointer, burthened with such a millstone-like appendage!

We had two fires here last week. The first occurred on Tuesday, at the Yeta village of Watanabe, and resulted in the destruction of about thirty houses, it is reported. The second, which took place on the following morning, was a smaller affair, and was confined to the burning of one or two houses in the northern outskirts of the city.

The approaches to the railway-station have been greatly improved in appearance recently by the planting of a double row of trees. The handsome new and wide approach to the new Concession bridge has also been ornamented in a like fashion.

I am very sorry to hear the report of Mr. Godai having lost $150,000 by his indigo works. It is only within the past few weeks that the first hastily run up sheds and fences have been replaced by more substantial, though still wooden, structures, and a brick chimney-stack built.

That White Elephant of the Osaka Fu, the Osaka Museum, has shut up shop once more, but threatens, I hear, to make yet another attempt at the—for this part of the world—usual unseasonable exhibition opening time.

NAGASAKI.

The Cosmopolitan Press says that on the 23rd Dec. the harbour was filled to an extraordinary degree with a red slimy matter floating on the water, presenting during the day the appearance of red paint. It was said to be sardine spawn, Iwashi uwo no ko. The effect at night was magnificent, notwithstanding the pale moonlight, and more so when the phosphorescent glare upon the water was disturbed by a slight breeze. Such a phenomenon has not appeared for many years, and the fishermen predict an extraordinary supply of sardines for a long time to come.

CHINA.

PEKING.

The Peking Gazette of the 1st December contains a noteworthy memorial from the Governor-General of Hukwang, protesting against an order which looks very much as though it had been devised in the interests of the C.M S.N. Co. Since the rebellion, the grain tax in that province has been paid in money; but the Board of Revenue has ordered a return to the old system of payment in kind. The memorialist protests that the change would involve great expense, and be a hardship to the people. He shall send the money commutation as before, this year, and requests that the Board of Revenue may be directed to reconsider the matter, as regards the future.

The same Gazette contains a memorial from the Viceroy of Nanking, requesting that the grain from the provinces north of the Yangtsze may be sent by steamer, at any rate till the Grand Canal is cleared. We have several times called attention to the difficulties which were experienced during the past season in geting the grain junks through the Canal; and the officials concerned are evidently anxious to avoid another season of such worry. They are right so far, but it would be a thousand pities to let that magnificent water way become obliterated, and there will be danger of that result if it is altogether abandoned as a grain route.

The principle of providing public work for the sufferers from famine has been adopted in the province of Chihli. Li-Hung chang reports the construction of two canals, which will have the advantage of helping to drain and irrigate the country, and which have provided employment for a number of sufferers by the recent drought. The funds have been contributed by the gentry, for whom rewards are solicited. We congratulate the Tientsin authorities on the application of this principle, in preference to supporting the sufferers in idleness, and trust that their example will be followed.

It is noteworthy that, among other reasons for the decrease in the return for certain Customs stations in his jurisdiction, the Governor of Shantung notes the pressure of lekin stations on the Upper Yangtsze, "which tend to drive away trade." He is speaking, of course, of trade which would normally have passed up the Grand Canal. But this is doubly hindered; choked first by excessive taxation at the outset, and impeded by the deterioration of the Canal at the close.

NEWCHWANG.

The correspondent of the North China Herald writes:—

The steamer Ping-on, the last of the season, left on the 24th Dec. There is too much ice in the river to do much, even if another steamer were to come, although at times small native boats paddle past, running considerable danger. Last year the river was frozen over early in December, but this year it has gone back to the old style—after Christmas. There is very little doing in the settlement except squaring up accounts.

A number of poor immigrants have come across from Shantung, and I fear there must be much suffering among them. In the vicinity of the port some daring attempts at burglary (generally at houses where only a lady was living) have taken place, but no harm has been done; and we may feel pretty secure as our new Commissioner, Mr. Moorhead, is making use of the Customs Guard to patrol round the settlement.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 12th January; the P. and O. mail from London Nov. 24 was received on the 8th January. The North China Herald contains the following summary of news:—

We learn on good authority that intelligence has been received to the effect that the insurrection which broke out in the south-west of Yunnan in May last, and which led to the capture by insurgent bands of the cities of Teng-yueh (Momein), Shunning, &c., was precipitated by the announcement of an intention on the part of the Provincial Government to exact from the inhabitants of the Teng-yueh district the indemnity which was demanded by Great Britain for the Margary affair. It is stated that a fine of 1,000,000 taels was talked of; and the rage of the population was vented, in the first instance, upon the likin collectors, of whom a considerable number were murdered.

A special general meeting of the shareholders in the S.S.N. Co. is called for the 15th of January, to consider "an offer which has been made to the directors for the purchase of the Company's real estate, floating property, and plant, and to pass resolutions in reference thereto." Reports have been current at various times during the past year that negotiations were in progress for the sale of the Company to the "Chinese Merchants' Steamer Company," but they were disregarded as improbable. Early last week, however, the rumour was revived and assumed so much substance that shares, which had been offering at 66 a week ago, advanced gradually for a few days until they reached 76 on the 3rd Jan., and on the 4th the rate rapidly advanced to 78, 80, 82, 85, 86, and 90. Even the latter rate failed to produce sellers on the 5th, and large sales were made at rates progressing from 91 to 95. The publication on the 6th of the advertisement to which we have referred of course terminates any doubt as to the negotiations reported to have been in progress. It is generally understood that the conditions are as follow:—The purchase money for the ships, plant, and property to be Tls. 2,000,000, of which one-half will be paid within about six weeks, and the remainder by instalments extending over five years, interest at the rate of 8 per cent. being paid upon the balances in the meantime. There remains the reserve fund of something over Tls. 400,000, which, after deduction of expenses, will be available for distribution among the shareholders, and will bring the amount returnable in respect of each share up to fully par value. The Taoutai's organ, the Sin-pao, says the payment will be completed about April next year, and of course the Chinese will have the option of shortening the term as much as they choose. Five years, however, is the time stipulated for in the agreement.—[Subsequent telegraphic information has brought intelligence that the purchase has been completed.—ED. L. & C. T.]

A batch of remanded prisoners were brought up for judgment before the Magistrate Chen and Mr. Davenport, at the Mixed Court, on the 8th inst., when one prisoner was released, one sent to the Chehsien to be dealt with, one left in the hands of the Mixed Court Magistrate, two sentenced to three months, two to six months, seven to eight months, two to ten months, and ten to twelve months' imprisonment, the sentences to commence running from the day in question. Eight prisoners had been released in consequence of illness, and two had effected their escape.

The Japanese Postmaster-General has established postal agencies for receiving and despatching mails, &c., at the following ports:—Chinkiang, Kiukiang, Hankow, Chefoo, Newchwang, Tientsin, Ningpo, and Foochow. The rates of postage on all mails from these ports will be the same as from the Shanghai Agency.

Two children lost their lives during the fire on the French Concession on New Year's Day. A gentleman who found one body, that of a little girl about six or seven years old, informs us that it was not at all injured by fire, and that the child would seem to have been either smothered by the smoke or by the water with which its clothes were saturated.

The following gentlemen have been elected Municipal Councillors for the ensuing year:—Messrs. G. J. W. Cowie, J. Hart, P. G. Hubbe, J. B. Irving, E. H. Lavers, E. G. Low, A. McLeod, J. F. Seaman, and C. W. Siegfried.

A fire broke out in Kiukiang-road on the 4th Jan., but was put out after four Chinese houses had been destroyed. Another broke out on the 9th in a Chinese store on the French Concession, and spreading to some adjoining godowns stored with very inflammable goods, blazed fiercely for two hours, after which the Fire Brigade got it under control.

The Sinpao relates the defeat of two salt revenue cruisers, by several heavily-laden smugglers, at a place forty li to the eastward of Soochow, at an entrance to the Ta-hu. The smugglers appear to have fired some jingals into the cruisers, and caught them with their boathooks, whereupon the gallant crews breasted the waves, and returned to Soochow to receive further instructions.

We understand that the first of the new Consular appointments, under the Chefoo Convention, has been made. Mr. E. C. Baber is to go to Chungking, and is making preparations for his journey.

We have another week of almost perfect weather, bright sunshine with just sufficient crispness in the atmosphere to make it bracing. The thermometer has ranged between 30 and 55.

Messrs. Bisset and Co. report as follows upon the Share Market :—

A large business has been done in Bank, S.S.N., and Yangtsze shares, at higher rates ; other stocks are quiet. H. and S. Bank : Sales are reported at 24 per cent., exch. 74, 25 per cent., exch. 75, and 27 per cent., exch. 74 ; at which rates a number of shares have changed hands. They are still in demand. S.S.N. Co.: A considerable number of shares have changed hands during the past fortnight, at rapidly advancing rates, in consequence of negotiations by the China Merchants S.N. Company for the purchase of the S.S.N. fleet, wharves, and plant ; in which they appear to have succeeded. On the 4th January shares were sold at Tls. 85 for 31st January, and afterwards Tls.85 cash and Tls. 88 for 31st January ; while sales were made later in the day at Tls.88 for cash, and in the evening at Tls.90 cash. On the 5th the market opened at Tls.91 cash, and sales were made during the day at Tls.95. There has been little change in rates since, buyers now offering Tls.92 ex dividend, and a sale being reported at Tls. 93. A dividend of 4 per cent., making 7 per cent. for 1876, was paid on the 8th January. Yangtsze Insurance Association : These shares have advanced in sympathy with S.S.N. stock. Sales have been made at Tls.630, 640, 650, and on the 10th January at 660, cum dividend. An interim dividend of 7½ per cent. was paid on the 10th.

The following changes in mercantile firms are announced on Dec. 31st 1876. Mr. C. A. Rees ceased to be a partner in Carter and Co.; Mr. J. T. A. Alexander ceased to be a partner in Johnston and Co.; Mr. David Reid ceased to be a partner in Reid Evans, and Co., on 30th April 1876.

One of the most remarkable events that has occurred in the history of our commercial relations with China is the announcement that negotiations are on foot for the purchase of the Shanghai Steam Navigation Company by the Chinese. The terms of the proposed transaction not having, as yet, been officially made public, we are of course not in a position to comment upon them, but may remark that the purchase-money is variously reported at Tls.2,000,000 and Tls.2,400,000, part of which has been already put down, the remainder to be forthcoming in instalments, between the date of purchase and April 1878, interest on the balances, meantime, being paid at the rate of 8 per cent.

A case which excited some interest has been heard at the Mixed Court, before the Chinese magistrate Chen and Mr. Spence, British Assessor. A Chinaman, named Sze A-tong, was charged by Captain Bennett, of the receiving hulk Wellington, with breaking open a packet of letters and making known the contents for improper purposes. It appeared from the statements made to the Court that prisoner had been employed on the hulk as a chit-boy for twelve years, his wages being $14 a month and all found. He was given a packet of letters to take to Messrs. D. Sassoon, Sons, and Co. Some of the letters contained opium statistics of the Wellington. When the packet was delivered to that firm it was found to contain a letter addressed to Messrs. E. D. Sassoon and Co. ; the address being in prisoner's writing—a remarkably good commercial hand. It contained a sheet of paper on which were opium statistics, also in prisoner's handwriting. These had evidently been copied from one of the letters carried by prisoner to Messrs. D. Sassoon, Sons and Co., he having unwittingly placed the copied document amongst the others. Prisoner now admitted having opened one of the letters given him by Captain Bennett and copied it : and stated that Mr. S. K. Mody, a broker, had bribed him to do so, giving him $2 a month to supply him with such information. The representative of Messrs. D. Sassoon, Sons and Co. stated that the case was brought forward as a warning to other employés. Mr. Spence said the offence was a serious one, and prisoner was sentenced to three months' cangue, and to receive 100 blows.

A subscription of more than three hundred dollars has been raised among the foreign residents of Tientsin, for the relief of the Shantung poor, and about $700 had been already received from Peking for the same object. The disbursement of this sum is to be entrusted to members of the English Methodist Mission, who have been eye witnesses of the distress, and whose mission field in the districts of Lao Ling and Yang Hsin Hien, is in the very centre of the suffering region. A committee, consisting of the senior member of each of the four missionary societies represented in Tientsin, has also been formed, for the purpose of consulting in reference to the further need, and the best use to which any additional subscriptions may be put.

We hear on very good authority that the present Taoutai of Hankow, Li, has been promoted to the post of Provincial Judge of Fu-kien. It is not known when he will leave, or who will be appointed his successor.

It is with some interest that we notice, by the Peking Gazette, the death of the hereditary Duke of K'ung, the lineal descendant of Confucius. The Duke was a young man when he died, only having reached the age of twenty-eight.

FOOCHOW.

The Foochow Herald of January 4 states that the proclamation in regard to the Yunnan outrage—assented to by the Chinese Government—has been posted in the city and suburbs.

From the above paper, we take the following :—

Residents should be on their guard against thieves—always active just before Chinese New Year. We hear of an impudent attempt at robbery of a foreign house on the night of Friday last ; but fortunately the inmates were alarmed in time, and the intruders departed without booty. One of the would-be thieves, in order to avoid capture, jumped down from the second floor verandah of the house in question to the ground—a distance of about thirty feet, without sustaining any known injury.

We hear that on the 11th ult., while passing to the southward of Flat Rock, the British ship Norman Court struck bottom. As soon as possible, soundings were taken, giving four fathoms at the first, and seven fathoms at the second cast of the lead. Flat Rock bore by corrected compass bearings, N.N.W. distant half a mile ; the tide at the time being half-ebb. Flat Rock is situated to the eastward of Matsou Island, distant from the nearest point three-quarters of a mile. According to the chart, at this distance, and on this bearing, there should have been found eighteen fathoms of water.

Ting Futai left for Taiwan-foo on Saturday last in one of the Arsenal gun-boats. The object of his Excellency's visit is, we believe, to make a searching inquiry into Formosan administration generally, and especially to investigate certain charges of corruption that have been brought against several district magistrates. We may rest assured that the delinquents will meet with as little consideration at the hands of Ting Futai as their brother culprits on the mainland have already received. As our readers are no doubt aware, Formosa forms a part, and, if report is to be credited, not the least corrupt part of this province. The high Chinese officials have an absurd dread of the climate, in which even Ting Futai is said to share ; but the smaller fry have hitherto made the game pay.

The pioneer of telegraphy in China—Mr. Reynolds, of Shanghai—whose land-line between Shanghai and Woosung was destroyed by a Chinese mob in 1865, recently applied to H. M.'s Minister at Peking for compensation, under Clause 4, section 1, of the Chefoo Convention, by which the sum of Tls. 200,000 was put aside for the satisfaction of unsettled claims. Although Mr. Reynolds's claim was for the extremely moderate sum of Tls. 5,000, it was disallowed by Sir Thomas Wade.

HONG KONG.

Our advices by this mail extend to the 18th January ; the French mail from London, Dec. 1, arrived out on the 11th Jan. The following items of news are from the China Mail:—

It was expected that H.E. Sir Arthur Kennedy would embark for Queensland about the 21st of January. One of the local papers complains of there being "a quiet self-complacence in the tone of the Queensland papers to hand by the Singapore relative to the anticipated advent of the new Governor"—a circumstance, however, hardly surprising before they are acquainted with him.

The postal convention between Hong Kong and Netherlands India is published in the local Government Gazette. The postage on direct correspondence from Hong Kong is at the rate of 12c., Hong Kong currency, for fifteen grammes, and that from Netherlands India to Hong Kong and places in China and Japan to where British post-offices are established 30c. Netherlands India currency. Post cards can be sent for 6c. Hong Kong currency or 15c. Netherlands India currency. The postage on commercial documents, patterns, &c., is 2c. Hong Kong currency for 50 grammes or fraction of 50 grammes, or 5c. Netherlands India currency. The fee for registration is 12c. Hong Kong currency and 10c. Netherlands India currency. Each office retains the postage it collects, the Postal Department of Netherlands India bearing the charge of transit on the other side of Singapore, and the Hong Kong department all charges for transit from Singapore.

A correspondent favours us with another method of manufacturing spurious dollars, in addition to those we mentioned yesterday. He says :—"To make two bad dollars by this plan three good ones are necessary. One face of each of two of the three good dollars is destroyed, being cut out, leaving the milling and a very thin face intact. Now the third good dollar has both faces sliced off, and these are fitted on to the two others which were hollowed out and filled up with lead. Of course the manufactured dollar is more bulky than a silver dollar, because of the comparative lightness of lead. There is about 25 per cent. of silver in this counterfeit. A skilful manipulator can make about twenty in one day."

The new law limiting the number of passengers to be taken by each of the Canton steamers has been strictly observed, and, to prevent any infringement of it, the captains of the different steamers have adopted the system of issuing tickets on board to intending passengers, only the limited number being issued.

Digitized by Google

The rush, therefore, to get first on board is very great, and it is necessary, after the full complement of tickets has been served out, to close the gate of the wharf to prevent the inroad of late arrivals. The closing of the gate, however, causes great inconvenience to post carriers, and several bundles of our Chinese newspapers for Canton could not be sent off for this reason; the postman arrived at the gate, but could not gain admittance. Could not the steamboat company devise some means whereby post-carriers and chit-coolies would be admitted after the gate is closed to ordinary passengers?

In the Supreme Court in Bankruptcy, on the 5th January, before Sir John Smale and Mr. Justice Snowden, a judgment of interest in connection with the failure of Augustine Heard and Co. was delivered by the Chief Justice. The salient points are as follows:—

Mr. Justice Snowden having refused a motion to examine witnesses in London made in the above matter, this appeal from that decision was argued before us on the 14th December last, and we reserved judgment. After conferring on the facts and on the arguments, we are clearly of opinion that this appeal must be dismissed. The case being quite new and surrounded with difficulties, we decided that the appeal be dismissed without costs, and that there be no costs of the original hearing. I think the petition was premature, that the China Traders' Company should have tendered to the Trustees a formal proof in some of the ways pointed out in the Ordinance, and have waited till the Trustees had refused to accept it and put it on the test of proofs. On refusal, there would be a "difference," in the terms of Section ninety-six, and then the China Traders' Company would be in a position to file a petition, and to ask an order by this Court calling on the Trustees to admit such proof; but I think that until such tender and refusal of proof, there is no such "claim, dispute or difference" between the China Traders' Company, and the Trustee as comes within the Section ninety-six, which the Court is required by that section to determine. There is not till proof tendered and refused to be received a case on which to determine. In such a petition the China Traders' Company should allege that Fearon and Co. claim to be creditors for the same amount from the estate, and they should make these parties respondent. The China Traders' Company should ask for leave to serve this petition on Fearon and Co., with a notice to answer and appear on the hearing on a day to be fixed by the Court. On the appearance of Fearon and Co., or after proof of such new petition having been duly served on them, it will be competent for the China Traders' Company to ask by motion for such commission to examine witnesses or otherwise as they may be advised.

In the case of Sembke v. the Oriental Bank Corporation, in which the question of which of the two parties was to bear the loss, amounting to £775, arising out of the non-payment of drafts, consequent on the failure of Messrs. Im Thurm and Co., judgment was given for the plaintiff, with costs, the Chief-Justice expressing his regret that the matter had not been compromised.

A case of some interest, arising out of a charter party, has attracted some attention among the mercantile community. It appears that the American ship Mount Washington was chartered by Messrs. Pustau's house at Hamburg to proceed to Hong Kong, one of the conditions of the charter party being that, "in chartering the vessel outwards from Hong Kong, the captain is bound to give on equal terms charterer's correspondence the preference." The captain, however, learning by telegram, on arrival, that the owners had effected a charter for her from Ilo Ilo to Boston, could not take up charters offered by Messrs. Pustau, although on better terms. Messrs. Pustau accordingly retained $1,000, alleging that sum to be due to them as commission, and on the matter coming before the Court, it was held there had been a breach of contract as alleged, and judgment was given in their favour.

The premises of Messrs. Lane, Crawford, and Co., at Yokohama, have been totally destroyed by fire. It appears to have originated in the adjoining premises, and both buildings were reduced to ashes before it could be subdued.

CANTON.

The Canton correspondent of the China Mail writes:—

The younger brother of the Tartar General at Canton has been recently promoted to be a Vice-President in the Board of War, and great has been the rejoicing in the General's household. Congratulations were pouring in from the General's admirers.

In spite of the stringent measures adopted by the Viceroy of Canton to put down gambling, it nevertheless prospers, and there have been until recently no less than some fifty establishments in existence. This was brought to the notice of the Viceroy, who at once issued an order to close them up, and caused a mark of great default to be recorded against the names of all the officials, civil and military, in whose jurisdiction the gambling houses existed.

An interesting suit as to rights of property is now going on in the Court of the Namhoi Magistrate at Canton. In the days of the Thirteen Factories there was such an institution as the "Congsoo," the Club of the Chinese Hong merchants. Since the destruction of the Factories, the site of the Congsoo has been converted into a landing-place, built by the inhabitants in the neighbourhood. The descendants of some of the Hong merchants now seek to build houses on the wharf, claiming the ground as theirs from hereditary right. The shopkeepers on the other hand contest that the ground has been dedicated to public use.

COCHIN CHINA.

SAIGON.

The Independant of the 15th January says:—

The recently elected Municipal Council has already met twice. We expect to publish the reports of these sittings, and to make some observations on the questions discussed in the bosom of that Assembly, but we have not yet been able to obtain from the Council the reports of which have not been returned by the Government. It is, in fact, one of those bizareries of the municipal organisation of Saigon, one of the proofs of the aristocratic spirit which has presided over its creation, that this necessity for submitting for the approval of the Director of the Interior, and of the Governor should exist.

An attack has been made by a number of Chinese on Mon. Theron and some workmen under him engaged near the Pagoda of Yiau-Chao. The assailants suddenly appeared in numbers, and set upon them with stones. The King of Cambodia has promised that the culprits shall be severely punished. The Independant, commenting on the recent news from home, observes that the Assembly at Paris is still devoting attention to Cochin China, and, in spite of the efforts of the Minister who urged that the Colony should not be saddled with fresh dues, the old charge of two millions of francs paid by Cochin China to the metropolis has been revived, and the expenses necessitated by the stay of the French in Tonquin have also been placed to her account. These two new charges are cast upon the Colony at a moment when business is so depressed as almost to compromise the whole of the European interests in Saigon, and also when the lowering of the rate of the piastre has diminished the resources of the local budget. One cannot help thinking, in seeing the Assembly taking measures which are so very inopportune, that it is a matter for considerable regret that Cochin China has not at least one representative in the Assembly to give to the legislators information in regard to the Colony, which is at present unknown to them.

JAVA.

BATAVIA.

The Straits Times translates from the Batavia newspapers the subjoined items of news:—

Batavia and Samarang have again been afflicted by heavy floods. In the interior also floods have taken place, so that bridges and roads between Samarang and Cheribon have suffered great damage. In the Campongs around Samarang the floods rose to a height of from 3½ to 4 feet. At this place (Batavia) the water came down during the evening of the 5th January, and in the evening of the next day at six o'clock it reached its highest point. The rivers Chiliwong and Krokot rose at the same time with a rapidity hitherto unknown, and overflowed their banks. At several places the water was 4½ feet deep in compounds and houses. The China Camp was relieved from the pressure of the waters by the already completed portion of the Krokot Canal, but it suffered as greatly as on previous occasions, if not more so, owing to a dyke breaking down in several places and obstructing the action of the Canal in a great measure. The flood rose twenty-five inches higher than in the previous year, and ten inches more than it did during the great inundation of 1872. Many native houses have been destroyed, and the damage done is very great. The loss of three human lives, those of two Europeans and a Chinaman, had to be lamented. A soldier who was at first considered to be drowned returned afterwards to the barracks. A commission has been appointed to ascertain the losses suffered. Traffic on the railway has been somewhat interrupted, and that on the tramway was wholly stopped for a couple of days.

On the 5th Jan. an American vessel named the Gentoo, laden with petroleum, from New York, struck upon, and became fixed, on Neptuners Sandbank. From the look out station she could be plainly discerned. The crew at first would not leave her. The steamer Prins Alexander, of the N. I. S. N. Company, by means of prahus, took away from her 14,000 cases of petroleum. The ship and whatever cargo may still be on board of her are to be sold by public auction. Communication with the roadstead here has been interrupted for several days and, owing to the foul weather, several prahus have been stranded.

Official reports from Atchin represent the state of matters in Simpang Olim as very satisfactory. The headmen there had declared their readiness to elect another Rajah on condition that he should not forthwith repair to Kotta Rajah, and have brought forward one of themselves as candidate. This subject was still under consideration. The murdered Rajah of Passi is also praised, and is termed a true friend of the Netherlands Government. A Passier who murdered him received for the crime $1,000, or $3,000, according to some. The Government has announced that on the 7th Jan. the blockade of Simpan Olim, East Coast of Atchin, was raised.

The Padang Handelsblad speaks of rumours relating to a commencement of discontent amongst the natives of the East of the Sumatran mountains, and concerning an uneasy feeling that had arisen at Padang regarding the Governor, who had been away in the interior for some time.

An embassy from Siam had arrived at Batavia to study railroad construction in Java, with an eye to railway plans for Siam.

The new postal convention with the Straits Settlements has come into operation.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 25th January; the French mail from London Dec. 15th was received on the 15th January, and the following P. and O. mail of Dec. 22 arrived out on the 23rd January. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times:—

Notwithstanding the fact that it was announced that the sentence of death passed upon Maharajah Lela, Datu Sagor and Pandak Indut, the chiefs who were found guilty of having been implicated in the murder of Mr. Birch, and which the Secretary of State advised should not be commuted, was to have been carried out on the 13th Jan., we are without information up to this date whether the execution has taken place or not. An anxiety is felt for information upon the subject, owing to the fact that news reached us that a difficulty arose in obtaining in time the necessary signature to the death warrants of the Rajah Muda, that functionary having, from design or indifference, left on a journey some distance from Qualla Kangsa, and fears were entertained that there was no possibility of being able to reach him in time to have the execution carried out on the day fixed. The neglect in the instance may not have been the fault of the Government, though it savours of an indifference upon their part, which we think might have been avoided, and the unnecessary cruelty to the chiefs, implied in the delay, is an agony inflicted which is not consonant with that consideration to the feelings of the condemned which the system of the British laws encourages.

Nothing has transpired regarding the measures which are proposed to be taken in reference to Sultan Abdullah, who is accused of complicity in the same crime. It is unaccountable why the matter should be cloaked in so much mystery, unless the Government wish to astonish us with another grand coup, which in point of wisdom may surpass the late "treaty" which they encouraged and patronised among the chiefs of the nine States. In the event of negotiations in the case of Sultan Abdullah resulting in his dethronement or abdication, the Government will have to consider a very important matter, namely, who is to be his successor as the ruler of Perak, and we hope in doing so they will not be led into too much faith in the friendship which Yusuf, the Rajah Muda, professes to have for our administration, or belief in the sincerity of his actions in our behalf, and forget the character which that chief is credited with by the Malays. That he is cruel to a savage degree is undeniable; that a former ruler, obeying the wishes of the people, refused to appoint him Rajah Muda, is historical; and that unless he is considerably improved he would make an unpopular monarch is admitted by all who are judges, and have had experience of the Malay character. It would be well if the Government would weigh these considerations and avoid an embarrassment, like the previous one, in its process of king-making in Perak.

A notable instance of official apathy in that most important particular, the administration of justice, has lately been shown in the conduct of a trial for homicide, not amounting to murder, heard at the Supreme Court. The accused was a sailor, a Norwegian, belonging to an American vessel, and the evidence given by his shipmates at the Police Court showed a strong case against him; but, in the meanwhile, though the prisoner was duly committed for trial, the witnesses were allowed to depart, and their depositions were, very properly, not permitted to be taken against the accused by the judge, and from insufficiency of evidence the prisoner was acquitted. An application to detain the witnesses, who had been bound over to prosecute by the police magistrate, ought certainly to have been made, and the authorities, who were severely censured by the Court, are blamable for the gross negligence displayed. The fact is, the Inspector-General of Police, who is an able officer, and the Police Magistrates have an overwhelming amount of work continually on their hands, and the prominent failure of justice in this instance is proof conclusive that the appointment of a public prosecutor, advocated some months ago by Mr. Read in the Legislative Council, is a public necessity, and the sooner the appointment is made the better for the interests of justice and for the security of life and property.

The Malacca Land Act, which was lately passed by the Legislative Council, is still the subject of much comment in Malacca, and reflection upon its terms has not tended to allay the feelings of dissatisfaction with which it was at first received. The impecuniosity which the colony has had to contend against for some time past, owing to the liberal advances which from time to time have been made from its funds to the native States, is proposed to be temporarily relieved by raising a loan, either here or in the London market. In the meantime the public should be placed in information as quickly as possible, by means of the publication of the annual reports, of the various details of expenditure for the past year.

The troopship Orontes, bringing two companies of the 74th Highlanders, arrived here since the date of our last summary, and she will leave for Mauritius and the Cape with the 10th and a portion of the 80th Regiments in a few days. The gallant 10th, now leaving us, have been associated with this Colony for some years. Taking a prominent part in the Perak campaign, they distinguished themselves in an eminent manner, while from a social point of view they have forcibly exemplified how well the bravest warriors may contribute their share to those genial gatherings and re-unions which tend to make a tropical life enjoyable. We heartily wish our gallant friends God-speed and a pleasant voyage, and we hope their repatriation after twelve years of foreign service will have all its desired effects.

We understand nothing has yet been heard of the missing boat and crew of the Eastern Isles, which, consisting of the chief officer and six men, were sent to Reding to procure fuel. The steamer, on her passage from Bangkok to Singapore, ran short of coals, and these men were despatched to procure wood, but never returned, and after waiting many hours the vessel proceeded as she could without them, tearing up planking, &c., for fuel, and at last reaching here considerably after date. This occurred fully a month ago, and the facts have been kept remarkably quiet, and we have not heard of any attempts having been made in the way of search for the missing men.

There was a case of small-pox on board the Kashgar, the homeward bound P. and O. boat from Hong Kong. We heard nothing of the vessel being placed in quarantine, but inconvenient as such a step might have been, no consideration but that of duty should prevail with the harbour and health authorities, if the quarantine law and regulations be not a farce, and the maintenance of a lazarette a waste of money. The patient, who was in the first instance attended by Dr. Bentley, on behalf of the P. and O. Company, was handed over to the care of the principal civil medical officer, and is now in an empty house in Passir Panjang-road.

The Colonial steamer Pluto has brought from Laroot the four convicts whose sentences of death have been commuted to penal servitude for life, and two others, under a guard composed of a company of the 80th Regiment.

Colonel William Kelty McLeod, Commanding the 74th Highlanders, having arrived in the Colony, has assumed the duties of Commandant, Straits Settlements.

His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to appoint Mr. William Edward Maxwell to be Acting Assistant Colonial Secretary and Clerk of Councils, in place of Mr. Arthur Knight, who has been granted leave of absence to proceed to Europe.

PENANG.

The Penang Gazette of 25th January announces the execution of the three Perak chiefs under sentence of death for the late Mr. Birch's murder took place on the 20th Jan. at Laroot. Lela and Pandut Indut died without incident; but not so with Datu Sagor. As the drop fell he got his hand out of the handcuff and he caught hold of the rope. The movement was, it is supposed, merely the result of muscular action as his neck was evidently broken by the fall, and his hand, when detached, dropped by his side. As we are going to press we learn that the other four prifoners whose sentences, have been commuted, are in the civil prison at Singapore, pending disposal. The Straits Government are in communicatior with the Home authorities, and has commended what should be done with them, as well as with Abdullah and Ismail, and hourly expect instructions by wire.

The new wharf has been completed, and vessels can now discharge and land in a couple of days, in place of weeks in the roads.

Market Reports.

IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—The market had experienced some improvement, and a fair business had been transacted in Yarns at an advance, though prices since the New Year holidays were somewhat weaker. Shirtings continued very depressed, and it was almost impossible to effect sales of any qualities, more especially of the lower makes. Indigo Shirtings, Cotton Italians, and Black Velvets had met with more inquiry, but Turkey Reds were quite nominal. In Woollens Mousselines had recovered somewhat from the previous depression, but the market closed rather weaker; Italian Cloth was fairly saleable, as were also Blankets. The slightly improved tone noted in last report had not led to any business in Metals; holders of good brands of Nail Rod Iron refused the low offers made, and dealers had confined their purchases to low class Iron imported by Chinese from Hong Kong.

CHEFOO.—Messrs. Cornabé and Co.'s Report says:—Cotton Goods: Owing to the scarcity of Sycee there has been but little business transacted, and as the roads have all been blocked up by a heavy fall of snow we can scarcely expect to see much demand for Cotton fabrics of any kind for some little time. Metals: Stocks of Iron are very light, and values are tending upwards; Lead is not enquired after.

SHANGHAI.—Business during the week had been conducted on a much smaller scale, dealers had been less willing to go on buying "for cash," in advance of probable wants, and on the other hand many importers were asking higher prices, owing to improved advices from Manchester.

HONG KONG.—The market had been almost closed during the fortnight, and the few sales effected had been made at a concession upon the prices previously ruling.

CANTON.—Prices for Lead declined slightly after date of last report, but had again become higher. Very few sales had been effected. Closing quotations were L.B., $8.80 to $8.85; Hole Chop and W.B., $8.85 to $8.90 per picul, at which rates holders were firm. Quicksilver had fallen from $1 to $1.50, closing quotations being $70 to $70.50 per picul.

MANILA.—Messrs. Smith, Bell, and Co.'s Circular says:—On the departure of last mail our Piece Goods market became more lively, and a fair amount of business has been reported at slightly firmer rates. Stocks of Plain Staples show a very considerable decrease on those held at end of December, 1875, and should prices keep up at home, we may look for improved rates here. Sales of Plain Staples for the past year show a marked increase on those of the previous year.

SINGAPORE.—The business done in Cotton Goods in the fortnight had been small, the sale of T-Cloths and White Shirtings showed an increase on the previous interval; values in some instances had slightly advanced, but importers had found it difficult to obtain higher rates in accord with the rise on the Home markets. Business had been affected by the firmness of holders, and by the near approach of the Chinese holidays.

PENANG.—During the fortnight the market had remained quiet. Holders were not pressing sales, and prices generally were unaltered.

EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—At the close of the year, the market showed some slight amount of activity, which fell off during the New Year holidays; on resumption of business transactions to a fair amount were reported, making settlements for the fortnight, about 4,500 piculs. Prices were unaltered, and arrivals being on a moderate scale, the stocks were small.

SHANGHAI.—Black: The week's business had been small, considering the large stock. Settlements had been 2,200 chests. A string of Oopacks comprised more than half of the business, though these kinds hardly showed as good value as the Oanfas settled about a fortnight before. Green.—A very moderate business had been done during the week, settlements being within 4,000 half-chests. With the very large stock on offer and the near approach of the China New Year Teamen were beginning to show signs of weakness, though they would not entertain anything like the equivalent of present London or New York rates. A few chops continued to be settled at prices showing, perhaps, some slight reduction, but still unnecessarily high. Of the 88,000 half-chests in stock, fully 75,000 were country teas, and among these are some "fine" chops, which a very little demand would suffice to clear off. There had been some inquiry for Common teas, and two or three chops had been settled. The export figures to date were favourable, showing a decrease of one and a half millions on last year's. Arrivals had reached 412,000 half-chests, but there was very little left to come.

FOOCHOW.—Messrs. Westall, Galton and Co.'s Letter says:—During the week a fair business has been passing on this market. Congou: Prices do not show any material alteration. The supply up-country is now said to be exhausted. The 2,000 chests placed on the market during the past week, were of very low and undesirable description. Sonchong, Oolong, and Flowery Pekoe: No transactions. Scented Teas: No stock.

AMOY.—Owing to the anxiety of native holders to realise before the Chinese New Year, but little leaf remained in stock, and the season was regarded as almost over. Of Formosa Oolongs, 27,600 packages had been settled principally at $26.50 to $39; choice leaf, however, ranging as high as $40 to $44. Of Amoy Oolongs, settlements comprised 771 packages, leaving about 2,800 half-chests in stock. Settlements were reported of 8,000 packages Amoy Congous, of which, 6,000 half-chests were taken at an average of $15.50. About 14,500 remained in stock, for which holders were asking an advance of from $1 to $2.

CANTON.—Messrs. Deacon and Co.'s Report says:—Our Tea market has been very quiet during the fortnight, and very trifling transactions are recorded. Congous: There have been no settlements on this market; but from Macao a fair amount of shipments have gone forward. Scented Teas: There has been little disposition on the part of buyers to enter into any operations, and teamen have not yet offered any inducement by reducing their prices. Capers of common grade are the only teas that have attracted attention, and a few settlements have resulted at former rates; the bulk of the remaining stock consists of better grades, though poorly scented, and teamen are holding out for prices which are far above the ideas of foreigners. A small settlement of Pekoe is reported at about former rates; stocks are now very small. Canton Greens: The purchase of 100 boxes of Imperial is the only business reported. The following is a summary of the fortnight's business:—Scented Caper, 1,700 boxes at Tls. 15¾ to 16½ per picul; Scented Orange Pekoe, 200 boxes at Tls. 25 to 27 per picul; Imperial, 100 boxes at Tls. 18 per picul.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—There had been considerable disposition to operate, and prices had advanced some $30 per picul, for the finest descriptions. The fluctuations in exchange had again much interfered with, and limited the business done. Arrivals had fallen off, and the Stock showed a further reduction, being estimated at 2,000 bales against 1,100 bales last season. Settlements 1st July to date, 18,800 bales against 10,000 bales in corresponding period last season; and 7,200 bales in 1874-75. Total export 1st July to date, 18,579 bales against 9,635 bales.

SHANGHAI.—The North China Herald Report says:—The French mail of the 5th Jan. took 833 bales of silk for Europe, the purchases including market Tsatlees at Tls. 480 to Tls. 520, and 250 bales of Re-reels, commencing at Tls. 500 per picul for common. Business this week has been confined to within 1,000 bales, and includes Koofongsing's chop No. 3 Tsatlee at Tls. 607½; Beautiful Woman No. 2 at Tls. 542½; "Mayfong" Elephant at Tls. 540; Gold Stork at Tls. 522½; "Sa-ling" at Tls. 510; fair No. 5 Tsatlee at Tls. 500; some shipments of Hainings, Hangchows, and Yellow silks on native account; and nearly 150 bales of re-reels purchased at Tls. 490 to Tls. 525 per picul. Natives returning from up-country report the stock of Tsatlee silk almost exhausted, and although it is impossible to determine for certain how much remains unsold on this market, it appears safe to calculate on within 5,000 bales. Coarse silks generally, both by mail and wire, are not wanted in London or Lyons, and it is difficult to hazard what the ultimate destination will be of the large quantity held by the silkmen. Some are willing to part at a very reasonable margin on nominal home values, and others talk of being able to hold over a portion until the new season commences. Quite 1,000 bales of coarse and yellow silks have been returned inland, and it is necessary, therefore, to deduct that amount from my figures of "total receipts." Within 300 bales have arrived during the past fortnight, and this will, in consequence, reduce the receipts to 80,700, and the unsold stock to 18,500 bales. Re-reels have been in good demand from their comparative cheapness.

CANTON.—Messrs. Deacon & Co.'s Circular says:—The demand for this article has been of a very limited nature, and a tone of apathy has pervaded the market. The only purchases to record are 110 bales Tsatlee reel. No. 4 quality has not been dealt in, but good "Kowkong" of that class is now nominally quoted worth $450 per picul. The season is approaching a termination, and only a trifling business can be done during the coming three months. Of Long-reels 30 piculs of common descriptions have been bought for shipment to Bombay. Re-reels have attracted less attention than during the previous fortnight, and prices have declined about $20 per picul for most sorts Settlements are said to be 280 boxes. Stock is computed at 1,000 bales Tsatlee, 100 bales Cumchuck and Lucklow, 50 bales Kowkong, and about 200 bales of inferior kinds.

Hamburg, Feb. 22.

A new "modus" of forwarding the London morning post to Germany will probably take place during this or the next month. Letters and newspapers forwarded from London by the first train have reached Hamburg the second day in the afternoon, and thus made it impossible to be answered in time, still the same day, because being distributed too late for the commercial public, as the greater part of the offices are already shut up at the time of reception. The Imperial Post-office now advertises the public that in consequence of measures newly taken, the correspondence from London leaving for this town with the first morning train will in future be to hand early enough, as to be distributed at two o'clock the next day. Therefore not only a thorough inspection of it but also a speedy answering will be possible, and the profit for London correspondents will be the same as for our Hamburg commercial people.

I wrote to you in one of my former letters about the endeavourings of some of the shareholders of the Anglo-Deutsche Bank concerning the winding up of this establishment. The board did not not concede with this intention at first, but the mentioned shareholders having pursued their way in a legal manner, the directors of the Anglo-Deutsche Bank now declare by advertisement their intenton to summon the shareholders for an extraordinary meeting, after the ordinary—to take place on the 26th of this month—in order to debate the wished winding-up, thus saving the assets still in hand.

The Norddeusshe Bank has called its shareholders for the 24th of this month.

HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE—EXCHEQUER DIVISION.

STEWART AND OTHERS V. HYDE AND OTHERS.

This was an action brought to recover a sum of £966 for goods bought and supplied by the plaintiffs to the defendants. It was alleged on behalf of the defendants that they were not liable to pay for the goods, inasmuch as they had been ordered upon the sole credit of a third person. The plaintiffs were merchants and commission agents, carrying on business at Manchester, and the defendants were merchants at Shanghai. In June, 1873, some conversation and correspondence took place between the plaintiffs, defendants, and a third person as to future arrangements for business. Considerable quantities of goods were forwarded out to Shanghai for the defendants, and sums of money in respect of them were sent by the defendants to the third person in England. The latter person subsequently to the last consignment being forwarded stopped payment, and the action was brought to recover payment in respect of those goods, which, with certain additions and deductions, amounted to £966. It was contended on behalf of the plaintiffs, that, especially by the letters of the third person, and also of the parties themselves, the goods had been purchased and sold to the defendants and the third person upon a joint venture, and that upon the failure of the latter person the former became liable. The defendants denied that any such arrangement had existed, and denied their liability, attributing the whole credit by the plaintiffs for the goods to the third person, and not to themselves.

The jury returned a verdict for the defendants, and the Lord Chief Baron remarked that he fully concurred in the verdict, as he considered throughout the trial that the whole truth, justice, and law of the case really lay with the defendants. His Lordship then gave judgment for the defendants, and allowed the plaintiffs a fortnight to move for a new trial.

Naval and Military.

The subjoined appointments of naval officers to the China Station are gazetted:—

Commander.—A. A. Chase Parr (recently promoted from the Alert for service with the Arctic expedition), to the Audacious, flagship of Vice-Admiral Ryder. Lieutenant—Edward J. P. Wade re-appointed to the Modeste, the appointment of Lieutenant John P. Pipon having been cancelled. Chief Engineer—John Boswell, to the Modeste. Midshipmen—Houston S. J. Phillips, Richard H. Peirse, C. H. T. Gimlett, of the Minotaur, and Edgar St. G. Silver, to the Charybdis. Naval Cadet—E. C. Greenway, to the Charybdis.

H.M.S. Ringdove arrived at Malta on the 19th inst. from China.

Captain B. W. Bax, of the Sylvia, and Commander R. H. Napier, of the Nassau, will retain their commands on their ships being recommissioned on the China Station.

Detachments of Royal Marines are under orders for embarkation in H.M.S. Tamar for passage to H.M.'s ships Charybdis, Hart, Modeste, Sylvia, and Nassau, on the China Station.

Captain W. A. Eardley-Wilmot, 5th Fusiliers, proceeds out to Ceylon as brigade-major, to relieve Captain W. P. Mortimer, 11th Regiment.

The Journal Officiel of the 17th inst. announces that by a decree dated the 28th of December last the President of the Republic has awarded a gold medal to Colonel Gordon Caulfield, of the English (Bengal) Army, for having saved a child from drowning in the port of Boulogne on the 11th of September, 1876. On the day mentioned a boy about twelve years of age was fishing on a flight of steps of the Western pier, when the swell caused by the paddle of a steamer arriving from Folkestone swept the boy off his feet and carried him some distance from the steps. A line was thrown, which the boy failed to catch, and he had already sunk twice when Colonel Caulfield, who was taking his daily walk, arrived, saw how matters stood, and, without a moment's hesitation, plunged in with all his clothes, seized the boy as he was sinking for the third time, and brought him to land. Having handed the boy to persons on the pier, the Colonel, to quote the words of a Frenchman who witnessed the affair, "shook himself like a Newfoundland dog and walked home." In half an hour the gallant Colonel, over whose head some sixty summers have passed without leaving much trace, had quietly resumed his constitutional walk on the pier

A significant letter appears in The Times as to the Admiralty extravagance in naval repairs. Mr. Watt writes from Liverpool under date of the 15th inst. stating that on the previous day a paragraph appeared in The Times that the Admiralty paddle yacht Enchantress is to be repaired at the estimated cost of hull alone of £21,000, and pointing out that an iron vessel of the same dimensions and power could be built for £30,000, and that there are dozens of our best shipbuilders who would be glad of the job. In the same journal the following announcement has subsequently been made:—"The Admiralty have given orders to the authorities at Portsmouth Dockyard to repair the yacht Enchantress, in which their lordships annually pay visits of inspection to the different yards. The approved estimate for repair of this yacht is £25,000, and as she cost £45,000 when new, about fifteen years since, and has had large sums expended on her repairs from time to time, much comment has been caused at Portsmouth by this proposed extravagant outlay. She is ordered to be ready for their lordships by the second week in August."

The state of recruiting, says The Times, is such as to justify the authorities not only in raising the standard of artillery gunners, but in reducing the maximum limit of age to twenty-five years, and stopping recruiting for the Engineers and most of the regiments of cavalry of the line. During the months of November and December nearly 8,000 recruits joined the service, making a total of over 29,000 in the course of the year. The army was altogether about 6,000 in excess of its strength at the close of 1875, and in comparison with its establishment may be said to have been complete. The cavalry, which through the early part of 1876 had been above its allotted numbers, remained so to the close; the artillery, which had been somewhat wanting in recruits, attained its full strength. Two out of three regiments of the Guards were in excess of their numbers, while the third, the Scots Fusilier Guards, greatly reduced the deficiency in its ranks. In fact, the only branch in which a comparatively few men were wanting was in the infantry of the line—strange to say.

The funeral of Captain Hugh Campbell, R.N., late commander of Her Majesty's yacht Victoria and Albert, took place at Hampton on the 19th inst. Colonel du Platt attended as representative of Her Majesty, who sent a beautiful wreath, which was placed with others upon the coffin. Eighteen men from the Royal yacht bore the coffin to the grave. Among those who attended were Prince Leiningen, Count Gleichen, Lord Charles Beresford, Admiral Sir John Commerell, and Captains Fullerton and Sullivan.

An inquiry into the action taken by the captain of Her Majesty's ship Barracouta in the disturbances at Samoa, which resulted in some of her crew being killed, has been held at Portsmouth. Captains Herbert (of the Excellent) and Wilson (of the Thunderer), and Commander Pearson (of the Royal yacht Osborne), assisted by the Deputy Judge Advocate of the Fleet, have been selected by the Admiralty to conduct this inquiry.

Lieutenant P. H. B. Salisbury, 1st Royal Cheshire Militia, has received from the Servian War Minister, by order of Prince Milan, the gold cross of Takova, and the gold medal for distinguished bravery in the field. Mr. Salisbury served as a volunteer on the staff, and acted as aide-de-camp to General Dochteroff during a considerable part of the late campaign.

When the Navy Estimates are discussed in Parliament it is the intention of Dr. Cameron, M.P., to call attention to the unbusinesslike manner in which the arrangements for the raising of Her Majesty's Vanguard have been conducted by the Admiralty, and he will move a formal resolution on the subject.

It is announced that a committee, consisting of the Deputy Adjutant-General of Royal Marines; Mr. James, of the naval branch, Admiralty; and Mr. Welby, of the Treasury, has been appointed to examine and report upon the question of improving the position of the officers of the Royal Marines.

It is stated that, in order to induce seamen to remain in the navy after their first term of service has expired, it is intended to provide in the navy estimates for an increased rate of pay to be granted to all men who volunteer to re-engage for a second term of service.

It is feared that during the storm on the 19th inst. three artillerymen, stationed at Drake's Island, off Plymouth, were drowned. They put off from the shore in an open boat, and nothing has since been seen of them.

Captain W. T. Dooner, 108th Regiment, succeeds Captain G. J. Gilbard, 71st Highlanders, as Brigade-Major at Gibraltar. Captain Dooner served with distinction in the Ashantee campaign.

It is reported that the result of the committee, which has been sitting at the War-office is likely to be the compulsory retirement of all general officers on attaining the age of sixty-five years.

The aide-de-campship to the Queen vacated by the death of Captain R. B. Oldfield has been conferred on Captain Edward Hardinge (1863), commanding the Harwich Coastguard district.

The chaplaincy of the Tower of London has been conferred upon the Rev. E. J. Rogers, M.A., who has been for some time past chaplain to the Royal Military Asylum, Sandhurst.

The Chatham Dockyard Branch Railway was opened for traffic on the 16th inst., and a service of goods trains will now run daily between the dockyard and Chatham Station.

Captain Henry B. Woollcombe (1866) will commission the Temeraire. Captain Woollcombe's last ship was the Thalia, on the China station.

The Alert, Arctic discovery-ship, has arrived at Sheerness from Portsmouth, to be converted into a surveying-vessel.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE COMMITTEE.

The election of the second half of the Stock Exchange Committee has been held. All the old members who allowed themselves to be re-nominated have been again returned except one, and there are, therefore, ten old and three new members successful. This gives, seven new members out of a total Committee of thirty as the result of the recent agitation. Although this seems a small result, it would appear that the young men in the Stock-Exchange have so far made their wishes felt that some revision of the rules may possibly be undertaken. The following are the names in priority according to the number of votes given to each:—Messrs. L. Harrison, I. N. Scott, P. Spurling, J. H. Daniell, G. D. Gibbes, A. Wark, W. R. Hardy, H. R. Pine, M. Flower, N. Wilkinson, T. P. Hilder, J. P. Trew, and S. Underhill. Messrs. Hilder and Trew are entirely new members. Mr. M. Flower, who through a long series of years was a member, and during some space of time was chairman of Committee, has been re-elected by a considerable majority of votes. Due testimony is thereby rendered to the work of a man whose untarnished reputation and whose long experience alike constitute a title to the respect and to the confidence of his constituents. The incident to which the resignation of the late Committee is due has a certain interest for the public, and, with other matters cognate to the Stock-Exchange, has been the subject of discussion. The change in the composition of the Governing Body having been effected, we may briefly refer to its constitution and to the causes which have led to the cry for better government, first raised outside, and at length taken up and acted upon within the Stock-Exchange. The building belongs to joint-stock proprietors, whose delegates, charged with its maintenance and repairs, are called the "Managers" of the Stock-Exchange. By them the rates of subscription paid by its members are received, the surplus income being distributed among the proprietors as a dividend upon their capital outlay. The Committee of the Stock Exchange—an independent body, elected annually on the 25th of March by the members of the Stock Exchange—make regulations for the government of members, and for the order of settlements and quotations; also taking cognisance of and adjudicating upon all disputes among members. Elections to the Committee were formerly made without any formality precedent to the ballot, so that a candidate might be started, and run in by a powerful clique at the last moment. By the deed of settlement recently adopted by the Joint-Stock proprietors this is no longer the case. Candidates must be proposed, and seconded some days prior to an election, and their names, with those of their proposers and seconders, publicly exhibited within the Stock Exchange. Under the old system every member was on the alert on the day of election; under the newer system, the interest felt is chiefly prior to the nomination, and it is only on the occasion of contested elections that any great degree of activity is to be looked for. The duties of the Committee are heavy. The distinction attaching to the office of committee-man is the only reward of those who accept the post, which is unpaid. The functions of the Committee and its control of the members are well illustrated in the incident where, acting in the ordinary course of their duty, they came to a decision, justified in their judgment by the evidence brought forward. The Committee ordered a supplementary addition to the price of the shares sold, which thereby was brought up to their ascertained market value at the time of sale, censuring the dealer, who had not sufficiently acquainted himself with that market value, and censuring also the selling broker who had participated in that neglect. Some members of the Committee were opposed to the decision taken, on the ground that a buyer and a seller are compelled to come to an agreement as to price, and that their bargain is a matter of concern to themselves only. An opinion was, however, expressed that transactions outside a certain range of price, known as the "market value," of any stock or shares should not be admitted. There was, further, some disposition to press for a heavy penalty in the case in question. One member of the Committee resigned upon this point. At an election held to fill the vacancy, the member who had resigned was returned by so large a majority that the Committee, looking upon the result as a want of confidence, resigned. In addition to the agitation upon this question, other causes have been for some time past operating within the Stock Exchange, where, owing to the great augmentation in the number of its members during late years, a certain restlessness and spirit of change have manifested themselves. The investigations of the Foreign Loan Committee, with the revelations of the manner in which schemes were worked to the detriment of the public, have been the subject of very serious discussion. There is a sense of injury to the character of its members, who urge that, with a few exceptions, they were as ignorant as the public itself of the plots laid, though in the working of them the Stock Exchange had been made use of.

FACILITIES FOR THE INVASION OF ENGLAND.

At the Royal United Service Institution on the 16th inst., General Sir W. Codrington presiding, Major-General T. B. Collinson, R.E., delivered the second part of a lecture on the present facilities for the invasion of England and the defence thereof. He pointed out the new elements of danger to our island fortress which have arisen in the course of the last generation, and urged that no defences exist at present in Chatham or London worth mentioning. "There are," he added, "batteries to defend the access to the Thames and Medway, but on the land side Chatham is at present virtually defenceless. It offers now to the enemy the attraction of a harbour and arsenal for his operations, and an opportunity of destroying one of our newest and finest dockyards, and our only one on the North Sea; almost worth an expedition in itself. The Royal Commission of 1860 proposed to make a great strategic fortress of it, by connecting it with the Thames, and thus ensuring a communication between the north and south, and on the flank of an enemy advancing on London. But that war fever died out with Lord Palmerston, and a peaceful chill set in, under which that, among other defensive measures of the Commission, sank to rest. Some day we shall awake again, and then not only the defence of Chatham, but of London, will be the question. For a strategic fortress at Chatham would not ensure London; the British field army, if defeated between the coast and London, could not retreat to Chatham, and the garrison of that place could not be reinforced with numbers and quality enough to enable them to leave their defences. And if our field army occupied Chatham in the first instance it would enable the invader to enter London with a comparatively small force, watching Chatham with his main body, and so give him the advantage of fighting the decisive battle, with the prestige of having sacked the metropolis and destroyed Woolwich Arsenal, and with the material guarantee of the Lord Mayor and Corporation in his camp. I don't doubt but they would be ready to sacrifice themselves for their country, but I presume, if the alternative was presented to them beforehand, they would prefer spending a few millions in preventing the enemy from entering London at all, except at a great loss and greater risk. A strategic position on the west of London, corresponding in some measure to Chatham on the east, might produce this effect, as the field army if defeated might retire behind it; but that would not save Woolwich Arsenal, and when such immense interests, both material and moral, are concerned, it would be indeed penny wise and pound foolish to hesitate on the score of such expense as is involved to make the metropolis and the arsenal secure."

OUR EXTRADITION TREATY WITH AMERICA.

Official correspondence respecting the Extradition Treaty with the United States has been laid before Parliament. Mr. Fish stated to Sir E. Thornton, on the 22nd of last June, that he considered the Treaty had been abrogated by the act of Great Britain in refusing to deliver up three fugitives, with regard to whom all the requirements of the Treaty had been performed by the United States. He argued that it would be quite sufficient that each country should engage that no surrendered criminal should be tried for a political crime. It might not be well to make such a stipulation with some other nations; but no harm could come of it between Great Britain and the United States, whose laws and feelings on the subject were so much alike. The impression left upon the mind of Sir E. Thornton by this conversation was that the United States really desired to make a new Treaty. Lord Derby accordingly, on July 15, wrote to Mr. Pierrepont, the United States Minister in London, proposing that negotiations should be undertaken with that object. Mr. Pierrepont, being without instructions, did not feel authorised, however, to enter upon such negotiations. Some explanations respecting the case of Lawrence having been given by Mr. Fish, correcting an error of fact into which Lord Derby had fallen, his Lordship on October 14 proposed as a temporary measure, until a new Extradition Treaty could be concluded, to put in force again the Treaty of 1842, without asking for any engagement that surrendered persons should not be tried for other than the offence for which extradition had been demanded. The United States Government on its side, the forger Brent having in the interim been given up, announced on December 25 that it would also again put in force the Treaty. It had previously announced that on the surrender of Brent it would be ready to enter upon the negotiations for a new Treaty.

THE GEOLOGICAL SOCIETY.

The anniversary meeting of the Fellows and members of this Society was held on the 16th inst., at Burlington House, Piccadilly; Dr. Duncan, the president, occupying the chair. The Secretary read the annual report of the Society, which congratulated the members on the success attending their efforts during the year. The total number of Fellows now, including foreign members, &c., was 1,350 at the end of 1875, and 1,377 at the end of last year. The Society was financially in a very satisfactory condition. The total receipts for the year were £2,799 4s. 8d., total expenditure £2,681 18s. 10d., showing an excess of income over expenditure of £117 15s. 10d. Dr. Bardell had left £500 to be devoted to the advancement of science. The Society had awarded the Woollaston Medal to Robert Murray, C.E., in recognition of his long and important labours in investigating the phenomena of earthquakes and volcanoes; the institution medal, with ten guineas, to the Rev. W. B. Clarke of Sydney, New South Wales, for labours in surveying and describing the lower strata of the Geology of Australia. The Lyall medal, with twenty guineas, to James Hector, F.R.S., and the Bigsby medal to M. O. C. Marsh, both for labours in connection with the science of geology. Professor Hughes moved, and Mr. Newton seconded, the adoption of the report, which was agreed to unanimously. The various prize-takers were then called up, and the prizes handed to them by the President, with a short and appropriate address. Each recipient responded, and after the transaction of some other business the meeting terminated.

THE OFFICIAL RESIDENCE OF THE PRIME MINISTER.

The principal Reception-room of the Prime Minister in Downing-street has—says the Athenæum—been suitably decorated and furnished. The state of squalor into which the residence has been allowed to fall is a disgrace to the country; and it is altogether incredible that a succession of Prime Ministers should have so long tolerated such a reception-room as this was before its transformation with its whitewashed ceiling and "flowery pattern" paper and carpet and inevitable graining, and calendered chintzes covering rickety slop furniture—and public-house lights and spittoons. All this is changed now. The old dismal and dirty rubbish has been swept away, and in its place have been substituted decorations and furniture which are at once consistent, and harmonious, and scholarly throughout. The panelled walls have been painted of a deaded creamy white, with rich silken stuff hung in the larger panels, while in the smaller several most interesting historical portraits have been introduced, the panels forming a frame, in perfect harmony with the architectural features of the room, round each picture. These portraits are of Sir Robert Walpole, in the place of honour, over the mantel-piece; Sir John Lowther, the first Commissioner of the Treasury, 1690; the Earl of Godolphin; Henry Booth, Lord Delamere, 1690 (the Earl of Warrington?—Chancellor of the Exchequer to William the Third); Richard Watson, first Earl of Portland; and the Right Hon. Spencer Perceval. The floor is of parquet, on which is laid a Persian carpet, of Teheran, forming a good base for the furniture, which is all of a light and easily moved kind.

THE CATTLE PLAGUE.

Fresh outbreaks of rinderpest are announced; and that scourge on the present occasion threatens to follow the same desolating course which it took when it visited this country eleven years ago. In 1865 the cattle plague first indicated its presence in England by attacking a dairy in Barnsbury. It soon spread in various counties, many of them apparently isolated from each other as regards cattle traffic, and fell with extreme severity upon Cheshire, Lancashire and Yorkshire.

Despite the diligence of Mr. Forster, then Vice-President of the Privy Council Department, in the slaughter of diseased animals, the stringent prohibition of cattle on foot along public roads, and the quarantine imposed on foreign stock, the landing of which was restricted for a time to certain ports, official returns show that during the twelve months from June, 1865, to June, 1866, 248,965 beasts were attacked, 80,597 were killed, 124,187 died, and only 32,989 recovered. Probably the extensive opportunities which this appalling havoc afforded scientific experts, Government officials, and graziers in dealing with the plague at that period have not been thrown away, and that we may now succeed not only in confining the disease within a narrow area, but in promptly stamping it out. The plague has again made its appearance within the last fortnight in London, on a dairy farm in Hackney Wick, and since at Stratford, as well as in several parts of Essex and Yorkshire. An Order in Council has just been issued containing prohibitory directions respecting the sale, exhibition, and movement of cattle within the East Riding of Yorkshire and the boroughs of Beverley, Hedon, Kingston-upon-Hull, and York. In Hull the plague is of so menacing a character that the Town Council has deemed it necessary to close the cattle market, and animals brought to the weekly fat stock auction sales are not for the present permitted to be removed alive. The hardship inflicted on the commercial interests of the latter port by the regulations of the Privy Council is unquestionably severe; but in view of the momentous issues at stake we do not see that, as the Lord President stated to the Hull deputation who waited upon him, he can equitably make any exception in applying the rules laid down by Parliament for the guidance of his department. In Cheshire the Chief Constable has issued instructions for immediate slaughter in all cases of discovered infection, and for the isolation of any district in which symptoms of the plague may be detected. The magistrates of Bedfordshire have decided that no cattle whatsoever shall enter that county during the continuance of the epidemic, and have memorialised the Privy Council to enforce the slaughtering of all foreign cattle at the ports of disembarkation. A special Council meeting of the Royal Agricultural Society has also been held, at which rigorous methods for grappling with the disease were proposed; and from the agitation prevailing among those directly or indirectly interested in the cattle traffic may be inferred the gravity of the danger which is portended. The German Government has taken alarm at the progress which the pestience is making within its borders, and the transportation of cattle in Germany has of late been suspended in consequence.

PORTUGAL AND THE SLAVE TRADE.—A correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette writes as follows:—At a recent sitting of the Chamber of Deputies at Lisbon a certain Senhor Teixiera de Vasconcellos put a question to the Colonial Minister respecting the alleged encouragement of the slave-trade by the Portuguese authorities in Africa, and the charges of corruption so freely made by English travellers and missionaries against the Portuguese officials on the east and west coasts. The Minister, thus interrogated, replied that the accusations made by Captain Cameron in England, and by Lieutenant Young in addressing the Chamber of Commerce at Cape Town, were unfounded, and he concluded by recounting in eloquent terms the good that had been done by the Portuguese in Africa, adding that he would next day lay before the House evidence showing that the services rendered in the abolition of slavery were acknowledged by the British Government. I hope to see this evidence. It cannot fail to be of interest to thousands now under the impression that Portugal encourages the perpetuation of the slave-trade in Africa and that this is done by means of colonial officials who are reported to have little else to look to for the means of support. Right or wrong, there is a general belief that their chief occupation on a long line of coast and rivers both east and west is to shut out traders willing to promote a more legitimate trade in the interior. And a good deal has been heard of the Macao coolie-traffic, one of the worst forms of disguised slave-dealing, and there have been many indignant bursts of patriotic eloquence on this subject also in the Chamber of Deputies at Lisbon, utterly repudiating complicity with such evil doings.

THE "GREAT EASTERN."—The annual meeting of the Great Eastern Steamship Company has been held. The report stated that the Great Eastern was on the gridiron in the Milford Docks, and was undergoing repair, towards the cost of which the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company had paid £8,500. Several proposals had been received for the employment of the ship, but all the proposals necessitated a greater risk upon the company than the board felt justified in incurring. The accounts showed a balance to the credit of revenue account of £8,347, but the directors could not recommend the payment of a dividend until the ship was employed. The report was adopted, and it was resolved "That the directors be requested to obtain rough estimates with a view of providing the ship with boilers and engines of the most approved construction, and report to a future meeting of shareholders to be held at an early date, with a scheme for raising the necessary funds."

A MEETING to further the celebration of the 400th anniversary of the introduction of the art of printing into England, by William Caxton, was held on Saturday, under the presidency of Dean Stanley, at Westminster Abbey, and it was resolved that the appropriate form for the celebration to assume is that of a loan collection of the works of Caxton, and of other antiquities, appliances, &c., connected with the art; and that the offer by the company of the use of Stationers' Hall for the purpose be accepted. Amongst the speakers were Earl Stanhope, the American and Belgian Ministers, Lord Hatherley, the Rev. Dr. Stoughton, Sir Charles Reed, and Mr. Theodore Martin.

THE statistics of the grape harvest for 1876 show, as was expected from the ravages of the phylloxera and the late frosts of last year, a great diminution compared with those of 1875. The production of last year amounted to forty-three million hectolitres, against eighty-three million hectolitres, the amount registered in 1875—that is, a decrease of fifty per cent. If to these unfavourable returns are added the poor beetroot crop of last year, also fifty per cent. less than that of 1875, and the present silk crisis in Lyons, one might have expected (says a Paris correspondent) much greater suffering in France than there as yet appears to be.

EMIGRATION has commenced betwixt New York and New South Wales. On the 3rd inst. ninety-nine sailed, and another party will be sent out in a month. They go out under an arrangement with the Government of that colony. The agents of the colony, as soon as they published notification of their desire to forward emigrants, had a multitude of applications, and consequently could pick their people. The emigrants pay one-half of their passage money, the Colonial Government the balance, and the Government also promises to find them employment.

"WHAT WE ARE DOING IN CHINA."

A SOMEWHAT noticeable article—which is reproduced in another column—appears in the Pall Mall Gazette of the 22nd inst., under the above heading. It is remarkable at once for the intimate acquaintance which it displays with affairs in China, and the strong prejudice of which it gives evidence against the mercantile classes and against the missionaries. Its general tone, and its effect, if not its object, is to place in a prominent light the difficulties which have to be contended against in dealing with the officials in China, and the small amount of good which has as yet been accomplished by our intercourse with that country. In a word, it throws cold water upon Sir THOMAS WADE'S negotiations, and upon the Chinese Embassy just arrived in London. Starting with a quotation from one of the despatches of Sir THOMAS WADE in the last published China Blue-book, to the effect that the anti-foreign feeling is still very strong, the writer complains that the foreign Ministers have never united to carry out a dignified policy, and have always been pulling different ways, so that the Chinese have been able to hold their own, and to maintain their pretensions as being raised above all the other nations in the world. The writer goes on to say:—"Meanwhile, "the foreign merchants, in addition to flooding the coun- "try with loaded Manchester goods and opium, have suc- "ceeded by craft in saddling the Government with a rail- "way; and in the interior the Roman Catholic missionaries "are keeping the Mandarins in a chronic state of disquiet "by their assumption of the titles and paraphernalia of "office. What wonder, then, that the educated classes are "as violently anti-foreign as ever?" There is just enough of truth in the above statements to make them of the most dangerous character. The Government bought the railway alluded to entirely of its free will, and the "loading" of Manchester goods is a practice of questionable commercial morality, but certainly of no political importance. The opium grievance and the difficulties as to Catholic missionaries in the interior no doubt both exist; but they are old standing difficulties which it is impossible to get over entirely, and with regard to which foreign nations have certainly done their best to treat the Chinese as fairly and as considerately as is possible.

The curious part of the matter is that, notwithstanding this hard hitting at the opium trade and the missions—strongly suggestive, by the way, of the remark made by Prince KUNG to Sir RUTHERFORD ALCOCK to "take away "his opium and his missionaries"—the writer advocates the adoption of a very strong attitude in the present negotiations which he says are being made to "forego our full "demands for the murder of Mr. MARGARY, and to con- "done that crime for a few mercantile advantages." It is not to be denied that there is some danger of the negotiations resulting in this manner; and we were among the first to sound a note of warning against this contingency; but it is clearly going too far to say such is the actual fact, before the full account of the negotiations is published, and before we are in possession of Sir THOMAS WADE'S explanations with regard to them. We have certainly never been disposed to advocate a vacillating or yielding policy in dealing with the Chinese Government, and in regard to the MARGARY difficulty have expressed our regret at the failure of a great part of the attempts made to obtain satisfactory redress; but it is at once unwise and ungracious at the present moment, before either our own Minister or the Chinese Ambassador has been heard, or rather when in point of fact they are being heard at the Foreign-office, to assume that no explanation of the weak parts of the Convention will be forthcoming. We prefer to believe that these points will be fully and adequately explained, and when we find they are not will consider it time to write in the style of the present article in the Pall Mall—which is as remarkable for its strong bias against Sir THOMAS WADE as the articles in that paper hitherto have been for their bias in favour of the Minister in China. What is stated in the article may be some excuse for the failure of Sir RUTHERFORD ALCOCK'S Convention of 1869; but in the present state of the information on the subject does not certainly form a sufficient ground for condemning that of Sir THOMAS WADE.

THE SHANGHAI POLYTECHNIC.

WE are glad to learn that some progress, though far less than could be wished, or than would doubtless be attained were more energy thrown into the matter in China, is being made with regard to the above institution. Messrs. BOURNE and Co., of Mark-lane, the agents in London, have been doing their utmost in its interests, and an influential Committee has been formed, consisting of Sir MACDONALD STEPHENSON, Sir JOHN DAVIS, General Sir JAMES ALEXANDER, Sir JOSHUA WHITWORTH, Mr. GEORGE TURNBULL, C.E., and Mr. CLEVERLY, C.E., formerley Surveyor-General at Hong Kong, with the Hon. Mr. LAWRENCE as Secretary. Messrs. BOURNE have alse procured some very curious specimens of chinaware, which are to be sent out. They consist of some excellent picture-porcelain of Minton's; some wonderfully life-like porcelain pug-dogs, and some porcelain flowers of very delicate manufacture from Paris. All these objects will, undoubtedly, be of very great interest to the Chinese; and if only the work can be kept going in the same manner as it has been commenced, there can be no question as to the success which would attend the scheme. Unfortunately, however, there is, as has been too frequently the case in similar matters, a great want of energy in China. It is no use to have well disposed and active members, this side if there is a lack of energy in Shanghai itself; and the effects of the vis inertiæ, there are beginning to be felt somewhat severely. What seems mainly to be wanted is that there should be some one there whose sole business it should be to attend to this matter; who would be willing to push it on, and to do all in his power to secure its success. So much attention as this could not very probably be secured without payment, but some steps should be taken to make it possible to start the matter, and when it was once set going, it would probably be found by no means so difficult as at present to obtain the funds required. Something in this direction ought to be done; and indeed it would be well if arrangements could be made in China to have some one conversant with business of this nature, sent out from home. In a matter of this kind as well as in others, it is extremely desirable to have the services of some one who knows his business; and it is to be hoped that something may be done to secure this necessary element. At all events, if Shanghai desires that the Polytechnic shall succeed, it must rouse itself up and at least take such action as will enable the Committee and others here who are interested in the project, to follow in its wake. The initiative must be in China, however much those at home may be able to further matters when once they are set properly moving; and from what we know of the feeling among many here who have been to China, and others who are interested in extending our relations with that country, we can confidently predict full support on this side if sufficient energy be infused into the matter in China. Of the advantages of such a scheme both to foreigners and Chinese there can be no doubt. There are a great many objects of European manufacture which would greatly raise the ideas of the Chinese of our arts and civilisation which are not suitable for trade; and on the other hand there are many things which we do not at present know to be required by the Chinese which would be discovered to be acceptable so soon as they were aware they could be procured. Thus the Polytechnic would become advantageous alike to the general cause of civilisation and to commerce; and when once it was fairly set on foot there can be no doubt it would be equally supported by those who have the welfare of China and the improvement of our relations with her at heart, and those who are immediately interested in furthering trade between China and foreign countries.

SALES TO ARRIVE.

THE Japan Herald, in an article headed "Three Sample Cases," adopts a very peculiar view with reference to the decision arrived at by the Japanese Court in regard to a matter which seems to be of the simplest possible character. It appears that a foreign firm sold, by sample, to a Japanese merchant two shipments of velvets, but when the goods arrived the buyer declared they were not according to sample. This point was referred to arbitration, and, in consideration of a "slight difference in the shade of colour of the newly-arrived goods," the seller's arbitrator proposed a reduction of 25 cents per piece, but the arbitrators on the buyer's side would consent to nothing but a cancelling of the contract. The case accordingly came before the Japanese Court, who upon these facts decided that "the proposition of a reduction in price made by the "plaintiff's own expert proved that the goods were not "equal to sample, and the plaintiff had no right to force "the defendant to take delivery of the goods." To this decision the Herald takes exception, but we think wrongly. A great deal of irrelevant detail was interfused into the case, but the above is an exact statement of it upon its merits. It is true that the market had fallen some 90 cents since the sale was effected; but though this might make it reasonable to scrutinise narrowly the grounds upon which the defendant refused to accept the goods, it could not alter his rights on the facts being clearly established. A "slight difference in shade" in manufactured goods may be quite sufficient to make them unsaleable, and in such articles a rigid adherence to sample may be justifiably looked for. The decision, therefore, of the Japanese Court seems to us perfectly reasonable, and we can scarcely understand how anyone, looking at the subject in an impartial manner, can have seen grounds to call it in question; and it seems to us the more unreasonable to have done so seeing that only a short time before decision was given against the defendant in a precisely similar case upon the ground that the goods offered were declared by the proper expert to be in accordance with the sample. The real moral to be drawn from the case is that if the goods do not agree with the samples the importers should not attempt to force them on the buyer. It is of the highest importance in these days of competition to comply with the terms and conditions of contracts.

A CHINESE NAVY.

As will be seen by the account given elsewhere, two new vessels, the Gamma and Delta, have just been constructed for the Chinese Government, and will be shortly despatched to China. Our Foochow contemporary was, therefore, in error in imagining that the predecessors of these two vessels, the Alpha and Beta, would be the Alpha and Omega of a new extravagance on the part of the Chinese; but it will be interesting to note in what manner these new arms are worked. According to the accounts in the China papers, the English crews of the vessels already arrived were discharged in China, and it appears that the idea is to man and work the gun-boats entirely by Chinese. If they are to be used, as, no doubt, will be the case at times, in the suppression of internal disorders, it will clearly be essential that the officers and crews be Chinese; or, at all events, that they be not Englishmen, as British subjects taking part in such proceedings will render themselves subject to fine and deportation under the Order in Council. This point has long been discussed in reference to the English commanders of so-called revenue cruisers in China; but as these vessels have been regarded rather as part of a quasi police and protective service than as vessels of war in the strict sense of the term, the question has not been seriously raised. It, however, assumes a totally different aspect now that China is avowedly and undisguisedly obtaining a navy, and it is clear that it will be necessary to prevent British subjects getting mixed up in any of the operations—at times unfortunately of a very questionable character—which are taken by the Chinese to suppress risings at different places on the coast where the services of gunboats can be called into requisition.

WE note by the last Japan papers that the new shooting regulations have at last been agreed upon, and are glad to be able to state that the long-vexed question with regard to the fines to be levied under them seems likely to be settled satisfactorily. We learn upon good authority that there is every prospect of the difficulty being adjusted on the basis of an agreement to pay to the Japanese Government a fixed fine for any violation of the Game-laws, on conviction of the offender before his own Court. We trust that this settlement, which seems equitable and reasonable, and does not in any way invade the independence of the Courts under the exterritoriality clauses, will, in due course, be arrived at.

SIR JOHN DAVIS, who, as our readers are aware, was one of the earliest of our representatives in China, having been attached to Lord AMHERST'S Embassy in 1816, and having been the first Governor of Hong Kong after the conclusion of the Nankin Treaty of 1842, namely, from 1844 to 1848, has, we are glad to learn, founded a scholarship of £50, tenable for two years, for the encouragement of the study of the Chinese language at Oxford. We trust that this will be a first step towards turning to practical use the recently-established Professorship of Chinese at that University; and should very much like to see the Government following in the same direction.

IN the House of Commons on the 19th inst. Mr. STEWART asked the Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs when the remainder of the papers connected with the expedition to Yunnan, including Mr. GROSVENOR'S report, and also any papers on the recent convention between Sir THOMAS WADE and the Chinese Government, would be laid upon the table. Mr. BOURKE promised that they should be ready in a few days.

WE understand that the Government of the Cape Colonies have decided to abandon the introduction of Chinese labourers, on the ground of expense. We believe the matter was in the hands of Messrs. GOODLIFFE and SMART at the Cape, and Dr. DENNYS at Hong Kong, and it is to be regretted that the matter did not at least have a trial, as we think it might have resulted very favourably to both the Cape Colonies and China.

THE Berlin correspondent of the Morning Post states in a telegram dated the 22nd inst., that the Japanese Government has applied to Germany for leave to place some youths on board the German men-of-war, while stationed in Asiatic waters, as naval cadets, in order that they may receive efficient naval training. A step of this kind was some time back understood to be in contemplation.

SIGNOR BARBOLANI, Grand Officer of the Orders of St. Maurice and Lazar and of the Crown of Italy, has been appointed Italian Minister in Japan. Signor BARBOLANI was appointed in 1869 Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the King of ITALY at the Court of St. Petersburg.

H.E. MR. POPE HENNESSY, the new Governor of Hong Kong, will leave for that Colony by the P. and O. mail of March 16th; and Mons. DE GEOFROY, French Minister to Japan, will leave per M. M. steamer Sindh, from Marseilles, on the 11th March.

LATEST advices from the United States state that the Senate has voted the annual mail subsidy of $500,000 for the China and Japan service of the Pacific Mail steamers.

THE appointment of Mr. JOHN M'NEILE PRICE, Surveyor-General, to be a member of the Legislative and Executive Councils of Hong Kong is gazetted.

THE NEW GUNBOATS FOR THE CHINESE GOVERNMENT.

As stated in our last issue, the two new gunboats which have been built for the Chinese Government by Messrs. Mitchell, at their works on the Tyne, were on Staurday last inspected by his Excellency Kuo Ta-jên, the Chinese Envoy Extraordinary, accompanied by Li Ta-jên, secretary, Mr. Teh Ming, interpreter, Dr. Macartney, English secretary, who, with their suite of attendants, left the Waterloo Station of the London and South-Western Railway by special train, under the immediate charge of Mr. Weston, for the purpose of inspecting the vessels previous to their sailing for China. The visit was essentially a private one, but a select party of gentlemen had been invited to meet his Excellency, among whom were Admiral Houston Stewart, Controller of the Navy; Admiral Boys, Director of Naval Ordnance; Captain Hall, R.N.; Marquis de la Ferronays, French Military Attaché; M. Borel de Bretigel, French Naval Attaché; Capt. Labrano, Italian Naval Attaché; Baron Sparm, Austrian Naval Attaché; Lord Elphinstone, Mr. Shaw Lefevre, Mr. W. H. Russell, Mr. Twynam, Mr. Hughes, and Mr. Wellesley, of the Chinese Customs Service; Major Duncan, R.E.; Mr. George Rendel, Captain Noble, and Mr. Stuart Rendel, of the Elswick firm; Mr. Mitchell, and Dr. Macrae. The special train reached Portsmouth about one o'clock, and drew up at the platform of the Harbour Station, where the party were joined by Mr. J. D. Campbell, the responsible agent of the Chinese Government in this country; Captain Herbert, of the Excellent, gunnery ship; Mr. M'Cheane, the Russian Vice-Consul; Mr. F. Tallack, a few ladies, &c. Awaiting the arrival of the train were a steam pinnace and a gig, by means of which the party were conveyed to the Fire Queen, the yacht of the Commander-in-Chief, where they were courteously received by Staff-Commander Pounds. As soon as all were on board, the yacht steamed out to Spithead, where the party were divided, the Envoy and his suite and the principal visitors embarking in the Gamma, Commander Lang, and the remainder in the Delta, Commander Ching. These curious little craft were at the time flying the red ensign at the peak, and had their names, and "Newcastle," their place of hail, painted on their sterns after the manner of a steam collier. No sooner, however, had the party scrambled up the accommodation ladders, than yellow dragon flags were run up to the top of the mainmast, and they steamed slowly out to sea for gun practice.

The Gamma and Delta belong to a series of four unarmoured gunboats which Mr. Campbell, the Agent in London of the Imperial Chinese Customs, was authorised to procure in England. The gunboats now being sent out are developments of the Staunch principle of mounting a heavy gun in a small vessel specially adapted for its reception; but while the Alpha and Beta carry a 27½-ton gun, the Gamma and the Delta are each armed with a 38-ton gun, having a calibre of 12½in. and an initial velocity of 1,500ft. a second, and capable of penetrating 18in. of armour. This is the most powerful ordnance yet afloat; for although a couple of guns of the same weight are mounted in the fore-turret of the Thunderer, they burn a smaller powder charge, throw a projectile 100 lb. lighter, and exert considerably less energy in foot-tons. The marvel, however, is not as regards the gun, but the placing of such enormous armaments in vessels which are not appreciably larger than the twelve gunboats of the Medina class, the armament of which only consists of three 64-pounders. Until the feat had actually been achieved, it might have been thought impossible to float and fight such heavy ordnance at sea, in a vessel the total displacement of which, including coal, provisions, powder, and shot, and everything needful on board—the armament, of course, not excepted—does not exceed ten times the weight of the gun itself. The weight of the vessels is 400 tons, while that of the gun, which is somewhat over thirty-eight tons, and its fittings, is close upon forty tons. The object in view has been accomplished by constructing the vessel specially for the gun. All unnecessary weight in the shape of armour has been avoided, the target presented by the end-on position of the boats being so small that at the distance covered by the range of their guns the likelihood of their being hit at all is reduced to a minimum. Even the guns themselves are, with the exception of a thwartship bulkhead—which, however, affords no protection—entirely exposed. The larger the ordnance the less liable they are to injury; and such is the strength of these 38-ton guns that, unless struck by a shot upon the trunnions, they would probably not suffer if hit in action. There are two iron-plated decks forward, which are divided into a large number of compartments by horizontal and longitudinal bulkheads, by means of which the strain of the gun and the recoil is diffused throughout the structure. The guns are worked by hydraulic power precisely after the manner in which the 100-pounder was worked during the recent experiments at Spezia, and according to the method which will be applied to the 81-ton guns on board the Inflexible at Portsmouth. The gun rests upon trunnion blocks which work upon a couple of beam slides, the hydraulic pistons by means of which the gun is run out and in and the recoil is checked being directly applied to the trunnions. The necessity of a carriage is thus dispensed with, and as the slides lie prone upon the deck greater steadiness and stability of platform are secured. The projectiles are brought from the magazines to the loading positions by means of a trolly running on tram plates, and are thrust home by a mechanical rammer working beneath the glacis plates at the bow, and which have an outward droop to allow of depressed fire. The gun is irremovably fixed along the centre line, the training being effected by the helm, which, when in action, is worked by the gunner in the pilot-house by the same docile and uniform power which elevates, depresses, and runs the gun in and out. Besides the 38-ton gun the gunboats carry two 12-pounder breechloading Armstrong guns on their quarters, and a 10-chambered 45-inch Gatling gun, which is effective at a distance of 800 yards. They possess no stern guns, but as the Gatling can be shifted to any position, they are not unprepared for attack come whence it may. They only draw 8ft., and have a speed of nine knots. The propelling engines work up to 310-horse power, the same exactly as the engines of the Medina class, and are of the surface-condensing horizontal direct-acting type. The practice at the guns was very satisfactory, and H.E. Kuo took a turn at the handle of the Gatling, "delivering a well-sustained fire, under which no boat could have lived."

WHAT WE ARE DOING IN CHINA.

(PALL MALL GAZETTE.)

In a despatch from Sir Thomas Wade to Lord Derby which appears in the last Blue-book on China a highly suggestive passage occurs. It runs thus:—"The anti-foreign feeling in the country is, on the part of a large majority, of the educated class, as violent as ever it was. It has, indeed, been stimulated by the efforts to introduce foreign inventions and education of a certain influential minority. The leading members of the central Government, so far as there is one, are in a great degree anti-foreign, and, when not altogether bigoted opponents of improvement, are yet far too much in dread of the censure of the anti-foreign public openly to countenance innovation. In some particulars they are as bigoted opponents as any in the Empire." In other words, although the Ministers of the civilised world have been in constant communication with the members of the Chinese Government for sixteen years; although the trading points of contact between foreigners and natives have trebled in number; although the missionary bodies in the country have been largely recruited; and although several native missions, pseudo-political and otherwise, have visited the Western world, the mandarins and a large majority of the educated class are as violently anti-foreign as ever. Not only do those who know little or nothing of foreigners still display a determined spirit of hostility to them, but they are equally hostile who have been in constant intercourse with foreign diplomatic and consular officers, and who have had opportunities of studying the aims and watching the behaviour of European officials, merchants, and missionaries.

The question therefore arises, Has experience proved that the Chinamen were right in their estimate of the "outer barbarians," or have the "barbarians" by their conduct and policy so belied their real character as to give a colour to the false notions of the Chinese? Now, the official Chinese despatches which have from time to time come to light show plainly that the writers and their friends look with hate upon foreigners as being aggressive, violent, greedy of gain, and peace-breakers. And it must be remembered that the results of foreign intercourse with that country have been, from a commercial point of view, greatly to the advantage of foreigners, and that the treaties have been agreed to by the Chinese Government only at the point of the bayonet. Mischief has arisen too out of the pride engendered by the lordship which, owing to her intellectual superiority, China has been able to exercise over the neighbouring nations of Asia. For she has learned to look down with supreme contempt upon all who are not her subjects; and this being so, it became necessary for foreign Ministers to take up a firm attitude towards the Government, and to make it feel by the force of their individual and collective weight that, while strictly limiting their demands to the terms of the treaties, they were prepared to insist on the Chinese Government faithfully fulfilling its part in the contract. But what has been the policy actually pursued by them? Instead of combining to carry out a dignified policy, and one which in the end would work out to the advantage of China, they have all pulled different ways, each trying to gain some advantage over the others. One urges the Chinese Government to establish a college for the study of foreign languages over which a countryman of his own may preside; another persuades the Government to give an order for a fleet of war vessels to be built in the dockyards of his native land; a third advocates the establishment of a dockyard in which his countrymen should be supreme; a fourth is constantly hankering after slices of territory, and so on. All these concessions and more also have been urged with such persistency that they have every one been granted, to the final discomfiture, however, of the State and to those who clamoured for them; for as a member of the Tsung-le Yamun once observed, they have ended in nothing but loss, humilation, and danger.

Nations, like individuals, are often accepted at their own estimate of themselves, and the lofty pretensions which China has set up have been passively supported by the foreign competitors for her favours. No courted beauty has ever been so encouraged in wilfulness as China has been. Her suitors have eagerly basked in her faintest smile, and have welcomed with joy any symptom of cordiality. "The Emperor knows your name!" one day whispered a member of the Tsung-le Yamun to the Inspector-General of Foreign Customs; and the gratifying fact was current news in every Legation in Peking before the day was spent. A pseudo-political mission, which The Times now describes as "farcical," was despatched with an inferior clerk from a Government office at its head, and its members were received at a private audience by the Queen, and were fêted at Buckingham-Palace. It is true that ever and anon when China has inflicted a more than usually severe slap in the face to some one of her suitors the sufferer has fretted and fumed and threatened revenge; but experience has assured her that she need but coax a little and promise the injured Minister a future commercial advantage over his fellows in order to soothe him completely. Meanwhile, the foreign merchants, in addition to flooding the country with loaded Manchester goods and opium, have succeeded by craft in saddling the Government with a railway; and in the interior the Roman Catholic missionaries are keeping the mandarins in a chronic state of disquiet by their assumption of the titles and paraphernalia of office.

What wonder, then, that the educated classes are as violently anti-foreign as ever? Asiatics have a great admiration for a firm unyielding policy, which to their minds means strength—conscious strength; and, being accustomed to the practical application of the proverb that might makes right, it is unintelligible to them that a representative of a nation of equal or superior power to themselves should be willing to abate one jot or tittle of his lawful rights. At the present moment we are negotiating to forego our full demands for the murder of Mr. Margary, and to condone that crime for a few mercantile advantages. In such matters for the future it may be well to imitate the conduct of the Japanese under somewhat similar circumstances. It may be remembered that the crew of a Japanese vessel were murdered by some Formosan savages, and that to the complaints of the Mikado's Government the Chinese Foreign-office pleaded want of practical sovereignty, exactly as it did with regard to the murderers of Mr. Margary. Instead, however, of entering into mutual recriminations with the defaulters, the Mikado's Government took the law in their own hands and landed a force on the island. This decided action secured every desired end. The savages were punished; the Chinese Government was reduced to an apology, and was compelled to pay the cost of the Japanese expedition; and the lives of shipwrecked Japanese sailors have been secured. Moore once suggested that, as low bows and prostrations form so prominent a part in Chinese Court etiquette, Grimaldi the clown would be the most fitting person to be accredited as ambassador to the Court of Peking. The obsequious policy which gave rise to this gibe has been far too long in vogue in our dealings with the mandarins. We have our Treaty, let us be content with that. Let us insist on its conditions being fulfilled; and let us not by fussy gain-seeking and political maladroitness help to perpetuate the violent anti-foreign hatred which now exists as strongly as ever among the educated class in China.

THE "CELESTIAL DELUGE."

A correspondent of the Scotsman, after detailing the facts connected with the spread of the Chinese in the United States, says:—

In a few years we must look to see the whole Union overrun by these intruders; and the question will come to be, how long will the Atlantic Ocean continue to be the limit of their eastward progress? There is reason to believe that it will be some considerable time before we begin to import Celestials in large numbers. Like the potato-bug, their progress on land is rapid; but they will probably make a long pause before taking another leap over a few thousand miles of sea. They may be upon us, however, sooner than we expect. The other week there was word of a vessel, with a Chinese crew on board, arriving at Leith, and of another similarly manned coming to Greenock, and a dark whisper has been going the rounds of a scheme for employing Mongol labour in working our collieries and ironstone pits. The Leith captain, it was said, was pleased with his crew, while the Greenock shipmaster was not. This must be attributed to mere difference of taste on the part of the two skippers — or, perhaps, because at Leith masters are thankful for small mercies in the matter of quality of seamen. John is always the same—smug, grinning, attentive industrious, sure of his own superiority, while we only believe in ours, and, it must be added, an incorrigible liar and cheat. This is the personage with whom we shall have shortly to deal, as he steps smiling on shore after a long voyage cool and fresh as American beef, and more than relatively as cheap. There is no denying the advantages that may be derived from his presence among us; unluckily, the inconveniences are as undoubted. He may be useful in many ways, but he is not a beautiful creature, morally more than physically. In the first place, his reception will be of a very mixed character; it certainly will not be peaceful. The barbers may receive him with open arms, but the washerwomen will with difficulty be restrained from tearing him to pieces. If we once allow him to get a settlement among us, the result cannot for a moment be in dispute. He will begin at the bottom of the social scale—that is his way—and will work himself gradually up. When John establishes himself in a town—say Edinburgh—he has a slow but thoroughgoing method of making it his own. He takes a room in the lowest locality, and he invites seven others like to himself to share it with him. He nails up around the sides as many benches and shelves as there is wall space for. One of these shelves is his bed-room, his smoking-room, his lounge. The floor of the apartment is his dining hall, where he sits over uncommonly short commons with his fellow-benchers. The neighbours fly the locality, holding their noses between their forefinger and thumb; more Chinese arrive; the abandoned houses fall into their hands cheap, and are parcelled out in a similar manner; and the Chinese quarter extends until finally it absorbs the whole. While the invaders spread, they also rise in status, and perhaps no position, short of that of a trade-union secretary, is out of the range of a Chinaman's ambition. They are said to show a peculiar aptitude for the legal profession, and pigtails may yet be seen projecting from beneath the queues of the advocates in the Parliament House, and the majesty of the law looking down obliquely through the eyes of a Mongolian occupant of the bench. The new order of things will not mean easier times for municipal bodies. A Chinese town, in bustle, and in tight packing of its human swarm, resembles nothing so much as an ant-hill, except perhaps a bee-hive, in process of being smoked, with its inhabitants revelling in the fumes. In these circumstances, the difficulties with which a distracted Board of Supervision will have to contend in dealing with such matters as drainage, cleaning, lighting, and overcrowding will be endless. Fancy the fumes of opium and joss-stick, and other imported odours added to the familiar smells of High-street, and Cowgate; Princes-street lighted with paper lanterns, and the city re-christened with a name compounded of five twanging monosyllables. The idea is simply intolerable. But how, it may be asked, are we to defend ourselves from this impending calamity? Should we take a leaf from the Chinaman's own book, and prohibit his entrance into the country—treat him, in short, as if he were the phylloxera or the cattle plague? With our ideas of free trade and intercourse this can hardly be. We must do justice, though the whole Celestial Empire fall on us, and give a fair field, though the odds against us be four hundred millions, more or less. One way only of meeting the danger successfully seems practicable. Let us fight the Chinese with their own weapons. Let all of us set about working harder, and spending, or, at least, wasting less. If this policy is heartily and perseveringly pursued the dangers of "Chinese cheap labour" will be minimised or—who knows?—wholly averted.

THE SUEZ CANAL.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—I have just passed through the Suez Canal, and am astonished at the delay which is permitted in the navigation. This passage is frequently a matter of four days, and from what I gathered from local agents at Port Said and Suez, remonstrance is of no avail. The stoppages, as a rule, are caused by the inefficiency of the pilots in getting vessels aground. These pilots are French, and in a moment of difficulty always get excited and jump about on the bridge like maniacs, and unless the captain has sufficient pluck to take matters in his own hands the result is tolerably certain. Now that we have a substantial share in the Canal it is time that we took steps to "straighten" out these difficulties.—Yours truly, A SHIP OWNER.

THE OVERLAND ROUTE.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—In these days of progress and speed every hour necessarily lost is looked on with impatience. I lately raced through from London to Brindisi, travelling night and day, on my way to China. The P. and O. steamer left at her time, and arrived at Alexandria on Thursday morning, at eight, but we were informed that we should not leave for Suez until the evening! To my astonishment I was informed that it was the course always adopted. Two hours would have landed all the passengers, mails, &c. This mode of procedure seemed to me more extraordinary when I found that our transit through Egypt by rail, at night, was a very cold and miserable journey, whilst the day was bright, and the various stations, &c., could have been seen along the line. We arrived at Suez at 6.30 a.m., and went directly on board the steamer, but did not start until four. This is another waste of time, which seems very unaccountable,—Yours truly, A TRAVELLER.

[We believe that the P. and O. Company have found the night conveyance, on trial, to be most convenient for the whole year's service.—ED. L. and C. T.]

CHINESE LABOUR IN ENGLAND.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—In reference to the concluding paragraph of the article in your issue of 12th inst., entitled "Chinese Labour in England," allow me to point out that Europeans are not "excluded from competing in China in the same class of works which the natives of this country do abroad;" they have only to accept the conditions of the country, in the same way as a Chinaman in England has to submit to English laws and customs. It may be hard upon a European to work in China under such conditions; but is it not a hardship for a Chinese labourer to abide by the usages of European civilisation—not to mention the inhospitable treatment he receives at the hands of the free and enlightened citizens of California? The difficulty will exist so long as two countries are so vastly different in mode of government, manners and customs as England and China. While extra-territorial jurisdiction exists in China it is in my opinion useless to speak about equal privileges. If the principle of equality, which has been established in diplomatic intercourse, were to be carried out consistently in all relations the Chinese would of course be allowed to appoint Consuls in England, and to be subject to their own laws on British soil. This would not by any means be a desirable state of affairs. My opinion is that matters will have to take their own course, and the "opening-up of China" will be accomplished in due season by the influence of commerce, not by cannon and diplomatic despatches.—I am, &c.,

Literature.

The Friend of China (Organ of the Anglo-Oriental Society for the Suppression of the Opium Trade) for February contains several very interesting articles. It notes that Mr. Mark Stewart is again to call attention to China affairs in the House, during the present Session. Among other matter, it gives a review of the last China Blue-book, containing the Margary correspondence; translations of recent Anti-Opium Tracts, and an article, by an old Canton resident, upon Opium as affecting the wealthy and intellectual classes in China.

The Geographical Review for the current month contains, among other interesting matter, a further notice of Abbé David's valuable travels in China.

A new paper, the Tokio Times, has been issued in Japan. The first number contains some thoughtful and temperate articles, though they perhaps incline a little more towards Japanese institutions than will be generally acceptable.

The Foreign-office List for the current year has one or two new features deserving of special notice. It is prefaced by a succinct history of the offices of Secretaries of State, and with a list of the Secretaries of State for Foreign Affairs from 1782 to the present time, and also with a list of the Under-Secretaries —both of which will be of much value. The various changes and promotions are noted to Dec. 1, 1876. Among the "promotions and tranfers" during the past six months no less than twelve are in China and one in Japan, out of a total of twenty-two.

The Revue de Géographie for February contains the first instalment of a translation from the Chinese, entitled "Journal d'une Mission en Corée." The Journal is that kept by Kwei Lin, who was sent on a special mission to Korea by the Emperor Tung Chih, in 1866, and it promises to be interesting. The translation has been made by M. F. Scherzer, of the French Legation at Peking.

The Monatsschrift für den Orient for February contains an interesting article from a Shanghai correspondent signing himself "S." on Glass Manufacture in China.

Meetings of Societies.

At the Royal Society, on Feb. 15, Dr. Hooker, President, in the chair, papers were read "On Stratified Discharges; and on a Rapid Contact Breaker and the Phenomena of the Flow," by Mr. W. Spottiswoode,—"On Lymphatics and their Origins in Muscular Tissues," by Mr. G. Hoggan and Mrs. Frances Elizabeth Hoggan,—and "Remarks chiefly on $487^2 \equiv 486$," by Mr. W. Shanks.

At the Geological Society, on Feb. 7, Professor P. M. Duncan, President, in the chair, who announced that the officers of a newly-established scientific club in Vienna had written, offering the use of the club to any of the Fellows of the Society who may visit Vienna. Communications were read "On the Chemical and Mineralogical Changes which have taken place in certain Eruptive Rocks of North Wales," by Mr. J. A. Phillips,—"On New Species of Belemnites and Salenia from the Middle Tertiaries of South Australia," by Mr. R. Tate,—and "On Manisaurus Gardneri (Seeley), an Elasmosaurian from the Base of the Gault at Folkestone," by Mr. H. G. Seeley.

The Society of Antiquaries met on the 15th inst., when a variety of interesting objects were exhibited, and the reading of Captain Burton's paper "On the History and Antiquities of Lissa and Pelagossa" resumed.

At the Numismatic Society on Feb. 15, J. Evans, Esq., President, in the chair, Mr. C. F. Keary read the first of a series of papers "On the Numismatics of the Transition Era from the Fall of the Western Empire to the Crowning of Charlemagne as Emperor, A.D. 800." He began by discussing the condition of the coinage in Europe about the time of the accession of Honorius, and, from an examination of the laws, national poetry, &c., of the various Teutonic peoples, showed what were the substitutes for a coinage among them. Proceeding to the era of the Barbarian invasions, the writer was of opinion that a large proportion of the coinage in each invaded territory becoming diverted from its proper uses was employed only to pay taxes or tributes to the German conquerors, and was by them frequently converted into bullion or ornaments. Gold being the metal especially prized, Mr. Keary contended that the chief use of a gold coinage now became the paying of these taxes, while the money in the baser metals alone remained current among the earlier inhabitants. He next examined the earliest coinages of the varius barbarian invaders, Bergundians, Visigoths, Vandals, &c., consisting of mere barbarous imitations of the Imperial coins, especially of the aurei.

At the Linnean Society on Feb. 1, G. Bentham Esq., V.P., in the chair, Messrs. G. Boulder, A. S. Heath, and W. Meller were elected Fellows. Sir J. Lubbock proceeded with Part IV. of his contributions "On the Habits of Ants," &c. By an ingenious contrivance of something of a double letter form (thus Fs), an interval of three-tenths of an inch, either by a drop from above or reaching the distance from below, was formed by withdrawal of a small cross bar. This almost inappreciable space alone prevented the ants from reaching a glass cell filled with larvæ, for they evidently had not sense or intelligence enough to surmount it, although they had for hours been traversing the route and carrying off larvæ previous to the three-tenths of an inch being left open. Industry was conspicuously shown by one specimen, which Sir John used to place in solitary confinement in a bottle for hours, and once for days; but the moment it was released it commenced larvæ gathering, though just previously on short commons.

At the Statistical Society on Feb. 20, J. Heywood, Esq., President, in the chair, Mr. C. Walford read a paper "On Fires and Fire Insurance, considered in their National Aspects."

At the Anthropological Institute, on Feb. 13, Mr. J. Evans, President, in the chair, Miss Buckland read a paper "On Primitive Agriculture," in which the value of the study of the subject was explained, as determining migrations, &c., of nations in prehistoric times. The origin of the cereals is still obscure, and maize, which has been considered indigenous to the New World, and unknown in Europe before the time of Columbus, was, in the opinion of Miss Buckland (based on the reports of recent travellers in Africa, Madagascar, New Guinea, China, &c.) cultivated by peoples which have never had intercourse with Europeans. In America, China, and Ancient Egypt there are traces of a time anterior to that of the cultivation of the cereals.

At the Psychological Society on Feb. 13, Mr. Serjeant Cox, President, in the chair, a paper was read by Mr. C. Bray, "On Cerebral Psychology," showing the relationship of the brain to mental action.

Amsterdam, Feb. 21.

The Second Chamber has done some good practical work. The Minister, Van der Heim, laid before the Members a Bill having for its object a partial revision of the import and export tariff on a liberal basis. This Bill was carried, after a warm debate, by 47 against 3 votes. In order to cover the amount which the Treasury will lose by this measure the excise duty on spirits will be increased by f.4 per hectolitre. An interpellation took place, in order that the Members should obtain some further information about the honourable dismissal of Mr. Wagner, ex-Governor of Curacao. Complaints were made in the papers that this gentleman had not neglected, but rather promoted, our diplomatic relations with Venezuela, so that there was no reason for granting the dismissal in that way. The Minister has given most satisfactory proof of this, so that the honour of his dismissal is quite saved. Mr. Fabius, the interpellator, hoped that the successor of Mr. Wagner, Mr. Kip, would prove to be the right man in the right place, and that he would have more success in his endeavours to keep peace between Curacao and Venezuela. Herewith the matter dropped.

Several rumours have been in circulation about the Prince of Orange, but I don't think fit to repeat them, because they are more or less untrustworthy. It seems, however that a crisis is near at hand, and that his brother will assume the rights of Crown Prince. This much is certain, namely, that Prince Alexander has been appointed on H.M.'s birthday—19th inst.—Major-General on the Grand Staff of the Army, whilst, at the same time, he was promoted to the rank of Rear-Admiral. The festivities, which were announced in several places to take place on this "National Day" were either hindered or prevented by the stormy and rainy weather. H.M. conferred, as usually on this day, the knighthood of the Order of the Dutch Lion upon several persons. Amongst them are: Messrs. W. Stortenbeker, jun., First Secretary of the Government in India; F. R. K. Peyer im Hoff, Lieutenant-Colonel of the E. I. Army; W. J. Havenga, Lieutenant-Colonel of the Staff; R. C. Kroesen, Assistant-Resident in Atjeh; the Pangeran Adipati Scerjo Sosro Ningrat (Pakoe Alam) of Djoejocarta, and the Regent of Passaroean, Raden Adipati Arjo Niti Adining Rat.

Our fishermen in the North Sea complain again seriously that they are molested on the high sea by their English competitors. I hear that our Ambassador at the Court of St. James' has been charged to ask for more severe measures than hitherto to be taken in order to prevent such molestation in future.

Our Government has taken rigorous measures in order to prevent our cattle from being attacked by rinderpest. A line of demarcation has been ordered on the northern and southern parts of our frontiers, to prevent the import of cattle from Germany. The news regarding this epidemic is on the whole satisfactory.

On the 1st of May the Dutch colonies will enjoy the advantages of the Postal Convention at Geneva. The postage will be then fixed as follows:—For letters prepaid 25c. per 15 gram. (letters which are not prepaid are charged 40c.), post-cards 12½c., book-post samples and papers 7½c. per 50 gram.; it will not be allowed to post samples exceeding the weight of 250 grams., and papers weighing more than 1,000 grams. I need not say that this will be an enormous improvement.

The enlistment of soldiers to reinforce the army in Java has been satisfactory during the last days, so that the regular number of soldiers can be shipped on the 24th inst. and on the 3rd of March.

The first mail steamer Java, belonging to the company of the same name, started direct from here through the new canal to sea. Within four hours she reached the harbour.

Both Exchange and the market for Colonial Produces are very calm. The transactions are unimportant. There is no speculative demand whatsoever, and business is limited to immediate wants. The Money Market is plentifully supplied; the largest amounts can be obtained at 2½ to 3 per cent.

Monetary and Commercial.

The following are the latest quotations of Banking and other Companies connected with the Far East :—Agra Bank, 10 to 10½ ; Chartered Bank of India, 19 to 20 ; Chartered Mercantile Bank, 28½ to 29½ ; Comptoir D'Escompte, f.670 ; Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank, 32 to 34 ; Oriental Bank, 45 to 46 ; P. and O. Company, 39 to 41 ; Messageries Maritimes, f.635 ; Suez Canal, f.660 ; Japan Loan 9 per cent., 107 to 109; ditto, 7 per cent., 103 to 105.

The business hitherto carried on at Chefoo under the style or firm of Wilson Cornabé and Co., will for the future be conducted under the name of Cornabé and Co., the partners being—William Alexander Cornabé and Andrew Millar Eckford.

Messrs. Clement Lucas and J. H. Pinckvoss have established themselves as merchants, tea and general commission agents, at Hankow and Shanghai, under the style of Lucas and Co. Mr. Samuel Walker is authorised to sign the name of the firm per procuration.

In the Produce Markets business continues dull. Tea has been offered in increased quantities in public sale, and has gone off at irregular prices. Silk has been dull at a further decline. Coffee is also lower owing to heavy supplies. There has been nothing doing in East Indian Sugars. Rice is quiet, but some business has been done in Japan. Pepper has been more active at the lower rates recently established. Gambier continues to decline. There has been more doing in Hemp, but without improvement in value. Other articles show no alteration.

The total quantity of tea delivered from the bonded warehouses in London last week was 3,386,436 lbs., which was 45,755 lbs more than was taken out of bond during the corresponding week of 1876. Of this quantity 2,188,747 lbs. went for home consumption, the duty paid thereon having been £54,718 13s. 6d., or £644 5s. 6d. in excess of the amount paid during the corresponding week of last year. The following were the quantities of the other principal dutiable articles withdrawn for home consumption during the week ending the 17th instant :— Coffee, 502,470 lbs. ; cocoa, 245,674 lbs. ; tobacco, 395,420 lbs. ; cigars, 17,438 lbs.; wine, 171,982 gallons ; brandy, 32,539 gallons ; and rum, 32,209 gallons.

In the Manchester Market there was, in the early part of the past week, almost complete stagnation, owing to the fall in Indian exchange, the small business and declining tendency in the Liverpool Cotton Market. Prices were nominally unaltered, but there was a decided disposition to accept lower terms. On the 23rd inst. the only change was a renewal of the inquiry for China qualities of Grey Shirtings, but the offers put forward were quite out of the range of business, even with the disposition producers evinced to realise at lower prices. The transactions have consequently been very small. For Yarns there is a slightly better demand at low prices.

The latest telegram from China gives the total export of tea at 159,750,000 lbs., the largest supply ever shipped to date in one season. This enormous quantity is exclusive of shipments of Indian tea, of about 22,000,000 lbs., out of a total of 28,000,000 lbs. for the season.

Tenders were received on the 21st inst. for Government drafts on India, to the amount of 17½ lacs, or nearly £175,000, and the entire amount was placed, but only at a reduction as compared with last week's minimum of ⅜d. to 7-16d. per rupee. The sums allotted were :—On Calcutta, £130,400 ; on Bombay £43,600 ; and on Madras, £1,000; all bills tendered for at 1s. 9½d. per rupee receiving in full, and telegrams at that price about 58 per cent. of the amounts applied for. With reference to this allotment the Daily News says :—

The vacillating policy of the Indian Council has been again exhibited. On the 31st ult. and 7th inst. the line appeared to have been drawn at 1s. 10d., last week a fractional reduction was made in this price, and now all offered is sold at a decline of ½d. Indian trade both import and export is being crippled by these uncertain movements, and it would be better for the Government to at once declare whether it will continue to sell to the highest bidders each week, or without notice fix a minimum which may be above all the tenders. It may be readily imagined than an exporter who based his calculations last week at a certain rate, and has now to sell his drafts at 2 per cent. less, must not only in many cases lose all the profit attached to the transaction, but, as trade is now being "cut fine," an actual loss may accrue. Optimists who have all along declared that the "depreciation of silver" would ultimately right itself now seem to be hardly so confident, and it may be that before the middle of the year –the period of greatest depression in 1876—cries may again arise that something must be done to render the fixed standard of value in India rather more stable than it is now, or has been for a long time past.

Bar Silver has declined to 56½d., at which price the amounts on the market have been taken, and the market is almost cleared. No Mexican Dollars have been sold.

The amount of bullion per P. and O. Steamer Peshawur, from Southampton on the 22nd inst., was—In gold to Galle £2,230. In silver to Penang £65,650, to Hong Kong £2,300, to Shanghai £258,650 ; total in silver £326,600.

Tenders are invited by the Crown Agents for the Colonies for £1,000,000 in Four-and-a-Half per Cent. Debentures of the Government of the Cape of Good Hope, authorised by an Act of 1874. The purpose is for the construction and equipment of railways, and redemption will take place by annual drawings of one per cent. per annum on the accumulative principle, the first of which will take place in March, 1878. The bonds will be of the value of £100, £200, and £500 each.

A Consolidated Six per Cent. Loan for £200,000 is offered to the public by the Bank of New Zealand on behalf of the City of Wellington. The money is required to pay off existing debentures and for purposes of drainage, waterworks, and wharf extensions. Tenders will be opened on the 8th of March, and none will be accepted below par.

The report of the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company states that the accounts for the year show a net profit of £91,555, after charging the interest on the debentures. To this sum must be added £57,359 brought forward from last year, making a total of £148,914. From this amount is deducted the interim dividend of 5 per cent., amounting to £22,410, leaving £126,504 to be dealt with. Of this sum the directors propose to distribute a dividend of 15 per cent., or £67,230, being at the rate of £1 16s. per share, and making, with the amount already paid, a total dividend for the year of 20 per cent. in cash, free of income-tax; leaving £59,274 to be carried forward to the next account.

The annual report of the British Land Company states that the sales of the year have amounted to £182,754. The profit and loss account shows an available balance of £11,144, which enables the directors to recommend a dividend of 3 per cent. (free of income-tax) and to carry forward £2,144 to the next account.

The directors of the Merchant Banking Company of London have resolved to declare a dividend at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum for the half-year ending the 31st of December last, being at the same rate as that paid in previous years, and to carry forward £9,117 to the next account.

The report of the directors of the Liverpool and London and Globe Insurance Company states that the fire premiums for the past year amount to £989,756, and the losses to £460,744, showing a net surplus of £240,579. The General Reserve and Fire Reassurance Fund will be increased from £850,000 to £1,000,000. The directors recommend a dividend of 8s. per share, together with a bonus of 4s. per share.

The directors of the Anglo-Californian Bank have declared an interim dividend of 10s. per share for the half-year ending December 31, 1876, being at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum.

It is announced by the Board of the National Discount Company that, subject to confirmation by the shareholders, they have succeeded in making an arrangement by which Messrs. Roger Cunliffe, John Cunliffe, and William Fowler will join the Board. The directors entered into negotiations which have resulted in a conditional agreement that these gentlemen will retire from business on their own account, and will use their best endeavours to bring to the company such portion of their business as they can influence. The arrangement involves the creation and issue to them, on the conditions above stated, of 9,333 shares, with £5 deemed to have been paid up thereon.

A parliamentary return shows that in 1875 there were 1,153 companies registered, with a proposed capital of £82,447,180, in addition to nineteen others without nominal capital. From 1st January to 31st May last year 478 companies were registered, with an aggregate proposed capital of £24,056,520; and eighty-two others without nominal capital.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

The large sales during the week (22 catalogues) have passed with great apathy and irregularity in prices, in one case a break of Congou selling at a difference of 15 per cent. before the last lots were knocked down. The want of confidence and anxiety of importers to quit their teas afford great opportunities to buyers to secure bargains, as between the prices of 8d. to 1s. per lb. are included teas of medium quality, while low Amoy and broken kinds ex late steamers (£3 per ton freight, or 1¼d. per lb.) sold at fair prices (quality considered) of 7¼d. to 8d. per lb. The home trade shows a little better tone, stimulated by the increasing consumption which is beyond any former period, but the enormous weight of tea constantly thrown on the market precludes any hope of the favourable position of the trade being of benefit to importers, high cost at the shipping ports, too large supplies, and general inferiority, fortunately of no great moment when Indian leaf is being so largely used, all tending to keep down prices.

COFFEE.—In addition to the recent large arrivals of Ceylon further important supplies are near at hand. The market has consequently become dull, and moderate supplies of various descriptions at public sale have gone off flatly, Plantation Ceylon showing a decline of from 1s. to 3s. per cwt., triage having been sold at 89s., small at 99s. to 100s., low middling to middling at 106s. to 110s. 6d., good middling to good bold at 111s. to 117s. 6d., pea-berry at 114s. 6d. to 115s. 6d. Only 50 bags Native Ceylon have been sold, real good ordinary at 85s. No sales of other descriptions of East India are recorded.

CHINA PRESERVES.—400 cases Ginger bought in at 6d., and 300 cases Chow Chow also at 6d.

COCOANUT OIL is obtainable at previous prices, fine Cochin £41 10s. to £42, Ceylon in pipes £37 to £37 5s.

CANES.—119,400 Dragon bought in at 3¼d. to 1¾d., 2 lots 3½d. to 4½d., 20,000 Ground Rattans at 1¾d., 5,850 Penang Lawyers at 5½d., except 2,000 which sold at 9d., 1,360 undescribed partly sold at 7½d. each.

CAMPHOR.—About 100 cases old China have been sold at 81s. 3d. per cwt., reweights.

COTTON.—Much depression is manifest, and prices are lower; afloat good fair Bengal has been sold at 5d., with f f clause.

CUTCH.—About 100 boxes Flag BB have been sold at 27s. 6d. per cwt.

EBONY has been in demand, and at auction, 10 tons Ceylon (import 1872) sold at £13 to £14.

GAMBIER.—A dull tone continues to prevail, and prices for arrival are again easier, 50 tons near at hand having been sold at 29s. 9d., and 200 tons February-March shipment at 21s., ex ship, all faults.

GALLS.—50 cases China bought in at 55s. or withdrawn.

GUM BENJAMIN.—Of 125 cases, 9 cases Sumatra seconds sold, badly mixed with dark at £6 5s., fair rather mixed with ditto at £8 10s. to £8 12s. 6d., and 4 cases almond partly dark, and rather dusty at £16 10s., ditto with some run at £15 10s., the remainder withdrawn or bought in, seconds in block £7 10s., and brown thirds at 72s. 6d.

HEMP.—The market remains dull, but rather large supplies of Manila offered at the weekly public sale met a fair demand, and one-half sold at about the prices recently accepted by private contract to an occasional further decline. Other kinds were quite neglected. Of 1,281 bales Manila offered about 600 bales disposed of at and since, brown at £26, good fair at £28 15s. to £29, good Boluzan at £30 15s., a few bales fine at £32, and white Quilot £37 to £37 5s.; 35 bales China sold at £21 15s. to £22, and 2 bales Japan were withdrawn.

HIDES.—At the auctions, Singapore and Penang were not wanted. Some Chinas were sold before and after the sale at rates slightly in buyers' favour, but no business was transacted in the chair.

OIL ANISEED.—About 30 cases have been sold at 6s. 6d.

PEPPER.—Black: There has been more inquiry probably at the recent decline, and 1,500 bags Penang have been sold at 3⅞d. to 3¾d., 1,000 bags West Coast ditto at 3 13-16d. to 3¾d., 750 bags Singapore at 3 15-16d. to 4d., and 500 bags Atchin Penang at 3⅞d. (3 mos. prompt). A total of 1,403 bags at the public sales to-day met less demand, and the whole was bought in as follows: 1,196 bags Singapore at 4d. to 4¼d., 147 bags Penang at 3¾d., and 60 bags Malabar at 4⅛d. White: No private transactions have occurred, and there was little demand at the public sales, and only a small part of the 657 bags offered found buyers, but prices are unchanged; of 544 bags Singapore 50 bags sold, good fair at 6¾d., the remainder bought in, also 113 bags Penang at 6¾d.

RICE.—A quiet, although steady tone has prevailed, and only one sale has transpired in new crop cargoes of Rangoon. A steamer cargo of about 1,600 tons, spring shipment, has been sold at 9s. 6d. ex ship London. Considerable business has been done in Japan during the last few days, consisting of the following :—On the spot 7,000 bags per Forward Ho, at 11s. 7½d., and two floating cargoes, viz.:—The White Adder, 1,214 tons, September sailing, at 11s. 6d. open charter, and the A la, 923 tons, off coast, at 11s. for Hamburg direct.

SHELLS.—The periodical sales were held on the 20th inst., with the subjoined results. Mother-o'-Pearl : Manila sold at a reduction of 20s. to 30s., except for good clean, which brought full prices ; bold and medium Bombay sold steadily, but small 5s. lower ; Egyptian partly sold at previous rates ; a large supply of black-edged were only partially disposed of on easier terms. Of 310 cases Manila about 180 cases sold, good selected bold at £10 10s. to £10 15s., fair bold at £9 10s. to £10, bold with part small at £9, defective bold at £6 2s. 6d. to £7 2s. 6d., pickings at 77s. 6d. to 95s., chicken and small at £7 7s. 6d. to £7 10s. 150 cases small pieces from Manila sold at 2s. 9d. to 4s. 3d. Tortoise : Moderate supplies met a fair demand, and prices show scarcely any alteration from the previous auctions, either for East India or West India ; 5 cases (470 lbs.) Singapore good shell sold at 17s. 6d. Green Snail met less demand, and 436 baskets 317 bags and 1,860 loose offered were all bought in, large 6d. to 8d., medium 5d., small 3½d. to 5d., very small 1½d. each. Ear : 533 bales 12 cases 7 tons Japan met a limited demand, and only 12 cases 1 ton sold, fair bold untrimmed 25s., loose £16 15s.

SUGAR.—The market has exhibited increased flatness, and with little demand small supplies at auction have been only partly disposed of. No sales of East Indian sorts have been effected.

SAGO.—At public sale 584 bags went off flatly, and only 58 bags good bright small sold at 17s., the remainder bought in, ordinary to good small, at 16s. to 17s. 6d.

SPICES.—No sales of East Indian Spices have occurred during the week.

STAR ANNISEEDS.—Of 50 cases China 30 cases mouldy sold at 90s. 6d., the first lot 90s., the remainder good fair sound bought in at £5.

TAPIOCA is steady. Of 730 bags Penang 300 bags good sold at 2⅝d., with one lot at 2¾d. Of 745 bags Singapore 600 bags sold, grey at 2⅝d., good at 2½d., fine white at 2¾d. Pearl : Only 20 bags good seed were offered, and sold at 19s. Flour : 432 bags Singapore bought in at 1⅞d. to 2d.

TOBACCO.—39 bales China sold at 5½d. to 5¾d., 20 bales Java 6d., and 5 bales Manila 1s. 4d.

TIN.—The market continued dull throughout the week, and prices have sustained a further decline. Closing quotations are :—Straits on the spot and afloat, £72 ; Banca £75 ; Billiton £73 per ton.

VERMILLION.—31 cases China sold at 2s. 2d. to 2s. 3d.

CASUALTIES.

MILFORD.—Feb. 21, the G. B. S. James, from Liverpool for Singapore, has put in with cargo shifted, and having carried away steering apparatus and lost several sails.

QUEENSTOWN.—Feb. 19, the Granite City, Ellis, arrived here from Samarang, has lost upper maintopsailyard.

HAVRE.—Feb. 19, the Faith, Lloyd, arrived here from Bezoekie, reports having experienced a succession of heavy gales whilst off the Cape of Good Hope, the vessel having on one occasion been thrown on her beam ends, when two lower topsails had to be cut away; the decks were also swept of everything movable.

ST. HELENA.—Jan. 29, the Hypatia, Olive, arrived here from Zebu, for Channel, reports:—From the meridian of Mauritius to that of the Cape of Good Hope, for a period of six weeks, encountered a succession of heavy westerly gales, smashing bulwarks, splitting and destroying several sails, washing overboard a quantity of articles from the decks, and carrying away maintopgallantmast.

BATAVIA.—Feb. 22, the Ireshope, ship, M Derwain, from Newcastle (coal), for Singapore, took fire at Anjer; was towed to Bantaw and run ashore, and has been abandoned to the underwriters.

The Barbara Taylor, schooner, from Bangkok for Cheribon (rice), has arrived here, having been ashore, and after having jettisoned a portion of cargo; vessel is tight, and will proceed to Singapore for repairs.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PORTSMOUTH.—Feb. 16, a case, marked "F.B., 2,492, collodion, Yokohama," and containing collodion in glass bottles, was picked up about twenty miles off the Isle of Wight by the fishing lugger Alice and Rebecca, No. 164, of Rye, and handed over to the Receiver of Wreck this day. The case, apparently, has been but a short time in the water.

LIVERPOOL.—Feb. 17, the Alice Ritson, barque, arrived here from Singapore, in proceeding towards the Canning Dock, grounded, and remained about half an hour, when she was towed off apparently without damage.

ST. HELENA, JAN. 29.—Arrived and proceeded, 10, Margaret Pugh, Akyab, for Falmouth; 12, Ellen Francis D., Probolingo, for New York; Sovereign, Singapore, for London; Batavia, Batavia, for Amsterdam; 13, Sophie D., Saigon, for Marseilles; Dreadnought, Maulmain, for London; 14, Martha Brockelman, Hong Kong, for London; 16, Bethany, Hong Kong, for New York; Undaunted, Maulmain, for Amsterdam; Hypatia, Zebu, for Falmouth; 17, Miako, Samarang, for Falmouth; 18, Willem van Name, Hong Kong, for New York; Joachim Christian, Hong Kong; 19, Janet, Swatow, both for London; 22, Albuera, Manila, for New York; Kitty, Batavia, for Amsterdam; Astrea, Macassar, for Amsterdam; T. F. Whitton, Probolingo, or Boston; 25, Lieut.-Gen. v Swieten, Batavia, for Rotterdam; Antipodes, Hong Kong, for Hamburg; Johanna, Manila, for New York; St. Kilda, Batavia, for Falmouth; Singapore, Macassar, for New York; Roma, Akyab, for Falmouth; Teodora, Manila, for Liverpool; Annie Braginton, Mantura, both from Swatow, for London; Richard Green, Batavia, for Falmouth; Kosmopoliet III., Batavia, for Rotterdam; 28, Liberaal, Batavia, for Rotterdam; Loyola, Manila, for Cadiz; Sir Jamsetjee Family, Manila, for London. Passed, Jan. 9, Corona, Manila, for London; 13, Johanna Maria, Banjoewangie, for Rotterdam; 18, Ary Scheffer, Samarang, for Amsterdam; Halloween, Shanghai, for London; Joseph Haydn, Philippines for Falmouth; 21, Alice Reed, Batavia, for Falmouth; Alblasserdam, Samarang, for Rotterdam; 23, Trinidad, Java, for Cork. The Univers, French barque, after effecting some slight repairs, sailed for London on Jan. 18. A bottomry bond for £534 at 20 per cent. was given in payment of interest. 1,601 bags rice have been landed from the Brescia, of which 866, being damaged, were sold by public auction on Jan. 26, according to recommendation of surveyors; the vessel is now repairing. The Queen sailed for Hamburg on Jan. 25, having undergone certain repairs here; previous to her departure notices were issued inviting tenders to advance the sum of about £575 on bottomry in payment of expenses.

TABLE BAY.—Sailed, Jan. 16, Dorothea, Ludovic and Charles, both for Guam.

PORT ELIZABETH.—Jan. 19, the Amore has almost finished her repairs, and the master has advertised for a loan of £1,200, more or less, on bottomry and respondentia, to defray expenses.

MOSSEL BAY.—Sailed, Jan. 16, Dione, for Batavia.

NATAL.—Jan. 4, sailed, Dec. 30, Jane Rowland, for Guam. The Compagnia Generale (Italian), from Batavia for Falmouth, which put in here Dec. 12 with damage, has completed her repairs, and proceeded to-day.

BATAVIA.—Feb. 22, the Thomas Fletcher, from Java for Australia, put into Banjoewangie leaky; surveyors recommend that this vessel be docked for examination of bottom, and be remetalled and calked throughout. The repairs of the Jedo will cost more than the vessel is worth.

SAIGON.—Feb. 16, the Kalaja, previously reported in collision, is severely damaged; she is cut down to the water's edge, and will have to dock for repairs, the cost of which is estimated at about $15,000.

GENERAL SHIPPING NEWS.

SINGULAR DISCOVERY OF SHIPWRECKED FISHERMEN.—Application has been made to the Thames Police magistrate by Captain Adams, of the ship Corea. Captain Adams stated that he left China on his voyage home in September last. When about 200 miles from land, the vessel then being in the China Seas, about 14½ latitude and 118 east longitude, he fell in with a boat containing two men, who were in an almost dying condition from the combined effects of hunger and thirst. He took them on board and gave them food, which they ate ravenously. He had no opportunity of putting them on shore, and had brought them to England with him. He did not know what countrymen they were, as their language was unintelligible, but he believed they were natives of Cochin China. Since they had been on board they had managed to tell the sailors—by signs—that they had been out in their boat fishing, had fallen asleep, and had drifted out to the distance he had found them. Since his vessel arrived he had been trying to find some home where the men might be sent for a time, with a view to their being taken back to their own country. He had, however, not succeeded, as nobody seemed to care to have anything to do with the poor fellows. The magistrate told Captain Adams that he was worthy of much commendation for the humanity he had shown to the men. They remain by the ship for a day or two, after which they will be taken to the Strangers' Home, and there remain until a ship can be found to convey them to their native home.

SUSPENSION OF A CAPTAIN'S CERTIFICATE.—A Board of Trade inquiry into the abandonment and loss of the ship Golden Age, of South Shields, off Terschelling, was concluded on the 14th inst., at South Shields, after three days' sitting. There were seven charges against the captain, Frederick Cornish Quick. The Court considered the captain in default—first, for altering the course, which led to the ship's stranding; and, secondly, for prematurely abandoning the vessel after the stranding. The Court considered that Captain Quick merited severe reprehension, and ordered his certificate to be suspended for twelve calendar months.

A SEAMAN'S WAGES.—Captain Sproule, of the ship Eme, has been summoned by Frederick Louis, able seaman, for £28 8s. 5d. wages, alleged to have been earned during a voyage from Liverpool to China, Japan, and back to London. The principal point at issue was under the heading "Cash and sundries," which the complainant was alleged to have received during the progress of the voyage, and this having been investigated, the summons was withdrawn.

THE clipper ship Albania, Captain Seely, from Calcutta to Dundee, laden with 2,000 tons of jute, has been wrecked one mile south of Cape Grisnez. Two men who attempted to escape in a boat were drowned. The rest of the crew, twenty-four in number, landed at low water by means of lines. The captain hopes to get the vessel off when she is lightened, but fine weather is indispensable for success.

THE fine new steamer Loudoun Castle, the latest addition to Messrs. Thos. Skinner and Co.'s Castle line of packets, arrived at Port Said on the morning of the 18th inst., after a passage of ten days and eighteen hours from Gravesend.

THE John O'Gaunt, from Liverpool to Manila, recently lost at Samar, Philippine Group, was a wooden ship of 859 tons, 177½ feet long and 32 feet wide. She was built at Whitehaven in 1855, classed A1 at Lloyd's, and owned by Mr. W. T. Bell, of Liverpool.

THE Argentino, Capt. Barnett, which left on the 24th inst. for the Straits, China, and Japan, has been chartered by Messrs. Matheson and Co., London, for local trade between Japan and China.

The Nederland Company's steamship Java sailed from Southampton on the 21st inst. for Batavia, with mails, passengers, £10,000 in English and £41,000 in Dutch specie, and a full cargo.

SINCE the year opened, twenty ships, of 14,000 tons aggregate tonnage, of the value, including cargo, of £335,000, and carrying 275 sailors, have been posted at Lloyd's.

LAUNCH.

ON the 17th inst. there was launched from the yard of Messrs. Caird and Co., Greenock, a new screw steamer, built to the order of the Netherlands India Steam Navigation Company. Her dimensions are:—Length over all, 263 feet 9 inches (286 feet b.o.m.); length of keel and forerake, 255 feet 6 inches; breadth moulded, 32 feet; depth moulded, 26 feet; depth of hold, 17 feet 3 inches. She is an awning-decked screw steamer, having her sides partly open for ventilation, and is to be fitted up with engines of 200-horse power. She was named Tambora, and is intended for the Java trade.

HUBBUCK'S PATENT WHITE ZINC PAINT.

THE most durable and beautiful Paint known, is cheaper to use than White Lead, and adapted for all climates.
It is free from any poisonous ingredient, and suited in all respects to the use of the painter.
Each cask of Pure White Zinc is stamped "HUBBUCK, LONDON, PATENT."
Inferior Zinc Paint, so marked, having been sold in Foreign Markets, the Patentees offer a reward of FIFTY POUNDS for information which will lead to the conviction, in an English or Colonial Court, of those who have violated their mark. Both Exporters and Retailers are liable for its sale.

THOMAS HUBBUCK AND SON,
WHITE LEAD, OIL, PAINT, AND VARNISH WORKS,
24, LIME-STREET, LONDON.

HUBBUCK'S ANTI-CORROSIVE PAINTS

Are very durable, and the most valuable protection to Iron Roofs, Bridges, Piers, Ships, and Buildings exposed to stormy weather and scorching sun; they soon become extremely hard, and do not blister.
They are made of Stone, Slate, Copper, White, Blue, Green, or any other Colour that is desired.

HUBBUCK'S ANTI-OXIDATION COMPOSITION,

For Coating Iron and Wood Ships' Bottoms; a preservative against fouling and corrosion. This Composition is ready for immediate use, and obviates the waste of carrying unmixed Paints, Oils, Driers, &c. It is also applicable to all the purposes of other Paints.

HUBBUCK'S PALE BOILED OIL

Has less colour than Raw Linseed Oil; is a quick, hard, and certain Drier for White and Light Coloured Paint.

PAINTS AND OILS PROPERLY PACKED FOR EXPORTATION.

CAUTION.—In April a native dealer at Hong Kong was prosecuted and convicted of a fraudulent imitation Hubbuck's name and mark by placing them on some spurious goods shipped from London.

Summary of News from the Far East.

The news from China continues of the most distressing character. From all quarters the cry comes of famine and distress; and the luckless natives are flocking into the large cities and the foreign settlements, followed, however, by starvation, which the benevolent efforts both of their own countrymen and of the foreign residents can scarce stave off. The winter, too, is setting in with extreme severity in the north, and will ere long add greatly to the misery, which is already appalling. Efforts are being made among the foreign community in Shanghai, by missionaries and other benevolent persons, to aid the refugees as much as possible; and it has beed sensibly suggested that the Municipal Council should employ some of them to clear out the Yangkingpang Creek—a work the completion of which is much wanted. From the Capital there is no news of special importance; but it is reported from Tientsin that Li-Hung-Chang is as active as ever in the purchase of torpedoes, and other warlike munitions, though it seems he is scarcely very successful in the bargains which he makes at times, being occasionally "stuck" with rather old-fashioned and useless articles. An extraordinary rumour is given by the correspondent of one of the local papers, to the effect, namely, that the Chinese Envoy to England has been denounced in his native province, on account of his leaning towards foreigners. The account has probably some truth in it, but it bears internal evidence of exaggeration. No doubt his mission may be unpopular among the anti-foreign party, and some mob-rising may have been instigated by literati of extreme views, but it is to be borne in mind that these two classes do not represent general opinion in China any more than the extreme Conservatives on the one hand, and, say the supporters of Dr. Kenealy on the other, can be taken to represent the general current of opinion here. The sale of the property of the S.S.N. Company has given rise to rumours to the effect that the Chinese are prepared to make a large number more similar purchases. If such should be the case, they will assuredly before long find they have more foreign appliances on their hands than they know well how to manage.

The present mail does not bring later news from Japan, with the exception of one or two items from Nagasaki, which came via Shanghai, than has already been given via America. We note, however, that a telegram, with reference to the recent fire in Yokohama, which has been received in Shanghai, states that it is believed Messrs. Kelly, Walsh and Co.'s house has also been burnt. It is, however, understood that the premises of Messrs. F. R. Wetmore and Co., which are only separated from those of Kelly and Co. by a narrow alley, have escaped uninjured.

NAGASAKI.

The Rising Sun says that several of the principal foreign residents have expressed a desire to form a football club. Mr. P. Whittall has consented to act as secretary pro tem., and it is hoped residents will come out in strength and relieve the port from the stigma of being the most monotonous in Japan. The auction of the Occidental Hotel was to take place on the 10th and 11th January, and the Sun understood that "several intending buyers, knowing the superior quality of the articles, had arrived from Shanghai, so that high prices were expected to be realised."

The Cosmopolitan Press says the Naniwa Maru, the pioneer trading steamer of the Japanese to Corea, returned to Nagasaki on the 29th December, from the port of Fusampo, with a quantity of cotton received in exchange for rice. The Koreans are said to be sharp and intelligent and keen traders, and their physique corresponds more closely with that of Europeans than either the Chinese or Japanese. An extensive trade in tallow and hides is likely to spring up in the way of barter. Tigers are numerous and fine skins can be obtained at a moderate figure. H.I.R.M.'s corvette Haydamack arrived at Nagasaki on the 29th December, from Kobe, under jury masts. On her voyage from Hong Kong to San Francisco she encountered a terrible gale, and was dismasted off the coast of Formosa. She has proceeded to Shanghai to refit.

CHINA.

PEKING.

The North China Herald correspondent—usually the best authority concerning matters at the Capital—states that nothing special has occurred. All was quiet, and an unusually heavy fall of snow on New Year's Eve had filled the people with joy, as being likely to conduce to a good spring harvest. The weather has been very cold since.

A correspondent of the Celestial Empire gives an account of an amateur theatrical performance at H.B.M.'s Legation, the play produced being Foote's comedy, The Liar.

TIENTSIN.

The North China Daily News correspondent states that the severe cold and snow have caused a great deal of suffering to the poor people, especially the refugees, who have no other protection than temple courts and mat-huts, but adds that if the snow has fallen as extensively as appearances indicated it means thousands of dollars to the agricultural interests of this province alone. There has not been such a fall of snow since the winter of 1867, when, commencing on Dec. 24, it lay on the ground for more than a week.

H.E. the Viceroy has instructed Mr. Betts, of the Torpedo School, to erect a short line of telegraph next spring, connecting his yamen and the arsenal, which is situated several miles east of the foreign settlement. This is another step in the right direction, and it is hoped that progress in other directions, and more extensive, and in ways intended to benefit the people directly, may not be long in following this beginning.

The Courier's Correspondent, under date 30th Dec., writes:—

It is said, that Li is buying fifty so-called fish torpedoes, invented by the American, Lay. These torpedoes are propelled by electricity, and can be steered from the shore. Of course Li is of opinion that they represent, according to the assurance of the seller, the most modern and best of their kind, and not even the tremendous price (Tls. 10,000 per piece—half a million of taels) makes him shrink from proving that China does not yield to other nations in her war material being of the most modern description. Unfortunately, there is strong reason to believe that these torpedoes of Mr. Lay are neither very new nor very practical. Sold to the Government of Egypt in 1872, they were tried by a commission at Newport, U.S., the report of which commission said, whilst acknowledging the ingenuity of the inventor, that they found the torpedoes only in a slight degree efficient, and that they were too complicated for actual warfare. The famous inventor of the monitor, Ericcson, also gave his opinion against the introduction of them into the States, as they remained above the water and could therefore easily be made to explode prematurely by shots; that the explosion was too near to the water surface, and that hardly any damage could be done with them to an ironclad. Besides, these torpedoes perish after explosion, and are therefore very costly.

NEWCHWANG.

From this port also comes a cry of distress. The weather is bitterly severe, although the river was not yet frozen over on the 15th December. But it is pertinently asked, if matters are so bad at present, what will they be in another three months' time? The death of the Tartar-General, whose head-quarters were at Moukden, is much regretted by the native population.

KIUKIANG.

The Shanghai Courier correspondent writes, under date 14th Jan.:—

We had a meeting of the Municipal Council yesterday, which created great excitement. When the account-books were opened they were found to be in the same virgin state as when they first issued from the hands of the bookbinder!

Still, the place is rising. There is a rumour to the effect that an enterprising firm of apothecaries have found a philanthropic gentleman to look after their interests here; and I hear of another professional member of the community who is about to open a corn-chandler's establishment, presumably in order to relieve some of the Northern sufferers (for whom contributions are thankfully received). It is rumoured that the pharmaceutical agent and the corn-chandler consist of a Jack who is going about here and Hankow, but I am not prepared to offer an opinion on the subject.

The water was never so low as it is this year; it is only seven feet deep at Hankow Island, and there is no cold to speak of yet.

NANKING.

The correspondent of the Celestial Empire, under date Jan. 8, says that the people from "north of the river" continue to arrive, bringing the same tale of distress. They seem to be quiet and willing to work if an opportunity were afforded, but must have food and shelter. The authorities are giving the matter some attention, but the prospects for the future seem dark enough. With the exception of two or three days the weather has been very mild, and thus the occupants of the numerous matsheds have not yet suffered seriously from cold. He adds that for more than two weeks the slaughter of animals had been prohibited here, and it seemed probable that fish, fowls, and all kinds of animal food, whether fresh or salt, would be placed on the forbidden list. There seemed to be no immediate prospect of snow, notwithstanding the prayers that are being offered, but there would be one very important result, in showing the people that the officials were ready to do all that it was possible to do to prevent suffering, even if the dreaded locusts are not destroyed.

KWEICHOW.

A correspondent of the Courier, writing from Kwei-Yang-fu, under date of Nov. 30, says:—

Since my last we have heard of an insurrection in Kuang-si and now we hear of trouble at the Kwei-Fuh Customs and lekin barrier in Szechuan. It was also quietly rumoured last week that H.I. Majesty Kuang-si had died of some dreadful disease or from some other cause. It is probable that the report of trouble in Kuang-si is true, but the rest may be only false report set afloat by members of secret societies.

From Ky-cho, a city about 100 li from here, we learn that the people have seized the chechow, or magistrate, and are bringing him here as a prisoner for having unlawfully levied or imposed an extra amount of grain tax.

The military examinations which commenced on the 19th inst. are nearly ended, and everything is going on very quietly.

The local issue of the Peking Gazette not having yet appeared, there is a good demand for the Sun pao, as people are anxious to know the results of the Chefoo Conference. Mining operations are again at a standstill for the want of capital and genuine enterprise.

Writing on the 12th Dec. he says:—From Hunan we hear that his Excellency Kuo-Sung-Tao, Ambassador to England, has been denounced. You have of course heard that his house was torn down and destroyed by a mob under the direction of the literati, who during the examinations had compelled the Fu-t'ai to give them a written permission to do so. His Excellency afterwards took measures to punish the ringleaders, and reported their conduct to the Emperor, and this has caused general dissatisfaction, and a revolutionary movement. It is also said that five missionaries have been killed for having attempted to buy land for building a church under his Excellency Kuo Sung tao's patronage

YANGCHOW.

The Sinpao says:—The starving population at Yangchow now amounts to about a hundred thousand souls, and people are coming in daily. The famine regulations at this place are very complete; the mandarins do not embezzle the money that is provided, and the people do not grudge assistance. The higher and lower classes are entirely in accord, and consequently numbers of people are flocking thither. Every refugee receives, in pursuance of the regulations, eight ko of rice per day and eight cash worth of salt and vegetables; children receive half the amount. Every fifth day a census is taken and distribution made. Medical attendance is provided for the sick, and medicine is dispensed; the dead are decently coffined and buried at the public expense; and midwives are supplied in cases of confinement. Cotton swaddling clothes are also served out for the new-born children. Two small dispensaries have been opened; one in the new city at the Ch'un-ti Sze (temple), and the other in the old city at the Mu-lan Yuen. There are altogether four doctors, who go out and visit the people every day, dividing the patients between them. Four larger dispensaries are established. Seeing that these unfortunate persons are now living outside the city, cold and hungry, every family poverty-stricken and wretched, having travelled over a thousand li, sick from either privation or anxiety, these mendicants are good for warming their insides and putting their stomachs in order; and although the gentry are very ready with all the assistance in their power, the mandarins are not behind them in their tender care of the poor people. At present the cry is still "they come."

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 19th January; the French mail from London Dec. 1 was received on the 17th January. The North China Herald contains the following summary of news:—

The community of Shanghai has presented a testimonial and an address to Mr. Consul Medhurst in view of his retirement from the service, and his approaching departure. The address, which we give at length in another column, was courteously and cordially acknowledged, and the reply thus given was received with loud and hearty cheers.

The chief topic of local discussion has been the sale to the Chinese of the S. S. N. Company's steamers. The North China Herald says that the meeting of shareholders called to consider the subject (a full report of which is given further on) was very fully attended; 20,000 shares being represented, out of the total number of 22,500. The terms of the offer were stated as we have already given them, namely, the whole of the company's property to be sold to the China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company for Tls.2,000,000; one half of this sum to be paid before the 31st March next and the remainder in instalments of Tls.50,000 per quarter, extending over five years; the Chinese paying interest at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum on the outstanding balances. The purchasers have, however, the option of hastening the payments as they may choose, while Messrs. Russell and Co. will only transfer the company's property piecemeal, retaining always a sufficient residue as security for the remaining payments. A proposal by the Chairman that these terms be accepted was seconded by Mr. F. H. Bell, and carried unanimously. A further proposal, empowering the liquidation of the company, was also assented to; and after Mr. Tootal had said a few words of regret at the severance of Messrs. Russell and Co.'s connetion with the company, which were warmly endorsed by the shareholders present, the meeting broke up, and the most important commercial transaction that has ever taken place in China was compieted. Since the meeting it appears that rumours of all kinds have been going the rounds as to what the Chinese intend to purchase next, the last statement being that negotiations were going on for the purchase of the vessels of the China Coast Steam Navigation Company; but it is thought more likely that the rise in value of the shares is due to the conclusion of an agreement between the two companies to run amicably at higher rates. The Chinese purchasers do not appear likely to enjoy a monopoly, as it appears that some Hankow merchants have set up an opposition, and that "the stern-wheel steamer lately built by Messrs. Blethen and Co. has been sold for Tls. 38,000, and is loading for her first trip, off the French Bund."

We take the following items of general news from the North China Herald:—

The Russian corvette Haidamack, now in port, is about to be remasted. It appears that on the 18th of November last, whilst on a passage from Hong Kong to Yokohama, she encountered a S.E. gale of unusual violence, accompanied with a turbulent sea. Her masts were carried away, and her supply of coal becoming exhausted it was only with great difficulty that she managed to reach Port Lloyd, Peel Island—one of the Bonin group. There she remained until the 10th of December, on which day she sailed with temporary masts and wood fuel for Kobe, arriving there about ten days later. After taking in coal she left for Nagasaki, whence she has come to this port.

We have received from the Customs Statistical Department a list of the Chinese light-houses, light-vessels, buoys, and beacons corrected to December, 1876, which shows that steady progress is being made under Mr. Henderson's management in lighting and buoying the coast.

A special meeting of shareholders in the French Gas Company was held on Monday afternoon, to consider certain matters which were explained by the Chairman. In the first place, Dr. Pichon's nomination as a director was declared to be illegal; the change in the deed of settlement which permitted the appointment of proxy-holders as directors having been passed by a meeting at which the number of shareholders required by law was not present. The Chairman accordingly declared the seat vacant, and proposed the election of Dr. Galle, who was expected in a few days. Dr. Pichon, however, declined to admit the position; and a very long discussion ensued, in the course of which various terms of compromise were suggested. Eventually, however, Dr. Pichon consented to resign, and the proposal for the nomination of Dr. Galle in his stead was carried unanimously. Several changes were next proposed in the deed of settlement, to rectify points which were not in accordance with the law.

The Municipal minutes inform us that the owners of land on the Soochow Creek are willing to give ground for a new road at the back of their properties, if the existing road is surrendered to them instead. The Council, however, declined the condition, and resolved upon another line.

At a meeting on the 6th January the French Council resolved to press upon the attention of the Council for the north of the Yang-king-pang the desirability of commencing the cleansing of the Creek as soon as possible.

The third of the series of winter evening lectures in connection with the Shanghai Temperance Society was given on Friday evening, when the Very Rev. Dean Butcher lectured on the "Life and Writings of Addison."

A fire broke out in the Rue Petite, in the French Concession, among a lot of Chinese wooden houses, but was fortunately got under promptly by the efforts of the Volunteer Fire and Hook and Ladder Companies.

Four gentlemen have returned from up country with a bag of 1,030 head of game, shot in thirteen days.

The Celestial Empire gives the following items:—

A grand dinner has been given by the Canton Guild of Shanghai, at their Guild-hall, to certain distinguished individuals, who are passing through. Among those present were the Taoutai, a Commissioner of the Educational Bureau, Mr. Tong Kin-sing, and Rev. Dr. Speer, by special invitation—the last-named gentleman having been requested to exhibit his fine series of scioptican views of the American Centennial, &c. The various scenes presented evidently interested the audience, and could not but have made a most happy impression in the interest of modern civilisation and Christianity.

We are informed that the missionaries of Shanghai are engaged in a benevolent effort in the interest of the refugees from the northern famine, who are encamped in booths outside the South Gate, on the Parade Ground. These booths, as well as food, are provided for them by the native authorities and gentry. They are, however, sadly in need of medical treatment; and the missionaries, in order to supply this want, as well as to avail themselves of so excellent an opportunity for illustrating the spirit of Christianity, and bringing the Gospel to bear under circumstances that are historically most favourable, have appealed to the community for pecuniary assistance. This appeal has not been made in vain. Two hundred dollars were raised in one afternoon, and have been placed in the hands of the Rev. E. H. Thompson, of the American Episcopal Mission, to be dispensed as occasion may require. Suitable native tenements on the edge of the Kao-chang have already been engaged, and the good work of distributing medicines and preaching the Gospel will speedily be inaugurated.

SHANGHAI STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.

A special general meeting of shareholders in the above Company was held on the 15th Jan., the business being "to submit for the consideration of the shareholders an offer which has been made to the directors for the purchase of the Company's real estate, floating property, and plant, and to pass resolutions in reference thereto." There was a numerous attendance, and the chair was occupied by Mr. W. S. Fitz. The total number of shares represented was over 20,000.

The Chairman, having read the notice calling the meeting said:—I have now to lay before you the offer referred to in the notice just read, which comes, as you are doubtless aware, from the manager of the China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company, and is, in brief, a proposal to purchase this company's steamers, floating property, real estate, and plant, as they stood on the 31st December last, for a sum of two million taels. You will readily understand that the attention of those most largely interested in this company has been for some time seriously directed towards the best means of meeting the altered conditions of steamer business in this part of the world. While fully conscious that the general position of the company was one of great strength, and that increased prosperity might follow from the early opening of new ports, they could not shut their eyes to the fact that for several years past our dividends had been reduced, or to the chance that our profits for the near future might continue low, under the influence of close competition on all our lines. When, therefore, negotiations were first opened by the manager of the China Merchants' Company, it seemed as if one advantageous way out of the difficulty would be found, if a reasonable offer for our property should be made by them. So soon as the negotiations took a tangible form, the matter was laid before the directors. Full consideration and discussion satisfied them that the interests of the shareholders would be served by accepting Mr. Tong-king-sing's offer, and they unanimously authorised the agents to make a provisional contract for the disposal of steamers, subject to your ratification. An abstract of the agreement is already in your hands, and I will now proceed to read the agreement itself. The abstract is as follows :—

1. Agreement made by Russell and Co., subject to ratification by shareholders of company.

2. Shanghai Steam Navigation Company agree to sell and China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company to buy all steamers, floating and landed property of Shanghai Steam Navigation Company in Shanghai and elsewhere in China, with all the machinery, stores, provisions, wines, material, and plant belonging to the company, on 31st December, 1876, for Tls. 2,000,000.

3. Purchase money to be paid as follows :—

On or before signing of Agreement	...	Tls. 180,000
On or before 31st day of January inst.	...	220,000
On or before 31st day of March next	...	600,000 and the balance by quarterly instalments of Tls. 50,000 each, extending over the next five years.

4. Purchasers to have option of forestalling all, or any, of the payments.

5. Purchasers to pay interest on unpaid balance of purchase money, at rate of 8 per cent. per annum.

6. Property to be taken to have been at risk of purchasers from 1st January, 1877.

7. Russell and Co. to continue working of steamers and business connected therewith until 31st March next, for account and at risk of purchasers.

8. Purchasers to have management of steamers and property on payment of instalment due 31st March.

9. Purchasers to be entitled to have all steamers and property absolutely made over to them on payment of whole purchase money or giving sellers security satisfactory to them therefor at any time within next five years; or, if they shall pay by instalments, to have such amount of steamers and property transferred to them from time to time as shall represent the fair equivalent of purchase money actually paid.

10. Purchasers to insure steamers and property of which they shall have management, but which shall up to that time be not absolutely transferred to them.

11. Purchasers to take over leases of frontage, &c., and to accept liabilities accruing therefrom.

12. Purchasers to take over service of Marine Superintendent Shanghai Steam Navigation Company, &c.

13. Purchasers not to run the purchased steamers on south coast or between Hong Kong, Canton and Macao, before certain dates.

14. Provides that if purchasers shall forestall payment of instalment due 31st March, and pay it on 28th February, they shall take forthwith the benefit of the provisions in their favour which would otherwise only have come into operation on 31st March.

15. Provides for further agreement embodying terms and conditions of the present one, to be executed after ratification by Shareholders. Such further agreement also to have annexed to it certain schedules.

The Chairman then made the following remarks respecting the clauses subjoined :—

No. 3. The instalment of Tls. 180,000 has been paid in native bank orders, the greater part of which are cashed, and the proceeds placed on special deposit in the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank.

No. 8. The instalment of Tls. 600,000 will be paid on the 28th February, if remittance arrive from the north in time.

No. 11. The frontages referred to are those between the Kin-lee-yuen godowns, and the French police-station.

No. 13. This clause is to cover the responsibility of the S.S.N. Co. under agreements made in 1867, with Messrs. Jardine, Matheson and Co., Augustine Heard and Co., and the Hong Kong, Canton, and Whampoa Steamboat Co., which are just about expiring.

After some questions had been put to the Chairman by various shareholders, from the answers to which it appeared that practically everything had been sold to the Chinese, except the cash balances in Russell and Co.'s hands, and those of the bank and the investments in United States Bonds; and further, that as compared with the last accounts, the amount in the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank had been reduced to Tls. 85,000, against Tls. 110,000, while the United States Bonds had been increased from Tls. 277,000 to Tls. 283,000,

The Chairman read the resolution, as follows :—"That the agreement, dated the 2nd day of January instant, and made between the agents of the company and the manager of the China Merchants' S. N. Co. conditionally upon and subject to the ratification of the same by the shareholders of the S. S. N. Co., be and the same is hereby ratified and confirmed; that the president, directors, and agents of the company be and are hereby authorised and instructed to complete the sale of the steamers, floating, landed, and other property therein contracted to be sold by that agreement to the C.M.S.N. Company, upon and subject to the terms of such agreement, and that the president, board of directors, and agents be authorised and instructed to execute on behalf of the company the further agreement with the C.M.S.N. Company, provided for in clause 15 of the agreement now ratified." This resolution, I think, covers all the points as regards the ratification of the provisional agreement entered into by the agents, and the authorisation to complete the sale of the property referred to. The next step will be to arrange for the liquidation of the company, and the present opportunity is a favourable one for you to instruct the directors to take the preliminary steps, and to prepare a scheme to lay before the annual general meeting in February or March. The accounts for the year will then be before you, and it will be possible to form a close estimate of the final outturn of the shares. As the agreement leaves in the company's hands its cash balances and the investments in United States Government Bonds, &c., it may be expected that at least par value will be returned to each shareholder.
